But that which he inſiſts upon by his Council, is, that he was a Scotchman by Birth, and had an Invitation to return into Scotland, and had the Queen's Pardon, whereby he was pardon'd all Manner of Offences. It's true, he admits he was at St. Germains, but returned into Scotland in order to take the Benefit of that Pardon. He was at firſt ſecured by the Government there, but he had the Benefit of the Pardon allowed him, and was diſcharged. And then he ſays, he did deſire to come into England, and would not continue longer in France, becauſe he would not be a Papiſt. That when he was in Scotland, he deſir'd to come into England too, which he thought he might upon the Account of his Pardon in Scotland; and he adviſed with Council, whether he might ſafely come into England, and they told him he might, as he ſays.

The Queſtion is, whether any of theſe Things will be to his Advantage. Firſt, It is a Law of England, that he is indicted upon; no Pardon under the Great Seal of Scotland can diſcharge any Crime committed againſt the Law of England, neither can a Pardon under the Great Seal of England diſcharge any Crime againſt the Law of Scotland. But ſuppoſe he had had a Pardon under the Great Seal of England before his Return, that would not have pardoned in this Caſe: For his Offence is not in going into France, and coming into England in Time of Peace; but that having ſo gone, he returns without Licenſe, that is the Fact that is made ſo Penal. Now a Pardon given before a Man commits any Offence, is ineffectual; the Queen cannot pardon a Crime before it is committed.

But, ſays he, I am by this Pardon made to all Purpoſes a Free Scotchman, I am reſtored to all my Capacities that I had loſt; therefore if I have all the Capacities that I had as a Scotchman before, I may come into England. Now that is a Miſtake. It's true, he is reſtored to all the Capacities of a Scotchman, which is to be had by the Laws of Scotland; but a Pardon in Scotland cannot give him thoſe Privileges he had by the Law of England, and therefore cannot diſcharge him from an Offence committed againſt the Law of England. Nay, if he had been in Scotland, having eſcaped after he had been here, that would not have been effectual to diſcharge him from his Offence againſt the Law of England. Gentlemen, the Matter is before you, he is a Subject of the Queen of England, he has departed from England ſince the 11th of December, 1688. and has returned hither without Licenſe under the Privy Seal. And if you do believe all this, then you are to find him guilty; but if you do not believe it, you are to acquit him.

Then the Jury withdrew, and in about half an Hour returned into Court.

Cl. of Arr. Gentlemen, are you agreed of your Verdict?

Jury. Yes.

Cl. of Arr. Who ſhall ſpeak for you?

Jury. Our Foreman.

Cl. of Arr. David Lindſay, hold up thy Hand (which he did) How ſay you? Is he guilty of the High-Treaſon, whereof he ſtands indicted, or not guilty?

Foreman. Guilty.

Cl. of Arr. What Goods or Chattels had he at the Time of this High Treaſon committed?

Foreman. None that we know of.

Then the Court adjourned till Five of the Clock.

About Five of the Clock the Court met, and the Priſoner being brought, the Court proceeded.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, Mr. Lindſay the Priſoner hath been convicted of High Treaſon, and I pray the Judgment of the Court.

Cl. of Arr. David Lindſay, thou haſt been arraigned for High Treaſon, and thereof convicted, what haſt thou to ſay why Judgment ſhould not paſs againſt thee?

Mr. Lindſay. My Lord, I refer my ſelf to the Queen's Mercy.

L. C. J. Holt. Have you any Thing to plead for your ſelf, or by your Council?

Mr. Williams. My Lord, I did deſign to have inſiſted upon a Point in relation to this Statute, upon which the Indictment againſt the Priſoner is grounded; but underſtanding it has been already under the Conſideration of your Lordſhip, and the reſt of my Lords the Judges, and that it has receiv'd your Lordſhip's Determination, I ſhall chuſe to wave it; but this, with Submiſſion, I do inſiſt upon; That it is not ſhewn in this Indictment that the Priſoner was a Subject of King William at the Time of his going into France, or at the making this Act. Now as I humbly humbly conceive, the very Words of the Act require, that the Party ſhould be a Subject at that Time. The Words are thus, If any of His Majeſty's Subjects, who have after the 11th of December gone into France, if they return without Licenſe they ſhall be guilty of High Treaſon. Now by the Words of the Act, it ſeems requiſite that he ſhould be a Subject at the Time of his going into France; or at leaſt at the Time of the making of the Act. So that, with Submiſſion, the Indictment does not agree with the Act of Parliament, unleſs it be ſhewn that the Priſoner was a Subject at the Time of his going to France; and no Indictment in any Caſe, much leſs an Indictment for High Treaſon ſhall be aided by Intendment. ----And in this Caſe, my Lord, there is the leſs room for an Intendment, that the Priſoner was then a Subject, becauſe it is not ſhewn that the Priſoner was a natural born Subject, or that his Treaſon was contra naturalis allegiantiæ debitum. And it not being ſhewn that he was a Natural Subject, it muſt be ſuppoſed he became a Subject by Naturalization, or by Denization, which might be ſince his going into France.---- My Lord, I muſt own, 'tis ſaid in the Indictment that he was a Subject of King William, but 'tis not ſaid when he was a Subject; ſo that it may be as well ſuppoſed he became ſo after he went into France, as before; and the rather in regard he is not ſhewn to be a Natural-Born Subject. And we take it, that by the Penning of this Law, which ſays, If any of his Majeſty's Subjects who have gone into France, &c. ---- it muſt be meant of a Subject at that Time, or at the Time of his going into France; and it not being ſhewn that he was a Subject at that Time, we humbly take it that the Indictment is inſufficient.

Mr. Raymond. My Lord, we ſay, with great Submiſſion, that this Indictment is not good, becauſe it does not ſhew that Mr. Lindſay was a Subject of the late King at the Time of the making the Act, nor any Time before. If this Perſon had become a Subject of the King after the making of the Act, as he might by Derivation, and had return'd into England, having been in France in the Time mentioned in the Act, he would not be within the Act. Therefore it was neceſſary to ſhew at what Time he was a Subject. It is not laid in the Indictment, that he was a Natural-Born Subject, nor do I pretend that it is neceſſary in an Indictment for Treaſon, becauſe one that owes Local Allegiance may be guilty of Treaſon. But they ought to have averr'd, either that he was a Natural-Born Subject, and that he ſhall be intended ſo always; or elſe, that he was a Subject at the Time of the making of the Act, otherwiſe he won't be within the Act; becauſe the Words of the Act ſeem to tie it up to Subjects at the Time of the making the Act, by the Words which follow, viz. Who have gone into France, &c.

Sir T. Powis. I have look'd both into the Indictment and the Act. One Part of the Objection is, that he is not a Natural Subject. That is not to be inſiſted on, for there is no ſuch Thing in the Act; for the Act ſays, If any of His Majeſty's Subjects; and there is no need of laying any more in the Indictment than the Act requires; and it was not intended to be confined to ſuch. The other Part of the Objection is, that it is not alledged that the Priſoner at the Bar was the Subject of King William at the Time when the Act was made. Now there is no need of alledging theſe Words in the Indictment; for the Act runs thus, Therefore be it enacted, that if any of His Majeſty's Subjects, who have at any Time, ſince the 11th of December, 1688. voluntarily gone into France, without Licenſe from His Majeſty King William, or from Queen Mary, ſhall return: And the Indictment does lay it, that this Priſoner was a Subject of the late King William, and that he is now a Subject to the preſent Queen; and that he, after the 11th of December, 1688, did go into France. Now ſure here is all alledged in this Indictment that the Act refers to; that is, that if any Subject, who went into France after the 11th of December 1688, ſhall return into England. And the Indictment ſays, he was a Subject of King William, and that he did go into France after that Time, and did return into England after the Time prohibited by the Act. Here is nothing required in the Act, but what is laid in the Indictment. And it is a very ſtrange Objection to ſay that we ſhould aver that he was a Subject when this Act was made; this ought to have been ſhewed on the other ſide, if it be otherwiſe. Here is that in the Indictment which is conformable to the Act, and there is no more neceſſary, than to deſcribe the Perſon according to the Act.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we have taken that Method in the Indictment that is proper, that is, to purſue the Act of Parliament; we have laid him as the Act deſcribes. Now they ſay, that it being not ſhewn that he was a Subject at the Time of his going into France, he is not within the Act. But when a Man is laid in the Indictment to be a Subject, it is a ſtrange Objection to fancy we muſt mention the Time of his beginning to be a Subject. We have ſhew'd he was a Subject before the making of the Act, and we have ſhew'd he was a Subject after; and he is preſumed to have always been a Subject, unleſs ſpecial Matter is ſhewn when he was not a Subject, as that he was an Alien, and at a particular Time naturalized or made a Denizon; which without Proof will not be preſumed; and this Objection ſhould have before ariſen from Evidence. It is laid likewiſe to be contrary to the Duty of his Allegiance, being a Subject of the late King William, and of the preſent Queen.

Mr. Williams. My Lord, this Exception againſt the Indictment ſeems, with great Submiſſion, not to be anſwer'd; I go upon the Words of the Act.

If any of his Majeſty's Subjects, who have ſince the 11th of December, 1688, gone into France. My Objection is, That it is not ſhewn, that at the Time of going into France, nor when the Act was made, that the Priſoner was a Subject; and it not being ſo ſhewn, to intend the Priſoner then a Subject, is helping the Indictment by Intendment, which cannot be. And I ſay there is the leſs room for this Intendment here, becauſe this Priſoner is not ſhewn to be a Natural Subject.

Mr. Raymond. My Lord, every Word of this Indictment would have been true if this Gentleman had been an Alien, and become a Subject after the Act was made, and before the late King died. And yet in ſuch a Caſe he would not have been within the Act: For if he had been a Stranger, and after the Act had been denizon'd, and then had returned into England, having before been in France, that would not have been within the Act, becauſe the Act ſays, If any of the King's Subjects, who have gone into France, ſhall return: Which muſt be meant, that were ſo before the Act was made: And yet that is all this Indictment ſays.

L. C. J. Holt. That is a foreign Suppoſition. Can any Man ſuppoſe, that ſuch a Man that has been in France, that he ſhould be Naturaliz'd or Indenizon'd after ſuch an Act was made? And ſuppoſe it were ſo, that he was an Alien, and happen to be Naturaliz'd by General Words; the Act does not ſay, If he ſhall be a Subject at his Departure; but if he were in France ſince ſuch Time, and return after this Act.

He was a Subject to King William, and to Queen Anne; and that he went away ſince the 11th of December, 1688. and return'd into England without Licenſe.

This is an Indictment formed ſuitable to the Act of Parliament; it purſues the Words of the Act of Parliament. The Act deſcribes the Perſon, and ſets out what ſhall be the Offence; that is, One that is a Subject of the King, and has gone away into France ſince the 11th of December, 1688. and ſhall return without Licenſe.

Mr. Williams. It appears not he was a Subject when he went away.

L. C. J. Holt. If any of His Majeſty's Subjects, that have gone away ſince the 11th of December. It does not ſay, Any that ſhall go away; but that have gone away after the 11th of December.

Mr. Juſtice Powel. A Subject is ſuppoſed to be a Natural Subject, unleſs he be Naturalized afterwards: But now he being laid to be a Subject according to the Act, ſuppoſes him to be a Subject then.

Mr. Raymond. My Lord, we think, with Submiſſion, this is not an Indictment according to other Indictments.

Mr. Juſtice Powel. It's enough that he is ſaid to be a Subject.

Mr. Raymond. But, my Lord, muſt there not be a Diſtinction between a Subject that owes Natural Subjection, and commits Treaſon, and one that only owes Local Legiance?

Mr. Juſtice Powel. You might have ſhown that, when you were upon the Evidence.

Mr. Williams. My Lord, We humbly think it muſt be ſhown that he was a Subject, at leaſt at the Time of the making of the Act.

Mr. Juſtice Powel. We muſt take him to be a Natural Subject, unleſs the contrary appear.

L. C. J. Trevor. We ſuppoſe that he was a Subject at the Time of his going out of England; and that the Indictment ſufficiently ſets forth. If you could have ſhown that he became a Subject afterwards, that might have help'd you; but elſe it ſignifies nothing.

L. C. J. Holt. Have you any more to ſay?

Mr. Williams. If we have ſlipt any Thing on Behalf of the Priſoner, which might have been of Service to him, we hope he ſhall not ſuffer for any Omiſſion of his Council; and therefore humbly pray, that your Lordſhip will favour him, and will be pleaſed to hear him for himſelf.

Mr. Lindſay. My Lord, What I have done has been out of Ignorance, and being ſupported by what other People did. And therefore, my Lord, having come into England by my ſelf, I did not come with any Deſign of Harm, or to do any Thing contrary to the Law. As I am a Scotchman, it is not to be preſumed I can underſtand the Laws of England: And therefore, if I have done any Thing amiſs out of Ignorance, I hope your Lordſhip will make a favourable Conſtruction of it; and repreſent my Caſe to the Queen. And I hope, as Her Majeſty has given me the Effects of her Mercy in Scotland, I ſhall not feel the Effects of her Diſpleaſure in England.

L. C. J. Holt. Mr. Lindſay, You have been indicted, and upon the Evidence of your own Confeſſion of the Fact alledged againſt you, and after a great Debate in Matter of Law, (which by you, and your Council, was urged on your Behalf) are convicted of High Treaſon. That which now remains, is, To pronounce Judgment of Death upon you, which you are to ſuffer in that Manner which the Law hath appointed. Your Crime is, Returning from France without the Queen's Licenſe; having before gone thither without any Licenſe from the late King or Queen. That Law which hath made ſuch your Return to be an Offence of ſo high Nature, cannot (by any conſidering Engliſh Proteſtant) be thought to be ſevere: For they who, in the Time mention'd in the Act, choſe rather to run into France, than to ſtay in England; could have no other Inducement, than an Affection to an Intereſt oppoſite to the Proteſtant Religion, and the Ancient Conſtitution of this Kingdom. For they were received, protected and encouraged by that Prince, who is a dangerous and profeſs'd Enemy both to our Religion and Government. The Wiſdom of the Nation thought it abſolutely neceſſary to keep them out; unleſs they ſhould either clear their Innocence, or give Satisfaction by their Repentance, that they were fit to be truſted here. For he that ſhould adventure to return, without doing either, muſt be preſumed to come in upon the ſame Principles, and with the ſame Purpoſes, with which he went out: Which muſt be a conſtant Danger, even to the Foundation of our Government, which is eſtabliſhed upon the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws of the Kingdom. As to theſe Circumſtances which you have mention'd to be peculiar to your Caſe, they fall not under Conſideration; ſince they are not ſufficient to juſtify you in acting contrary to the Law. Of what Conſideration they may be to obtain the Queen's Mercy, falls not under our Cognizance; for that is a peculiar Attribute, inſeparable from Her Majeſty's Royal Perſon, by whom it can only be diſpenſed. Our Buſineſs is to put the Law in Execution. And you muſt be convinced in your own Conſcience, that you have been convicted on a full Evidence, proving the Fact, which hath proceeded from your own Mouth. We have all heard, and debated that Matter of Law which you urged by your Council in your own Behalf; and are all of Opinion, that doth not avail you; but you are an Offender againſt an Act of Parliament: And nothing remains now, but to pronounce the Sentence of the Law upon you; which is,

That you ſhall be conveyed from hence to Newgate, the Priſon from whence you came; and from thence to be drawn upon a Hurdle to Tyburn, where you are to be hang'd by the Neck; and while you are yet alive, to be taken down, your Privy Members are to be cut off, and your Bowels to be taken out of your Body, and burnt in your View. Your Head is to be cut off; your Body is to be divided into Four Parts; and your Head and your Quarters are to be diſpoſed of as Her Majeſty ſhall appoint. And the Lord have Mercy upon your Soul.

Mr. Lind-

Mr. Lindſay. My Lord, I beg that my Wife and Children may come to me; and that I may have a Miniſter of the Church of England allow'd me.

L. C. J. Holt. You ſhall have whom you will, according to what is uſual in ſuch Caſes.

Mr. Lindſay. I deſire my Wife and Children may come to me alone, without the Keeper.

L. C. J. Holt. That is not to be permitted, that may occaſion Danger.

Mr. Lindſay. I deſire they may be lock'd up with me.

L. C. J. Holt. Mr. Lindſay, It is a Charge on the Keeper, that he admit them; but ſo as may not occaſion any Danger.

Mr. Lindſay. It is a Trouble to the Keeper to wait on me ſo long, (Two or Three Hours together) which was the Reaſon I deſired it. And if a Miniſter come to me, I deſire we may be private.

L. C. J. Holt. He will uſe you with all the Charity that may be; but he muſt do what is prudent. Nothing that is reaſonable, or fit, ſhall be deny'd you.

Mr. Lindſay. My Lord, I ſhould be ſorry, if I deſired any Thing that is unreaſonable. My Lord, I ſuppoſe it is my Time now to ſay any Thing. I ſhall ſay only thus much; that is, I well underſtood what Circumſtances I was in: I believe no Scotchman has been call'd in Queſtion upon that Act; and I believed in my Conſcience I was not guilty.

L. C. J. Holt. You are guilty of the Fact charg'd upon you; and it was a very reaſonable Law.

Mr. Lindſay. My Lord, I own, the Reaſon was good for making the Act; but that the Reaſon that I am guilty of the breaking it, I cannot own that.

L. C. J. Holt. You are guilty of the Thing you are charg'd with. All that you can do now, is, To appeal to the Mercy of the Queen: She is the beſt Judge of it.

Mr. Lindſay. My Lord, I reſt upon your Lordſhip's Repreſenting my Caſe to the Queen.

Pro-

Proclamation was made for all Perſons to attend. Then the Jury was called.

John Cooper,
Thomas Briſcoe,
Alexander Pollington,
Edward Pinfold being called, deſired to be excuſed.

Mr. Pinfold. My Lord, I deſire I may be excuſed. I do not know Mr. Tutchin, for I never ſaw him in my Life; but I have read his Obſervators, and have ſeveral Times publickly diſallowed them; and therefore ſome may think I am prejudiced againſt him.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Queſtion is only, whether he was the Author of theſe Papers? For that is the Matter to be tried.

Mr. Pinfold. I do not know that.

Mr. Mountague. But my Lord, there may be ſomething more in it, for he publickly diſallowed his Papers.

L. C. J. Holt. You muſt not be excuſed unleſs the Queen's Council will.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we Challenge him on behalf the Defendant.

Mr. Att. Gen. Shew your Cauſe.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, our Cauſe is, that he himſelf looks upon himſelf as not indifferent.

L. C. J. Holt. He ſays, he has read ſome of his Papers, and has publickly condemned them, that he did not approve of the Matter contained in them, but he does not know the Author.

Mr. Whitaker. But he ſaid he did not doubt but he was the Author of them.

Mr. Serj. Darnel. He is the fitter Man for a Jury.

Sir T. Powis. He does not ſay he has diſapproved all the Papers he has read, and it may be thoſe were not the Papers now in Queſtion.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord the Matter we are contending for, is, that one that is not altogether an indifferent Perſon ſhould not be on the Jury.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Queſtion is not whether the Papers are Criminal, but whether the Defendant is the Author of the Papers; and if this Gentleman knows him to be the Author of them, he is proper to be on the Jury: For the Jury are by Law to be of the Neighbourhood of the Place where the Fact is alledged to be done, becauſe they are preſumed to know what is done there; and if this be a Cauſe of Challenge, you may Challenge all People and ſo there could be no Tryal.

L. C. J. Holt. He can't be Challenged, unleſs he had given his Verdict before.

Mr. Sol. Gen. My Lord, we can have no Jury in this way they are going. A Jury-man is not to be aſked what his Opinion of the Cauſe is; what he will voluntarily ſay, he may; and if upon what he ſays voluntarily he is liable to Exception he may be ſet aſide.

L. C. J. Holt. It is not a Challenge.

Mr. Mountague. Surely, my Lord, he is not ſo indifferent as he ought to be. He ſays he has already declared his Opinion publickly concerning Mr. Tutchin's Papers.

Mr. Pinfold. My Lord, I know not well what he is indicted for, but it may be they are thoſe Papers that I have given my Opinion of.

Mr. Att. Gen. I believe no Man that has read them, but has given his Opinion of them one way or other; but that is not a ſufficient Cauſe of Challenge.

Mr. Whitaker. Mr. Attorney, I hope you will not contend for one Juryman.

Mr. Att. Gen. He ſays, he knows not what Papers he is indicted for, he ſays only that he has read ſome of his Papers, and has declared his diſlike of them.

L. C. J. Holt. Draw up your Challenge in Form, and it ſhall be conſider'd.

Mr. Att. Gen. If theſe Gentlemen think there is nothing in it, what need they put us to this Trouble?

Mr. Mountague. Indeed I believe there is ſomething more than ordinary in it, for I object only what he himſelf has ſaid.

L. C. J. Holt. I will have it done, that it may remain a Deciſion in perpetuam rei memoriam. But if you that are for the Defendant will wave it you may.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we muſt inſiſt on it; they have Jurymen enough.

Mr. Soll. Gen. We can't tell whether we have or no, for you may challenge them all as well as this Man.

Mr. Mountague. No, I will Challenge no body beſides; and I Challenged him, only becauſe he mentioned himſelf as not an indifferent Perſon.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Is it a principal Challenge, or to the Favour?

L. C. J. Holt. A principal Challenge, if any.

Mr. Soll. Gen. He can't Challenge to the Favour in Caſe of the Crown.

L. C. J. Holt. He makes it as a principal Challenge; which muſt be determined, and you ſhall have my Judgment when drawn up; it muſt be a principal Challenge or nothing; for there can be no Challenge to Favour in the Caſe of the Crown.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we are not willing to put you to this Trouble, we will leave it to Mr. Pinfold himſelf.

L. C. J. Holt. Then ask Mr. Pinfold.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. Pinfold, do you know who was the Author of theſe Papers?

Mr. Pinfold. I know nothing of it but what is commonly reported. I know not Mr. Tutchin if I ſee him; I have read his Writings.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we leave it to the Juryman himſelf.

Mr. Pinfold. My Lord, I deſire to be excuſed.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then we excuſe you.

Then the Perſons following were ſworn on the Jury.

John Cooper,	Mark Proctor,
Thomas Briſcoe,	William Grub,
Alexander Pollington,	James Lund,
James Dod,	John Baker,
Iſaac Bennet,	Thomas Allen,
Robert Fotherby,	Jaſper Waters.

Then Proclamation for Information being made, the Court proceeded.

Mr. Serj. Weld. This is an Information againſt John Tutchin: The Information ſets forth, that he being being a ſeditious Perſon, and a daily Inventor and Publiſher of Lies, and maliciouſly deſigning to aſperſe the Government, and the Adminiſtration of it, has compoſed and publiſhed ſeveral malicious and ſcandalous Libels; ſome of them are relating to the Government, ſome to the Parliament, ſome to the Courts of Juſtice, other of them to the Miniſtry. I ſhall not now take up your Time in opening the Words at large, becauſe they are very long, and for that you will have them read to you, when the Witneſſes come to prove them. He hath pleaded, Not Guilty.

Mr. Att. Gen. You muſt recite the Words of the Charge.

Mr. Weld. The Charge is very long. The Information ſets forth, That he did Write, and Compoſe, and Publiſh a falſe and ſcandalous Libel, called, The Obſervator, of and concerning the Government. This is laid to be on Saturday the 30th of May, 1702. And the Words therein charged againſt him, are theſe: "At the ſame Time, we "the Subjects of England conſidering the Succeſs "of the French King, in his Bribery and Corrup"tion, we ought to lament the ſad State of our "own Country, which affords ſo many Inſtances of "Treachery. If we may judge by our National "Miſcarriages, perhaps no Nation in Europe has "felt the Influences of French Gold, more than "England; and worthy it is our greateſt Lamenta"tion, that our dear Country ſhould be thus "weaken'd by Men of mercenary Principles, when "Countries inferior to us in Strength and Riches "are ſecured from Attempts of this Nature, only "by the Fidelity of their People. What is the "Reaſon, that French Gold has not affected Holland, "as well as England; but that their Miniſtry is "ſuch, as is entirely in the Intereſt of their Coun"try, and altogether incorruptible: They prefer "Men that are knowing in their Poſts, and are "active in Buſineſs. When in England we find "Offices for Men, not Men for Offices; and a Title "of Honour gives a Man a Title to a great Employ"ment he is altogether ignorant of. By this, and "by preparing of Men by Intereſt and Favour, has "the Exciſe, the Cuſtoms, and other Branches of "the Revenue, intolerably ſunk; and by this "Means has the Navy of England, our chief Sup"port, been hitherto perfectly bewitch'd: And can "Lewis ſpend his Money better, than in getting "Men into Offices in England, who are either falſe "or ignorant in the Buſineſs, or are his Friends"? And the Information further ſets forth, That on Saturday the 11*th of* July, 1702, he publiſhed another Libel, called, The Obſervator; in which are theſe Words: "And this is a Prerogative of ſingular Ad"vantage to the People of England, in that their "Repreſentatives are the Judges of the Male-Ad"miniſtration of their Governors; that they can call "them in Queſtion for the ſame, and can appoint "ſuch to wear the Crown, who are fitteſt for Go"vernment: Which they have often done, and in"deed which is the Privilege of all free People, "who are authorized by the Laws of God and Na"ture to chuſe their own Governors". It further ſets forth, That June 12. 1703. he publiſhed another Libel, called, The Obſervator; in which are theſe Words: "Take one Time with another, the Miſ"managements of the Navy have been a greater "Tax on the Merchants, than the Duties raiſed by "Parliament. We never had a better Navy; but "the Wiſdom of the Managers thereof is like a "bottomleſs Pit, paſt finding out". The Information further chargeth, That on the 16*th of* June, 1703, he publiſh'd another Libel, called, The Obſervator; in which were theſe Words: "What avails "it a Man of Learning and Parts, to qualify him"ſelf for the Service of his Country on the Ocean? "If he has Knowledge enough to adviſe Neptune "himſelf, if he has no Intereſt, he ſhall have no "Preferment. How much does it look to our Na"tion's Diſadvantage, to have Men in Eminent "Stations in the Navy, who have not ſo much as "an Idea, a Notion, a Thought of Naval Affairs? "To have Men to ſuperintend the Building of our "floating Caſtles, who know not the Nature of "any one Part of the Management? To have Men "employ'd in the Victualling, who qualify them"ſelves for that Poſt by learning to write their "Names, which is indeed a Poſt for a Philoſopher "bred to the Sea"? It's further ſet forth in the Information, That on the 10*th of* July, 1703, he publiſh'd another Libel, wherein, among other Things, are theſe Words relating to Daniel De Foe. "Countrym. Truly, Maſter Obſervator, I have no "very good News for you. Mr. Daniel De Foe "has pleaded Guilty to the Indictment againſt "him, for writing and publiſhing the ſhorteſt Way "with the Diſſenters; and he is ſentenc'd to ſtand "Three times in the Pillory, to pay a Fine of 200 "Marks, and to find Security for his good Beha"viour of Seven Years. Obſerv. The Court could "do no otherwiſe than convict him, upon his "pleading Guilty; habemus confitentum reum is "very often the Voice of Courts of Judicature; 'tis "the Eaſe of the Judges and Juries: If Daniel De "Foe was in Expectation of Coleman's Black Box, "he has found a Pillory inſtead of it. I don't "trouble my Head about the Cuſtom of giving "the Pillory to Authors, which is the Puniſhment "of Bakers. You talk'd juſt now of turning Au"thor, have a care of your Candle; you ſee which "is the ſhorteſt Way with Authors: You muſt all "enter your ſelves into the Regiment of Colonel "De Foe. The Law of England directs, That no "Man ſhall be fined ultra tenementum; and I make "no queſtion, but the Juſtice of the Court has "fined Mr. Foe anſwerable to his Eſtate: His Secu"rity for his good Behaviour for Seven Years, "without doubt, was rationally conſider'd, as to "the Legality thereof. For my part, I am only "acquainted with Old Laws of England, the An"cient Birthrights and Immunities of Engliſhmen: "This I take to be the Foundation of New Laws". And that on Saturday, May 20. 1704. he publiſh'd another Libel, called, The Obſervator; wherein, among other Things, are theſe Words: "Countrym. Ma"ſter Obſervator, there's another Plot againſt you. "Obſerv. Prithee Man, there's a Plot againſt the "Queen and the whole Nation; is it any Wonder "that there are Plots againſt me? The High-Fliers "are now plotting againſt every honeſt Man in "England. I'll tell you more of it, the next time "we meet. Countrym. I fancy ſome Sort of Peo"ple plot againſt you, becauſe you endeavour to "countermine their Plots againſt the Queen and "Nation. Obſerv. You are right enough; but "that ſhan't hinder me from detecting their De"ſigns, and from opening the People's Eyes: But, "prithee, what Plot is this? Countrym. Why, Sir, "it is a Plot preparatory to your Tryal; and if "they can't effect this Plot, I ſuppoſe you'll never "be tried. They inſinuate into the Citizens of "London, that you have lately written very ſcanda"louſly, maliciouſly, and treaſonably, and I don't know

" know how many other Lies againſt them, the " ſaid Citizens; and by this means, they are mind- " ed to ſet your Jurors againſt you. Obſ. This " is likely enough: They'll leave no Stone un- " turn'd, to ſuppreſs the Truth. I underſtand, I " ſhould have been proſecuted by Bill the laſt Seſ- " ſions, but that the High-Fliers did not like the " Jury. Nay, they ſay they don't like the Two She- " riffs, becauſe they won't pack Juries, to find in- " nocent Men guilty. The Defendant has pleaded Not Guilty: But if we prove the Charge, I doubt not but you will find him Guilty.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, I am of Council with Her Majeſty. This Information is brought on the Behalf of the Queen, againſt Mr. Tutchin. I ſhall not long entertain you about it, becauſe the Matter is ſhort. The Charge is, That he has publiſh'd ſeveral Libels, ſcandalous and ſeditious, reflecting on the Government, and the Adminiſtration of it, in many Inſtances given at large. I think the Papers are Six in Number; and by and by you will have them more particularly before you. I preſume, there ought to be made a Difference between a juſt Liberty, and Licentiouſneſs. This Information is brought, that Men may be warned. The Plea he has made, is, That he is not Guilty. The Matter we are to prove, is, That He was the Perſon that did Write and Compoſe theſe Papers, and did Publiſh them, or cauſe them to be done. My Lord, We ſhall call our Witneſſes: And notwithſtanding what you have heard of late from the Defendant, relating to this Tryal, I do not doubt but there will be all Juſtice done. I am ſure, on our Side, nothing elſe is intended. And I doubt not, but if we prove that he did Publiſh theſe Papers, the Jury will find him Guilty.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, The Information is laid againſt Mr. Tutchin, for a few of his Obſervators of the many he has writ; ſometimes Two, ſometimes Three in a Week. It is a great while that he has done it; and it has been the great Indulgence of the Government, that he has not been proſecuted before. He has been taken Notice of by the Houſe of Commons, and been before the Secretary of State; where he has been admoniſh'd to take care of what he ſhould write: But he would not take Warning. And now he is to be try'd for ſome of his Papers; wherein it will appear, that he has taken the greateſt Liberty, I believe, that ever Man took. Libels uſed to come out by ſtealth, and in the dark: But theſe have been publiſh'd openly, with all the Defiance imaginable. You may ſee how mild the Proſecution hath been, by what he has done ſince the Beginning of it: He has been writing in ſuch a manner, to prepare for the Tryal, as I think was never done before. A Proſecution of this Nature is of the greateſt Conſequence: And it may be, I may be blam'd, being in the Office wherein I am, that there have not been more ſuch made. Here is the higheſt Reflection on the Government imaginable. There can be no Reflection on them that are in Office under Her Majeſty, but it muſt caſt ſome Reflection on the Queen who employs them. I believe there is hardly one in any conſiderable Poſt under the Government, but has been criminated by him: Nothing eſcapes him. He cenſures all Mankind; writes magiſterially, and defies all Authority, and caſts the vileſt Reflections on the Government: As if we, who are in the Queen's Service, made it our Buſineſs to corrupt Juries. And makes Reflections both on Sheriffs and Juries. Theſe are of the greateſt Conſequence in the World to the Government, and to every body. For if ſuch Mercenary Writers may have the Liberty to reflect on whom they pleaſe, no Man's Reputation can be ſafe.

Gentlemen of the Jury, The Matter you are to enquire into, is, Whether the Defendant be the Author, or Publiſher of theſe Libels: That is the Matter you are to Try. What the Puniſhment muſt be, if you find him Guilty, is in the Judgment of the Court. We will produce our Witneſſes; and doubt not but you will do the Queen Juſtice.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Call John How.

[He appear'd, and was ſworn.]

Show him thoſe Obſervators.

[Which was done; and he look'd them over.]

Have you look'd over them?

Mr. How. Yes.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Then pray acquaint my Lord and the Jury, Whether you know who compoſed, and brought them to the Preſs?

Mr. How. I do ſuppoſe them to be Mr. Tutchin's: I dealt with no other Man for them.

Mr. Att. Gen. Acquaint my Lord and the Jury, how they came to be printed.

Mr. How. About the latter End of March, 1702. I treated with Mr. Tutchin about writing an Obſervator, to be publiſh'd Weekly: The firſt of which was publiſh'd in April, 1702. And all that have been printed ſince, I had from him, to this Year.

Mr. Att. Gen. You look'd on theſe Papers here: Were theſe printed by the Direction of Mr. Tutchin?

Mr. How. To the beſt of my Knowledge they were. They were always brought from him to me.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was there any Agreement made between you about the writing of it?

Mr. How. Yes, it was agreed at firſt to write once a Week; and I was to give him Half a Guinea for it. I have printed in all about 266.

Mr. Att. Gen. Have you had frequent Diſcourſe with him about them ſince? You ſaid, you printed in all about 266: Have you paid him for all?

Mr. How. Yes.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Have you had any Diſcourſe with him, wherein he has owned them all to be his?

Mr. How. He has owned them from time to time, till within this Week.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Has he own'd himſelf to be the Author of them?

Mr. How. He always own'd himſelf to be the Author.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Have you had any Diſcourſe with him, leſt you ſhould come into Danger for it?

Mr. How. Yes, I have had Diſcourſe with him about the Danger: And he has ſaid to me, I own my ſelf to be the Author: And do not fear; if any Danger happen, you are a Rogue to your ſelf and Family, if you do not diſcover me.

Sir T. Powis. Look on theſe Papers, and ſee if he deliver'd theſe very Obſervators to you: Were theſe the very ſame?

Mr. How. Yes.

Sir T. Powis. And was he paid for them by you?

Mr. How. Yes.

Mr. Mountague. I deſire to ſee them.

Mr. Att.

Mr. Att. Gen. Deliver them to Mr. Mountague.

Mr Mountague. Take that Obſervator, and look on it: 'Tis that which they are about to read. [Then Mr. How look'd on it.] How long ago is it, that you had that Paper in your Cuſtody?

Mr. How. I ſuppoſe this was deliver'd out of my Shop, to be ſent to Mr. Borret.

Mr. Mountague. Do you know you ſent that Paper?

Mr. How. Yes, I deliver'd it, and put my Mark upon it.

Mr. Mountague. How long ago?

Mr. How. I do not juſtly remember it.

Mr. Mountague. If you do not remember that, do you remember the Printing of it?

Mr. How. It was done at my Houſe.

Mr. Mountague. When a Copy is brought to you to be printed, do you print that Copy always exactly?

Mr. How. As near as I can, I do.

Mr. Mountague. The Queſtion I would ask you, is; Do you, when you have a Copy, ſtrictly keep to the Letter of the Copy? Or do you, as you think convenient, alter it?

Mr. How. I have alter'd it oftentimes, to make it ſafe.

Mr. Mountague. Then you do take it on you to alter.

Mr. How. To ſtrike out a Line, never to alter his Senſe.

Mr. Mountague. Do you not inſert any Thing?

Mr. How. Yes, frequently a Word.

Mr. Mountague. Do you not take upon you to inſert ſeveral Words, and leave out ſeveral?

Mr. How. Yes.

Mr. Mountague. You do. Then I ask you, Are you ſure that that Paper is printed without Alteration?

Mr. How. I do not remember any thing of that.

Mr. Mountague. I ask you, Whether that Paper were not alter'd from what was ſent you?

Mr. How. I cannot ſwear it.

Mr. Att. Gen. Can you ſay that Paper was alter'd?

Mr. How. Not that I know of.

Mr. Whitaker. Look on the Title; whoſe putting down is that?

Mr. How. He agreed to the Title.

Mr. Mountague. Does the Paper come to you entitled the Obſervator, or not?

Mr. How. I cannot tell whether he ever put it in.

Mr. Mountague. Who put it in then?

Mr. How. It was agreed between us to call it The Obſervator.

Mr. Mountague. Does he write The Obſervator, or did you?

Mr. How. There is no Occaſion for the Title, that I know of.

Mr. Mountague. But who writ the Title to it?

L. C. J. Holt. They ask you this Queſtion: Who was it, that put this Title to this Paper?

Mr. How. I do not know but I might write it in the Paper at firſt, and ſo it was inſerted afterwards.

L. C. J. Holt. Who was it firſt writ that Title?

Mr. How. I do not know who did write that, He or I. I did firſt propoſe the Title to him.

L. C. J. Holt. Was that Title writ by him or you?

Mr. How. I do not know, my Lord.

L. C. J. Holt. Was there an Agreement made between you, that this Paper ſhould be writ once a Week with that Title?

Mr. How. Yes, my Lord.

L. C. J. Holt. Did he agree to that Title? And was he privy to it?

Mr. How. Yes, my Lord, it was agreed upon between us; and He agreed to write ſuch a Paper, with ſuch a Title.

Mr. Whitaker. Where did you come to this Agreement?

Mr. How. I cannot tell.

Mr. Whitaker. Was it in London, or Middleſex, or Surrey?

Mr. How. I cannot tell.

Mr. Whitaker. Where were they printed?

Mr. How. I printed ſome of them in Fenchurch-ſtreet, about Eighteen; the reſt in Grace Church-ſtreet.

Mr. Harris. Was that Paper alter'd by you, or not?

Mr. How. I cannot remember whether I alter'd that, or no.

L. C. J. Holt. You ſay you alter'd ſometimes: Did you acquaint him with the Alterations you made?

Mr. How. Sometimes they have been ſent to me; I knew not where to find him; and then I have alter'd them my ſelf, rather than be diſappointed. At other Times, I have been in his Company; and then I complained, and he has alter'd them. And ſometimes he ſaid, You have the Pen; do you alter them.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Can you ſay, You alter'd a Syllable in theſe Papers?

Mr. How. I cannot ſay ſo.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Since the firſt Publiſhing of them, have you not publiſh'd them in Volumes?

Mr. How. Yes.

Mr. Soll. Gen. And who gave Order for it?

Mr. How. Mr. Tutchin.

Mr. Att. Gen. What Direction had you about this Volume? [A Volume bound up being in Court.]

Mr. How. That Volume was order'd by Mr. Tutchin. He order'd me to bind up Three Volumes: One of which he order'd to be deliver'd to Mr. Borret; which I did not deliver, by reaſon of a Proſecution at the Old Baily.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did he order any other Man's Works to be bound up, or his own?

Mr. How. He order'd me to bind his own, with the Preface.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where is that Preface?

Mr. How. Before the Book: And he owned that, and put his Hand to it?

Mr. Att. Gen. Had you paid for theſe?

Mr. How. Yes; He order'd me to bind up theſe together, and to deliver one of them to Mr. Borret?

Sir T. Powis. Did you pay him for the Preface?

Mr. How. Yes, and for the Index.

L. C. J. Holt. Who made the Index?

Mr. How. He did.

L. C. J. Holt. Did he write his Name to the Preface, after it was brought to you?

Mr. How. It was deliver'd to me with his Hand to it; and he owned it.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Then he owned all the Obſervators to be his, by ſetting his Name to the Volme?

Mr. Mountague. Where was this Book deliver'd to you to be bound up?

Mr. How. I do not know, whether in London, or Middlesex, or Surrey.

Mr. Mountague. Recollect where it was that you had this Discourse about a Book?

Mr. How. I do not remember the exact Time.

Mr. Mountague. But you remember the Discourse: And can't you say where it was?

Mr. How. No, indeed.

Mr. Mountague. The Preface they talk of, was it brought in Writing?

Mr. How. It was brought, or sent in Writing; and I printed it from a Manuscript Copy.

Mr. Mountague. How do you know he sent it?

L. C. J. Holt. What did you give him for that Preface and Index?

Mr. How. I think it was Ten Shillings.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, With Submission, they cannot read this Paper: For if it be read, it must be read as the Paper of Mr. Tutchin. Now, as to this Paper that they produce, we do insist upon it, that it is Mr. How's Paper, and not Mr. Tutchin's. For he tells you, That whatever Papers he had, or whatever Directions were given him from Mr. Tutchin, were in Writing. Now if Mr. Tutchin is to be charg'd with a Libel in Writing, they must produce that very Writing, or a true Copy thereof. And another Man's taking a Copy of my Writing, cannot be said to make it my Writing; especially when it is not prov'd to be a true Copy. So that this Paper, which is printed by Mr. How, cannot be charged on Mr. Tutchin. If one single Penman had taken a Copy of it, if he could not be sure it was an exact Copy, it could not be read; much less such a Paper, which goes thro' so many Hands as this has done. And Mr. How says, He did often alter it, according to the best of his Understanding; and therefore that makes it his Paper. For, by a very small Alteration, a Thing may be made a Libel, that was not so before. And besides, it appears by Mr. How's own Evidence, that Mr. How makes an Advantage by the Printing and Publishing of it: And perhaps he makes Alterations, to make it sell the better. That makes it nothing like to Mr. Tutchin's Paper; and therefore they ought to produce that very Paper that was brought from Mr. Tutchin: And this Paper ought not to be read against him.

Mr. Harris. My Lord, He does not swear it is a true Copy; and therefore we cannot allow it to be read.

Mr. Whitaker. He has added the very Title: It is called an Observator; and he has put that Title to it. And he gives you no Account when, or where there was any Agreement made with Mr. Tutchin about it.

L. C. J. Holt. Where was the Agreement made for Printing the Papers?

Mr. How. I am not positive where it was; whether in London, or Middlesex. I did think it was in Fenchurch-street; but he says it was in the Strand.

Mr. Mountague. Can you be positive it was in Fenchurch-street?

Mr. How. I cannot be positive.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where were they printed?

Mr. How. In Fenchurch-street.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where did you bind the Book, and put the Preface?

Mr. How. That Book was sent out of my House to be bound; and when it was done, it was sent from my House again.

Mr. Conyers. Did he come to Fenchurch-street, to direct the Printing at any time?

Mr. How. Yes, several Times.

Mr. Weld. Did he agree with you to have them printed and publish'd?

Mr. How. Yes.

L. C. J. Holt. Have you the Original Papers of these Observators?

Mr. How. I have very few of them now.

L. C. J. Holt. How came you to part with them?

Mr. How. I thought there would be no Use made of them, and so I did not keep them: But I have most of the Third Volume by me.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, In Answer to this Objection, I must say, If this shall prevail in that Strictness, I take it for granted, that instead of restraining Libels, it will be the best and most effectual Way to publish them. For the Author then hath nothing to do, but when a Copy is printed, to destroy the same; and then no Evidence can be against him: Because the Printer will be called on, to know if that which is printed agree with the written Copy to a Letter. If that be so, it will be impossible to come at the Author. It is not an Answer, to say, You may go to the Printer: For tho' he is punishable; yet it is more reasonable to come at the Author. We have given a fair Evidence, that this is the same that was brought to this Man: And they do not make it appear, that he did add to, or diminish any of these Papers. The Printer says, The Defendant has avowed and justified all that he did for him since the Beginning. That by his Order, he collected all those Observators we insist on, in this Volume; which he has owned, and publish'd sufficiently: For here is his Index and Preface. And that he did publish this Volume, there is no room to question. We have given as good Evidence of this, as the Matter will bear.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we have given as good Evidence as can be expected, of a Matter of this Nature. We are prosecuting the Author, and have brought the Printer to give his Evidence; which is all we are able to get: For it is not in our Power to prove, where the Defendant did actually write them. The Printer had no Reason to take care of the Original Papers, because when they were printed, they were of no Use. He tells you, the whole Volume was printed, and owned by Mr. Tutchin continually, and by him directed to be made up into a Book, and he paid Mr. Tutchin for writing them from Time to Time. If this be not a sufficient Evidence of his publishing of them, it would be impossible to give any Evidence; for the Author would always take away his Copy, and then he is safe. These were printed and published in London; and where-ever the Agreement was made, we may charge the Defendant, where the Papers were printed, pursuant to an Agreement made between him and Mr. How; which makes the Composing and Printing his Act.

Mr. Serj. Darnell. My Lord, if this be not Evidence, that this Man is the Maker or Publisher of these Papers, his Agreement to have it done, his owning after it is done, and his own Confession, and his being paid for it; if this be not Evidence, nothing is.

L. C. J. Holt. His Agreement to publish that Book, is sufficient to prove that he owned it.

Mr. Conyers. My Lord, there is one Thing very conſiderable; the Diſcourſe he had with this Man. Says he, If you are queſtion'd about it, I am the Author, I gave you the Copy, and directed the printing of it; and you are unjuſt to your ſelf and your Family, if you do not diſcover me. My Lord, they make this Objection: We did contract with Mr. How to make an Obſervator, but he made Alterations in it, as he thought fit; and ſometimes he ſhew'd them to him, and ſometimes not. Now it's clear, Mr. Tutchin did give him that Liberty; and he cannot ſay, that there was any one of theſe Papers that was altered.

Mr. Soll. Gen. And, my Lord, after there were an Hundred compoſed, he directs Mr. How to bind them up in a Volume, and puts a Preface and Index to them, and ſets his Name to it. Now that is certainly a Publication and owning of them.

Mr. Weld. So far as in that Book goes, there is Evidence that he is the Author and Publiſher; and they have objected nothing to it: So that the only Queſtion is concerning the other Obſervators. Now he ſays he had Leave from the Obſervator to make thoſe Alterations.

L. C. J. Holt. No, he does not ſay ſo. Heark you, Sir, Did you ever add any thing?

Mr. How. Not that I know of, but a Word ſometimes to make it Senſe.

Mr. Weld. Did he ever allow you to do it?

Mr. How. He has often ſaid, that Printer was a Blockhead that did not.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, my Objection was ſingly, as to the reading the Papers, not of the Book. The Thing they offer'd as Evidence, was the Papers; and we ſay they ought to produce the Originals, which they have not done.

L. C. J. Holt. They offer the Book in Proof.

Mr. Mountague. Then, my Lord, I muſt beg Leave to oppoſe that likewiſe. For this Book is proved to be his, no otherwiſe, than by the Printer's ſwearing, that Mr. Tutchin order'd him to bind up Three Volumes of his Obſervators; and the Printer himſelf has put together theſe Papers, and Mr. Tutchin has writ a Preface before them; but whether the Papers thus put together were ever examined, non conſtat; or whether the Bookbinder has made no Alterations, non conſtat. And it does not appear, that Mr. Tutchin look'd over any of the Papers that are here bound up. So that the moſt the Queen's Council can make of this Evidence, is this: Here is a Book Mr. Tutchin took to be his Book upon the outward View of it, or at leaſt upon the Credit of his Printer; and therefore every thing in it muſt be read againſt him, as his. Surely, my Lord, that ought not to be allowed of. When Dr. Drake was here tried for being the Author of a ſcandalous Book, it was ſworn againſt him, That upon ſhewing him one of the Books he was charged with, he owned himſelf to be the Author of it. But a Queſtion being ask'd, Whether the Book that was offer'd to be read in Evidence againſt him, was that very Book that had been ſhewn him, when he owned himſelf to be the Author? It was anſwered, No: But it was a Book of the ſame Impreſſion, and therefore ought as much to be read againſt him, as the Book he owned. But, as I take it, that Evidence was diſallowed.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. Mountague, You ſtate it wrong; for that Book was read.

L. C. J. Holt. That Book was read, tho' it was not proved as that very Book that was deliver'd. It was the Bookſeller that ſaid the Book was printed by Dr. Drake; but he would not ſay it was that very Book that was given in Evidence. He took a Book with ſuch a Title: But was this the Book? But he could ſay, the other Book was never taken away. Now this Book is owned by Mr. Tutchin, by making the Preface and Index to it.

Mr. Mountague. It was a Book of the ſame Impreſſion with that which Dr. Drake had own'd himſelf to be the Author of, that was offer'd in Evidence.

L. C. J. Holt. He took the Book from the Shop that was read, the other Book was in the Shop.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Bookſeller ſaid he knew who writ the Book, but not who writ the Preface.

Mr. Mountague. But, my Lord, be the Caſe one way or the other: The Thing we inſiſt on is, That they cannot read the firſt Papers produced, becauſe Mr. Tutchin has not owned that Paper in particular for his, that is inſerted in the Book.

L. C. J. Holt. If the firſt Paper was printed by his Order, according to the Bargain made between them, it is reaſonable it ſhould be read. I do not know, ſays he, that I made any Alteration here; ſometimes I did alter, and ſometimes ſtrike out, and made the Expreſſion lower; but I know not that I made any Alteration here; and when I did, I oftentimes acquainted him with it; but that I made any Alteration here, I know not: I printed it by the Copy, and the Copy is loſt. Now Mr. Tutchin would have him make up a Volume; and, ſays he, This Volume I bound up by his Order.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, Here is a Paper offer'd, which they cannot prove to be a true Copy; and will you let them read it, becauſe they produce another Paper like it, bound up in a Volume; which, by the way, is proved no otherwiſe to be his, than by his beſpeaking a Set of Obſervators to be bound up for him?

L. C. J. Holt. It is the ſame.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I think, with Submiſſion, they may not read any of the Papers, if they have not examined the firſt Copy ſent to the Printer's.

L. C. J. Holt. A Man ſends a Copy to print, which is a Libel, and the Print is produced that is ſaid to be according to the Copy: There is another Print produced, that agrees with the firſt, which he hath owned.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I did hope that the Queen's Council would have given an Anſwer to that Part of my Objection, That theſe printed Papers are no more than Copies.

L. C. J. Holt. It is more than a Copy. Every Copy of a Libel is a Libel; and every Printer of a Libel is guilty of a Libel.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, It's true, every Copy of a Libel is a Libel: But whoſe Libel is it?

Mr. Harris. My Lord, It is not proved that he ever peruſed that Copy.

Mr. Mountague. Pray, Mr. How, was it his Direction to put theſe very Sheets together, or to make up a Volume of Obſervators? I do aſk you, Whether your Direction was to make up a Book of Obſervators, or to bind up theſe very Sheets?

Mr. How. He gave me Direction to make up a Set of Obſervators.

Mr. Mountague. Then you ſay, it was only to bind up a Set of Obſervators; and ſo on your own Head you bound up theſe Obſervators. But can you ſay, he has look'd over all the Papers in that Book, and owned them?

Mr. Weld.

Mr. Weld. My Lord, Here is a Man ſays, he order'd him to deliver them to my Lord Nottingham.

Mr. Mountague. How long is it ſince he gave you theſe Directions?

Mr. How. I believe it was about a Week after the Volume was publiſhed?

Mr. Mountague. How long ſince is it, that the Volume was publiſhed?

Mr. How. It was about April, 1703.

Mr. Mountague. How long after did you deliver them?

Mr. How. I deliver'd them within a Week after.

Mr. Att. Gen. There are but Two of the Obſervators we charge the Defendant with in that Book; and therefore we humbly inſiſt on reading of the printed Papers, on the Evidence we have given, which we take to be ſufficient to read them without the Book; theſe Papers being printed after this Agreement was made between them, and bound up by his Directions, he is anſwerable for them.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I do, with Submiſſion, ſay it ought not to be read, tho' it be in that Book; for no Man has proved that Paper that is in it to be his. But if they lay any Weight on the owning the Book, the publiſhing the Book is a new Crime, for which he may be puniſhed afterwards, and he is not charged with it in this Information.

Mr. Att. Gen. If a Man be indicted for being the Author of a Book; being indicted once, he is indicted once for the whole Book.

Mr. Whitaker. My Lord, We are indicted for a ſingle Paper; and that Book is not the Matter of the Indictment.

Queen's Council. My Lord, We have done now. We deſire the Papers may be read.

L. C. J. Holt. Read them both.

Then the Firſt Obſervator was read.

Obſervator, May 30. 1702. " At the ſame " time we conſider the French King's Succeſs in his " Bribery and Corruption, we ought to lament the " ſad State of our own Country, which affords ſo " many Inſtances of Treachery. If we may judge " by our National Miſcarriages, perhaps no Nation " in Europe has felt the Influences of French Gold " more than England; and worthy it is our greateſt " Lamentation, that our dear Country ſhould be " weaken'd by Men of mercenary Principles, when " Countries inferior to us in Strength and Riches " are ſecured from Attempts of this Nature, only " by the Fidelity of their People. What is the " Reaſon, that French Gold has not affected Holland, " as well as England; but that their Miniſtry is " ſuch, as is entirely in the Intereſt of their Coun- " try, and altogether incorruptible: They prefer " Men that are knowing in their Poſts, and are " active in Buſineſs. When in England we find " Offices for Men, not Men for Offices; and a Title " of Honour gives a Man a Title to a great Employ- " ment he is altogether ignorant of. By this, and " by preferring of Men by Intereſt and Favour, has " the Exciſe, the Cuſtoms, and other Branches of " the Revenue, intolerably ſunk; and by this " Means has the Navy of England, our chief Sup- " port, been hitherto perfectly bewitch'd: And can " Lewis ſpend his Money better, than in getting " Men into Offices in England, who are either falſe " or ignorant in the Buſineſs, or are his Friends"?

" And this is a Prerogative of ſingular Ad- " vantage to the People of England, in that their " Repreſentatives are the Judges of the Male-Ad- " miniſtration of their Governors, that they can " call them in Queſtion for the ſame, and can " approve ſuch to wear the Crown who are fit- " teſt for Government; which they have often " done, and indeed which is the Privilege of all " free People, who are authorized by the Laws " of God and Nature to chuſe their own Go- " vernors.

Mr. Att. Gen. Now we will ſhew theſe Papers to Mr. How, for theſe are all that are in the Book. (They were ſhewn him.) Mr. How, pray tell us who was the Author of theſe Papers?

Mr. How. Mr. Tutchin.

L. C. J. Holt. How do you know that?

Mr. How. I had them of him.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you pay him for them?

Mr. How. I paid him for theſe very Papers.

Mr. Mountague. What, theſe Papers that are now produced? You never ſhew'd them to him did you?

Mr. How. No, but I ſhew'd him the ſame Number.

Mr. Mountague. Have you read them to him?

Mr. How. He has owned them all; he has own'd them an Hundred and an Hundred times, all of them.

Mr. Mountague. Have you the Copy of theſe Papers by you?

Mr. How. No.

Mr. Mountague. Did you ſearch for them?

Mr. How. No, I have not.

Mr. Harris. My Lord, If we had ſeen theſe Papers, then we might have ſeen what Alterations were made in them.

Mr How. I believe he had them back again.

Mr. Mountague. I believe he has not been aſk'd to ſearch for them.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did not Mr. Borret ſend to you about the Original Papers?

Mr. How. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you look out what you had?

Mr. How. Thoſe that I had were look'd out.

Mr. Att. Gen. What became of them?

Mr. How. I know not, but he might have them back again.

Mr. Att. Gen. Thoſe that you did find, what did you do with them?

Mr. How. Thoſe that I have now, are but Two or Three.

Mr. Att. Gen. Did you carry all the Original Papers you had to Mr. Borret?

Mr. How. Yes, all that I know of.

Mr. Mountague. Have you no Copies? Did you not ſay you were not deſired to look for theſe Obſervators?

Mr. How. I ſaid, I did not know whether I was ordered to ſearch for theſe particular Obſervators.

Mr. Mountague. Did Mr. Borret deſire you to look after theſe Original Obſervators?

Mr. How. I am not poſitive.

L. C. J. Holt. Did you deliver all thoſe that you had to Mr. Borret?

Mr. How. Yes, my Lord, all that I had at that Time; but I have had ſome ſince.

Mr. Att. Gen. He told you before, That till there was like to be a Proſecution, he did not keep them them, but ſince he did; and now he look'd for what he had, and deliver'd them to Mr. Borret.

Mr. Soll. Gen. The next is N°. 23. Saturday, July 11. 1702.

L. C. J. Holt. Then Mr. Borret muſt be ſworn.

And he was Sworn accordingly.

Sir T. Powis. Mr. Borret, acquaint my Lord, and the Jury, whether you deſired Mr. How to look out the Copies of the Obſervators.

Mr. Borret. I ſent to deſire Mr. How to look out all the written Copies of the Obſervators, which he had received from Mr. Tutchin; and he afterwards brought me a conſiderable Number of them, and ſaid they were all he could find: And I have very carefully look'd them all over, but cannot find any one amongſt them that relates to any of thoſe Obſervators mentioned in the Information, except one, which is in May laſt, the which I have here in Court.

Mr. Mountague. Did you ſend to Mr. How, to aſk for the Original of theſe Papers here named?

Mr. Borret. I did.

Mr. Mountague. Will you produce the Papers you have? My Lord, they have taken thoſe Original Papers; and if they were produced, you would ſee how they are mangled.

Mr. Att. Gen. If they were nothing to the Matter, what did they ſignify? Only this is a popular Thing, and they muſt ſay a great deal.

Mr. Conyers. Read the Obſervator of the 12th of June, 1703, which contains theſe Words.

(Which the Clerk read, as follows.)

" Take one Time with another, the Miſmanage-
" ments of the Navy have been a greater Tax on
" the Merchants, than the Duties raiſed by Par" liament. We never had a better Navy; but the " Wiſdom of the Managers thereof is like a Bot-
" tomleſs Pit, paſt finding out.

Mr Conyers Now go on to N°. 20. the 16th of June 1703. (Which the Clerk read, as follows.)

" What avails it a Man of Learning and Parts,
" to qualify himſelf for the Service of his Country
" on the Ocean? If he has Knowledge enough to " adviſe Neptune himſelf, if he has no Intereſt, he
" ſhall have no Preferment. How much does it
" look to our Nation's Diſadvantage, to have Men
" in Eminent Stations in the Navy, who have not
" ſo much as an Idea, a Notion, a Thought of Na" val Affairs? To have Men to ſuperintend the " Building of our Floating Caſtles, who know not
" the Nature of any Part of the Management? To " have Men employ'd in the Victualling, who qua" lify themſelves for that Poſt by learning to write
" their Names, which is indeed a Poſt for a Philo-
" ſopher bred to the Sea?

Then Mr. Tanner was Sworn, as to an Original Record, which he produced about Daniel De Foe's Tryal, to be compared with the Paſſage to be next read.

Mr. Conyers. Now read the Obſervator, N°. 27. Saturday the 10th of July, 1703. (Which was read, as follows.)

" Countrym. Truly, Maſter Obſervator, I have " no very good News for you. Mr Daniel De Foe
" has pleaded Guilty to the Indictment againſt him,
" for writing and publiſhing the ſhorteſt Way with
" the Diſſenters; and he is ſentenc'd to ſtand Three " Times in the Pillory, to pay a Fine of 200 Marks,
" and to find Security for his good Behaviour for Se" ven Years. Obſerv. The Court could do no other-
" wiſe than convict him, upon his pleading Guilty;
" habemus confitentem reum is very often the Voice
" of Courts of Judicature: 'Tis the Eaſe of Judges
" and Juries. If Daniel De Foe was in Expectation
" of Coleman's Black Box, he has found a Pillory
" inſtead of it. I don't trouble my Head about the " Cuſtom of giving the Pillory to Authors, which " is the Puniſhment of Bakers. You talked juſt
" now of turning Author, have a care of your " Candle; you ſee which is the ſhorteſt Way with " Authors: You muſt all enter your ſelves in the " Regiment of Colonel Foe. The Law of England
" directs, That no Man ſhall be fined ultra tene-
" mentum; and I make no queſtion, but the Juſtice
" of the Court has fined Mr. Foe anſwerable to his " Eſtate: His Security for his good Behaviour for " Seven Years, without doubt, was rationally con-
" ſider'd, as to the Legality thereof. For my part,
" I am only acquainted with Old Laws of England,
" the Ancient Birthrights and Immunities of " Engliſhmen: This I take to be the Foundation of " New Laws.

Sir T. Powis. The laſt is of the 20th of May laſt; Mr. Borret, is the Original of that here?

Mr. Borret. Yes.

Sir T. Powis. Who had you this of?

Mr. Borret. I had it from Mr. How.

Sir T. Powis. Shew it to Mr. How. (Which was done.)

L. C. J. Holt. Whoſe Hand is that?

Mr. How. To the beſt of my Knowledge, it is Mr. Tutchin's.

L. C. J. Holt. Who had you it from?

Mr. How. From Mr. Tutchin, or his Order.

L. C. J. Holt. Did you pay him for it?

Mr. How. Yes, my Lord.

Mr. Att. Gen. Then that likewiſe was printed under the Title of the Obſervator?

Mr. How. Yes, Sir.

Then the Paragraph was read.

" Countrym. Maſter Obſervator, there's another " Plot againſt you. Obſerv. Prithee Man, there's " a Plot againſt the Queen, and the whole Nation;
" is it any wonder then that there are Plots againſt
" me? The High-Fliers are now plotting againſt
" every honeſt Man in England. I'll tell you more
" of it the next Time we meet. Countrym. I fancy
" ſome Sort of People plot againſt you, becauſe
" you endeavour to countermine their Plots againſt
" the Queen and Nation. Obſerv. You are right
" enough; but that ſhan't hinder me from detect" ing their Deſigns, and from opening the People's " Eyes. But, prithee, what Plot is this? Countrym.
" Why, Sir, it is a Plot preparatory to your Tryal;
" and if they can't effect this Plot, I ſuppoſe you'll " never be try'd. They inſinuate into the Citizens
" of London, that you have lately written very " ſcandalouſly, maliciouſly, and treaſonably, and I " don't know how many other Lies, againſt them
" the ſaid Citizens; and by this Means they are " minded to ſet your Jurors againſt you. Obſ. This " is likely enough; they'll leave no Stone unturn'd,
" to ſuppreſs the Truth. I underſtand, I ſhould
" have been proſecuted by Bill the laſt Seſſions, but " that the High-Fliers did not like the Jury; nay,
" they ſay they don't like the Two Sheriffs, be-
" cauſe they won't pack Juries to find innocent Men
" Guilty.

Mr. Mountague. Now, my Lord, we take it, there is a Variation between this Paper, and the Information. In the Copy, it is only C. in the Information, it is Countryman. Now when they deſcribe any Paper, it muſt be as it is writ; and they cannot ſay Countryman, when it is but C.

L. C. J.

L. C. J. Holt. He writes a Dialogue between the Countryman and the Obſervator; but now he makes C. for Countryman.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, if they go upon the Libel, they muſt give it as it is under his own Hand.

Sir T. Powis. That Letter is to be underſtood Countryman.

L. C. J. Holt. When he us'd to write C. were you not to write Countryman at large?

Mr. How. At firſt we were; afterwards as it might be intelligible.

Mr. Mountague. Still we think they have not done enough: They have not proved this Thing ſufficiently, by the Witneſſes they have called. For, my Lord, we take it, that they muſt poſitively ſhew it was writ within the City. In the Tryal of the Biſhops, it was proved to be all under their Hands: Yet it was required then, that they might make it appear, that that Paper was writ in the County of Middleſex.

Mr. Att. Gen. Mr. How, where do you live now?

Mr. How. In Grace-Church-ſtreet.

Mr. Att. Gen. Let that Agreement be made where it will, the Publiſhing was in London; and we may lay the Information here.

L. C. J. Holt. Where did you receive theſe Papers?

Mr. How. Moſt commonly they were ſent to my Houſe, in Talbot Court, in Grace-Church ſtreet.

Mr. Whitaker. Have you not fetch'd ſome of them from Lambeth?

Mr. How. Yes, ſome of them.

L. C. J. Holt. Suppoſe a Man draws up a Libel in Middleſex, and there agrees with a Printer who lives in London to print it: He takes it away, and prints it in London, and there publiſhes it. Now the Queſtion is, Whether he that drew it, is not guilty of Compoſing and Publiſhing of it in London? Every Copy is a Libel of it ſelf.

Mr. Mountague. Every Copy is a Libel; and the taking a Copy of a Libel, may be a Publication: But that is not the Thing laid to his Charge; it is, Scripſit & Compoſuit. Now the Writing is in the County of Surrey; there he writes, and there he compoſes.

L. C. J. Holt. He is charged with Writing, Compoſing and Publiſhing a Libel in London. Tho' he be not guilty of Writing there, yet he may be guilty of Compoſing it there.

Mr. Mountague. Now, my Lord, as to the Publiſhing, the Printing is not the Defendant's Publiſhing: That affects another Man. Therefore we think they ſhould give ſome Evidence of his writing theſe Papers in London.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, As to that, the Word Compoſuit is proper to relate to the Printing of it: (For the Printers have ſuch a Term as Compoſing:) And that is fully proved to be in London. And for Writing, (whether that be a material Thing between us) I take it, that he that does write a Libel, and ſends it to London; and there, by his Authority and Directions, it is compoſed again in another Paper, and printed; that Paper is ſtill his Writing, whereever it goes. However, the other Words come up to the Caſe fully; becauſe if that which he writes is ſo publiſhed, it may be ſaid to be writ by him, whereever it is ſo publiſhed.

Mr. Att. Gen. We have proved his owning himſelf to be the Author, and his cauſing it to be printed in London.

L. C. J. Holt. That is not an Evidence of his writing it.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, It is a Proof of his cauſing it to be printed.

L. C. J. Holt. If he be guilty of a Fact in one County, you cannot charge it in another. But if he caus'd it to be printed in London, no queſtion it will be a Publication here.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Compoſing and Printing is a Publication; and that we have proved to be done in London, purſuant to his Agreement. And we alſo charged him with writing the ſame; and as a Proof of that, we have proved his owning himſelf to be the Author. If that be not an Evidence of his writing it, we can hardly ever prove that Part of the Charge of writing: For he that writes a Libel, will do it alone; and proving the Copies to be received in London, is an Evidence they were writ there firſt, if the Defendant doth not prove the contrary.

Mr. Whitaker. Mr. How ſwears, he had the Copy from Lambeth.

Mr. Att. Gen. Where was it compoſed?

Mr. How. At my Houſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. Was he there at your Houſe?

Mr. How. Yes; and I had them from him there.

L. C. J. Holt. Did he write any of them there?

Mr. How. Not that I know of.

Mr. Att Gen. Is Mr. Tutchin in the Court?

Mr. Mountague. I believe not.

L. C. J. Holt. Why is he not here?

Mr. Mountague. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, to ſpare me a few Words in Behalf of the Defendant. I can hardly ſay I am of Council with Mr. Tutchin, becauſe I have never ſeen him, but upon Recording his Appearance in open Court; and he has not thought fit to ſend us any Inſtructions till this Morning, when we were juſt going down to Weſtminſter. But I do ſuppoſe, this Remiſsneſs in his Temper, does proceed from his Innocency of the Accuſation againſt him: And he has a Mind to let the World ſee, how eaſy it is to make his Defence; ſince he has pitch'd upon me for his Advocate, and given me ſo little Time to prepare my ſelf for it. But as ſhort Notice as I have had of this Information againſt him, thus much I will beg Leave to ſay to it in general; That it does by no means come up to what the Gentlemen on the other Side call it, A Charge of Writing and Publiſhing a Falſe and Scandalous Libel. My Lord Coke has given us a Definition, or rather a Deſcription of a Libel: Says he, "Famoſus Libellus, ſeu infamatoria Scri-"ptura, is made either againſt a private Man, or "a Magiſtrate. If it be againſt a private Man, "it does deſerve to be puniſhed; becauſe it is "likely to incite all the Family or Kindred of "ſuch Perſon, to revenge the Injury; which "tends to the Breach of the Publick Peace. If "it be againſt a Publick Perſon, as a Magiſtrate, "it is a greater Offence: Becauſe it concerns not "only the Breach of the Peace, but it is a Scan-"dal to the Government. And it matters not whe-"ther ſuch private Man, or Magiſtrate, be dead or "alive at the making of ſuch Libel; becauſe the "Friends and Relations of ſuch Perſons, are inci-"ted thereby to diſturb the Peace of the King-"dom. By all which Sayings of my Lord Coke, I do humbly ſuppoſe, That there can be no Libel, where no Perſon certain is reflected upon, or ſcandalized. A Libel that points at no body in particular, is like a Shot at Random, that ſeldom does any Miſchief. And therefore I do take it, with great Submiſſion, That in this Caſe, Mr. Attorney ſhould have ſhew'd us, what Perſon (either publick or private) theſe Obſervators have aſperſed. My Lord Coke, in another place, does liken Libelling to Poiſon, which ſecretly deſtroys a Man's Reputation, as the other does his Life. But certainly it would be thought a ſtrange Sort of Indictment, to charge a Man with being guilty of Murder; and not mention ſome one in particular, that has loſt his Life thro' the Defendant's Means or Procurement. Now pray, my Lord, how much does this Information differ from ſuch an Indictment? Here it is ſaid, That the Defendant Tutchin has wrote and publiſhed a falſe and ſcandalous Libel, of and concerning this Kingdom of England, and the Officers and Miniſters of the Queen. But a National Reflection, that equally concerns every individual Perſon in the Kingdom with the Reflector himſelf, cannot excite and ſtir up the People to quarrel one with the other. And to tell me, the Miniſters and Officers of the Queen are particularly concern'd; does but give me Occaſion to ask, what Officers and Miniſters Mr. Attorney is taking care of? For I do not find any Miniſter of State, or other Great Officer, ſo much as mention'd throughout this Record. A Bailiff, or Conſtable, is one of the Queen's Officers; and yet very few will think, a Man ought to be puniſh'd for Scandal, that ſhall ſay of ſuch Officers and Miniſters, they commit frequent Miſdemeanors, and are of Mercenary Principles. Would it not have been eaſy for Mr. Attorney to have aſſigned the Particulars, if he knows of any body that has been defamed by theſe Obſervators? But ſince the Information ſets forth no Particulars, I hope the Jury will take it for granted, that nothing in theſe Papers can be affixed to any Man's Door: But whatever has been writ, is ſpent in the Air; and I hope this Accuſation will vaniſh there likewiſe.

In the next place, my Lord, I would beg Leave to take notice of the particular Papers, which have been ſeverally read in Evidence. And the firſt that has been produced, is one of the printed Obſervators, agreed on all Hands to have been publiſh'd ſo long ago as the 30th of May, which was in the firſt Year of Her preſent Majeſty's Reign. And as to this, the Charge is, That the Defendant has Written, Compoſed and Publiſhed it. But how many of theſe Three Particulars have been made out, muſt be next obſerv'd. And as to the writing of it, Mr. How has ſworn, That there was an Agreement made betwixt him and the Defendant, (but where, he cannot ſay) that Mr. Tutchin ſhould write a Paper, ſometimes once, ſometimes twice a Week, of the Publick Tranſactions: And ſuch a Paper has been writ by Mr. Tutchin; but where this Paper was wrote by Mr. Tutchin, or deliver'd, Mr. How cannot ſwear. However, ſo far he goes, that from theſe Papers of Mr. Tutchin he has printed at his Houſe in London, theſe Papers are now produced. But on this Evidence, I muſt, with your Lordſhip's Favour, obſerve, That there are Two different Sorts of Libels ſpoken of: The one is in Writing; ſuppos'd to be written by Mr. Tutchin, but God knows where: The other in Print, own'd by Mr. How to be printed and publiſhed from the written Paper; which does not appear, and of which no true Copy has been proved. Now we hope, therefore, my Lord, that the Gentlemen of the Jury will rightly diſtinguiſh betwixt this Firſt and Second Libel, and make a Difference betwixt the Act of Mr. How, and that of Mr. Tutchin. The printed Papers here produc'd, are ſtil'd the Obſervator; ſo was not the written ones, if Mr. How be to be believed. The printed Obſervators are ſold about, for the ſole Benefit of Mr. How; and Mr. Tutchin receives only a ſmall Præmium, for the writing once or twice in a Week. Mr. Tutchin only earns his weekly Subſiſtance, by making Obſervations in the Country; and it does not appear, that he concerns himſelf further about the Printing or Publiſhing of them. If he gets his Money, Mr. How may do with his Papers as he thinks fit. So that I muſt humbly inſiſt upon it, That what Mr. How has done within this City of London, can never reach Mr. Tutchin into Surrey or Eſſex. It has been ſaid indeed, and I ſhall not contradict it, That the bare Tranſcribing of a Libel, will make a Man guilty of Libelling: But for this Reaſon I do ſay, That Mr. How only has been guilty of making and publiſhing theſe printed Obſervators in London: And Mr. Tutchin, if he be guilty, muſt be convicted of the making and publiſhing that, which can be ſworn to be his written Obſervations; eſpecially ſince it has plainly appear'd, that the Papers written by Mr. Tutchin, have been frequently alter'd by Mr. How, before they were printed off.

And if we conſider the Paſſages that have been produced; the Gentlemen of the Jury will perceive, a very little Alteration will make theſe Papers quite different from what they are. However, as they be, I hope there is no great Matter in any of them. The Firſt Obſervator ſays; "At the ſame time, "if we conſider the French King's Succeſs, in "his Bribery and Corruption, we ought to la- "ment the ſad State of our own Country, which "affords ſo many Inſtances of Treachery, &c. Now, pray who is We in this Caſe? Says Mr. Attorney, in his Innuendo, The People of England. But I hope an Innuendo ſhall not make a Man guilty of a Crime, which otherwiſe can't be affixed upon him. But ſuppoſing this ſame Paper were in truth written with relation to England; will any one ſay, that (no Times whatſoever) this Country has afforded not any Inſtances of Treachery? And what Part of this Information does ſo much as fix the Time to which the Obſervator alludes? If all that is here ſet forth were written of a former Miniſtry, I do ſuppoſe there would not be ſo much Blame laid on the Author, as if he comes nearer the preſent Times: So the Time to which theſe Papers do refer, muſt certainly be material, and fit to be conſider'd of, before any one can rightly judge of this Caſe. And for want of its being aſcertain'd and determin'd whither theſe Reflections may extend, I hope the Jury will not very much regard them.

The next Charge does ſet forth a wicked Aſſertion to have been made, de & concernen' Poteſtat. Populi Anglicani. But we muſt be in your Lordſhip's Judgment, whether the Paper that is produced, does make out that Aſſertion to be juſt as it's laid. I take it, with Submiſſion, that there is a manifeſt Variance betwixt the Charge and the Libel. The Charge makes him ſpeak of the Power of the People at large; when the Paper comes to be read that ſpeaks of our Repreſentatives in Parliament. And ſurely there is a Difference, to ſay, The People at large can do ſo and ſo; and to ſay, Our Repreſentatives in Parliament can do it. For inſtance; The making of Laws is not in the People diſperſed over England; but in their Repreſentatives in Parliament, in Concurrence with the Houſe of Lords, when the Royal Aſſent does likewiſe concur with them; therefore I think this Charge can't affect us, upon Account of this Variance. The next Article then to be taken notice of is that concerning the Navy.----

Mr. Soll. Gen. But Mr. Mountague ſays nothing of the Prerogative the People have, that the Repreſentatives are the Judges of the Male-Adminiſtration of their Governors; that they can call them in Queſtion for the ſame, and can appoint ſuch to wear the Crown, who are fitteſt for Government; which they have often done. He paſſes by all this ſcandalous Matter.

Mr. Mountague. I did ſo, Mr. Sollicitor, and I did it on purpoſe, becauſe I look'd upon it as a Matter not proper for you and I to talk of as Advocates in this Place. And I am apt to think, my Diſcretion in paſſing it by will be more eaſily juſtified, than theirs that ſhall bring ſuch Points as theſe upon the Stage, to be talk'd on before this Aſſembly. I muſt declare for my own Part that I think the Rights of Princes and the Power of the People too high Topicks for me to meddle with; let others do as they think beſt. I ſhall paſs over to the next Article concerning the Navy. "Take one Time with ano-"ther, the Miſmanagements of the Navy have "been a greater Ta.. on the Merchants, than the "Duties raiſed by Parliament". Now how does this relate only to the Navy Royal; it is no where ſaid, the Miſmanagement of the King's Navy, or the Queen's Navy. And the Word Navy does, in my poor Underſtanding, ſignify no more than a Number of Ships got together; and therefore I do humbly conceive, there may be a Navy of Merchant Ships as well as a Navy of Men of War, 'tis altogether uncertain what Navy the Author does allude to.

L. C. J. Holt. Surely the Navy muſt be the Navy Royal.

Mr. Mountague. If it muſt, my Lord, yet no body can ſay that we never had any Miſmanagements in the Royal Navy, and whenever that has happened the Merchants of England, in all Probability have ſuffered for it.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I think all this Diſcourſe is ſuch as is not to be allowed.

Mr. Soll. Gen. When a Man complains of the Miſmanagement of the Government, and then comes after this, and ſays that the People have a Power inherent in them to call their Governors to an Acount: What is this? Does it want an Expoſiction, thus to poſſeſs the People with an Opinion of the Power they have to call the King or Queen to an Acount? What does ſuch Things tend to, but to raiſe in the People an Indignation againſt the Government?

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, the Thing I was inſiſting upon was, that whatever is here ſet forth, is not brought within any Compaſs of Time, and there is no particular Reflection upon any Perſon whatſoever. Tho' mention is made of divers Miſmanagements and of ſeveral Miſcarriages; yet all theſe Things may be ſaid of other Times long ſince. And therefore ſince this Exception goes to all the reſt of the Charges in the Information, I ſhall paſs by the other Particulars. And ſince I have taken up a great deal of your Lordſhip's Time already, I ſhall leave the reſt to theſe Gentlemen that are to ſpeak after me.

Mr. Serj. Darnel. Will you ſay they are true?

Mr. Whitaker. My Lord, here is an Accuſation that we did write and compoſe and publiſh theſe Papers; now it appears that the firſt Author was often out of London, and that the Copy was often fetch'd from Lambeth, and other Places; and the Witneſs did apply the Title of Obſervator to every one of theſe Papers. Now that which they call Libellous is not in the Writing which we did write; and if we did not write it in London. I hope you will not find us Guilty of writing and publiſhing of a Libel.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we have not done any Thing as to the Printing at all; we had nothing to do with it.

L. C. J. Holt. Were not you concerned in printing it? I can't imagine how Mr. How came to pay for it elſe. Mr. How, what were you to give for every Obſervator?

Mr. How. For about Sixty ſix of the laſt, I paid Twenty Shillings a Time.

L. C. J. Holt. What did you give for them before?

Mr. How. Half a Guinea a Time.

L. C. J. Holt. Was it the ſame Thing to him whether you printed it or not?

Mr. How. Yes; but I would not have given it him, if it had not been to be publiſhed.

Mr. Whitaker. My Lord, we are in your Judgment as to this Matter, whether they can find us guilty of a Libel in London?

Mr. Soll. Gen. It was in London.

L. C. J. Holt. Where was the Agreement made?

Mr. How. I did think at firſt that it was in the City, and I do think ſo; but he ſays it was in Surrey. The Papers were delivered ſometimes at my own Houſe, and ſometimes in the Country.

Mr. Att. Gen. Were they deliver'd to you to be printed?

Mr. How. Yes.

Mr. Att. Gen. You ſaid you and he have mended the Papers, has that been done at your Houſe in London; or in the Country?

Mr. How. I do not know which.

Mr. Mountague. Let me ask you one Queſtion: Can you ſwear to any particular Paper, that he deliver'd that Paper in London?

Mr. How. I do not know where they were delivered.

Mr. Weld. It need not be inſiſted on to find him guilty of all; if they find him guilty of the Publication that will be enough; and that they cannot deny but he is guilty of that. When it is deliver'd to be printed, it is as much a Publication as the compoſing of it.

Mr. Mountague. But it does not appear that it was delivered in London.

Mr. Weld. But he owned it in London.

Sir T. Powis. He did cauſe theſe Papers to be printed in London.

L. C. J. Holt. He deliver'd them to be printed in London: How agrees to give him half a Guinea a Paper at firſt, and Twenty Shillings afterwards; and ſurely then he deſigned to have them printed.

Mr. Mountague. He cares not what he does with the Papers, he was only to have ſo much Money for them.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, here they are ſetting up a Doctrine that will make libelling ſafe, ſo that no Man ſhall ever be puniſhed for it. We have charged him with writing, compoſing and publiſh-

ing a Libel: We have proved the Agreement made with the Printer, be it in London, or out of London, is not very material. Now if there be an Agreement made out of London, for printing and publiſhing a Libel; wherever that Libel is printed and publiſhed, he is guitly; for whatever is done by his Agreement, he is guilty of it. As to the next Thing, I am much concerned to hear them ſay, that which I never before heard urged in any Court, that a Libel is not a Libel unleſs they aſſign ſome particular Perſon; but I look upon it as the higheſt kind of Libels to reflect on publick Officers in general; on the Adminiſtration of Juſtice in general. I believe every one knows a Libel is a Libel, tho' particular Perſons are not named: If it reflect on Officers, in general as Miniſters of State, or Judges, or the like. Mr. Mountague would have it, that Reflections on the Miniſters of the Crown is not a Reflection on the Queen; and he would have it, that we ſhould have averr'd who theſe Miniſters are that were meant in the Libels. As to the firſt, certainly they that reflect on the publick Adminiſtration of Juſtice by the Queen's Officers, do reflect on her Majeſty who places and continues them in their Offices. And to the Second Reflection, being in general on the Miniſtry, we ought not, nor could aver, who in particular he meant in theſe Libels; the whole Adminiſtration under the Queen is reflected on, in placing in Officers in general; in the Management of the Navy, and placing in the Officers thereof; and in the Adminiſtration of Juſtice in the Courts of Juſtice; and what can be more ſcandalous? There needs no Averment to explain theſe, in themſelves they appear to be Libels; and I hope ſuch Diſcourſes as have been made on this Occaſion for the Defendant, will not meet with any Countenance; but I am ſurprized to hear it juſtified here by a Council, That the People have Power to call their Governors to Account.

Mr. Mountague. I did not ſay ſo.

Mr. Att. Gen. Certainly what you did ſay, viz. That you ſhewed more Diſcretion in paſſing it by, than we did in queſtioning the Defendant for it, and that we wanted Diſcretion in bringing this Matter on the Stage; could have no other Meaning, but that the Matter was juſtifiable, but you would not in Prudence do it; which, I muſt ſay, is the greateſt Liberty I have known taken by a Council.

L. C. J. Holt. I did not hear him ſay ſo.

Mr. Mountague. I did not ſay ſo, I ſaid it was more diſcreet to paſs it by than take notice of it.

Mr. Att. Gen. I will always proſecute any Man that ſhall aſſert ſuch Doctrine. My Lord, I think my ſelf obliged in Duty, being in the Station I am, always to take notice of ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe, which no Council ought to preſume to make.

L. C. J. Holt. Gentlemen of the Jury. This is an Information that is preferred by the Queen's Attorney General againſt Mr. Tutchin, for writing, and compoſing, and publiſhing, or cauſing to be writ, compoſed, or publiſhed, ſeveral Libels againſt the Queen and Her Government; and all theſe that are ſet forth as Libels, are entitled, The Obſervator, and they are in Number Six. The firſt is ſaid to be made and publiſhed May 30. 1702. and in which Mr. Tutchin is charged with having this Libellous, ſcandalous Paragraph againſt the Govermnent, and the Adminiſtration of it. The Words are theſe, " If we conſider the French King's " Succeſs, in his Bribery and Corruption, we ought " to lament the ſad State of our own Country, " which affords ſo many Inſtances of Treachery. " If we may judge by our National Miſcarri- " ages, perhaps no Nation in Europe has felt " the Influences of French Gold, more than Eng- " land; and worthy it is our greateſt Lamenta- " tion, that our dear Country ſhould be thus " weaken'd by Men of mercenary Principles, when " Countries inferior to ours in Strength and Riches " are ſecured from Attempts of this Nature, only " by the Fidelity of their People. What is the " Reaſon, that French Gold has not affected Holland, " as well as England; but that their Miniſtry is " ſuch as is entirely in the Intereſt of their Coun- " try, and altogether incorruptible: They prefer " Men that are knowing in their Poſts, and are " active in Buſineſs. When in England we find " out Offices for Men, and not Men for Offices; and " a Title of Honour gives a Man a Title to a great " Employment he is altogether ignorant of. By " this, and by preferring of Men by Intereſt and " Favour, has the Exciſe, the Cuſtoms, and other " Branches of the Revenue intolerably ſunk; and " by this Means has the Navy of England, our " chief Support, been hitherto perfectly bewitched: " And can Lewis ſpend his Money better than in " getting Men into Offices in England, who are ei- " ther falſe or ignorant in the Buſineſs, or are his " Friends"? This now is charged on him as a Defaming the Government, in employing corrupted Officers, or ignorant Officers, when they are not fit for their Places. There is another that has been produced, which is the Second, that hath theſe Words: " And this is a Prerogative of ſingular Ad- " vantage to the People of England, in that their " Repreſentatives are the Judges of the Male-Admi- " niſtration of their Governors; that they can call " them in Queſtion for the ſame, and can appoint " ſuch to wear the Crown, who are fitteſt for Go- " vernment: Which they have often done, and in- " deed which is the Privilege of all free People, " who are authorized by the Laws of God and " Nature, to chuſe their own Governors". This is to poſſeſs the People, that they may at their Will and Pleaſure when they take a Fancy thereto, diſſeiſe the Queen, and ſet up what Governor they pleaſe. Theſe Two, and the reſt which I ſhall mention by and by, are given in Evidence. And it ſeems at firſt Mr. Tutchin came to Mr. How, the Printer, and there is a Contract made between them two, to print a Weekly Paper, and it was to be entitled, The Obſervator, and he was to have half a Guinea a Time. Mr. Tutchin was to write, and the other was to print; his Printing-Houſe was here in London: Accordingly he enters into this Contract, and from Time to Time has received Copies, and prints them, and has paid Mr. Tutchin for them, and has printed all his Obſervators, even to this very Day: Afterwards there came Two out in a Week. Now it is moſt plain, that a Contract was made between Mr. Tutchin and Mr. How, for Mr. Tutchin to write and frame, and Mr. How to print. And no body can imagine that Mr. How, the Printer, would give him Money, unleſs that written Copy were to be printed: But now ſay they, was there no Alteration made; but were they printed exactly purſuant to the Copy of Mr. Tutchin? Yes, but theſe Two were not; not but that ſometimes I made ſome Alterations; for ſays he, when I thought his Expreſſions were too paſſionate and ſevere, I apprehended Danger, and made made ſome literal Alterations. But after this, theſe Two were read, and Mr. Tutchin owned them, and divers others, and ordered him to bind them in a Volume, and he does ſo, and Mr. Tutchin makes a Preface, and binds it to this Volume. It appears that his own Hand is to it, to the Preface, and was paid Money for them, and Mr. Tutchin owned this Number; ſo that there is a full Proof that theſe were compoſed by Mr. Tutchin, in order to be printed, and they were printed afterwards and he has received Money for them.

Now there are Four more which are charged in the Information, of the ſame Nature. One is thus: " Take one Time with another, the Miſ- " managements of the Navy have been a greater " Tax on the Merchants, than the Duties raiſed by " Parliament: We never had a better Navy; but " the Wiſdom of the Managers thereof is like a " bottomleſs Pit, paſt finding out". A Fourth Paper hath theſe Expreſſions. " What avails it " a Man of Learning and Parts, to qualify " himſelf for the Service of his Country on the " Ocean? If he has Knowledge enough to " adviſe Neptune himſelf, if he has no Intereſt, he " ſhall have no Preferment. How much does it " look to our Nation's Diſadvantage, to have Men " in Eminent Stations in the Navy, who have not " ſo much as an Idea, a Notion, a Thought of Na- " val Affairs? To have Men to ſuperintend the " Building of our Floating Caſtles, who know not " the Nature of any one Part of the Management? " To have Men employ'd in the Victualling, who " qualify themſelves for that Poſt by learning to " write their Names, which is indeed a Poſt for a " Philoſopher bred to the Sea"? This alſo charges the Government for employing unfit Miniſters in the Navy. There is a Fifth and that hath theſe Words. " Countryman. Truly Maſter Obſervator, " I have no very good News for you: Mr. Daniel " De Foe has pleaded Guilty to the Indictment " againſt him, for writing and publiſhing the " ſhorteſt Way with the Diſſenters; and he is ſen- " tenc'd to ſtand Three times in the Pillory, to pay " a Fine of 200 Marks, and to find Security for " his good Behaviour for Seven Years. Obſerv. The " Court could do no otherwiſe than convict him, " upon his pleading Guilty; habemus confitentem " reum, is very often the Voice of Courts of Judi- " cature, 'tis the Eaſe of Judges and Juries: If " Daniel De Foe was in Expectation of Coleman's " Black Box, he has found a Pillory inſtead of it. " I don't trouble my Head about the Cuſtom of " giving the Pillory to Authors, which is the Pu- " niſhment of Bakers. You talk'd juſt now of " turning Author, have a care of your Candle; you " ſee which is the ſhorteſt Way with Authors; " you muſt all enter your ſelves in the Regiment of " Colonel Foe. The Law of England directs, that " no Man ſhall be fined ultra tenementum; and I " make no queſtion, but the Juſtice of the Court " has fined Mr. Foe anſwerable to his Eſtate. His " Security for his good Behaviour for Seven Years, " without doubt, was rationally conſider'd, as to " the Legality thereof. For my part, I am only " acquainted with Old Laws of England, the An- " cient Birthrights and Immunities of Engliſhmen: " This I take to be the Foundation of New " Laws". And then here is the laſt which hath theſe Words. " Countrym. Maſter Obſervator, there's another " Plot againſt you. Obſerv. Prithee Man, there's a " Plot againſt the Queen, and the whole Nation; is it " any Wonder then, that there are Plots againſt me? " The High-Fliers are now plotting againſt every " honeſt Man in England. I'll tell you more of it, " the next time we meet. Countrym. I fancy ſome " Sort of People plot againſt you, becauſe you en- " deavour to countermine their Plots againſt the " Queen and Nation. Obſerv. You are right " enough; but that ſhan't hinder me from detect- " ing their Deſigns, and from opening the People's " Eyes: But prithee, what Plot is this? Countrym. " Why, Sir, it is a Plot preparatory to your Tryal; " and if they can't effect this Plot, I ſuppoſe you'll " never be try'd. They inſinuate into the Citizens " of London, that you have lately written very " ſcandalouſly, maliciouſly, and treaſonably, and I " don't know how many other Lies, againſt them " the ſaid Citizens; and by this Means they are " minded to ſet your Jurors againſt you. Obſ. This " is likely enough; they'll leave no Stone unturn'd, " to ſuppreſs the Truth. I underſtand, I ſhould " have been proſecuted by Bill the laſt Seſſions, but " that the High-Fliers did not like the Jury; nay, " they ſay, they don't like the Two Sheriffs, be- " cauſe they won't pack Juries to find innocent " Men guilty".

This is the laſt of the Libels. Now whatever you admit concerning theſe, the ſame is proved concerning the other Two, except that of the Volume. Theſe he did receive from Mr. Tutchin, or by his Agent. He alſo paid Mr. Tutchin upon the ſame Account that he paid for the reſt, and they were printed here in London, and publiſhed. Now Mr. Tutchin did not at any Time complain that they were not printed according to the Copies ſent. As to the Copies they are loſt all of them but one of theſe Four. There are divers others, but they concern not this Information, but one, and that is Mr. Tutchin's Hand, the ſame Hand as the other Papers and by that Copy the Paper was printed, and Mr. Tutchin alſo received the Money for it. So that now you have heard this Evidence, you are to conſider whether you are ſatisfied that Mr. Tutchin is guilty of Writing, Compoſing and Publiſhing theſe Libels. They ſay they are innocent Papers and no Libels, and they ſay nothing is a Libel but what reflects upon ſome particular Perſon. But this is a very ſtrange Doctrine, to ſay, it is not a Libel reflecting on the Government, endeavouring to poſſeſs the People that the Government is Male-adminiſtred by corrupt Perſons that are employed in ſuch or ſuch Stations either in the Navy or Army.

To ſay that corrupt Officers are appointed to adminiſter Affairs, is certainly a Reflection on the Government. If People ſhould not be called to account for poſſeſſing the People with an ill Opinion of the Government, no Government can ſubſiſt. For it is very neceſſary for all Governments that the People ſhould have a good Opinion of it. And nothing can be worſe to any Government, than to endeavour to procure Animoſities; as to the Management of it, this has been always look'd upon as a Crime, and no Government can be ſafe without it be puniſhed.

Now you are to conſider, whether theſe Words I have read to you, do not tend to beget an ill Opinion of the Adminiſtration of the Government? To tell us, that thoſe that are employed know nothing of the Matter, and thoſe that do know are not employed. Men are not adapted to Offices, but Offices to Men, out of a particular Regard to their Intereſt, and not to their Fitneſs for the Places; this is the Purport of theſe Papers.

Now they on his behalf inſiſt on theſe Things. Firſt, they ſay you do not prove any Crime againſt him in London. Indeed it is not proved that he writ them in London; but the Queſtion is, whether there is not Proof of the Compoſing and Publication in London? There is Proof that they were ſent to Mr. How, in order to print them in London. Now whether he received them from him in London or no, (but ſuppoſe out of London,) yet if he received them to print them in London, that is a Publication in London. If they ſcruple that Matter, it ſhall be ſpecially found. If they were delivered to be printed at London, I muſt leave it to your Conſideration, whether you will not find him Guilty of publiſhing them in London. They were ſome of them printed in Fenchurch-ſtreet, and others in Gracechurch-ſtreet. He knew where the Printer lived, the Contract was made, and he was paid for them. Gentlemen, I muſt leave it to you; if you are ſatisfied that he is guilty of Compoſing and Publiſhing theſe Papers at London, you are to find him Guilty.

Then the Jury withdrew, and about a Quarter of an Hour after return'd into Court.

Clerk. Anſwer to your Names, &c. How ſay you, Is John Tutchin Guilty of the Charge laid againſt him, or Not Guilty?

Foreman. Guilty of Compoſing and Publiſhing.

L. C. J. Holt. They appeal from my Opinion; they don't find the Writing in London, but they find him Guilty of Compoſing and Publiſhing in London, that is, ſuppoſing he did write them out of London, and deliver them in order to be printed in London.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Do you find that the Papers, the ſeveral Copies of theſe Six Obſervators were delivered to be printed in London?

Foreman. Yes, Guilty of Compoſing and Publiſhing, but not of Writing.

Mr. Soll. Gen. Do you find him Guilty of the whole Charge except the Writing?

Foreman. Yes.

Clerk. Gentlemen, hearken to your Verdict, you ſay John Tutchin is Guilty of the whole Information, except the Writing?

Foreman. Yes.

Clerk. And ſo you ſay all.

Jury. Yes.

The Arguments for and againſt Arreſting Judgment, November 13.

Mr. Att. Gen. MY Lord, Mr. Tutchin has given me Notice that he will bring an Appeal in Arreſt of Judgment; and indeed he has given publick Notice of it, for it is put into the News-Papers.

L. C. J. Holt. Is he here?

Mr. Mountague. Yes, my Lord, he is about the Court.

Mr. Att. Gen. Call him.

Cryer. John Tutchin, Gentleman.

[Then he came into Court.]

Mr. Mountague. May it pleaſe your Lordſhip to favour me a few Words in behalf of the Defendant, John Tutchin. He was tryed before your Lordſhip at the Guild-hall, London, on Saturday was Sevennight, for being the Author, Compoſer and Publiſher of ſome Papers entitled, The Obſervator; and there is a Verdict enter'd againſt him, and now he appears to ſubmit to the Judgment of the Court, which he humbly hopes ſhall not be given againſt him. For, my Lord, in the firſt Place I beg leave to take notice that we think there is Cauſe why your Lordſhip ſhould ſet aſide the Tryal that has been had; for we look on all the Proceedings upon the Writ of Diſtringas on which the Verdict is taken, as null and void. This is an Information againſt Mr. Tutchin for a Libel; and the Facts laid in the Information are ſaid to have been tranſacted within the City and County of London. To this Information he pleaded the laſt Trinity Term, and the Venire Facias was awarded the laſt Day of that Term, Return. Die Lunæ proximæ poſt tres Septimanas Sancti Michaelis, which your Lordſhip knows was October 23. the firſt Day of the Term, and the Diſtringas ſhould have iſſued the very ſame Day; but it ſo happens that the Diſtringas in this Caſe does appear to have been ſued forth October 24. which is a Day after the Return of the Venire, and therefore we ſay the Diſtringas is naught, and all the Proceedings thereupon are null, becauſe there is no Award of the Court to warrant this Diſtringas. In the next Place we ſay that the Return, neither of the Venire, or the Diſtringas, are as by Law they ought to be; for the Return of the Venire is Die Lunæ proximæ poſt tres Septimanas Sancti Michaelis, and the Jury are to be brought coram Domina Regina apud Weſtm. Die Jovis prox. poſt; and the return of the Diſtringas is Craſt. Anim. with an Hab. Corpora coram Regina apud Weſtm. For both which Reaſons we think it naught, becauſe when any Proceedings in Criminal Matters are laid in a Foreign County, the Proceſs muſt be made returnable at a Day certain. Day might be given coram Regina ubicunq;.

L. C. J. Holt. You mean at a common Day; and it is ſo, whenever Indictments are remov'd hither by Certiorari out of foreign Counties.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we think there is no Difference to be made between the Proceedings in London, and other Counties more remote from Weſtminſter.

L. C. J. Holt. In Informations exhibited by Mr. Att. Gen. in this Court for Crimes done in Foreign Counties, 'tis uſual to return the Proceſs upon Days certain.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, Informations are of the Nature of a Bill.

L. C. J. Holt. Proceſs on an Indictment may be made returnable on a certain Day, if it be found in this Court; but if it be removed hither by Certiorari it is otherwiſe.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we take it that the Proceſs that has been hitherto taken out upon all Informations that charge Crimes on Defendants as done out of the County of Middleſex, has been made returnable on ſome common Return-Day, and not at a Day certain.

Mr. Att. Gen. It has always been allowed to be upon a Day certain, as well as upon a general Return-Day; and it is ſettled and declared ſo by the Court.

L. C. J. Holt. I am apt to think the Clerks have gone both Ways.

Mr. Att. Gen. A Man takes a long Day if he will.

Mr. Mountague. We have look'd over many Informations, and the Practice does not appear to have been ſo. But what does Mr. Attorney ſay to the firſt Exception we have taken? Here is a Diſcontinuance after the Return of the Venire, which was upon October 23. and the Diſtringas bears Teſte viceſſimo quarto die Octobris.

L. C. J. Holt. Ay, what can you ſay to that, Mr. Attorney? That very Day the Writ is enter'd there muſt be a Diſtringas.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I know not how it came to paſs. I believe ſomebody has done it on Purpoſe. I deſire the Clerk may give an Account of it. I never ſaw the Writ. I deſire Time to know how this has been manag'd.

L. C. J. Holt. There muſt be a Continuance to that Day; if there be no Continuance, all is fallen.

Mr. Att. Gen. If they come again, we will ſee how this has paſt.

L. C. J. Holt. If it be ſo, the Plea is diſcontinued, and you muſt plead de Novo.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, ſeeing it is in Court, I deſire it may be read now.

Mr. Att. Gen. What need you make that Reflection? Do you think we will make any Alteration in it?

Mr. Mountague. I hope I may aſk that without making any Reflection: I am ſure I did not intend it ſo.

[Then the Record was read.]

Mr. Att. Gen. Come again To-morrow.

Mr. Mountague. Mr. Tutchin then you may go for to Day, but be here again To-morrow.

L. C. J. Holt. Is the Venire made returnable Die Lunæ?

Mr. Mountague. Yes, my Lord, it is, I look'd upon it.

Mr. Att. Gen. I will ſee if it can't be found out.

November 20.

L. C. J. Holt. Mr. Attorney, will you go on?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, we are ready, if they will maintain their Exceptions.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we think we have no Occaſion to cite many Authorities and Preſidents to maintain the Exception, when it is apparent that there is a Diſcontinuance; the Reading of it makes it appear, that the Diſtringas was ſued out a Day after the Venire, ſo that here is a Niſi Prius that has been iſſued out erroneouſly. The Statute ſays the Day and Place for taking Inquiſitions muſt be in Præſentia Partium. And 'tis plain, the Day and Place mentioned in this Writ was appointed when the Defendant was not in Court, and therefore is null and void.

L. C. J. Holt. In Præſentia Partium, where is that required?

Mr. Mountague. By the Statute of Niſi Prius, which ſays, nec alterminentur hujuſmodi Inquiſitiones coram aliquibus Juſticiarijs de Banco niſi ſtatuatur certus dies & Locus in Comitatu in Præſentia Partium.

L. C. J. Holt. Which Statute do you mean?

Mr. Mountague. The Statute of Weſtminſter the Second, Cap. 30.

L. C. J. Holt. Call for that Statute.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I deſire that they will maintain their Exception, for I am in the dark about it, and that they may maintain it by the Authority of the Law, and not only by an ipſe dixit, and a Noiſe in the Town.

L. C. J. Holt. They ſay the Exception maintains it ſelf.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, let 'em go on firſt, and then we will anſwer them. If they will rely upon this Exception without Authority, then we muſt pray the Judgment of the Court; but if they will bring Authority for it, we do deſire to hear 'em and ſhall give 'em an Anſwer.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, if they have any other Exception to make, I deſire they may make it now.

Mr. J. Powel. Mr. Mountague you have made one Exception, that is, of the Diſcontinuance of the Proceſs; now if you have any other Exceptions to make, you may make them now.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, the Exceptions I have hitherto taken have been to the Tryal. I mention'd this, and I mention'd another which I do not inſiſt on; ſince I underſtand it has been otherwiſe ſettled, that is, about the Return of theſe Writs upon a Day certain; which, my Lord, I did look upon to have been wrong; becauſe I did not think Mr. Attorney could ſhew any Precedents of any ſuch Returns to warrant this; for I can find none, and I have ſearched in the Time of King Charles I. and in King Charles II. and King James.

L. C. J. Holt. If a Suit be commenced in the Common Pleas by Bill, as if an Attorney ſhall file a Bill there, the Proceſs is made returnable at a Day certain, and here our Proceedings by Bill are always at a Day certain. Now an Information which is originally filed here, is in Nature of a Bill, and the Proceedings therefore may be confined to a Day certain; but if any Indictment be brought hither by Certiorari, the Proceſs muſt be returned at a common Day, and not at a Day certain. We had this Matter under Conſideration before upon another Occaſion, and we thought it very reaſonable the Proceedings on Informations here ſhould be the ſame as the Proceedings by Bill, which are returnable on Days certain from any County of England.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, if that be your Opinion, I have nothing to ſay to it. I have ſome Records here in my Hand, ſome in King Charles's Reign, and ſome in King James's Time, and all theſe are made returnable on the common Return, and one of theſe Records was ſettled by Sir William Jones. As to what the Officers ſay, they are divided I find, for ſome of them have told me, it is quite contrary to what Mr. Harcourt reports the Courſe of the Court to be.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I dare appeal to you whether this has not been argued Twenty Times.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, let Mr. Attorney ſhew Precedents.

Mr. Att. Gen. You muſt ſhew Precedents.

Mr. J. Powel. It is otherwiſe when there is an original Proceeding.

L. C. J. Holt. Have you any more Exceptions?

Mr. Mountague. I rely on the firſt Exception. It lies on Mr. Attorney to anſwer this Exception.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I deſire they may ſhew any Caſe or Reſolution of Law, that the Diſtringas ſhould bear Teſte the ſame Day the Venire is return'd upon. The Diſtringas is awarded on the Roll upon the firſt Day of Term; and the Venire is return'd the firſt Day of Term: And at the ſame Time it is awarded, that there ſhall be a Diſtringas, Day is given to the Party; that is the Warrant: For the Diſtringas and the Teſte never appear upon the Roll. If they have any Authority, I deſire they may ſhew it. My Lord, I think we can ſatisfy you, that it is right; or that it is amendable. This is a Maxim of the Law, There muſt be Authority.

L. C. J. Holt. It may be the Thing is ſo plain, as to need no Authority.

Sir T. Powis. I deſire to know, whether the Award of the Diſtringas is right on the Roll. I take it, that the Venire is return'd the firſt Day of the Term; and that there is thereupon a Diſtringas awarded returnable, Die Jovis prox. poſt Craſt. Anim. I beg to know, whether it be ſo or no.

L. C. J. Holt. I have it in my Hand; and I was apprized of that before; and was going to ſtate it. For the Continuance of the Roll is right. The Venire Facias is return'd, Die Lunæ prox. poſt Tres Mich. On which Day, the Attorney appears on the Queen's Behalf; and the Defendant appears likewiſe. What is then done? Ideo præceptum eſt Vicecomitibus London, quod diſtringant eos; itaque habeant Corpora eorum coram Domina Regina, Die Jovis prox. poſt Craſt. Anim. Now, on what Day muſt this Award be ſaid to be? That muſt be that Day whereon the Venire is ſaid to be return'd; which is, Dies Lunæ prox. poſt Tres Mich. The Award of the Diſtringas, therefore, by the Roll, is that very Day, the 23d: But the Diſtringas bears Date, not the 23d, but the 24th.

Sir T. Powis. Now do they rely on it, that notwithſtanding the Roll has awarded it Die Lunæ, yet becauſe the Diſtringas is dated Die Martis, do they rely on it, that this is to prevail, without any more to be ſaid to it?

L. C. J. Holt. This is the true State of the Matter. Now there is no Diſcontinuance on the Roll; for it appears on the Roll, that the Diſtringas was awarded the 23d.

Mr. Broderick. The Objection is, That the Diſtringas has been ſued out without Warrant. They ask for Authorities. I believe, we might ſhew Twenty.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I deſire they would cite ſome Authorities of the Twenty they ſpeak of. I can ſhew them Caſes, where the Diſtringas's have been Teſte'd out of Term, or upon the Sunday: Theſe are to be ſet right. I would be glad to ſee any Authority, wherein it appears the Diſtringas muſt be the ſame Day. I would be glad they would do more than ſay it.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, Before I anſwer this, I would ask, Whether that Roll be the Niſi Prius Roll, or the Plea Roll?

L. C. J. Holt. It is the Niſi Prius Roll.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, The Plea Roll has been made right ſince I took my Exceptions. The Niſi Prius Roll ought to be a Tranſcript of the Plea Roll.

Mr. J. Powel. The Niſi Prius Roll is made out of the other: If the Niſi Prius Roll be good, it is well enough.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, To have a Tranſcript of a Roll that has been made up ſince, is not right.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, He ſtrikes at the Root of the Court.

Mr. Broderick. My Lord, I would take notice, that it is the Courſe of the Court, that the Diſtringas ſhall bear Date the Day of the Return of the Venire. The Clerks tell me, they never knew it otherwiſe.

Mr. J. Powel. The Award is right; but you have not taken out a Writ according to the Award of the Court: Whether that will be warranted?

Mr. Att. Gen. They have no Authority, but the Reaſon of the Thing; and then I think we may give this ſhort Anſwer: We do affirm, That it is right as it is: But if it were not right, we ſay it is amendable.

L. C. J. Holt. All the Matter will be to prove that it is amendable.

Sir T. Powis. If need be, we may put the Matter into the right way: For if the Diſtringas be not the ſame Day with the Award, we pray that it may be amended.

L. C. J. Holt. By what Law muſt it be amended? You are in the Affirmative: If you acknowledge it wants Amendment; by what Law muſt it be amended?

Sir T. Powis. It is amendable by the Common Law.

Mr. J. Powel. You ſay it is no Fault; and if it be, it is amendable by the Common Law.

L. C. J. Holt. Firſt, let us know whether it needs Amendment? And then next, whether it can be amended?

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, Let them ſhew that it needs Amendment: For if they make Exceptions, and ſay no more, and we proceed to anſwer them; then they may come upon us again with new Matter, and ſo there will be no End.

Mr. Mountague. When we were in the Affirmative in our Exception, we did give ſome Reaſons why we ſaid it is not right.

Mr. J. Powel. The Party was in Court the 23d. Then they awarded the Diſtringas in his Preſence; ſo that the Niſi Prius was awarded in the Preſence of the Party: The Award of it is Die Lunæ. But here's the Fault: They did not make a right Teſte that Day; ſo that the Fault is, the Diſtringas that is ſued out.

Mr. Mountague. On Monday there is an Award of the Niſi Prius; but on Tueſday it is taken forth. Now we ſay, that it is not according to the Writ awarded: For the Writ bears Teſte the Day after; and upon that Account we ſay, the Proceedings are null. My Lord, Mr. Attorney asks for Precedents for this: But, with Submiſſion, we take it to be plain, that the Motion made for the amending this Thing, ſuppoſes it not to be right.

L. C. J. Holt. The firſt Queſtion to be debated, is, Whether this be a right Tryal? Or if not, Whether it be a Diſcontinuance of the whole? The Diſtringas bears Date the 24th of October; the Roll is the 23d of October; and there is no ſuch Writ then taken out, but the Day after; ſo that the Teſte is not according to the Roll. When a Writ is not awarded according to the Roll, what the Conſequence will be, is another Matter.

Mr. Att. Gen. I beg your Lordſhip's Direction in this Matter. It deſerves a great deal of Care; for there has been a great Noiſe in the Town about it.

it. However, we will go your way. Whether they begin firſt, or we, I am very eaſy.

L. C. J. Holt. It is not warranted by Award of the Court. This is a Matter of the greateſt Conſequence to the Government.

Mr. Broderick. Mr. Attorney ſpeaks of a Noiſe about the Town: I concern not my ſelf about that, nor any further in this Caſe, than as it may be the Caſe of every Subject of England.

L. C. J. Holt. He is found to be the Author of the Obſervators.

Mr. Att. Gen. I do not ſpeak it now upon the Buſineſs of this Proſecution; for he is ſo inconſiderable, that it matters not much how it goes. But if this be not amendable, it will blow up all Proceedings. Every Man muſt have Juſtice; and God forbid but he ſhould.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, If it be thought proper, we will go on. Your Lordſhip obſerves, what Warrant there was for a Diſtringas, and that it is rightly awarded on the Roll, which is a Warrant to the Clerk for a Diſtringas; and by Conſequence if the Diſtringas be not made according to that Award, it is the Miſpriſion of the Clerk. Now if we do admit this to be out of all the Statutes of Amendment (tho' it is fit to be conſidered whether ſome Statutes do not warrant it) but ſuppoſe it ſhould be out of all the Statutes of Amendments; yet by the Common Law it may be amended.

There were Amendments at the Common Law before any Statute, both in Civil and Criminal Matters; and theſe Amendments chiefly regarded the Proceſs of the Court, and ſuch Errors as were occaſioned by the Inadvertencies or Neglects of the Officers; but eſpecially in the ſame Term, during which Time the Judges have the Records of the Court in Scrinio Pectoris.

So it is Trin. 22. Edw. III. Fol. 7. b. and 10. a. a Diſcontinuance Amended. 29 Edw. III. f. 32. a. b. a Habeas Corpus Jurat. amended. 7 H. VI. f. 29. Brook Tit. Amendment 32. and 4 H. VI. f. 16. b. by theſe Books it appears the Judges had by Common Law a Power of Amendment. So is Fitz. Title Amendment. 12. 19. 22. eſpecially for the King; but more at large in Blackmore's Caſe in 8. Co. f. 156 b. and 157. a. where many Caſes are cited to this Purpoſe, and this Matter fully ſtated; and there it appears that the very Original Writ in a Quare Impedit was amended in the Caſe of the King, it being Præſentere inſtead of Præſentare; which could not have been done in the Caſe of a Subject; ſo much was the King's Suit favoured in Amendments beyond the Caſe of a Subject.

But if this were not Amendable by the Common Law, it is Amendable by Statute.

The firſt Statutes for Amendments were 14 Edw. III. Cap. 6. 9 H. V. Cap. 4. and 4 H. VI. Cap. 3. which extends to the Amendment of a Letter or a Syllable; but the Judges were wonder'd at in Parliament for their great Nicety, when they aſk'd the Queſtion there, whether they might not amend a whole Word; as appears in 39 Edw. 3. f. 21. And 40 Edw. III. f. 34. b. they were told that undoubtedly they might.

The Statutes moſt to our Purpoſe are 8 H. VI. c. 12. whereby it is enacted, that the Judges may Reform and Amend all Defects in any Record, Proceſs, Plea, Warrant, Writ, Pannel or Return (except Appeals, Indictments of Murder, and Out-lawries for the ſame; and Additions left out in Original Writs, Exigents, and other Writs of Proclamation, contrary to the Statute of H. V.) ſo that by ſuch Miſpriſion of Clerks, no Judgment ſhall be Reverſed or Annull'd. And again the Statute of 8 H. VI. Cap. 15. ordains, that the King's Juſtices before whom any Miſpriſion or Default ſhall be found, be it in any Records and Proceſſes depending before them, as well by way of Error, as otherwiſe, or in the Returns of the ſame, by Miſpriſion of the Clerks, or other Officers or Miniſters whatſoever, in minute Matters (ſuch as this is) they ſhall have Power to Amend ſuch Miſpriſion, upon Examination thereof, according to their Diſcretion; except the Proceſſes and Records of Felonies and Treaſons and the Dependancies thereof.

Now by Reaſon of the particular Exceptions in theſe Statutes, and by reaſon that the following Statutes of Feofail, in 32 H. VIII. 18 Eliz. 21 Jac. I. &c. do not extend to criminal Caſes, an Opinion hath been taken up among ſome Perſons that no Amendment can be made in Criminal Matters by any Statute; which is a ſtrange Miſtake.

For theſe Two Statutes of 8 Hen. VI. Cap. 12. and Cap. 15. being general Laws, and in general Words, they, in Caſes not excepted, extend to Amendments to be made by the Judges in Criminal Proſecutions, as well as in Civil Cauſes, without Diſtinction: And the Special Exceptions, after the General Words, are the higheſt Proofs imaginable. For nothing could be more abſurd and vain, than carefully to except, what the Words precedent, without ſuch Exception, would not have reach'd or extended to; and that would highly reflect on the Wiſdom of Parliament.

This will appear more fully by the following Series of Authorities, whereby the Judges have amended Diſcontinuances of this Nature, in Criminal Proſecutions at the Suit of the Crown.

In 2. Cro. f. 502. in Harris's Caſe:

Harris was indicted for a Nuſance; He pleaded Not Guilty, and a Verdict was againſt him; and the Record removed hither by Certiorari: And it appear'd, that no Iſſue at all was joined; for the Clerk of Aſſize had omitted to enter the Joining thereof: And ſo a plain Diſcontinuance. But amended by the Court, and interlined, even in the Time of another Clerk of Aſſize.

2. Cro. f. 529, 530. Sir John Curſon, and Dame Magdalen his Wife.

An Information for Recuſancy was brought againſt Sir John Curſon, and Dame Magdalen his Wife: The Iſſue joined, was, Ipſa Magdalena dicit, quod ipſa non eſt inde culpabilis; & de hoc ponit ſe ſuper Patriam: And the Attorney General ſimiliter; and a Trial and Verdict was had: And tho' this was no Iſſue, being only the Plea of the Feme Covert, yet amended, tho' in another Term; the Docket being right, and it being only the Miſ-Entry and Miſpriſion of the Clerk; a Fortiori in this Caſe this is amendable in the ſame Term.

Cro. Car. f. 144. Sir Humphry Tuſton v. Sir John Aſhley:

In a Quo Warranto againſt the Coporation of Maidſtone, for Claiming divers Liberties in the Pariſh of Maidſtone; and a Judgment by Diſclaimer was enter'd, Virtute vel Prætextu Liter. Patent. dated 17. Jac. I. And the Words gerent. dat. Anno 17. Jac. were left out by Negligence of the Clerk, and held, tho' not within any of the Statutes tutes of Amendments; yet it was amendable by the Courſe of the Common Law, and amended accordingly, after great Oppoſition, even in another Term.

Siderfin (the Part which firſt came out) f. 243, 244. in the Caſe Le Roy v. Percival, Godfrey & Al.

An Indictment for a Riot, and Not Guilty pleaded, and a Venire Vicecomitibus; where there really was but One Sheriff, and he only made the Return; and held amendable by the Common Law: And in this Caſe it was obſerved, that the Exceptions in the Statutes of Jeofails of Indictments and Informations, were only of ſuch as were on Penal Statutes: But Indictments and Informations at the Common Law, were amendable within the Statutes of Jeofail. And with this Caſe of Siderfin, agrees our preſent Caſe; for it is not an Indictment or Information upon any Penal Statute, but an Information at Common Law.

Now if this Opinion, as reported by Siderfin, be Law, then this Diſcontinuance is plainly made good by the Statutes of Jeofail.

So in the Caſe of Dolphin and Clerk, 2. Cro. f. 64, 65. The Appearance and Iſſue were in Hillary Term, 1 Jac. the Venire awarded did bear Teſte 23. Jan. 1 Jac. ſo the Venire awarded before the Iſſue or Appearance; but yet amended, for the Roll is the Warrant of the Venire, which was right. So where the Teſte was upon a Sunday, it was amended; for it was the Default of the Clerk, in the Miſ-awarding of Proceſs. So if Teſte out of Term. So if it be Vicecom. and ſays not of what County: Or if the King's Reign be miſtaken; 2. Cro. f. 78. Lea v. Lacon. The Roll being right, and a Judicial Proceſs, it may be amended.

So Yelvert. f. 64. Nevill v. Bates. The Venire fac. was made returnable Quind. Hill. and yet bore Teſte 12. Feb. which is the laſt Day of the Term: And yet, per Cur. it ſhall be amended in the Date of the Teſte, for it is but the Default of the Clerk. And other like Inſtances there put.

So in Cro. Car. f. 90, 91. Moor v. Hodges. The Iſſue was in Trinity Term; and the Venire and Diſtringas were of Days in Eaſter Term before; and yet amended: For the Roll of awarding the Venire Facias was well enough; and the miſdating the Venire Fac. which is a Judicial Proceſs, ſhall alſo be ſet right.

So in later Caſes, Trin 2. Jac. II. the King v. Edes. The Defendant was convicted of a Miſdemeanor, upon an Information exhibited per Robertum Sawyer, &c. The Continuance was, Ideo dies datus eſt præfat. Sam. Aſtrey; reſolved it might be amended.

And Hill. 3. & 4. Jac. II. the King v. Holmes. Upon an Information for a Riot, and the Defendant convicted; the Miſtake of Octabis Martini, inſtead of Octabis Hill. amended.

We are here in a much ſtronger Caſe. The Defendant hath been found guilty upon a fair Tryal: And the Preamble of the Statute of 32. Hen. VIII. takes notice, That the ſetting aſide of Verdicts, for Diſcontinuances and other Miſpriſions, is a great Slander to the Common Law and Judges. The Venire and Diſtringas are duly awarded upon the Roll; and the making the Teſte of the Diſtringas 24. Oct. inſtead of 23. Oct. is a plain Miſpriſion: It is in a Judicial Proceſs; and it is in the ſame Term. And we humbly inſiſt upon it, That it is amendable, both by the Common and the Statute Law. For according to my Lord Coke, in Blackmore's Caſe, f. 156, b. 157, a. it is hard to ſay, what the Court cannot amend in the ſame Term. For, ſays he, at Common Law, the Judges might as well amend their Judgment, as any other Part of the Record, in the ſame Term. For during the Term, the Record is in the Breaſt of the Court, and of the Judges, and not in the Roll. And therefore we pray this Miſpriſion may be amended, if it ſtand in need thereof.

Mr. Serj. Darnel. MY Lord, There has been ſo much ſaid already, that I ſhall ſay very little. I ſhall only cite Two or Three Caſes. The Queſtion is only this: Whether a Miſpriſion of the Clerk, is not amendable in the ſame Term? For that we have 10 Edw. III. 20. there was an Error amended of 63 for 59. I think all the other Caſes have been mention'd already. The 5*th* of Edw. III. has been cited, and it is ſtrong. I have thought it always ſufficient, without any Statute of Amendments: And thoſe that have been amended by Common Law, will be Authorities in this Caſe. Now that the Court have always taken on them, as their Duty, to amend the Faults of the Clerks in any Entry, or Proceſs, or Continuance, the Books are full in it; and I hope it will be amended here.

Mr. Broderick. I Pray your Lordſhip's Favour, to ſpare me a few Words on the other Side. I ſee ſo much Warmth in this Caſe, that I muſt beg Leave to preface ſomething, before I ſpeak to the Point of Law.

Mr. Att. Gen. You might have wav'd that.

Mr. Broderick. The Occaſion of my ſaying that, was, that Mr. Attorney ſaid, There had been a Noiſe about the Town concerning this Exception. And that a whole Party - - - - -

Mr. Att. Gen. There has been ſo - - -

Mr. Broderick. I would not be believ'd to concern my ſelf any otherwiſe for this Man, more or leſs, than for any other Client. Nay, what I am concern'd in, and have to ſay at preſent, doth concern every Subject in England, as well as Mr. Tutchin. But when 'twas ſaid, That there was a Diſcontinuance in the Caſe of the Warden of the Fleet, which, after the long Tranſaction of that Cauſe, was not obſerved by the Council for him; and that they were clearer-ſighted for the Obſervator; I could not take that otherwiſe, than as meant to my ſelf, who was Council for the Warden of the Fleet, and am now for this Defendant. I confeſs, I did not obſerve that Fault in the Caſe of the Warden of the Fleet, (nor ever had a perfect Copy of that Record, to enable me to do it:) And I muſt own at the ſame Time, that I had not the Fortune to make the Diſcovery in the preſent Caſe. The Exception was taken before I was any ways concerned in the Cauſe: And when 'twas made, I thought it a good Exception; and made no Difficulty of accepting my Fee to ſpeak to it.

Mr. Att. Gen. I had another Meaning in it. I knew not that Mr. Broderick was Council for the Warden of the Fleet.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I believe Mr. Broderick is afraid of my Fate in this Caſe: I have been very much reflected upon for being Council in this Caſe; and it has been ſpread about all the Counties in England, by Dyer the News-Writer, That I broach'd ſeditious Principles at the Tryal, and was reprimanded by your Lordſhip for it: And I believe Mr. Broderick is afraid of the like Scandal.

L. C. J. Holt. You muſt not be afraid of Scandals. Dyer is very familiar with me too ſometimes: But you need not fear ſuch a little ſcandalous Paper of ſuch a ſcandalous Author.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I am not much concern'd at it, ſeeing it comes from him.

Mr. Broderick. I muſt agree, That this is a Point of great Concern to the Crown; becauſe all Proſecutions for the Crown may be affected by it, as Mr. Attorney General ſaid: But on the other ſide, I beg Leave to ſay, That (whatever the Perſon now before the Court may be) it is of great Concern to the Subject too: For the Rule in this Caſe, will be a Rule in the Caſe of every other Subject of England; ſo that the Concern is great on both Sides.

I muſt beg Pardon of the Court, if in anſwering off-hand to very Learned and Elaborate Arguments, from the ſhort Notes which I have been able to take of them, I happen to be diſorder'd in Method: I muſt take Leave to offer ſuch ſhort Obſervations upon them, and give ſuch Anſwers to them, as I can at preſent; as my Memory ſuggeſts the Objections to me, tho' not in the ſame Order in which they were deliver'd. But I will uſe my Endeavour, not to omit the taking ſome ſhort Notice of the General Heads, under which I apprehend all the Objections will fall.

I would obſerve, (which I think will be an Anſwer to a great deal that has been ſaid on the other Side,) That our Law-Books make a very great Difference between the King's Proſecutions in his own Name, as a Civil Right, and Proſecutions wholly in his Capacity of King, as he is Head of the Commonwealth; and in the Exerciſe of his Royal Office, to affect the Subject with, or puniſh him for Crimes thereby charged upon him. I agree, the Caſes cited by Sir Thomas Powys and Mr. Attorney General, of Amendment of the King's Writ of Qu. Impedit, and ſome others; and that the Common Law gave greater Indulgences to the Crown, in the Proſecution of its Civil Rights, than to any Subject. The King was known to be employ'd in the Concerns of the whole Kingdom; to have the Care of all his People upon him: Whereas the Subject had only his perſonal and private Affairs to look after. And 'tis no wonder that the Law ſhould adjudge, that great Allowances were to be made to the Crown, as to its own particular Rights; That it ſhould not be ty'd up to ſo ſtrict Rules as the Subject, who was ſuppoſed to attend his own Affairs only. This is the Reaſon generally given, why the Crown had ſuch a Prerogative, that greater and more favourable Allowances ſhould be made in its Suits, than in thoſe of the Subject.

But it has hitherto (as far as I have been able to obſerve) been taken, That the Law was very nice and tender in all Proſecutions, that aim at the charging the Subject with Crimes and Penalties. It ſeems to be a new Light, ſprung up of late, which has diſcover'd, that there is a greater Neceſſity for that Privilege in Criminal Proſecutions, than in Civil. The Opinion of the ſucceſſive Ages, which have made favourable Acts for amending and curing of particular Defects in Legal Proceedings, ſeems to have been much otherwiſe. In many of theſe, all Criminal Proſecutions, of all kinds, are expreſly excepted: And where they are not, I muſt ſay I have not heard yet quoted; nor can find any Caſe of Authority, where thoſe Statutes were interpreted to extend to Proſecutions for Crimes. I perceive, the Council for Her Majeſty in this Cauſe, have in their Arguments relied very much upon Amendments made by the Common Law. I can't pretend to be now prepar'd to run thro' each particular Caſe: In general, it cannot be deny'd, that ſeveral Amendments were made, by a Power that the Court had at Common Law; but we think there never was any which came up to this Caſe. And indeed, if all the Amendments in the Multitude of Caſes that have been cited in theſe elaborate Arguments, are allow'd as good at Common Law; it would make one wonder, where the Neceſſity was of making an expreſs Statute, for the Amendment of a Letter or Syllable; (and of the nice Doubts upon that) or of the other ſubſequent Statutes of Jeofails and Amendments. The Court, to me, by theſe Authorities, would ſeem to be arm'd with a ſufficient Power to have done the Buſineſs, without the Help of any Statute.

Tho' Her Majeſty's Council rely principally upon the Statute of 8 Hen. VI. yet in regard they do not wave, or give up the Aid of the Statute 32 Hen. VIII. (For Mr. Attorney takes notice, that there is a Quære in my Lord Dyer, (Dyer, 353.) Whether the King, in an Information of Intruſion, ſhould not have the Advantage of that Act? And he has cited Lord Dyer, 346. of an Information Qui tam, &c. to be within the Act: And that Lord Hales, in Lord Fitzwaters's Caſe, held, That 'twas reaſonable, that Criminal Proſecutions ſhould be aided) I think it will be very proper to conſider how the Law has been taken upon that Statute; and to ſee whether the Reaſon of thoſe Caſes, won't go as far backwards as to the Statute 8 Hen. VI. The Words of the Statute, 32 Hen. VIII. C. 30. are not expreſly reſtrain'd to Actions or Suits between Party and Party; tho' the Word Party be mention'd in the Statute, both as to the Plaintiffs or Demandants, as to the Tenants or Defendants. And the Enacting Clauſe is, That from thenceforth, after Iſſue try'd for the Party Plaintiff or Demandant, or for the Party Tenant or Defendant, in any manner of Action or Suit at the Common Law; the Judges ſhould proceed to give Judgment in the ſame, notwithſtanding any of the Miſtakes therein mention'd, in like Form as if no ſuch Default or Negligence had been. It is true, as Mr. Attorney has cited it, that 'tis left a Quære, as it ſtands printed in my Lord Dyer, which was in the 18th Year of Queen Elizabeth: But even in that very Caſe, 'twas held, 22 Eliz. that the Statute did not extend to it: As appears in 1. Rolls Reports, fol. 447. as well as by Blackmore's Caſe, 8. Cro. 163. where 'tis expreſly ſaid, That the Statute 32 H. VIII. extends not to Pleas of the Crown. And this Point is expreſly agreed by the whole Court, in Sherington Talbot's Caſe, 1. Cro. 312.

A Venire Facias bearing Teſte out of the Term, and an Iſſue tried upon it, is a Miſconveyance of Proceſs, ſalved after Verdict, by thoſe Words in the Statute of 32 H. VIII.

So a Venire awarded, which bears Teſte on a Sunday, is adjudg'd to be aided within thoſe Words.

Yet in Theobald and Newton's Caſe, Style 307. there was a Suit upon the Statute of Inmates; and the Diſtringas bore Teſte on a Sunday, and out of Term. Exception was taken to this after Verdict, and and held not to be aided by the Statutes of Jeofails. I thought it neceſſary, by mentioning the Two former Caſes, to ſtate which of the Statutes it was, which would have remedied the Fault, if the Statute had extended to the Suit it ſelf; becauſe the Reporter (which is no wonder in him) ſo far miſtook the Senſe of the Court, as to omit the Material Statute, and to mention the 18th of Eliz. and 21. Jac. in neither of which Laws there are any Words which reach the Caſe; tho' in this Act of 32 H. VIII. there are.

And in Lord Fitzwater's Caſe, cited by Mr. Attorney, tho' my Lord Hales does ſay, The Caſe of the King will often ſtand in need of the Amendment of a wrong Venire; and therefore he was of Opinion, to bring him within the Statute of 16 and 17 Car. II. which has very extenſive Words; yet he allows the Diſtinction between his Criminal Proſecution, and Civil Action; as appears in 3. Keb. 485, 519.

In Percy's Caſe, 21 Car. II. 1. Vent. 17, 35. an Information of Forgery at Common Law, laid the Forging to be of a Releaſe at Sherborn; and the giving it in Evidence, to be at Dorcheſter. The Defendant was convicted by a Jury de Vicineto of Dorcheſter only: 'Twas adjudg'd to be a Miſtryal; and a New Venire was awarded. For the King, 'twas labour'd to ſupport the Tryal by the Word Suit: For, ſay they, the Information is, Secta Domini Regis; ſo that the Word is extenſive enough to reach this Proſecution: And 'tis plainly out of the Exception, which excepts no Information, but thoſe upon Penal Statutes. But the Court held, Any Information, tho' at Common Law, was not remedied by the Words or Intent of the Act.

In the principal Caſe of Sherington Talbot, 1. Cro. 311. Jones, 320. 2. Ro. Ab. 619. Information, in nature of a Quo Warranto, for Claiming Liberty of Free Warren in Three Vills, in the Foreſt of D. Defendant diſclaims in the Foreſt, and in all but one Vill; and ſays, That that Vill is Parcel of the Manor of S. and preſcribes for Free Warren in his Manor; Iſſue on that Preſcription, and the Viſne is from the Vill, not from the Manor; held to be miſ-tried, and not aided by any of the Statutes of Jeofails: Tho' not within the Exception; becauſe the Statutes do not extend to the King's Caſe, He not being named. The then Judges thought this a Reaſon; which will equally extend to the King's Caſe, upon the former Statutes of Amendments. And Mr. Noy, a very Learned Predeceſſor of Mr. Attorney General's, did not venture to carry the Point further for his Maſter, than to a Peradventure he might have the Advantage of thoſe Acts, in caſe of a Quare Impedit, or other Civil Right, where the Suit is in the King's proper Name, and not by his Stile of King only.

Nothing is more plain, than the Difference which the Law makes between Caſes where the King proſecutes his Right in his own Name, as for a Civil Right, and where the Proſecution is in his Capacity of King, and in the Exerciſe of the Royal Authority. If the King (Henricus Rex) brings a Quare Impedit, and dies before Judgment, the very Writ abates; becauſe Henricus Rex, who was nam'd by his proper Name, ceaſes to be. But if the Proſecution be pro Domino Rege, tho' the King in individuo be dead, yet Dominus Rex in genere not being dead, the Information or Indictment ſhall ſtand, to be proſecuted by the Succeſſor. Yet all Proceſs upon them, wherein his own Name is uſed, and not his Name of Kingly Office only, ſhall fall; becauſe the particular Perſon is dead.

According to this Diſtinction, I do agree, That where the King ſues in his own Name for a Civil Right, his Suit has more Favour allow'd to it than that of a Common Perſon. And ſo far goes the Caſe in Blackmore's Caſe, 8. Co. 156. before-mention'd, cited by Sir Thomas Powys; That a Writ of Quare Impedit, which was preſentere for preſentare, was amended; being the King's Caſe. Tho' had it been the Caſe of a common Perſon, it could not have been amended: For no Original Writ was at Common Law amendable in the Caſe of a common Perſon. But that an Information or Indictment ever found Favour beyond, or equal with a Civil Action, I never heard before; nor find any Authority quoted to warrant it now. I would take leave to mention the Caſe, 13 Car. II. in Scan. Hardreſs, 217. (9.) Pitcher and Jones: 'Twas an Information upon the Act of Navigation for Importing Spices, being the Growth of Aſia, Africa, or America, from Holland beyond the Seas, not being the Place where ſuch Goods were firſt and moſt uſually ſhipp'd for Tranſportation, contra Formam Statuti. The Defendant pleaded, he did not import them contra Formam Statuti, and Iſſue upon it; and Verdict againſt the Defendant. He moved in Arreſt of Judgment, That 'twas not laid, that theſe Commodities were not of the Growth of Holland. To this 'twas ſaid, That the Verdict would help that, it neceſſarily implying it: For that they were laid to be of the Growth of Aſia, Africa, or America, and imported from Holland; which ſhews thoſe were diſtinct Places: And the Defendant could not elſe have been found guilty, contra Formam Statuti. Yet after long Debate, the Exception was held to be a good one, and the Judgment was arreſted.

I muſt obſerve, That the Council for the Informer in this Caſe, had not the Courage ſo much as to hope for Aid from, or mention the Statutes of Jeofails in this Caſe. They cite there Johnſon's Caſe, 2. Cro. 609. and Cholmley's, P. 1. Cro. 464. where in Criminal Proſecutions reaſonable Intendments after a Verdict, are allowed at Common Law. But tho' nothing was wanting in this Caſe, but an Averment that Holland was not within Aſia, Africa, or America, (which muſt neceſſarily be proved at the Tryal, elſe the Defendant could not have been convicted) they either did not know, that the want of an Averment of a Thing neceſſary to be averred, if Iſſue be taken upon another Point, is aided as a Miſpleading, by the Statute 32 Hen. VIII. (tho' the Caſes of it are numberleſs); or they did not think there was any Colour for offering to extend that Statute to a Penal Law, with regard to the Intereſt the King has in the Proſecution, tho' a common Perſon was the Informer; and tho' there is no Exception of Informations on Penal Laws.

As to the Caſes cited on the other Side, of Amendments at the Common Law by the King's Prerogative; I muſt rely upon the Difference I have already taken between Criminal and Civil Caſes; and that there are not any Inſtances of Amendments in Criminal Proſecutions. As to ſeveral other Caſes, which have been cited by the other Side, of Amendments upon Returns to Certiorari's, Returns upon Writs of Error, &c. Thoſe, with Submiſſion, will not come up at all to the preſent Caſe. When a Record is certified upon a Certiorari, &c. the Parchment annexed to the Writ, is ſuppoſed to be the real Original Record; and that remains in the Court here, and is become by the Return a Record of this Court. Where, by the Course of the Court, 'tis enter'd upon a Roll here, if in the Entry it varies from that that is the true Record, it is the Duty of the Court to take Care, that the Misentry be rectify'd; and the Record, which is transcrib'd here, made agreeable to the Original. The rectifying such Misentries, or Miscopyings, are not Amendments of Faults in a Record, (for that faulty mistaken Entry is not really the Record) but making true Entries of the Record. And upon the like Reason was the Mistake rectified in Sir H. Tuston's Case, 1. Cro. 144. where there was a Consent of the Parties for Entring a Judgment by Disclaimer, by Virtue or Pretence of Letters Patents, bearing Date 7. Jac. which Words were inserted in the Paper-Book, by the Attorney General's own Hand; yet omitted by the Clerk, in the Entring it upon the Roll: There, upon great Examination, and Consideration of the Circumstances, all Parties consenting, that Misentry was corrected; being, as the Book says, no more than when a Special Verdict is misenter'd; which is rectified by the Notes of the Clerk of the Assize. But it is very much insisted on, That the Statute 8. H. VI. C. 12. shall extend to this Case; because there are particular Criminal Prosecutions excepted therein, of which this is not one. I do not find that there has been one Authority cited, when it was ever held, that that Law extended to any Pleas of the Crown. And I take the uniform Opinion of near Three Centuries, since that Statute, to be against it.

Mr. Attorney relies much upon the Case of the King against Percival and Godfrey, and others, Sid. 244. where the Venire for the Trying the Defendants, upon an Indictment for a Riot, was directed Vicecomitibus de Canterbury, and return'd by R. S. Vicecomes; the City having in truth but one Sheriff: There, upon Examination of the Sheriff himself upon Oath, in Court, (who swore that City had but one Sheriff) there was an Amendment. But what was that? Not of any Thing that was the Act of the Court: But the Sheriff adds to his Endorsement upon the Writ, (when he had answer'd single,) That there was not any other Sheriff; as it appears in the same Book, and in 1. Keb. 900 (71), 901 (75): And this the Court held to be well, upon the Authority of the Book of 39. H. VI. f. 40. where a Writ was directed Coronatoribus, and return'd by one Coroner only, yet held to be well: For, say the Court, we won't take notice there are more Coroners than one. And so Just. Wyndham said, in this Case, We shall intend but one Sheriff, unless more appear; 1. Keb. 901.

A good Part of Mr. Attorney's Argument seems to tend to the making it not necessary, or at least disputable whether it be necessary, that the Distringas should be Teste'd on the same Day that the Award is. Won't that Argument turn another way than 'tis intended? If it be a doubtful Thing, whether it be right or not; I doubt it will be an Error in Judgment, like the making out an improper Writ in the Debet and Detinet, where it should be in the Detinet only: And then, tho' it is a Default of the Clerk, 'twill not be such a Default as will be within the Aid of the Statute, if that should be held to extend to the Case. If it were a doubtful Thing, it can't be said he had a certain Rule to walk by: But he ventur'd upon his own Judgment; in which if he has chanced to mistake, 'tis not amendable as a Thing of Course. But in truth, if it were to be enquir'd into, I believe 'twould be found not to be an Error in Judgment in the Clerk, but a Mistake of a Matter of Fact, in taking Sunday to be the first Day of the Term.

Mr. Att. Gen. That will not alter it.

Mr. Broderick. There has been another Case cited; the King and Walcot; where a Reversal of an Attainder was pronounced, and the Judgment of Reversal actually enter'd up; yet being done by Surprize, the Entry of the Reversal was set aside, and razed out of the Record. Surely that cannot be an Authority for any. There the Entry was wholly irregular, contrary to the Rules of the Court: For the Judgment of the Court is not compleat, till the End of the Term.

L. C. J. Holt. 'Tis in the Breast of the Court during the whole Term.

Mr. Broderick. And if any one, within the Term, without the Direction of the Court, will enter a Thing as the Act of the Court; shall not the Court have a Power to reform that Irregularity, and do themselves right? This is not an Amendment of a Record, but a Reforming of an ill Practice; a preventing of an Attempt to make that an Act and Record of the Court, which really is not so. Neither does my Lord Macclesfield's Case bear any Proportion to this.

There is no Question, but that a Court, which is intrusted with the Custody and Preservation of the Records wherein other Persons are concerned, may take care upon any Mischance; and that they have a Power to put Things into their right State: As in case of Fire, or any inevitable Accidents, the Court, incident to their Trust of the Custody of the Records, and by the Authority they have to do Right and Justice to all Persons, must have a Power to supply such Losses.

As to the Case of the Warden of the Fleet, there was no Amendment made: But if there had, it would not have come up to this Case. I may, I am sure, safely affirm, that the Court did declare, That was not to be esteem'd a Criminal Prosecution; in regard there was not to be a Judgment to punish the Party, but the Proceeding was only to transfer the Estate to the Crown by way of Forfeiture.

The Council who have argued for the Queen, have not cited any one Authority, of an Amendment in a Criminal Case, within the Satute of 14. E. III. or 8. H. VI. C. 12. or proving, that those Statutes extend to Cases of that kind: But they call upon us, since the Words seem to be large enough to reach both, (especially those of 8. H. VI. where there are some particular Criminal Prosecutions mention'd and excepted) to produce some Authority, to establish the Distinction between Criminal and Civil Cases. We think the daily Practice in Civil Cases, and the want of a single Instance in a Criminal one, carries a strong Argument, if we could go no further: But I think we do not want an express Authority in this Point too. Orde and Morton, Trin. 11. Jac. I. Ro. Ab. 201. There a Writ of Venire Facias out of the B. R. was Venire Fac. duodecim, &c. coram Nobis apud Westmonasterium, ubicunque fuerimus in Anglia: But the Roll was well, omitting the Words apud Westmonasterium. 'Twas adjudg'd the Writ might be amended by the Roll; for 'tis but Matter of Form. This was a Default in the Body of the Writ, and amended by the Statute of 8. H. VI. as a Default of the Clerk.

Yet Brigs and Thompſon's, &c. Yel. 60. 111. In an Information upon the Stat. 21 H. VIII. againſt Spiritual Perſons taking Farms, the Award of the Venire facias upon the Roll was right, returnable ubicuncunq; but the Writ it ſelf was returnable coram nobis, omitting ubicunq; and ſo it did not anſwer the Award upon the Roll. This certainly had been amendable in a Civil Plea, but the Report tells us, that Judgment was ſtaid upon it. And, my Lord, I will beg the Liberty to make this Obſervation upon the Caſe of the King againſt Percivale and Godfry, (which is ſo much relied on.) There are ſome Caſes of ſo odious a Nature, and move ſuch Indignation, that there is a Danger of Things being paſſed over, unobſerved, which would not have been admitted in another Caſe. That was the Caſe of One of the King's Meſſengers, employed in His Majeſty's immediate Service, barbarouſly inſulted and abuſed in his Inn at Canterbury, by the Defendants and a great Rabble of People: As the Offence was very flaming, the Reſentment of the Court ran high; and they thought it reaſonable to do in that Caſe, what perhaps in an ordinary one they might not eaſily have done: Yet what was then done, is now to be cited for a Preſident in every Criminal Caſe whatſoever. I muſt ſay the ſame in this Caſe; whatever my Client is charged with, the Rule given in his Caſe may affect every Man in England, who ſhall hereafter be charged criminally: And therefore I doubt not your Lordſhip will very well conſider of it.

I hope, my Lord, I have given ſome Anſwer to moſt of the Things that have been inſiſted; and that upon the whole Matter, this Miſtake will not be accounted a Thing amendable by Law.

Mr. Mountague. MY Lord, in Anſwer to what has been ſaid, I ſhall not preface what I have to ſay with any Apology for being of Council with Mr. Tutchin, tho' I have been egregiouſly miſrepreſented in what I did, as Council for him at Guild-Hall. I know your Lordſhip is no Reſpecter of Perſons, but will have the ſame Regard to one Defendant as another.

Mr. Att. Gen. I am not concern'd at any Thing that has been Written or Printed about that Tryal.

L. C. J. Holt. We will take no Notice of that.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, as to what Mr. Attorney General and Sir Thomas Powis have ſaid, I beg leave in the firſt Place to take Notice wherein it is we agree, and in what we ſhall differ. Firſt, we agree that this Cauſe is a Cauſe of the greateſt Conſequence. Mr. Attorney tells your Lordſhip, it concerns all the Proceedings of the Crown; and I hope I may be pardoned if I ſay, it is of no leſs Concern to the Defendant and the Subjects of England. I would therefore pay that Reſpect to the Court, not haſtily to ſpeak to a Point of this Moment, but ſhall deſire to have Time to look on thoſe Caſes that have been mentioned.

L. C. J. Holt. If you will do this, you may conſider the Statute of H. VI. for thoſe Words are general and not relative either to Civil or Criminal Caſes in particular. It remedies the Miſchief between Plantiff and Defendant generally.

Mr. J. Powel. Mr. Broderick has not taken Notice of that Objection that my Lord Coke takes Notice of, Becauſe they are not excepted, therefore they are included.

L. C. J. Holt. I would have you conſider why it is not within the Words of the Statute. It is as plain that it is the Fault of the Clerk as can be; he had the Roll before him, therefore it muſt be the Miſtake of the Clerk. The Award of the Writ is the Act of the Court, and that was the 23d; now this Writ did bear Date the 24th, and I believe we did not award the Writ the 24th, therefore it is to be judged they miſtook the Time of the Teſte. For the Record ſays the 23d, and this Writ ſays not till the 24th. Now why ſhould not this be within the Statute of H. VI. For it is the Miſpriſion of the Clerk? And then the Queſtion is, whether that Statute does not extend to this Matter.

Mr. J. Powel. I do indeed queſtion whether any Statute of Jeofails extends to it; but this Statute does not, as appears by 8 Coke, becauſe they are excepted. There are Indictments of Felony and Treaſon that are excepted. Now that this is a Miſpriſion of the Clerk is plain, becauſe he had the Award of the Court.

Sir T. Powis. I think all agree it was perfectly a Miſtake, and that makes it a diſputable Caſe; I do not ſtand on it as if it were right, but grant it was a perfect Miſtake; and then that Objection is clear, that Criminal Matters are not within the Statutes of Jeofails, and it is certain moſt of them are excepted, viz. Indictments, in this Statute of H. VI. where it is ſaid what are excepted, &c. 'Tis true you cannot amend what are excepted, where the Party was in Danger of Life; but it leaves out in Inferior Matters; therefore it ſeems, that whatever was ſaid of Criminal Matters, was intended of the greater Criminal Matters, and ſo was the Opinion in the Caſe of —

L. C. J. Holt. That was a Civil Cauſe, but we thought we could not amend it: For it would be contrary to our Duty as Judges, to alter a Record. And therefore we refuſed even in Point of Scandal in that Caſe; alſo on Examination we found that we could not amend it, contrary to Truth.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, we had not in that Caſe any Thing to amend by; but here we have a Roll to direct us.

Mr. Att. Gen. If your Lordſhip indulge them from Time to Time to put it off, we ſhall never have done.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I am not prepared to anſwer what has been ſaid, for I did not expect this Motion would have been made.

Mr. Att. Gen. That we may be once at an End, I would fain hear what they have to ſay, and whether they have any more Exceptions.

L. C. J. Holt. Have you any more Exceptions to make?

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we have no more Exceptions to the Matter we are now upon, which is ſetting aſide the Tryal. You know Mr. Attorney, there are Two Things incumbent on a Defendant's Council. One is to ſet aſide the Tryal if he can, and that is the Thing we are now upon: The other is, to move in Arreſt of Judgment. Now Mr. Attorney well knows 'twill be a Waver of our Motion for a new Tryal to ſtir any Thing in Arreſt of Judgment.

Mr. Att. Gen. He that makes Exceptions ſhould be prepared to give all his Exceptions together.

Mr. J. Powel. This is not a Motion to ſet aſide the Tryal? Mr.

Mr. Mountague. Yes, my Lord, it is to ſet aſide the Tryal: Not to arreſt Judgment being given upon the Verdict.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, if they have any more Exceptions to offer, I deſire they may let us have them now.

Mr. J. Powel. If there be an Error in the Writ there muſt be a Diſtringas de novo, there muſt be a new Diſtringas only iſſued, you cannot make it a Diſcontinuance of the whole Proceedings; but there muſt be a new Award of a Diſtringas, the Error wherein is the Cauſe of Exception; if we ſhould give our Opinion that it is not amendable, we ſhould try him next Week.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, they ſhould lay down all their Exceptions together.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I know you do not expect in this Caſe any Thing ſhould be done otherwiſe than what is uſual in all other Caſes. Now I appeal to Mr. Attorney if it be not the conſtant Courſe here, to move firſt for a new Tryal; and if you object any Thing in Arreſt of Judgment, it is generally ſaid, you have waved your Motion for a new Tryal.

L. C. J. Holt. No, that is not ſo.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we are now in your Judgment whether this Man ſhall be tried again or not? And if we ſhall happen to prevail for a new Tryal, then it will be a Diſadvantage to our Client to have told our Exceptions to the Information, for then Mr. Attorney will pray to amend.

L. C. J. Holt. You are ſo far in the right, if indeed here were a Verdict that is unqueſtionable, that is your proper Time to move in Arreſt of Judgment; but if this Verdict be not right, it is too ſoon to make Exceptions to the Information. Then we ſhall tell you what we have to do.

Mr. Att. Gen. I am content they ſhould keep their Learning to themſelves; but, my Lord, if they will not do that, I hope you will not give them further Time.

L. C. J. Holt. We ſhall give 'em but till to Morrow.

Mr. J. Powel. Mr. Mountague, it is a ſtrange Thing that you ſhall make an Exception, and not be ready to maintain it; at this Rate any Proſecution whatſoever may be hung up and delayed. If this be the way, we muſt give you the leſs Time.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I ſhall entirely ſubmit to what the Court ſhall think fit to order; but 'tis now pretty late in the Day, and your Lordſhip knows 'tis a Sitting this Afternoon in Middleſex, and to Morrow is another Sitting in London where I am already retained to be, and I know not how late your Lordſhip may keep us in both Places: Your Lordſhip ſeldom diſcharges us till late at Night, and it will be impoſſible for me to look into the Authorities which have been quoted, much leſs to conſider of any Thing that will be fit to offer in anſwer to both theſe learned Arguments in a Matter which I muſt profeſs is altogether new to me.

Mr. J. Powel. There are Amendments made every Day.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I hope I ſhall ſhew you it has not been done yet, in any ſuch Caſe as this, neither can it be done, with Submiſſion.

L. C. J. Holt. You ſhould have prepared for it. I will tell you of a Caſe at Hicks's-Hall, where I my ſelf took the like Exception, but it was over-ruled by Sir William Smith the then Chairman of the Seſſions. In an Indictment againſt ---- ----- for a wrongful Entry, &c. there was a Miſtake in the Time of the Entry alledged, &c. And they amended the Fault by the Statute of E. VI.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I hope you will give them but till To-morrow.

Mr. Mountague. I hope you will not preſs that, Mr. Attorney, who have been ſo lately a Niſi prius Practicer.

Mr. J. Powel. You are not preſs'd in it; none can imagine you came here in this Caſe, and that you were not provided to defend it. I hope you are as ready as Mr. Broderick, he is but your Aſſiſtant, and yet he was ready.

Mr. Mountague. It will be impoſſible for me to be more ready To-morrow. I will rather go on with it now, than do it To-morrow. This is a new Motion, and I did not in the leaſt expect it.

Mr. Att. Gen. This is no new Motion, I believe none would believe but it would be made.

Mr. J. Powis. Why can't you be as ready as Mr. Broderick is?

Mr. Mountague. I do not pretend to ſet my ſelf upon the ſame Level with Mr. Broderick: Tho' he be ready to give an Anſwer extempore to the Arguments that have been made, I hope your Lordſhip will indulge me with a Day or Two more to conſider of what has been ſaid, ſince the Queſtion now before the Court is of that Concern to all the Subjects of England. My Lord, I deſire we may have but till Thurſday next, and by that Time I will undertake to be ready.

Mr. J. Powel. When you make an Exception, you ought to be ready to defend it.

Mr. Mountague. It was impoſſible for me to foreſee what Courſe the Attorney General would take to obviate the Objections I have made. I muſt own I did not expect this Motion for an Amendment; I thought of that the leaſt of any Thing, becauſe I never knew the like Attempt in a Criminal Proſecution. And ſince Mr. Attorney General has been pleaſed to countenance the Exception I have taken, with a Weeks Conſideration of it; I ought in Civility to pay as much Reſpect to the Arguments he has made in Anſwer to it. And therefore I muſt beg a little Time of your Lordſhip, as well to ſhew my Reſpect to Mr. Attorney General as to diſcharge my Duty to my Client.

Mr. Att. Gen. I deſire none of your Reſpect.

Mr. Mountague. I hope, Mr. Attorney, you are not angry becauſe I would pay Reſpect to you.

Cur'. Well, Take Time till Thurſday.

November 23. 1704.

L. C. J. Holt. Mr. Attorney, have your any Thing to move?

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I attend here only upon the Account of Mr. Tutchin.

L. C. J. Holt. Who is for Mr. Tutchin.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, I am of Council for Mr. Tutchin, and I am to Day to ſhew your Lordſhip Cauſe why the Motion made the other Day by the Council for the Queen to amend the Teſte of the Writ of Diſtringas cannot be allow'd. And ſince the Court hath been pleaſed to indulge me with a little Time to think of the learned Arguments that have been made both by Sir. T. Powis, and Mr. Attorney General; and to look into the Authorities which have been cited, I hope I ſhall take up leſs of your Lordſhip's Time than if I had been put to anſwer extempore to the ſeveral Matters that have been inſiſted upon. For I muſt beg leave to ſay, that upon Conſideration of what was then offer'd, I do find that a great many Things that were then ſaid, do not carry that Weight along with them as I did then apprehend. And tho' I do not Queſtion but every Thing that can be thought of has been ſaid for the obtaining ſuch an Amendment, yet I have the Satisfaction at laſt to find that there is but one Caſe, and that is what your Lordſhip was pleaſed to mention, of the Judgment of Sir William Smith, that looks like a Preſident for this Amendment. My Lord, in ſpeaking to this Matter I ſhall not trouble the Court with many new Citations out of Fitz-herbert and Brook's Abridgment, Title Amendment; for I perceive the Gentlemen on the other Side have look'd over the Bed-Roll of Caſes which are to be met with there, and find, that they have taken notice of every Thing that will make to their Purpoſe; my Buſineſs therefore ſhall be, cloſely to apply my ſelf to the Conſideration of what they on the other Side did inſiſt on; and I hope I ſhall be able to ſhew to your Lordſhip that nothing they have ſaid will warrant this Amendment.

But before I enter upon the Argumentative Part, I muſt beg leave ſhortly to ſtate the Caſe it ſelf, and ſhew how it now ſtands before the Court; and if I miſtake in giving an Account of the leaſt Matter of Fact, I deſire Mr. Attorney General would interrupt me ſo far as to ſet me right; for if we do not agree in the State of the Caſe, our arguing will be to very little Purpoſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. It is the Record that is in Diſpute, it is not Matter of Fact.

Mr. Mountague. Mr. Attorney, there is ſomething of Fact beſides the Record, which is now before the Court. This Information was exhibited in Eaſter Term laſt, and the Defendant pleaded to it in Trinity Term; and Iſſue being then joyned, a Venire Facias was awarded, and made returnable the firſt Day of this Michaelmas Term. On that Day (the Roll ſays) all the Parties did appear; but none of the Jury came, and thereupon the Court did order, that a Diſtringas ſhould iſſue, and be returned hither Die Jovis proxime poſt Craſt. Animarum: On the Return of the Writ of Diſtringas, which is now before the Court, the Defendant appear'd in Court, and by his Council took Exception to the Teſte of this Writ, becauſe it was not iſſued as the Roll hath awarded, on the Day he was preſent in Court, which was the 23d Day of October; but on the next Day which was the 24th Day of October, when he is ſuppoſed to be out of Court; ſo that the Award has plainly not been complied with, and therefore the Writ which is now before the Court was taken without any Authority from the Court, and the Tryal cannot be ſupported, becauſe the Day and Place mentioned in the Diſtringas, was not appointed per formam Statuti, in the Preſence of the Parties. For theſe and other Reaſons, it was prayed in his behalf that all the Proceedings upon this Diſtringas ſhould be vacated.

Mr. Att Gen. The Day is right when the Perſons are to appear, and the Award of the Niſi prius is as it ſhould be.

Mr. Mountague. The Return is Die Jovis prox. poſt Craſtin. Animarum, as it is in the Roll, but the Teſte of the Writ is the Day after it was awarded.

L. C. J. Holt. The Award is right.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, we own the Award is right on the Roll.

L. C. J. Holt. But the Queſtion is, whether the Teſte of the Writ be as it ſhould be.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord the Writ that is now before you being Teſte'd on the 24th of October cannot be ſaid to be taken out upon any other Day than the 24th of October, and in that it is not purſuant to the Roll. Upon the taking of this Exception Mr. Attorney was ſurprized, and could not then ſay much to it; but deſired Time to enquire how it came to be ſo.

Mr. Att. Gen. I could have ſaid as much to it then, as after Four Days; it became you to have been as ready.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, Mr. Attorney is a little too haſty for me in this Matter. I intend to do him right, if he'll have Patience to hear me out.

L. C. J. Holt. Come to the Point.

Mr. Att. Gen. This is a popular Argument, and ſpoken ad captandum Populum.

Mr. Mountague. Mr. Attorney did ask ſome Time to have this Matter enquired into, and that Requeſt was agreed to: And upon Examination it appears that this Writ was actually taken out after the Firſt Day of the Term; and the Clerk being dobutful with himſelf how to make the Teſte, ask'd the Maſter how to Teſte it, and he directed it to be Teſte'd the 24th of October; and upon this ariſes this Motion. The Gentlemen that are of the Queen's Council pray that it may be amended, and the Queſtion is, whether it can be ſet right; and with Submiſſion, I think it cannot, and that no ſuch Obliteration ought to be made, though the Defendant were found Guilty of Six Times as many Crimes as he ſtands now charged with. I muſt agree with Mr. Attorney, in what he ſays with relation to the Conſequence of the Determination of this Point, that it will be a Preſident that will affect all the Proceedings of the Crown in all ſuch Caſes. And this it is that makes it to be a Matter of wonderful Conſequence to the People, as well as to the Crown; for tho' under the preſent Adminiſtration of Affairs innocent Men may think themſelves very ſafe, yet no body can be ſure in after Ages that they ſhallnot fall under violent Proſecutions; and then Slips and Miſtakes may be of Service. My Lord, hitherto I may ſay, all Advantages of this kind have been allowed to Defendants in Criminal Caſes; and upon this Occaſion it may be obſerved, that even Actons Qui tam upon Penal Statutes, have always been excepted out of the Statutes of Jeofails; and from hence, I think, ariſes an Argument a Fortiori, that the Jeofails of Clerks in Proſecutions more penal, are not to be amended. Sir Thomas Powis in his Argument did, as I remember, inſiſt upon theſe Two Propoſitions, and as I take it he was ſeconded in them by Mr. Attorney; Firſt, That the Teſte of this Writ is amendable by the Common Law, and if not that, Secondly,

It

It is to be amended by the Statutes of Amendments either by that of 14 E. III. or that of 8 H. VI. And Two Reaſons were given for this Opinion; Firſt, Becauſe it appears to be a plain Miſtake in the Clerk; and Secondly, becauſe they come to move for the Amendment in the ſame Term wherein the Writ was ſued forth and return'd.

Now, my Lord, in Anſwer to both theſe Reaſons and Aſſertions, I hope I ſhall make it appear in the firſt Place, that this Teſte cannot be alter'd, either by the Common Law, or by the Statute Law: And in the next Place I hope to ſhew your Lordſhip that the making the Teſte of this Writ to be upon October 24 is not purely a Slip in the Clerk, but does proceed from the Neſcience of him that was adviſed with about it. And altho' this Motion for an Amendment be made the ſame Term the Error has been committed in; yet it is not in the Power of the Court to ſet it right.

As to the firſt of theſe Particulars, I ſhall readily agree with Sir Thomas Powis and Mr. Attorney General, That by the Common Law many Things were to be amended without the Help of any Act of Parliament; but the Thing that I deny, and which, with Submiſſion, has not yet been proved by any Authority that has been quoted, is, That no Error in the Teſte of any Proceſs that does iſſue out of the Court and is returned back again by the Sheriff, can be alter'd by the Rules of the Common Law, and I hope by and by to make it appear, not by any Act of Parliament neither. My Lord Coke in Blackmore's Caſe Lib. 8. Fol. 156. b. and 157 a. does ſay, as has been obſerved, that the Judges by the Common Law may amend the Entry of their own Judgment, or any other Part of the Record, the ſame Term; but he does not there ſay that they may amend any Writ made out and returned by any Officer or Miniſter of the Court. And the Reaſon given why they may amend their own Judgments and the Continuance entred upon the Roll is, becauſe ſuch Things as they themſelves do, are ſaid to remain in their own Breaſts till the End of the Term: But ſurely the Actions of another Perſon, his diſobedience to the Order of the Court, can never be look'd upon as an Act of the Judges. And I cannot ſee how a Writ ttken out in Pais which is never in Court till it be brought thither by the Hands of the Sheriff, can be ſaid to remain in the Breaſts of the Judges. The Inſtances of Amendments by the Common Law which are given by my Lord Coke, are in the Entries of Eſſoigns and Continuances and ſuch like Miſpriſions del Court Meſme: As for Inſtance in 5 E. III. Fol. 25. W. brought a Præcipe againſt B. who vouches C. to warranty and he enters into the Warranty and pleads to Iſſue and a Venire facias is awarded and the Jury is afterward put in reſpite and the Entry of that upon the Roll was in this Manner jurata inter B. and C. that is between the Tenant, and the Vouchee ponitur in Reſpectum, and ſo it appears on the Roll, whereas it ſhould have been inter W. the Demandant, and C. quem B. vocavit ad Warrantum. Now this was look'd on as the Clerk's Miſtake in the Entry of the Order of the Court, and ſo it was amended, Coke's 8th Report, f. 157. b.

Now my Lord, with Submiſſion, this Caſe and all the reſt of the Caſes that have been mentioned for Amendments at the Common Law will only juſtify an Amendment of the Roll. And indeed had there been an Error in the Entry of the Award of the Diſtringas, I ſhould rather think that amendable than this; for 'tis certainly more reaſonable that the Court ſhould intermeddle with their own Acts than with the Acts of another. Till this Writ was return'd, annex'd to the Niſi prius Roll the Court had nothing to do with it. And now this Writ is before the Court your Lordſhip is only to judge, whether it be purſuant to your Award or not; if it be not made right it muſt be imputed to the Fault of the Perſon that made it out, and the Court can never be ſaid to be in Fault; if the Clerk employed makes out a Writ contrary to direction; and if the Party concerned ſuffer by ſuch Miſtake he may thank himſelf for employing ſuch an Agent. But Sir Thomas Powis ſays, that this Amendment is pray'd on behalf of the Queen, whoſe Prerogative it is to have many Advantages, in Pleading which the Subject ſhall not have. My Lord, with Submiſſion to better Judgments, I conceive that for this very Reaſon the Queen's Council have the leſs Reaſon to pray an Amendment. For ſince they have other Prerogatives to have recourſe to they ought not to ask this beſides. Your Lordſhips will often hearken to us when we move for new Tryals in Actions of Debt upon a Bond where the Verdict and Judgment are concluſive: When you will not give ear to ſuch a Motion in Ejectment, where the loſing Side may have freſh Actions if they will. But, my Lord, not to rely altogether on this Anſwer I ſhall add this one Word further, that according to my ſmall Obſervation theſe Advantages in Pleading do not belong to the Throne in the Pleas of the Crown, but in ſuch Actions as Quare impedits, and the like, As to the particular Inſtances that have been mentioned, I conceive they do not come up to the Caſe in the Queſtion. The firſt Caſe which I have taken down as cited by Sir Thomas Powis, is Brook's Abridgment, Title Amendments, f. 32. and that is, That if Judgment be entred otherwiſe than the Truth is, it ſhall be amended in the ſame Term, becauſe the Record is, in les Cores des Juſtices meſme le term & nemy in le Roll. This Caſe is one of the Authorities taken Notice of in the 8th Report to warrant the Amendments of the Acts of the Court, but does not in the leaſt relate to the Amendment of Writs and Proceſs which are ſued out and executed in Pais.

The next Caſe was 4 H. VI. f. 16. which is only whether he that caſts an Eſſoign for a Tenant in a Formedon ſhall be permitted to take Exception to the Writ which appears to be vicious. The Demandant there was the Ward of the Crown and he that caſt the Eſſoign for the Tenant, took Exception to the Writ. The Exception was this, That in the Style of the King he is ſaid to be Dux Hiberniæ inſtead of Dominus, and he would have had the Writ for that Reaſon to be quaſh'd, And there Martin demands whether the Writ ſhall not be amended ſicome le Roy meſme ſoit party, and the Caſe concludes with quære Legem.

As to the Caſe of Fitzberbert, Title Amendment f. 19. that is what my Lord Coke takes notice of in Blackmore's Caſe when he ſays, that in a quare impedit brought for the King, the Word preſentere was put inſtead of preſentare, and it was held that it ſhould be amended, but how does the Book ſay it was amended? Why the Writ it ſelf was brought into Chancery & la ſuit Amend. Now I take that to be tantamount to the iſſuing of a new Writ. Moſt of the other Caſes mentioned out of the old Year Books, are relating to Amendments in Civil Caſes, and therefore I ſhall ſpend no more Time in taking notice of them particularly.

My Lord, the next Thing to be conſider'd is, Whether any Statutes do direct ſuch an Amendment as this; and I hold they do not. Indeed the firſt, of theſe which is 14 E. 3. Chap. 6. is pretty home; the Words are, that by the Miſpriſion of a Clerk in any Place whereſoever it be, no Proceſs ſhall be annull'd, or diſcontinued, by Miſtake in writing one Letter, or one Syllable, too much, or too little; but as ſoon as it ſhall be perceived by Challenge of the Party, or in any other Manner, it ſhall inſtantly be amended in due Form. Now here are as large Words to fit the Purpoſe, as Mr. Attorney can deſire, and if he were now to frame an Act of Parliament, I don't know how Mr. Attorney could make it fuller; and I muſt confeſs, if I were to argue this Point within a Year after the making of ſuch an Act of Parliament, I ſhould reckon my ſelf to have a difficult Province to maintain, that this Miſpriſion does not come within the Purview of ſuch an Act: All therefore that I ſhall ſay to it is, that it is now a great many Years ſince this and all Statutes of Amendments have been made, and no one adjudged Caſe as I know of, does ſay, that Criminal Proceedings are within the Purview of this Statute. Mr. Attorney General as I remember, did, in his Argument admit that this Statute of 14 E. III. Cap. 6. did not extend to Criminal Caſes.

Mr. Att. Gen. I deny that; I did enforce it.

L. C. J. Holt. I do not remember he did admit that.

Mr. Mountague. Then I acquit him of it, and to ſhew him that I meant him no wrong by ſuppoſing he ſaid ſo, I will mention ſome Authorities that are expreſs in this Point.

Mr. Att. Gen. I did enforce that Statute by ſubſequent Statutes, particularly by the Statute of 8 Hen. VI. Cap. 12. for there the Word Proceſs is included.

Mr. Mountague. Perhaps Mr. Attorney General did ſo; but if he had admitted it, he would not have been in the wrong, if my Lord Coke be in the right in what he ſays. For in the ſame Caſe of Blackmore, fol. 157. ſpeaking of the Extent of the Word Proceſs, he ſays, "This Statute muſt be underſtood to mean Proceſs in all Actions, Real, "Perſonal, and Mix'd; and not Proceſs in Pleas "of the Crown. And my Lord Coke does not here aſſign it for a Reaſon, becauſe they are excepted; for in this Statute of 14 Edw. III. C. 6. there is no Exception: And therefore ſpeaking of this Statute, he could not ſay, Pleas of the Crown are there excepted; yet he is poſitive this Statute does not extend to any other Proceſs, than what iſſues in Actions Real, Perſonal and Mix'd. Now what can be the Reaſon, that Proceſs in all Criminal Caſes ſhould be excepted out of this Statute, by the Interpretation of the Judges in all Ages; when the Words are ſo full, that no Proceſs whatſoever ſhall be annull'd by any Miſpriſion, whereſoever it be? Truly, I can't conceive otherwiſe, but that the Judges in all Ages have thought it reaſonable, all Advantages ſhould be allow'd to People under ſuch Proſecutions.

Mr. Attorney General did ſeem to give another Reaſon, That the Crown not being named, was a great Argument that it did not want the Aid of ſuch an Act of Parliament; but that the King had a Right by the Common Law to make Amendments. And for this he cited Hardreſs, fol. 504. That before Judgment, there can be no Diſcontinuance in the Caſe of the King; and 2 Cro. fol. 211. Beecher's Caſe. Now if this be ſo as he would have it, that all Proceſs in the King's Caſe is amendable by the Common Law, and all other Proceſs by this Statute; how comes there to be any Occaſion for my Lord Coke to caution us about the Exrent of this Act of Parliament, by ſaying, it extends to Proceſs in Pleas Real, Perſonal, and Mix'd; but not in Pleas of the Crown? What does it ſignify, whether this Proceſs be amendable at Common Law, or by the Statute, if it be amendable? But on the other ſide, one may ſtrongly infer, that if no Proceſs were amendable before the Statute 14 Edw. III. and that Statute ſays, all Proceſs hereafter ſhall be amended; it was then fit for my Lord Coke to tell us, That tho' theſe Words in the Statute ſeem very extenſive, yet it has been the Opinion of all Ages ſince, that no Proceſs, but what iſſues in Actions Real, Perſonal and Mix'd, are meant by it.

I do take it therefore, with great Submiſſion to Mr. Attorney, that the right Inference to be made from this Notamen of my Lord Coke, is to caution the Reader not to conclude over-haſtily, from the Comprehenſiveneſs of the Words of the Statute, that Proceſs may be amended in Criminal Caſes. That way his Admonition may be of Service: But the other way with great Reſpect to his Memory I ſpeak it; it will ſignify little. As to the Caſe of Beecher, and the other Quotation out of Hardreſs, nothing more can be inferr'd from them than what already has been taken Notice of; that after the Term they may enter Continuances before Judgments. This appears by the Caſe in 3d Levin 430. where all the Caſes cited by Mr. Attorney to this Purpoſe are taken notice of.

Now we come to the next Act of 8 H. VI. The Words of which Statute as I apprehend, Mr. Attorney did ſtrongly rely on: For there, ſays he, are Exceptions of Appeals, Indictments of Treaſon, and of Felonies, and of Out-lawries for the ſame; and nothing is ſaid of Informations; and the King's Judges have thereby Power to amend all that they think the Miſpriſion of any Clerk, in any Writ, Warrant of Attorney or Panel in Affirmance of Judgments. Now the Anſwer that I would offer to this Statute, is, That the Words in the enacting Part, are not larger than the Words are in the 14th of Edw. III. that is, they are not larger as to this Purpoſe. The Words indeed of this Act are, That all Miſpriſions of Clerks, in all all Writs, ſhall be amended. The Words in the Act of Edw. III. are, That all Miſpriſions, in all Proceſſes whatſoever, ſhall be amended. And I take the Words, all Proceſs whatſoever, to be as extenſive to the preſent Caſe, as to ſay, All Writs ſhall be amended. Therefore I cannot ſee, from the enacting Part, why one Act, to wit, that of Henry VI. ſhould include Criminal Proceedings, when that of Edw. III. does not include them. Thus much for the enacting Part.

Now I ſhall take notice of the Exceptions. There are indeed ſome Things mention'd to be excepted out of the Purview of this Act of Hen. VI.

which are not excepted out of the former in Edward III.'s Time; as Appeals and Indictments: But I think they were put in ex abundanti Cautela, to ſhew, that the Law Makers did not intend to include Criminal Proceedings. And tho' ſome Particulars are only mention'd; yet I hope the Rule of Expreſſio unius, ſha'n't hold in the Expoſition of Acts of Parliament, to exclude every Thing elſe that is not named.

By Littleton, Sect. 21. it appears, there are many Eſtate Tails, beſides thoſe that are particularly mention'd by the Statute of Weſt. 2. de Donis Conditionalibus. And there are many Offices not within the Purview of the Statute of 5 and 6 Edw. VI. Cap. 16. that are of more Conſideration than the Park-Keeper's Place, which are not mention'd in the Exceptions of that Statute, againſt the Buying and Selling Offices. And therefore I can't think any great Weight is to be laid upon the Statutes mentioning Appeals and Indictments; eſpecially ſince the Opinion of all Ages, ſince the making the Statutes of Amendments, ſeems to concur againſt extending the Power of Amending to Criminal Caſes.

My Lord, It would be an endleſs Thing to enumerate the ſeveral Indictments and Informations, that have been quaſh'd within the Compaſs of my Memory, by reaſon of Clerks Miſtakes. I ſhall inſtance but in one, and that is the Caſe of the Queen and Frankling; where no longer ago than the Beginning of this Term, your Lordſhip and the whole Court quaſh'd an Indictment, becauſe the Clerk had writ in the Caption, Præſentant Exiſtit, inſtead of Præſentat Exiſtit. Here was but a Letter to amend; and this muſt plainly be the Clerk's Miſtake, not his Fault in wanting Skill in ſuch Caſe. But I take it, the Caſe now before the Court is of a different Nature The Teſteing of this Writ the 24th of October, cannot be accounted a Slip of the Clerk, but did proceed from wrong Advice. And this is the Third Thing I propos'd to ſpeak to: If this Writ with the Teſte had been enter'd upon the Roll, and tranſcrib'd only thence to deliver to the Sheriff; perhaps the varying from the Day mention'd in the Roll, might be accounted a Slip of the Clerk: But when this Writ was made out, it was certainly a Day after the Time it ought to have iſſued; and upon Advice ask'd, it was directed ſo to be Teſte'd. So this is not a Slip.

If it be inſiſted upon, That this Miſtake happen'd thro' Forgetfulneſs of the Day the Term did begin on; to that I muſt anſwer, That all Knowledge is ſaid to be nothing but Reminiſcentia. If a Man forget any Thing that he has read or heard of, he may be ſaid to be as ignorant of that, as if he had never known it. Now it plainly appears, that they who were adviſed with about the Teſte of this Writ, did not then know on what Day the Term did begin, and therefore Teſte'd the Writ the 24th, inſtead of the 23d. I muſt therefore, in Behalf of my Client, inſiſt upon it, that this Error proceeds from the Neſcience of the Adviſer, and not from the Slip of the Writer. And this Point will ſet us clear of all the Statutes of Amendments, if they did extend to Criminal Caſes.

As to the grand Caſe of Harris, reported in Crooke James, fol. 502. that has been ſo very much relied on, I hope, upon Conſideration, it will not appear to be ſo great a Goliah as it was repreſented to be. There was an Indictment for a Nuſance remov'd hither by Certiorari; and the Record that was tranſmitted, was found imperfect, in a Point which was inconſiſtent with the Verdict: For in truth the Plea of Not Guilty was omitted. And what did the Court do hereupon? Why, they ſent for the Clerk of Aſſize, in whoſe Time the Record was filed below; and he was order'd to amend that which was come hither by the Certiorari, and ſet it right: I ſuppoſe, by making it agree with the Original Proceedings, which remain'd upon the File below. Now, does Mr. Attorney think this is like the Amendment he would make, ſuppoſing all in Harris's Caſe were rightly done? Does Mr. Attorney think, that this will juſtify the Amendment now propos'd? Which is, indeed, making this Writ to be another Writ than it is: For a Writ that is Teſte'd on the Monday, does as much differ from a Writ Teſte'd on a Tueſday, as one Day differs from another. And I take it, with Submiſſion, that the Amendment now pray'd, will alter this Writ, as much as the Amendment that is ſo much taken notice of by Juſtice Ingham, 2. Rich. III. fol. 10. did the Amercement in that Caſe. There was an Amercement recorded of Thirteen Shillings Four-pence; and becauſe it was a Poor Man's Caſe, it was afterwards agreed to make it Six Shillings and Eight-pence. There was a Diminution in the Sum. And here Mr. Attorney would have a Diminution of a Day.

L. C. J. Holt. Was that done judicially, or clandeſtinely?

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, How it was done, does not appear: But it is ſaid to have been done out of Pity and Commiſeration to the Poverty of the Defendant. And yet that Amendment was look'd upon to be illegal.

Mr. J. Powel. That was not done by the Court.

Mr. Mountague. It comes to be mention'd in King Richard III.'s Days, upon a Queſtion that was put to the Judges by the King, when they were together in the Star Chamber: "What if a "Juſtice of Peace ſhall procure an Indictment, not "found by the Jury, to be filed among other In-"dictments, as if it really had been found by the "Grand Jury; what Puniſhment ought to be in-"flicted upon him hereupon? They take notice of that Obliteration that had been made in a Record by Juſtice Ingham, and of the Puniſhment he underwent for it.

But to come to the preſent Caſe. Suppoſe it were Teſte'd the 14th Day of October, inſtead of the 4th; would Mr. Attorney then ſay it were to be amended? Suppoſe the Return was out before the Teſte of this Diſtringas, that would come nearer to Gage's Caſe in the Fifth Report. There was a Writ of Covenant, Teſte the 24th of April, and made returnable the 15th of April. The Lord Coke indeed ſays in his Reports, It is a Miſpriſion in the Clerk, that is amendable: But your Lordſhip knows, in his own Book of Entries, Fol. 250. Part 9. the contrary to that appears; and that it was not permitted to be amended.

Another Thing they have ſaid, is, That this Writ ſhall be amended by the Award of the Roll in Court. But, with Submiſſion, there is nothing there to amend the Teſte by. We know there is a right Order of a Diſtringas on the Roll; but that will not help an Error in the Teſte of the Writ iſſued forth: And for that I will cite a Caſe out of Crooke's Eliz. fol. 825. Carew v. Marler; and another Caſe was tried before your Lordſhip in Michaelmas chaelmas Term, in the 11th of King William, between Child and Harvey. There the Diſtringas was made returnable Die Jovis prox. poſt tres Septimanas Sanctæ Trin. inſtead of Sancti Michaelis: So the Day of the Return happen'd to be the ſame Day that the Cauſe was to be tried upon, before your Lordſhip, at the Niſi Prius.

L. C. J. Holt. It was actually tried at another Day.

Mr. Mountague. We came afterwards to the Court, and pray'd the Diſtringas might be amended by the Award on the Roll, which was right, Die Jovis prox. poſt tres Septimanas Sancti Michaelis: But the Court denied our Motion; and we were forc'd to take out a new Venire Facias, and try the Cauſe again.

The next great Caſe is that of Curſon, which is in Crooke James's Reports, fol. 529. There is an Information upon the Statute of Recuſancy, againſt Baron and Feme; and the Declaration demands 220 l. for Ten Months Recuſancy. But the Wife was charged for being abſent Thirteen Months from Church. There the Wife only pleaded Not Guilty; and after a Verdict, this Miſ-joining of the Iſſue was amended by the Docket. How agreeable to Law this Caſe is, muſt be left to your Lordſhip's Conſideration. There leſs is demanded, than (of the Plaintiff's own ſhewing) appears to be due: For 'tis laid, that ſhe had been abſent Thirteen Months, and yet 220 l. is only demanded; ſo it does not appear how the reſt was ſatisfy'd. And beſides this, it may be obſerv'd, that Mr. Hughes, who has abridg'd the Three Crooks, in his Abridgment of this Caſe, has not thought this Reſolution worthy his taking notice of.

L. C. J. Holt. A good Authority indeed! Did you know him?

Mr. Mountague. I did not know him; but I have heard him accounted a Learned Man: And he did not, belike, think this Point worth his remembring. Whether he had any Scruple in the Caſe, I know not; but he omits it.

Then there is the Caſe of Sir Humph. Tufton, in Crooke Charles, 144. There was a Quo Warranto brought by Sir Humph. Tufton againſt the Corporation of Maidſtone; and there a Judgment is enter'd by Diſclaimer, with Conſent of Parties, ſays the Book. And that Diſclaimer is afterwards amended, and made of leſs Conſequence than it was before. But how was that Amendment made? Why, upon the Certificate of the Attorney General, that he with his own Hands had inſerted in the Paper-Book from which the Record was tranſcrib'd, the Words which the Clerk had omitted; now upon this Caſe I may obſerve, That the Judgment had been enter'd by Conſent, tho' the Amendment pray'd was to the Diſadvantage of the Crown: Tho' that Amendment was pray'd in the Caſe of a Quo Warranto, which is in Nature of a Civil Action. Tho' Mr. Attorney General did conſent, yet a Difficulty was made in doing it. For all which Reaſons, I do humbly conceive, that that Caſe is for me, rather than againſt me: Eſpecially ſince ſo Great a Man as Mr. Noy does there aſſert, That none of the Statutes of Amendments extend to Caſes of Quo Warranto, or Suits where the King is Party. Now tho' this Saying of Mr. Noy's were only as he was of Council for thoſe that oppos'd the Amendment; yet this muſt have been look'd upon as a ſtrange Aſſertion, by the Judges at that Time, if they had been as clear of Opinion as Mr. Attorney is, that the Statute of Harry VI. did extend to Criminal Proſecutions. And the Learned Judge that reports that Saying of Mr. Noy, would hardly have let it paſs, without taking ſome Notice that the Law was otherwiſe, if he had thought ſo.

As to the Caſe of 1 Siderfin, fol. 244. it was anſwer'd by your Lordſhip the other Day: For tho' the Writ is Vicecomitibus, where there was but one Sheriff; yet the Return is help'd by a Suggeſtion that was enter'd, that there is but one Sheriff.

The Caſes out of Dyer, 353, 346. have been taken notice of by Mr. Broderick; and the Query is, Whether any Diſcontinuance in Caſu Reginæ be aided by any of the Statutes of Jeofails? Now I cannot but think, that the Makers of thoſe Laws would have taken as much care to except Criminal Informations, as well as Actions Qui tam, if there had been Occaſion. And to ſhew your Lordſhip, that none of theſe Statutes do extend to Informations at the Common Law, I would mention a Caſe out of 1 Vent. f. 17. It is Perry's Caſe. There is an Information for a Forgery: There happen'd a Miſ-tryal; and it was adjudg'd that it could not be help'd by any of thoſe Statutes. The Error was, That the Defendant is charg'd to have forg'd a Leaſe in Sherborn, and to have given it in Evidence at Dorſet: And the Venire was awarded only to Dorſet. And this Caſe puts me in mind of the late Caſe of Paul Tracy; where the Tryal was ſet aſide, becauſe the Defendant himſelf had ſued out a wrong Venire; tho' the Proſecutor there, at the ſame Time, had ſued out a right one, in order to have try'd him thereupon, if he had not put in his wrong Writ.

L. C. J. Holt. How was that Writ?

Mr. Mountague. The Venire was to the Pariſh of St. Clement's Danes only; whereas it ſhould have been to the Pariſh of St. Giles in the Fields as well.

L. C. J. Holt. Was it try'd on that Writ?

Mr. Mountague. The Tryal was had upon the Writ the Defendant had taken out, and for that Reaſon ſet aſide.

As to the other Caſe, in 1 Siderfin, fol. 259. the Caſe of the King againſt Glover; an Amendment was made of an Inquiſition poſt Mortem; but that is of no Conſequence. For in all theſe Caſes, that Inquiſition is to be travers'd afterwards: And the Jury, when they deliver ſuch Inquiſitions in, are ask'd, Whether the Clerk ſhall not have Leave to amend any Defect in Form, or falſe Latin; and it is always allow'd, provided nothing in Subſtance be alter'd. And in this Caſe of Glover, the Amendment was of a Matter of Form: For the Inquiſition ſaid, the Deceas'd ſeipſum ſubmerſus fuit; but did not ſay he threw himſelf into the Water.

The Caſe of Sampſon, in 1 Jones 420. tho' it has been cited on the other Side, yet I take it to be a ſtrong Caſe on our Side. That Caſe plainly ſhews, that it was the Opinion of the Judges, that there was no ſuch Thing as an Amendment of Indictments by Common Law. Both Jones, and Keeling, who (I ſuppoſe) was Clerk of the Crown, do affirm, no Preſident can be ſhewn of any ſuch Amendment made. And therefore I may queſtion the Authority of Harris's Caſe, which is ſaid to be adjudg'd Mich. 16. of K. James's; and this Caſe of Sampſon was in the 14th of K. Charles I. And there Jones ſays expreſly, That if a Record be certify'd by the Clerk of Aſſize that is faulty, it cannot not be amended, either by the Common Law, or by the Statute Law.

My Lord, I doubt I have taken up too much of your Time. There are other Caſes that have been mention'd out of Brook and Fitzherbert; but I hope none of them will any ways affect the preſent Caſe. I have taken notice of thoſe which I think the moſt material; and I hope I have made it appear, that the Error in the Teſte of this Writ can neither be amended by Common Law, nor by the Statute Law. And that this Miſtake of a Day is not only a Slip of the Clerk, but an Error in Judgment: And I humbly pray, there may be no Rule made for an Amendment.

MR. Whitaker. My Lord, I beg the Favour of a Word or two on the ſame Side: After ſo much has been ſaid for the Defendant, I ſhall only mention a Caſe or two, to ſhew that ſuch an Amendment as this has not been allow'd by the Statute of 8 Henry VI. Cap. 12. in any Civil Action between Party and Party.

28 Hen. VI. 3. There was an Action of Debt, and the Parties were at Iſſue. The Venire was return'd; upon which the Plaintiff had a Habeas Corpora with a Niſi Prius: And inſtead of ſaying in the Habeas Corpora, in Placito Debiti, it was made in Placito Compoti, &c. on Motion in Arreſt of Judgment. The Council for the Plaintiff deſir'd to amend this, after Verdict for the Plaintiff: The Court did indeed not give any Rule, as appears by that Book, only that they would conſider of it; but nothing was done further, as appears by that Book juſt after.

In the Caſe 34 Hen. VI. 20. In an Action of Debt brought by the Prior of St. Bartholomew's, the Parties were at Iſſue, and a Venire return'd; and on the Return of the Venire, there were Twenty four Perſons return'd: But in making out the Habeas Corpora, the Clerk omits one of the Names of the Twenty four. This appear'd to be the Miſpriſion of the Clerk. He had the Venire and the Return before him; as the Clerk had here in the Caſe now before your Lordſhip. He had the Roll and the Venire; but this was held not to be amendable: And this was in few Years after the Statute of Henry VI.

I ſhall mention another Caſe in 2 Siderfin 7. 12. A Writ of Capias ad faciend. for a Debt, was made returnable a Day after the Term. It appear'd to the Court, the Attorney for the Plaintiff had given the Clerk that made the Writ, true and right Directions to make it returnable the laſt Day of the Term; but though it was his Miſpriſion, yet the Court would not amend it: So it is adjudg'd in that Caſe.

I ſhall not mention any more Caſes; but anſwer the Caſe of Plume, in Palmer 480. cited by the Queen's Council. I have had particular Occaſion to look into that Caſe this Term, in a Cauſe which hath been in the Paper this Term. We did ſearch for that Rule expreſs'd in Palmer's Reports, in order to amend an Outlawry after Judgment, in an Action of Debt in the Common Pleas; but on producing that Rule, the Court of Common Pleas did not take it as an Authority to amend our Outlawry, which wanted an Amendment in the Return of the Exigent.

L. C. J. Holt. What was that Amendment?

Mr. Whitaker. Ad Com. meum, the Book ſays: And upon this, ſays the Book, they did grant a Rule, to award a Certiorari to the Coroner. The Rule mention'd in Palmer was ſearch'd for; and, as I am inform'd, my Client did produce it in the Common Pleas; and yet they would not let us amend our Outlawry: And my Client, for want of an Amendment of the Return of the Exigent, is likely to loſe an honeſt Debt by the Reverſal thereof.

The Council for the Queen have relied on the Statute of the 8th of Henry VI. that this Fault of the Clerk is amendable within that Statute. By the Books I have cited, the Miſpriſions of the Clerks, tho' in Civil Actions, have not been allow'd to be amendable. Above Two Hundred Years are paſt, before any Thing of this kind was done, to amend ſuch a Miſpriſion of a Clerk as this is, in Criminal Caſes.

How far the Queen's Council would go on with Amendments, I cannot tell: But in the Caſe cited by the Queen's Council, Sampſon's Caſe, 1 Rolls 196. there was the ſame Miſtake of a want of Continuance; as in this Caſe. No Man can believe, the Clerk of Aſſize knew not what Days the Commiſſioners of Oyer and Terminer, and Gaol-Delivery did ſit, and continue their Seſſions on ſuch Commiſſions. And yet, on a Writ of Error to reverſe that Judgment (in Sampſon's Caſe) being brought; the Court of King's-Bench would not amend this apparent Miſpriſion of the Clerk of Aſſize's want of Adjournment from Day to Day.

This Matter of Amending in Criminal Proceedings ſuch a Miſpriſion of a Clerk as this is that is now deſired, has not been thought of ſince the Time of the 8th of Henry VI. until now. And if the Queen's Council can ſhew no Preſident in all this Time, wherein ſuch an Amendment, even in a Civil Cauſe, by virtue of the 8th of Hen. VI. hath been; much leſs in a Criminal Caſe. I humbly hope, your Lordſhips will not let them amend this Writ of Diſtringas.

MR. Parker. My Lord, Mr. Mountague has ſpoken fully to the particular Caſes that have been offer'd on the other Side; therefore I will not go thro' them again: But I beg Leave to take notice of ſome General Heads, from which they have argued, and to which moſt of their Caſes are reducible; and to diſtinguiſh them ſhortly from the preſent Caſe.

1. In the firſt place, I take it, that the Caſes of Captions of Indictments, removed hither by Certiorari, and amended the ſame Term they are brought in, come not up to the preſent Caſe. For the Certiorari commands the Return, not of a Copy of the Indictment, but the very Record it ſelf: And the Indictment return'd, is, in Judgment of Law, the individual Parchment that was in the Court below. And ſo it is in Writs of Error: Except Writs of Error to the Court of King's-Bench in Ireland; and in that Caſe, the Books take notice, that only a Tranſcript is to be ſent, by reaſon of the Hazard of loſing the Original by the Danger of the Seas: And in caſe the Tranſcript arrive here ſafe, it is then ſaid to become, in Conſideration of Law, the very Record. And tho' it be found expedient, for the Convenience of keeping the Records, and is now become the General Practice in other Caſes, to make a Tranſcript in another Parchment, and file that; yet if in Tranſcribing there be a Miſtake made, your Lordſhip will amend it, if it be diſcover'd in the ſame Term:

For in truth, that's not amending the real Indictment, but only amending the Return of the Juſtices to whom the Certiorari was directed; and providing that a falſe Indictment be not foiſted in amongſt the Records, inſtead of the true. Which cannot juſtify the mending the very Writ it ſelf; the Thing prayed in the preſent Caſe.

2. Their Caſes of Amendments of Judgments in the ſame Term they are given, and ſo of other Inrollments of what's done in Court, will not make any Thing in this Caſe. The Reaſons given in thoſe Caſes, are, That the whole Term is, in Judgment of Law, but one Day: And the Judgments and Determinations of the Court are, that whole Day, in the Breaſt of the Court. And theſe being only Amendments of what themſelves do in Court, which is not compleat till the Term be ended; they are not ſo tied up by the Clerk's haſty Entry of it, but that the Thing may be alter'd as they ſee Cauſe. But this is not applicable to a Writ which has paſs'd the Seal of the Court, and thereby receiv'd all the Sanction it can have, and has then iſſued out to a proper Officer, and is by him return'd back to the Court. The Term is, in the Judgment of Law, but one Day, with reſpect of what is the Act of the Court, and paſſes perfectly in the Court. But it is impoſſible to ſay, without manifeſt Abſurdity, that the Term is to be conſider'd as but one Day, in reſpect of a Writ that is iſſued out one Day in the Term, to command Jurors to appear at another; or that the Day when the Officer comes into Court, to give an Account of his Obedience to a Writ, is the very Day of iſſuing it. And therefore a Diſtinction is to be made between Things done in Court, which are incompleat during the Term; and the Court's giving Directions to an Officer out of Court by Writ, which is perfect, and gone out from them in order to be obeyed.

3. I ſhould think likewiſe, that the Caſes they have mention'd, of the Favour allow'd the Crown, do not come up to this Caſe; becauſe, tho' in Suits for the Recovery of Right, there be great Favour allow'd to the Crown; and by the Statutes of Amendments and Jeofails, much Indulgence is given to the Subject, for the Recovery of Right; yet it is not ſo in Proſecution of Criminals, which is a Matter ſtricti Juris: And no Argument can be drawn from the Favour ſhewn in one Caſe, to infer, that the like Favour is to be allow'd in the other; for they ſtand on quite different Grounds.

4. I think, with Submiſſion, in the next place, that the Inſtances of Amendments of Proceſs, where nothing is done upon it, but barely to entitle the Party to ſome Proceſs farther; as of a Capias, in order to an Exigent, &c. will not come up to this Caſe, where the Writ is executed and returned, and the Tryal had upon it.

In the Caſe of Rogers and Bird, that was cited on the other Side, 3 Cro. 572. there was a Venire Facias returnable Die Sab. prox. poſt Octab. Trin. but on the Roll, it was awarded returnable Cro. Trin. And becauſe that was the Authority for making it out, it was amended in the Return; becauſe the Tryal was not had upon it, only it was return'd in order to the Diſtringas. But Popham there expreſly ſays, that if the Tryal had been upon the Venire Facias, it were erroneous, and would not have been amendable.

Mr. J. Powel. Where is that, Sir?

Mr. Parker. 3 Cro. 572. There is likewiſe the Caſe of 34 H. VI. 20 Brook's Amendments, Placit. 10. There were Twenty four Jurors return'd upon the Venire Facias, and in the Hab. Corp. one of them omitted: And there the Opinion of the Court was, That they ſhould make out a new Hab. Corp. And tho' there it was plainly the Miſtake of the Clerk, that mention'd only Twenty three, inſtead of Twenty four; yet the Court was of Opinion that it could not be amended, but they muſt begin again where the Fault was made. 19 H. VI. 39. A Juror was return'd upon the Venire Facias, by the Name of J. Hod; and in the Diſtringas he is named J. Hord; and upon him the Sheriff return'd Nihil, &c. And there was a new Habeas Corpus awarded. Which Caſes ſeem to prove, that where there is ſomething done upon the Proceſs, more than a mere formal Return, that it is not amendable within the Statutes of Edw. III. and Hen. VI. which were both of them made before theſe Caſes.

5. In the next place, I beg Leave to obſerve, That there is a Difference between ſuch Caſes as have been cited, where the Thing was really done right, but by Miſtake enter'd wrong; and this Caſe, where really it was not done right. As where upon a Diſtringas a right Juryman is really ſworn, but ſet down by a wrong Name, the Name ſhall there be amended; becauſe the Thing done was really right, and only the Mention of it wrong. But in this Caſe it cannot be ſaid, that the Diſtringas was really taken out right. The Writ was awarded the 23d of October, on which Day they would have it bear Teſte: But it is not pretended that it was really taken out till the next Day, when it now bears Teſte. - - - - And as to what has been already offer'd, that the Niſi Prius ought to be awarded in Præſentia Partium; and therefore not upon any other Day than the 23d, when the Venire Facias was returnable, and the Parties in Court: I might here, I hope not improperly, add this farther; That that muſt be underſtood, that the making of the Writ ſhould be in the Preſence of the Parties: For the Entry upon the Roll, tho' commonly called an Award of the Writ, is really an Entry of a Writ ſuppoſed to be then actually made; it is not ſo properly a Direction to the Clerk to make a Writ, as an Entry or Memorandum upon the Roll, or a Recording that there is a Command to the Sheriff, to diſtrein the Jurors to appear at a certain Day, &c. And therefore if the Niſi Prius is to be awarded in the Preſence of the Parties, the Writ is to be made in their Preſence.

Mr. J. Powel. Do you mean, that they ſhould be in the Crown-Office?

Mr. Parker. The Writ is in Judgment of Law iſſued in Court, tho' actually wrote and ſealed in the Office; and if Teſte'd of that Day, is underſtood to be made in Court that Day; which is in Preſence of the Parties; that being the Day given 'em in Court, and their Appearance then enter'd. And we apprehend, that the Court does not command, by the Entry of the præceptum eſt in the Roll, but by the Writ. The Sheriff, who is abſent, cannot be commanded by the Roll, but by the Writ which is ſent to him: Therefore the Court then commands, when the Writ is made: And therefore the Entry upon the Roll, præceptum eſt Vic. is an Entry that there is ſuch a Command, which which this Writ, on which this Tryal was had, cannot be, becauſe it bears Teſte after. But this is only by the by: For however taking the Entry as an Award of the Writ, yet the Writ muſt be taken out as the Court awards it, and when the Court awards it; or elſe it is without Warrant, and void. Indeed if it ſhould in Fact be made at a ſubſequent Day, and not actually wrote and ſealed the ſame Day it is awarded, yet if it bear Teſte upon that Day, your Lordſhip will not enquire into that Matter: But finding ſuch a Writ was awarded, and that it appears by the Teſte to iſſue the ſame Day; will preſume it did really iſſue that Day, and that it is right. But the Writ being here awarded the 23d, and bearing Teſte the 24th; if it did not iſſue the 23d Day, to alter the Teſte, ſo as to make it appear to iſſue that Day, were to make it contrary to the Truth.

This we take to have ſome Reſemblance to the late Caſe of the Warden of the Fleet; where your Lordſhip was againſt altering the Day of bringing in the Record, when the Alteration would have been againſt the Truth of the Fact. And to make the Amendment here deſired, would be to make the Writ appear to have iſſued the 23d of October; when the Writ it ſelf imports it was the 24th; and this was the Truth of the Fact.

SIR T. Powis. My Lord, Having heard what has been ſaid on the other Side, I beg Leave to trouble you a little by way of Reply.

Mr. Broderick and Mr. Mountague make a Diſtinction, which they think will govern this Caſe. They ſay, that the Crown has a great many Privileges, beyond what the Subject hath, where the Caſe concerns Civil Rights: But they will not allow the ſame Privileges to the Crown, where there is a Criminal Proſecution. I know of no ſuch Diſtinction. For if this Privilege belongs to the Crown, in the Caſe of the Revenue; ſurely the reſtraining of Crimes is much more for the Publick Benefit: And by conſequence, the ſame Reaſon that gives the Crown a Privilege in a leſſer Matter, ought to carry it further in a greater Thing.

In the next place, they do admit, that all the Acts of the Court may be amended; as being in the Breaſt of the Court, during the ſame Term. And they deny not, but that the Judgment of the Court, which is the higheſt Act of the Court, may be revers'd, or any way alter'd or chang'd in the ſame Term, without any Danger of building Clock-Houſes. And can any one ſay, that if theſe higheſt Acts of the Court may be alter'd, that the Acts of their Clerks may not be alter'd? That the greater Things may be done, but not the inferior, when there is a pure Miſtake?

No Man can but think it ſtrange, that a Miſtake of a Clerk may not be alter'd; but a Miſtake even in the Judgment of the Court may.

We come next to another Diſtinction. They ſay, an Original Writ may be amended in the Caſe of the Crown; as in the Quare impedit, in Blackmore's Caſe. For which they aſſign Two Reaſons: Firſt, It was a Writ of the Crown, for Recovery of a Civil Right; for it was a Quare impedit. And Secondly, The Judges obſerving the Fault in the Writ, did (as it ſeems) carry it to the Court of Chancery, and there it was amended. From whence they would infer, as if it were a new Writ. But that cannot be ſuppoſed; for it was agreed, that it was the ſame Writ amended, and not a new Writ.

Now ſee if that will not come to our Caſe. For if the Court of Chancery could amend a Quare impedit, as coming from thence; cannot this Court amend a Writ that comes from hence? Here we are in the Caſe of a judicial Writ that comes from hence; and therefore it may be amended here, as well as that could be amended in the Court of Chancery.

But the great Matters endeavour'd to be avoided, are the Two Acts of Parliament of Edw. III. and Hen. VI. for the Caſes cited: I will not go over them again. And I do believe it is very true, what theſe Gentlemen inſiſt on; That it has been the common Opinion, that theſe Acts, or other Acts of Amendments, do not extend to Caſes of the Crown. And generally ſpeaking it is right; becauſe all the later Acts of Amendments except Proſecutions on Penal Laws: And the Statute of Henry VI. has ſo many Exceptions in Criminal Matters, that a Miſtake might from thence ariſe, that all are excepted.

It is certainly true what my Lord Chief Juſtice Vaughan ſays, fol. 169, 170, and 419. That upon doubtful Words of an Act of Parliament, that are dark and dubious; an Ancient Interpretation, ſubmitted to for a long Time, is fit and reaſonable to be relied on in a doubtful Caſe. But a Thouſand Reſolutions, againſt a plain Act of Parliament, cannot prevail Tho' it would be good Reaſon, well to conſider ſuch a Law, and to weigh it well; but no ſuch Reſolutions can alter the Act.

Here are Two Acts of Parliament: That of Edward III. is in general Words of All: And how can any one ſay then, that it ſhall mean and extend only to Some?

As to the Act in the 8th of Henry VI. to ſay that the Words ſhall not go to every Thing that is not excepted, is to overthrow all Rules of Conſtruction. They have offer'd nothing againſt that Statute; but that it has been thought it did not extend to theſe Caſes.

The Caſe of Siderfin ſhews, that we do not advance a mere new Notion, with reſpect to that Act. Therefore I ſay, we have the Acts of Parliament on our Side; We have the Privilege of the Crown on our Side: The Award of the Roll is right, and with us; and the Error was purely the Miſtake of the Clerk: For no Man can think it otherwiſe.

We have this likewiſe on our Side, That we deſire it may be amended in the ſame Term. For as the Court can ſet right their own Judgment in the ſame Term, much more what is the Act and Miſtake of the Clerk.

Therefore we inſiſt upon it, That our Caſes we have cited, are of good Authority for us; and we hope we ſhall have an Amendment, if it be neceſſary.

Mr. Attorney General. MY Lord, we humbly hope, that notwithſtanding what theſe Learned Gentlemen have urged, our Aſſertions by Law and Authority will prevail; and that this Miſtake is amendable.

What has been ſaid before by Mr. Broderick and Mr. Mountague, they have laid it down for a Rule, That there is a great Difference between the Privileges belonging to the Crown in Matters of a Civil Nature upon the Statute; and Criminal Proſecutions: And that all thoſe Favours for the Crown, were only for Matters relating to the Right of the Crown in Civil Caſes, and not what belongs to the Crown in its Politick Capacity. Tho' Mr. Broderick did not conſider: For ſure, by the Common Law, there was a greater Latitude for the Crown in Criminal Proſecutions, than for the Subject.

In Caſes of Treaſon, they had no Benefit of Council; and that was far more to their Diſadvantage, than in Civil Caſes. It's true, that Inconvenience has been regulated by the late Statute, That in the Caſes of Treaſon, the Party may have a Copy of the Pannel and Indictment. But you ſee what the Difficulties were formerly in Criminal Proſecutions for the People: All they had to do, was merely to plead Guilty or Not guilty. I think that anſwers their Objection as to that.

Now there is in the next place to be conſider'd, what Mr. Mountague ſays, That no Error in Proceſs was amendable by Common Law; and cites Lord Coke for it. He ſhould have gone on with that Citation; for it is certainly otherwiſe. 8 Coke 156, ſays, Their own Acts are amendable by the Common Law, in the ſame Term; but at the Common Law, the Miſpriſions of Clerks in another Term, were not amendable, But we are in the ſame Term; and ſure they are amendable before Judgment. And Lord Coke tells you, they are amendable in the ſame Term.

Now Mr. Mountague has gone a great way. He agrees, if it were a Miſ-award of the Roll, you would amend it, but not the Writ. Now for that the Law is quite contrary: If you are wrong in the Roll, you cannot ſet it right; but if it be in the Writ or Proceſs, you may amend it by the Roll. Now here the Roll is right; and we deſire the Writ may be amended by it.

If it had been in the Roll, I cannot tell whether we ſhould have applied to amend that. For if you have any Thing amiſs, you cannot amend it, but by ſomething to amend it by. But it may be amended in Caſe of the Crown, better than in that of the Subject. And tho' Mr. Mountague ſays, you may make uſe of them in Civil Caſes, but not in Criminal; yet we make uſe of this Argument, that the Crown has a Privilege more than the People. We rely on that; tho' Mr. Mountague ſays, that is not to be relied on.

In the next place, Mr. Mountague ſays, This is within none of the Statutes of Amendments, either of Edward III. or of Henry VI. And that my Lord Coke ſays, fol. 157, b. That the Statute of Edward III. does not extend to Pleas of the Crown. And therefore Mr. Mountague's Opinion is, to go quite through, and exclude this Caſe from all the Statutes of Amendments.

Now I can give an Argument, why it ſhould not be amended by the Statute of Hen. VI. tho' by the Statute of Edw. III. it is amendable. But why is it not amendable by the Statutes of Henry VI. Cap. 12, and 15. which go further than the Statute of 14 Edw. III. does?

I do agree, there is an Objection againſt the Statute of Edward III. For there is the Word Party, which ſeems to imply Civil Caſes only. But even by that Statute, ſo ſoon as the Slip appears by Challenge, or any other way, it ſhall be amended. The Lord Coke might well on theſe Words make a Doubt, whether the 14th of Edw. III. did extend to amend Caſes relating to the Crown: But the Opinion of Coke in the Statute of 14 Edw. III. is abſolute; but the other of 8 Hen. VI. is with a Reaſon. And why is it? Becauſe it is excepted. Now they ſhould have ſhewn us ſome Reaſon, why the Statute of Henry VI. Cap. 12. ſhould not extend to Amendments in Caſes of the Crown.

And there is not that Objection to the Statute of Hen. VI. Cap. 15. For it follows the Words of the Statute of Edw. III. and ſays, That no Man ſhall have, &c.

Now Mr. Mountague ſays, the Exception was put in ex abundanti; and it may be intended they were but Inſtances of like Caſes. Now I have hardly ever heard, that Inſtances of Treaſon and Felony ſhould extend to other Caſes of an inferior Nature: There is no Reaſon to carry it further than what is expreſs'd. So that we think theſe Statutes ſtand for us; and are applicable to all Records, as well for the Crown, as any elſe.

Mr. Mountague ſays, They have the Opinion of all Ages againſt it. But, my Lord, I deny that; becauſe there were Exceptions in many Statutes before and after the Statutes of Feofails, that were not conſider'd: But when they come to be conſider'd, this muſt be determin'd by conſidering the Words of the Statute; and not by general Opinions, taken up without Conſideration.

There was in Cro. Car. 25. a Caſe on the Statute 32 Hen. VIII. where the Queſtion was, If Aſſignees of Copyhold Lands were within that Statute. And till a little before the Revolution, it was a received Opinion, that the Aſſignee of a Copyholder was not within the Statute of Henry VIII. And there is a Caſe in Yelverton, 223. wherein it was ſo reſolved: But when that Statute came afterwards to be conſider'd, it was ſettled here, and has prevail'd ever ſince, that the Statute did extend to it; tho' before it was the prevailing Opinion that it did not. And accordingly the Practice has ſince been. So that Opinions that paſs Jub Silentio, that is, without Conſideration, may be alter'd when they come to be ſtated and conſider'd. And therefore I hope this Point will not prevail.

My Lord, I agree that this Thing is of very great Conſequence: For if their Plea be allow'd, it will follow, that Criminals will eſcape for little Slips in all Caſes. And I know that even in Perjury, and other Crimes, few that have been convicted, but have got off, by reaſon of Errors in the Proceedings, tho' I have ſeen a great many convicted thereof. This is a great Inconvenience and Miſchief: And ſure Criminals are not to be the Favourites of the Law.

But as to theſe Proſecutions, there is another Conſideration; That it is more for the Honour of Juſtice, to have the Advantage to lay aſide this Slip, than to ſuffer a Criminal to eſcape. But however, every one muſt have Juſtice: And if we rely on the Statute of Henry VI. no Conſtruction can avoid it.

Then Mr. Broderick cites the Caſe of - - - - - - - - Where it is ſaid, that the Statutes of Jeofails do not extend to Caſes of the Crown. Now ſure that is not a Reaſon: It is contrary to all the Reaſons of Statutes. Where Statutes are to promote Juſtice, the Crown is bound as well as the Subject; it is for the Publick Good. Now Mr. Broderick has cited a Caſe againſt that; and that is in Styles, fol. 107. (Vid. Fol. 307.) the Caſe of Theobalds and Newton. There that Caſe was on the Statutes of 18 Eliz. and of 21 Jac. Now it's plain, they had no Conſideration of any Thing elſe: And why? Becauſe in Proſecutions on Penal Statutes, the Court often rely on Exceptions: But however the Authority goes no further, but they rely on the Excepti-

Exceptions. Now if they had ſaid it was excepted by the Statute of Hen. VI. and that all the Books go on it as excepted by that Statute; if they ſay it is excepted by the Statute of Hen. VI. would that be taken as an Objection to the Statutes of 18 Eliz. and 21 Jac.? No; it is a Miſtake.

He has alſo cited Telverton, fol. 60. Brigg's and Thompſon's Caſe. Now there was an Information on the Statute of 21 Hen. VIII. againſt a Clergyman, for Farming Lands; and a Venire was awarded returnable ubicunque: But the Venire it ſelf, and the Diſtringas, were made returnable coram nobis, &c. which was ſaid to be erroneous. An Exception was taken, and per Cur' Let it ſtay. But it appears not that it was conſider'd.

Theſe Authorities are no Authorities. The firſt is not within either of thoſe Statutes we are now upon: And the other was never determin'd by any Thing, as appears in the Caſe. And there is a great Difference between the Statutes on which they were founded, and our Caſe.

Mr. Mountague has gone a new way. He would have this to be not a Miſpriſion of the Clerk; becauſe he is afraid that a Miſpriſion is amendable: For the Clerk had enquir'd, whether the Writ ſhould be Teſte'd the 24th of October; ſo that he ſays it is a Forgetfulneſs, or Negligence, but not a Miſpriſion.

Now I would fain know what he means by that? Whether all Forgetfulneſs of the Clerks, is not a Miſpriſion of the Clerk? That is, any Negligence, whatever it be, it is the Miſpriſion of the Clerk. Coke ſays, it is a Miſpriſion of the Clerk, under the Word Negligence: And Negligence and Miſpriſion are by him frequently put for the ſame Thing. See 8 Co. 159. b. 160. b.

So upon one Part of it; that is, ſuppoſe the Clerk ſteal it away; he ſays, that is under the Word Miſpriſion; and an involuntary Negligence of the Clerk, is a Miſpriſion. So this Clerk's Negligence is a Miſpriſion, becauſe he did not look on the Almanack and the Roll. Theſe are Miſpriſions by the Statute of Henry VI.

As to the Caſes that have been cited, Mr. Mountague has anſwer'd but ſome of them.

As to that of Percival and Godfrey, Siderfin, fol. 43. he ſays, that was not ſuch an Amendment, but a Suggeſtion of the Roll. But if the Roll could amend that which is a ſtronger Amendment, to preſent a Verdict; the rectifying of that makes it ſtronger for us, than it would be otherwiſe.

He ſays, As to Harvey's Caſe, he denies it to be Law: But I believe the Authority of the Judges is to be preferr'd before his Opinion.

And then for the next Caſe, Parker and Curſon, he queſtions that Opinion, becauſe not taken notice of by Hughs. Now I believe the Judges that reported it, did underſtand it better than he that abridg'd it. But whether he underſtood it or no, it alters not the Caſe.

And then for Tufton's Caſe, he ſays it is a Civil Caſe. But, my Lord, it is a Criminal Caſe. A Quo Warranto is brought: They muſt plead Not guilty to the Uſurpation. So that theſe Caſes are under the ſame Conſideration as this is.

Then there is the Caſe of King and Glover: That was, where a Coroner was to amend an Inquiſition of Murther: But it was not proved that he did murther himſelf, &c.

Mr. Mountague admits, the Jury may amend Matters of Form: But in that Caſe, when it is brought into Court, it is not the ſame Verdict as before.

He cited the Caſe of - - - - - - and Harvey: But your Lordſhip gave him another Reaſon for that Caſe.

And for the Caſe of Paul Tracy, that Point was never determined.

L. C. J. Holt. The Venire Facias never mentions the Time of, &c.

Mr. Att. Gen. Now that is not within the Statute of Henry VI. So that we have nothing to do with it.

And as to the Caſe of Dyer, fol. that does not concern the Statutes of Feofails. And in Fitzherbert's Caſe, the Court was of Opinion, they could not amend, by reaſon of the Exception. Whereby they ſhew plainly, they thought the Statutes would have extended to that Caſe, had it not been particularly excepted.

I do not obſerve any other Matter, but that of the Niſi Prius. If the Writ muſt be made out in the Preſence of the Parties; they ſay, that immediately, when the Perſons appear, the Writ is to be iſſued. But that is impoſſible, and contrary to Reaſon and Authority.

We think, on theſe Reaſons we have troubled you with, we have the Law on our Side. Only one Thing I muſt beg Leave to anſwer to what Mr. Broderick ſays as to Percival's Caſe: It was a crying Thing, and it might be an extraordinary Judgment. Where Judgments are given, they are to go according to the Courſe of Law: Juſtice is to be done to all. And as no extraordinary Method is to be made uſe of againſt a Criminal, ſo none is to be uſed to ſave him.

My Lord, We think the Statute of Henry VI. does allow ſuch an Amendment as we deſire; and that no Statute does reſtrain it: And therefore, I hope, we ſhall be allow'd to amend this Error.

There is one Matter more. Lord Coke, in his 8th Report, 163. a. ſays, The Statutes of Henry VIII. and that of 41 Eliz. do not extend to Pleas of the Crown; becauſe they are excepted in the Act Eliz. and that of Hen. VIII. does not extend to 'em.

We agree with the Lord Coke in every Thing, that the King can't amend by that of Hen. VIII. tho' there is no Exception: And the Reaſon is, becauſe it ſpeaks only of Suits between Party and Party. And the other Statute of 18 Eliz. is not large enough, extending only to Treaſon or Felony, becauſe they only are excepted.

My Lord, We think we have my Lord Coke's Authority with us, and even the very Words of the Act of 8 Hen. VI. And tho' this Caſe has not been ſo fully conſider'd before; yet we hope it will be conſider'd now; and that we ſhall be allow'd this Amendment.

Mr. Broderick. I thought not to have ſaid any Thing more: But becauſe I have been named two or three times by Mr. Attorney, I deſire - - - - -

Mr. Att. Gen. The Reply is ours.

Mr. Broderick. My Lord, I beg Leave to explain my ſelf in ſomething that has been miſunderſtood. I think I did not ſay what I am charged with. Mr. Attorney tells you I ſaid, that none of the Queen's Prerogatives extend to Criminal Proſecutions.

Mr. Att. Gen. I ſay, you ſaid, there is great Difference between Civil and Criminal Caſes: And that the Queen's Prerogative is intended only ly of Amendments in Civil Caſes, but not applicable to Criminal Proſecutions.

L. C. J. Holt. Mr. Eroderick ſaid it did extend to Amendments in Civil Caſes, but not in Criminal.

Mr. Eroderick. And I do make a Difference between 'em. For in Criminal Proſecutions by the Crown, an Amendment can't be: But in the Caſe of a Quare impedit, which is a Civil Caſe, there it might.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Reply is ours; and they ought not to break in upon us.

L. C. J. Holt. If you will ſay any thing as to what has been miſtaken, you may. The Caſe of Sherret and Talbot is not to the Point: That was an Amendment, not in Behalf of the Crown, but of the Subject; and in a Civil Caſe. 'Twas in a Quo Warranto; wherein if the Subject take a limited Diſclaimer, and the Officer on the Roll enter a general Diſclaimer without Limitation, God forbid but that ſhould be amended. But then even on the King's Side, if the Original Indictment be right, and the Plea Roll be miſtaken; ſure the Plea Roll ſhall be rectified by the Indictment; and the Plea is to be made according to that.

The Caſes of Tuſton and Harris are ſtrong Caſes. In that of Harris there was an actual Tryal; and yet no Iſſue joined. He was indeed indicted as Criminal, and the Iſſue was enter'd; & de hoc ponit ſe ſuper Patriam, but without any Joinder thereupon: and ſo no compleat Iſſue. 'Tis true, in Capital Caſes, they are free to join Iſſue or not: But in other Criminal Caſes 'tis otherwiſe; there muſt be a Joinder. And as to the Caſe of Tuſton, that was an Amendment that went very far. That was an Information for Recuſancy againſt the Huſband and Wife, for Recuſancy of the Wife. The Wife comes in, and ſhe alone (whereas it ſhould have been the Husband and Wife) pleads Not guilty; and Iſſue join'd thereon: And it was mended by the Docket; for that was right. It has been held, that the Statute of Henry VI. did not extend to Criminal Matters; as Lord Coke (in Blackmore's Caſe) is expreſly.

Mr. Att. Gen. But, my Lord, he gives the Reaſon of that Exception.

L. C. J. Holt. Now the 8th of Henry VI. has this Exception: And in Stiles, 304. no Mention is made of the Statute of 8 Hen. VI. but that was by reaſon they thought it would not help them. And then the Query is, Whether this Caſe be within that Exception, and (as in Civil Caſes) may be amended? But this is a Caſe of a different Nature; and I will not ſay any thing now in the Point of this Caſe, becauſe of the Conſequence: Tho' I ſuppoſe it is not excepted by the Statutes: And I believe you don't deſire our preſent Opinion.

Mr. Att. Gen. Yes, my Lord, I deſire the Opinion of the Court in this Caſe; and I think it is of great Conſequence to us to have it now.

L. C. J. Holt. If you inſiſt on it, I muſt ſee if I can form an Opinion; but I would willingly defer it.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I lay it before you with Submiſſion.

Mr. J. Powel. It is a new Thing, and taken up againſt the current Opinion. Perhaps they might take it on Lord Coke's Opinion; and did not examine it, as they ſhould have done.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord Coke does not ſay ſo himſelf.

Mr. J. Powel. No: But becauſe he ſays it is excepted, they gave Credit to his Words, and did not examine into the Buſineſs: And I believe that was the Foundation of this Opinion. But if you think it is amendable in the ſame Term, becauſe the Court may amend their own Judgments the ſame Term; you muſt ſpeak to that Point.

I do not know that they can amend their own Judgment in this Term: Tho' indeed, if it be amendable at all, it is amendable this Term. Beſides, I ſhould make no Difficulty but that it is a Miſpriſion of the Clerk; and it was his Negligence not to do it by the Warrant. And if this were in a Civil Proceſs, I believe it might be amended in any other Term: But this being in a Criminal Matter; and the current Opinion being that none of the Statutes did extend to Criminal Matters, it ought to be well conſider'd; for the current Opinion is a great Thing.

Mr. Att. Gen. There is no doubt of it, it ought to be conſider'd: But it is fit for me to deſire your Opinion.

Mr. J. Powis. I believe theſe Statutes were never ſo ſcann'd before; and I believe this Matter has been more ſearch'd into now, than ever it has been before. But it has been the general Opinion, that none of the Statutes of Jeofails did extend to Criminal Caſes: That may ariſe, becauſe all the Statutes take in ſo large a Compaſs. All Indictments and Informations, and no doubt the latter Statutes, do not extend to ſuch Caſes: And the Opinion might ariſe from that.

But now this Statute of the 8th of Hen. VI. has Exception of Felonies and Treaſons, and none elſe; and you cannot extend the Exception further. It is a Caſe of Difficulty, but it ariſes from the common Opinion; otherwiſe we might give our Opinion now without Difficulty: For the Words are as clear as may be; and it is againſt Reaſon, to except Things that that Statute did not except. But being a Thing that is not ſo particularly confin'd to this Term, (for the Statute mentions nothing of Terms) if it be amendable, it may be amended in another Term.

But indeed, for Matter of Judgment, becauſe the Judgment muſt be in the ſame Term, in the Caſe of the Amendment, we may as well do it in this Term: And we may take ſome Time to conſider of it, and tell you what our Opinion is.

Mr. J. Gould. I ſhall not now ſay any thing in this Caſe, but reſerve my ſelf entirely till the Court give their Opinion.

But as to that Caſe you were citing, Perry's Caſe, the Caſe was Perry and Munday; for I was of Council in the Caſe. There was an Information againſt Perry and Munday for forging a Bond: They laid their Forgery at Sherburn. The Publication was at Dorcheſter; and the Venire was Dorcheſter. The Verdict was for the King. They brought an Arreſt of Judgment afterwards; and the Queſtion was debated on the Statute of 16 and 17 of K. Charles II. whether this were not within the Statute. Now there they agreed, that that Information, becauſe at Common Law, was without the Purview of the Statute.

L. C. J. Holt. That was an Information upon a Penal Law. They queſtion'd whether it was within the Purview of the Statute; and they thought it was not help'd by any Statute. That ſhews the Opinion of the Lawyers: They thought it not within any of the Statutes of Jeofails; and the Verdict was ſet aſide.

Mr. Bro-

Mr. Broderick. Yes, my Lord: And the Court awarded a new Venire Facias.

L. C. J. Holt. There is a great Regard to be had to Practice. There were Great Men at the Bar at that Time; and they did not think at that Time that it was within the Statute.

As to what you ſay of Copyholds, it has indeed been held, that the Statute did not extend to an Aſſignee of Copyhold Lands, or to a Covenant on the Alienation of the Copyhold by Leaſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. It was here argued that.

L. C. J. Holt. It was my Opinion, that all Statutes extend to Copyholds, if it be for the Benefit of the Copyholder, and not one Jot to the Prejudice of the Owner: And therefore the Reſolution of Jobbin's Caſe was that we went on. You muſt ſtay till the laſt Day of the Term.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I think we have ſhewn that it is amendable by the Statutes; and if not ſo, by the Common Law. And we have all Points with us.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, I doubt it will be inſiſted on, that in another Term it cannot be amended.

L. C. J. Holt. Move us the laſt Day of the Term. It is certainly the Miſpriſion of the Clerk.

November 28. i. e. The Laſt Day of Michaelmas Term.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, We come in the Caſe of the Queen and Mr. Tutchin, if your Lordſhip be ready to give your Opinion.

Mr. Att. Gen. Call Mr. Tutchin.

[Who appeared.]

L. C. J. Holt. I muſt deſire you to ſtay in this Matter till the Firſt Day of the next Term.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, We did expect your Lordſhip would have given your Opinion now.

L. C. J. Holt. For my Part, I ſhould rather deſire Time till the next Term: But if you are not willing to ſtay till then, you muſt take ſuch an Opinion as we can give.

Mr. Att. Gen. I ſubmit to what your Lordſhip ſhall determine.

L. C. J. Holt. It may be, I may be then of the ſame Opinion I am now; but then I may defend my Opinion better. I would only put it off to the firſt Day of the next Term.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I have laid the Matter before you; and I acquieſce in what you ſhall think fit.

Sir T. Powis. Upon the Obſervation of Blackmore's Caſe, where Lord Coke ſays, the Court cannot amend Miſpriſions of Clerks in Proceſs in another Term; if we have not Judgment this Term, we ſhall loſe that Advantage.

Mr. Att. Gen. There are Two Points in this Caſe: One is, that it is amendable by Common Law; the other, that it is not excepted by the Statute of Henry VI.

Now my Lord Coke ſays, Error in Proceſs is amendable in another Term. But we ſubmit to the Court: I preſs nothing.

Mr. J. Powel. Coke ſays ſo: But I believe no Man will ſay, that ever a miſtaſten Writ was amended in another Term. Therefore he muſt intend the ſubſequent Proceedings, or Proceſs: It may be the Proceedings of the Original Entry on their Award, that may be amended in another Term; and Coke muſt mean that. There have been Entries of Awards amended in another Term; but the Miſtake of a Writ was never amended in another Term, that I can find.

L. C. J. Holt. If we put it off to the next Term, and our Opinion ſhould be againſt the Amendment, he cannot be try'd in that Term.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I ſubmit it to you.

Mr. J. Powel. We cannot now give ſo full Reaſons; yet I have center'd my Opinion in the Caſe.

Mr. J. Gould. I was ſometime of Opinion, that it was amendable by the Statute; but really looking on the Caſes that have been cited, that is, the Caſes that are in Pleas of the Crown, it is not amendable by the Statute of Henry VI. I ſay, I formerly thought it might be amended by virtue of the Statute: But upon Peruſal of Blackmore's Caſe, &c. it ſeems to alter my Judgment. But notwithſtanding, I hold, that at Common Law it may be amended. For what means all the Caſes that are now extant; the Caſes of Informations, as the Caſe of Sir Humphry Bond, &c.?

The Caſe cited by Yelverton, in 2 Bulſtrode 35. is very ſtrong. There were Two indicted for Felony, and found guilty. The Judge ſaw that it was in the ſingular Number, and ſtay'd Judgment: And they moved afterwards in another Term; and there, by the Judgment of Nine or Ten Judges, it was amended; and the Men were both hang'd.

Why now, it muſt be by the Statute Law, or by the Common Law, that it was amended in that Caſe. By the Common Law, I ſay, it is amendable.

There is a Caſe in Raymond's Reports, 440. It is an Indictment on a Certificate of a Juſtice of Peace, that Ingleſield being a reputed Papiſt, had refuſed to take the Oath of Supremacy, &c. Upon Not guilty pleaded, the Jury found the Commiſſion in hæc verba, &c.

It was objected, That the Certificate was not found under Seal of the Juſtices, but only in hæc verba: And they did amend it.

This is the ſame Caſe. And I take it, that ſuch a Fault, as does not alter the Iſſue, nor the Tryal, or Crime, is a Thing that is amendable.

Now there is Sir John Curſon's Caſe, in 2 Cro. It is a ſtrong Caſe. There is an Information againſt him and his Wife for Recuſancy. The Wife only pleaded Not Guilty. The Queſtion was, Whether this were right? And whether they ſhould amend it? And it was reſolved, that it ſhould be amended.

The Caſe in Siderfin, that is (1 Siderfin, 243.) the Caſe of Percival and Godfrey, I do not doubt, for my part, but it is amendable; and take it as ſtrong as this is. They were indicted for a Riot: A Venire Facias iſſued Vicecomitibus Canterburiæ; and it was return'd by One Sheriff. They examin'd into the Truth of the Caſe, and they found there was but One Sheriff: And the Queſtion was, whether this was amendable? And it was reſolved it ſhould be amended; and alſo that it was amendable at Common Law.

I muſt confeſs, I do not ſee that there is any Reaſon in the World againſt it. There is but only one Caſe that ſeems to be againſt it; that is the Caſe of Theobald and Newton, Styles 307. There indeed, by Rolls Opinion, it was not amendable, ble, &c. But that is only a ſingle Opinion.

And as to the Caſe between the King, and Read and Dawſon, (it ſhould have been Two Caſes) there 'twas held, That the Statute of Jeofails does not extend to Informations of Intruſions; and yet it was ruled, that it ſhould be amended.

Indeed, my Lord Hales, in Keble, 191, 215. [He means Twiſden; Vid. Keble, 191, 198, 215.] did hold, that it was amendable within the Statute; and that the Amendment would ſtand in need of it: But it was ruled Contra; and that it needed not the Help of the Statute of Jeofails. And I muſt needs ſay, if the Caſe of Bradley and Banks, in 2 Croke, 283. and in Yelverton, 204. were not in the way, I think the Writ had been good enough; for it is a Continuance from Day to Day, tho' the Teſte is the 24th, and the Award the 23d.

Now in my Mind, an Award the 23d of a Writ the 24th, is a perfect Continuance. And the Caſe of Bradley, &c. as it is in 2 Croke, 283. does not contradict this; tho' indeed that Caſe of Bradley, as it is in Yelverton, is contrary; but that ſeems miſtaken. So that I do think, on the whole Matter, it is amendable at Common Law.

Note, Powis accorded with Gould, that it was Amendable; but Powel argued contra, that it was not.

L. C. J. Holt. I ſhould have been glad to have had Time till next Term, to conſider of this Matter: For tho' I am ſatisfied in my Opinion, yet perhaps I may not give others that Satisfaction concerning it, as I might have done if I had had a longer Time.

I am of Opinion, That this is not amendable, neither by the Common Law, nor by the Statutes.

Firſt, It muſt be admitted, that this is a Fault in the Writ, in a Point that is material: That is, The Teſte, which ſhould have been Die Lunæ, the 23d of October, and it is the 24th: For the 23d is the Day that the Defendant has in Court on the Return; and that being the Day he has in Court, the Teſte of the Writ to continue the Proceſs ſhould have been that very Day.

Now I do not underſtand what my Brother Powis ſays, That there is no Interval between one Day and another. I would fain know, if a Day be appointed for a Man to appear on; and then he has another Day given him, when he appears not: As, if a Man appears the 23d of October, and there is a Day given, the 24th; will not this be a Diſcontinuance? No queſtion but it is: Becauſe he being in Court the 23d, and having no Direction the 23d when to come again, he is out of Court. Then ſhall you give another Day behind his Back? That cannot be in Reaſon. His Day in Court is the 23d of October; and that Day he ſhould have another Day appointed. He has a Day in the Roll, but not in the Writ: That is iſſued behind his Back, the 24th; at which Time he is not in Court. Then if this be ſo, here is a Writ iſſued behind the Defendant's Back, and without any Award of the Court: For the Award is, Die Lunæ Sancti Michaelis, which is the 23d of October; then there is a Præceptum eſt that Day. Now when this Writ iſſues the 24th; is this Writ warranted by the Roll? No, it is not; but another Sort of Writ, different from that which the Court awarded: Therefore being another Writ than what was awarded; where is there any Authority for it? Or how can the Jury be diſtrein'd upon it?

The Writ that iſſued the 24th, is another Writ: For there is a material Varying between the Writ that iſſues, and the Award of the Roll; one is the 23d, the other is the 24th.

The Day of the Writ is material: And when it bears Teſte, it is in the Judgment of the Law a Writ of that very Day; as it was adjudg'd in the Caſe of Owen verſ. Baily, 17. Ch. 2. in a Trover and Converſion.

A Defendant, that is condemn'd in Debt and Damages, ſells his Goods bona fide, between the laſt Day of Trinity Term and the firſt of Auguſt. After he had ſold his Goods, the Plaintiff takes out a Fieri Facias, Teſte'd the firſt Day of Trinity Term; which was before the Sale, tho' taken out after; ſetting forth, That the 4th or 5th of July, he had ſeized theſe Goods in the Hand of the Vendee: Tho' the Writ was not taken out actually in Trinity Term, yet bearing Date then, and the firſt of Auguſt the Goods were ſold; yet the Writ being Teſte'd the firſt Day of Trinity Term, 'twas held not amendable; and that the Hands of the Vendee were bound by it.

Now this Writ here is, in the Judgment of the Law, iſſuing out of this Court the 24th of October. If we ſhould amend this, what Alteration ſhould we make? We muſt make it another Writ: For a Writ that iſſues out of this Court the 24th, cannot be a Writ that iſſues out the 23d; and if we amend it, we make it as different as poſſibly can be.

Now why ſhould we amend it? As we now take it, by the Statute of Henry VI. the Writ is good in it ſelf; but it is not, as the Court awarded it. The Meaning of the Statute was not to mend miſtaken Writs, but Miſtakes in Writs: The Statutes meant nothing but that. Not that you ſhould amend a Writ that was good in it ſelf, and fit it to your particular Purpoſe.

Now here is a Writ executed in the ſame Term: Yet to make this Tryal to be good, what muſt you do by this Amendment? You muſt make it to be another Writ: For you muſt make the Writ, even contrary to Truth, to be the 23d, which was the 24th: And therefore it cannot be made good; nor can the Tryal be made good. You would make it the 23d, where it is indeed the 24th; and ſo you would change the Nature and Subſtance of the Writ. Is not this a material Variance, and different from the Award of the Court?

Before the Statute of Jeofails, if it had been in a Civil Caſe, it is help'd by the Statute of the 8th of Henry VI. Becauſe it is a Diſcontinuance of Proceſs, it is help'd by that Statute; but that Statute extends not to this Caſe. I would fain know, whether there has been any Amendment, in any Caſe of this Nature, ſince the Statute of Henry the VIth? It's true, Teſtes of Writs have been often amended; but that was, where it was a void Teſte; as on a Sunday, or out of Term; or where it is impoſſible, as after the Return, &c. That is a void Teſte, if it bear Date on a Sunday, or in the Vacation.

In Civil Caſes it is amendable; becauſe it is the Fault of the Clerk by miſtaking a Day; as in making making it on a Sunday, or in a Vacation-Time: There may be Reaſon for it; and it may be amended by the Statute of Henry VI. becauſe plainly a Miſtake of the Clerk. And on this Reaſon is that Caſe in Yelverton, 64. and the Caſe of Bradley and Banks, 204. There was a Venire returnable one Day; and the Teſte of the Diſtringas was of the ſame Date, and the ſame Day with the Teſte of the Venire; and that was held amendable, becauſe it is impoſſible you ſhall diſtrain before the Return of the Venire; and the Diſtringas bore Teſte the ſame Day with the Venire: So that the Teſte was repugnant to the Writ it ſelf; and therefore the Writ is naught in it ſelf, becauſe it was to diſtrain a Jury that was not ſummon'd. But the Law has always been, That if upon the Return of one Writ, there is to be another Writ awarded; that other Writ muſt be Teſte'd on the very Day upon which it was awarded, and the Return of the former.

And that Caſe of Bradley and Banks, in 2 Cro. and Yelv. is very ſtrong to this Purpoſe. There the Perſon came in on the Exigent, and pray'd Oyer of the Writ and all Meſne Proceſs: And therein appeared a Gap, the firſt Proceſs being returnable Decimo ſexto Octobris, and the Appeal being returnable Quindena Sancti Michaelis, that is, the 16th of October, were well. But the alias Capias goes out Teſte'd the 23d of October, which being Seven Days after the Return of the former, that was wrong; for it ſhould have born Teſte the 16th of October, then it had been right; but being the 23d, there was a Gap; and therefore it was held a Diſcontinuance.

And this is the Practice of the Common-Pleas, tho' not ſo much obſerved here in this Court, in Writs of Enquiry of Damages: But enquire of them in the Common-Pleas, and they will tell you, the ſubſequent Proceſs ought always to bear Teſte the Day of the Return of the former Writ. If you go to a Capias, either in Outlawry, or to diſtrain a Man; the Second Diſtringas is always Teſte'd the Day of the Return of the Firſt; and the Third is always Teſte'd the Day of the Return of the Second: And if it bear Teſte the next Day, all Proceſs is diſcontinued.

Ay, but you ſay, it is a Miſtake of the Clerk. It is ſo: But we are to judge of the Thing it ſelf, whether it is by way of Negligence, or for want of Skill. For ought I know, it may be for want of Skill, that it is Teſte'd another Day: But every Clerk does not know this. Nay, ſome have pretended to know, that it need not bear Date the Day of the precedent Writ's Return. Why then might it not be an Error in Skill? If he thinks it a right Writ, and ſays it muſt be Teſte'd the 24th, this is want of Skill; and then it is not amendable. And then this being a wrong Writ, the Teſte is material; and its being Teſte'd the 24th, is a Miſtake ſo material, that if it had been a Civil Caſe, I ſhould have been againſt the Amendment; and therefore much more in this Caſe, I think, it ought to be quaſh'd, and a new Venire awarded.

Mr. Att. Gen. If the Court decide it, I cannot tell what to ſay.

Mr. J. Powis. What have you to ſay?

Mr. Att. Gen. The Court is divided, and there it hangs.

L. C. J. Holt. I would not be underſtood otherwiſe than thus: I do not ſay, this Caſe is within the Statute; but I look on it to be ſo material a Variance, that it is not amendable.

Mr. Att. Gen. The Court being divided in their Opinion, I know not any Rule to ſtop Judgment.

Mr. J. Powis. I know not how far it may go in Criminal Caſes. That which ſway'd with me, was, to ſee ſo many bold Amendments in many Caſes; that went with me very far; and which were ſaid to be done by Common Law.

What I ſaid as to coming the next Day, I did not rely on it; tho' it did ſeem to alleviate the Thing. But I was ſo tender in the Caſe, that I did think it might be better to have a new Tryal. I have held, in my Opinion, with my Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt and Mr. Juſtice Powel a great deal. I was tender before in the Point: And I do join with my Lord Chief-Juſtice Holt and Mr. Juſtice Powel, that there ought to be a new Tryal, and a new Diſtringas.

Mr. Att. Gen. With a Rule, I ſubmit; but without a Rule, I would have ſigned Judgment.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, We move to ſet aſide this Tryal, becauſe it is irregular.

Mr. Att. Gen. If you make a Rule, we need not diſpute it.

Mr. J. Powel. Judgment goes of courſe, unleſs you ſtop it.

Mr. Att. Gen. There is no Rule to ſtop it: And then I can ſign my Judgment.

Mr. Mountague. My Lord, Tho' the Court can make no Rule for an Amendment, becauſe the Judges are divided about that Point; yet I humbly conceive, your Lordſhip, and the reſt of the Judges do agree, that the Writ, as it now is, is naught; and therefore I hope, you will let us have a Rule to ſtay Judgment.

L. C. J. Holt. Mr. Attorney, They have been moving to have a new Tryal.

Mr. Att. Gen. 'Twould be a Breach of Duty in me, not to ſign my Judgment, if you don't make a Rule while it is under Conſideration.

L. C. J. Holt. Here was Leave given to move in Arreſt of Judgment; and there is no Rule for ſigning Judgment.

Mr. Att. Gen. There is no Rule to ſtop it.

Mr. Mountague. What is the Rule that was made upon my firſt Motion?

Clerk reads, Die Martis proximo, &c.

Mr. Mountague. We take it, that tho' the Court be divided about the Amendment; yet ſince there can be no Amendment, the Writ being naught, we ought to go to a new Tryal.

Mr. J. Powel. By all means, go to a new Tryal.

Mr. J. Powis. It is in a Caſe that was never ſo much look'd into before.

Mr. Att. Gen. If we muſt have a new Tryal in this Caſe, we are in a worſe Caſe than I thought we were; for we are to begin Proceſs again. But if a Rule be made, we muſt ſubmit.

Mr. Mountague. There was a Rule made at the Side Bar, upon my Motion there, That all Things ſhould ſtay.

Mr. Att. Gen. That was not a Place to move for a Rule.

L. C. J. Holt. That is to ſtay in ſtatu quo they were then. There is no Rule for Judgment to ſtay.

Mr. Att. Gen. If on Motion to arreſt Judgment, the Judges of the Court are divided, I have heard it ſaid, that Judgment may be enter'd.

Mr. J. Powis. I ſaid at the beginning, I was inclinable to have a new Tryal.

L. C. J. Holt. I know not what you mean. You ſaid, you were inclinable to have it amended: I would have it amended, if I had followed my Fancy.

Mr. J. Powel. If my Brother has changed his Opinion, he may: For we have been arguing, that we may change our Judgments.

L. C. J. Holt. You have any Time to-day to move it again. Put us in mind of it: I may change my Mind too, it may be.

Mr. J. Powis. I judge not how it may go in Criminal Matters: But all are of Opinion, that it ſhould not ſtand as it does.

L. C. J. Holt. The Court is divided that it ſhould be amended; but not that it is well as it is: And that is Mr. Attorney's Motion, to alter what is to be amended.

Mr. J. Powel. Mr. Attorney makes no Motion, for a Rule; but would have it ſtay as it does.

L. C. J. Holt. That it may remain in ſtatu quo.

Mr. Att. Gen. If you cannot agree in your Judgment, I ſubmit it to you, whether I may not enter Judgment for the Queen, tho' it be not amended.

Mr. Mountague. We hope Mr. Attorney ſhall not be permitted to ſign Judgment in this Caſe: For tho' 'tis true, that there can be no Amendment, becauſe the Court is divided; yet I do not apprehend that it is right as it is.

Mr. Att. Gen. If the Court be divided, no Rule can be made.

Mr J. Powis. Let there be a new Tryal.

Mr. Mountague. Mr. Attorney, The Court would have a new Tryal: And I think you had better do ſo.

Mr. Att. Gen. I want none of your Directions.

Mr. Mountague. I may take notice of what the Judges ſay.

L. C. J. Holt. And he will make uſe of what we ſay, as far as is convenient for him.

Mr. Att. Gen. But Mr. Mountague muſt not pretend to give Direction what I am to do.

Mr. Mountague. I don't give you Directions; but I hope I may take notice of what the Court ſays.

L. C. J. Holt. Mr. Attorney, We believe you don't want their Advice.

Mr. Att. Gen. But they are very ready to give it.

Mr. Mountague. I only took notice to Mr. Attorney, how far the Court was agreed: And only moved, that the Rule, which I did conceive was pronounced by the Court, might be taken.

Mr. Att. Gen. You moved to no Purpoſe.

Mr. Mountague. I take it, that Mr. Juſtice Powis is for a new Tryal.

Mr. J. Powis. Yes, I am ſo. It is a nice Caſe, and has never been conſider'd fully before.

Mr. Mountague. I hope now we have done.

Mr. Att. Gen. If I hear what Rule the Court makes, I ſhall ſubmit.

Mr. Mountague. I hear, the Pleaſure of the Court is, that the Rule ſhall be for a new Tryal.

L. C. J. Holt. You muſt have a new Venire Facias.

Mr. Att. Gen. That cannot be, with Submiſſion: A new Venire we cannot have.

L. C. J. Holt. You muſt have a new Tryal. The Jury have given their Verdict; whereas they appeared to a wrong Writ, and ſo the former Tryal is not warranted.

Mr. Att. Gen. I think they are warranted to appear by the Return of the Venire; and that we muſt go back but where the Fault is, which is only but where the Diſtringas is made out: So that a Diſtringas de novo is to be for the ſame Jury. But I will meddle no more in it, without particular Order.

L. C. J. Holt. Do what you will; we will give you no Direction. We quaſh this Tryal.

Sir T. Powis. My Lord, If you quaſh this Tryal, then we are to begin again.

Mr. Att. Gen. If the Court is of Opinion that there ought only to be a new Diſtringas iſſued, and we can go back no further; I am afraid we ſhall never come right.

Mr. J. Powel. The Difficulty is in right awarding the Diſtringas, becauſe it does not bear Date with the Return of the Venire. But then conſider where you are: If you bring him on a new Tryal, he can challenge any one that has given a Verdict before.

L. C. J. Holt. It is a Diſtringas to ſummon that Jury, but it is without Teſte: And that Jury having given their Verdict, they are not to ſerve again.

Mr. Att. Gen. I am ſure, according to Authorities, they muſt begin where the Fault was.

L. C. J. Holt. I ſhould have thought the Venire de novo had been proper: For this Diſtringas bearing Teſte out of Time, and that being erroneouſly executed, there ought to be a new Diſtringas, which is to be founded on a new Venire.

Mr. Att. Gen. If you do quaſh this Tryal, I ſuppoſe your Lordſhip will make ſome Award for a new one.

L. C. J. Holt. We leave it to you.

Mr. Att. Gen. I cannot enter it.

Mr. J. Powel. We muſt grant a Venire de novo; which we cannot do without quaſhing this Verdict; and that is the way to try him again.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I am far from thinking I can alter your Rule; but I can't tell how to follow it.

L. C. J. Holt. What we do is ex abundanti, more than we are bound to. We can leave you to do what you can: The taking out the Venire and Diſtringas, are Things of courſe.

Mr. Att. Gen. I think there is a Neceſſity to explain my Meaning. I don't pretend to direct what you muſt do; but you muſt direct what is to be done: I cannot award a Venire.

L. C. J. Holt. It is taken out of courſe. You may award that as well as the firſt, if it may be done.

Mr. Att. Gen. How can that be done, ſeeing you quaſh the Diſtringas?

Mr. J. Powel. That is the Award of the Court, and does not hinder you from taking out a new Venire.

Mr. Att. Gen. I cannot do it without the Court. When you quaſh this, you muſt award another.

L. C. J. Holt. We do award it.

Mr. Att. Gen. I remember in the Caſe of Fitzwalter, when they quaſh'd the Tryal, they order'd a new one ſhould be had, &c.

L. C. J. Holt. If we make an Award, and you don't like it, you will not comply with it: Therefore we leave you to take it out as you will.

Mr. Att.

Mr. Att. Gen. You muſt order a new Venire; I cannot award a new one elſe.

L. C. J. Holt. You muſt have a Venire Facias.

Mr. Att. Gen. That muſt be the Judgment of the Court then: For if I award it, it muſt be by Order of Court.

Mr. J. Gould. You had better declare de novo.

Mr. Att. Gen. I am fearful of what I do. I hope the Court will diſcharge me.

L. C. J. Holt. When a Tryal is quaſh'd, and ſet aſide for any Irregularity of the Tryal, that Jury is diſcharg'd: All the Pannel is diſcharg'd, and there muſt be a new Pannel.

Mr. Att. Gen. How will that appear?

L. C. J. Holt. If it appear that the Diſtringas did not iſſue as it ought, every Thing ſhall be enter'd at large on the Rule: That the Diſtringas did not iſſue till the 24th of October; therefore they will conſider, that the Verdict ſhall be ſet aſide.

Mr. Att. Gen. And that we ſhall have Leave to go to a new Tryal.

L. C. J. Holt. Preſumptum eſt.

Mr. Att. Gen. If you pleaſe to make the Rule then, I ſubmit.

L. C. J. Holt. We will adviſe how to make the Rule.

Note, This and the following Argument ſhould have been inſerted Pag. 678. before that of Mr. Serj. Darnel; and that of Mr. Parker ante P. 689. ſhould have been plac'd before Mr. Whitaker's, ibid.

Mr. Attorney General. MY Lord, Becauſe this Matter has been preſs'd with ſo much Warmth, I muſt beg Leave to obſerve ſome few Things, in Anſwer to what has been ſaid.

This is a Thing that not only concerns this ſingle Proſecution, but it concerns all the Proſecutions for the Crown; and in all Caſes, not only Criminal, but Civil. And, my Lord, if the Statutes of Amendments extend not to any other Caſes but what they urge, the Caſe of the Crown is worſe than that of the Subject. It is worthy of Conſideration, what Things are amendable by Common Law; for if the Crown be left to the Mercy of the Clerks, it cannot but be of very ill Conſequence. Therefore I hope we may take the Benefit of the Common Law.

My Lord, I would beg Leave to recite ſome few Preſidents, to ſhew how the Common Law formerly ſtood. And the firſt I ſhall take notice of, is the Preamble of the Statute, 32 Hen. VIII. Cap. 30. There it is ſaid, The ſtaying of Judgment after the Verdict, is a great Scandal to the Common Law, and the Miniſters of the ſame. And, my Lord, there is another Thing to be conſider'd; That admitting the Common Law ſtood as it did before, there is a great Difference between the Proceedings of the Crown at the Common Law, and Civil Caſes. The Crown had many Privileges at Common Law, which the Subject had not. And it will found very harſh, that the Crown ſhall be left without thoſe Helps by the Statutes of Amendments, when ſo many of the inferior Subjects did not want the Help of them. For it is impoſſible this ſhould not be thought of in Parliament, that ſome Care ſhould be taken for the Crown in thoſe Matters where it needed.

Now there is, in all our Books, Notice taken of a greater Privilege that belongs to the Crown, than to the Subject. There ſhall not be a Demurrer to the Evidence in the Caſe of the Queen, without her Council's Aſſent; yet in the Caſe of a Subject, there may be a Demurrer to the Evidence. So the Crown may either inſiſt on a Demurrer, or wave it, and take Iſſue at Pleaſure.

There is this likewiſe: Before Judgment, in a Criminal Caſe, the Queen may amend, but the Subject not.

Alſo by Hardreſs Reports, fol. 504. before Judgment, no Diſcontinuance may be in the Queen's Caſe, altho' the Iſſue was tried. The Attorney takes Iſſue to one Part; and it is pleaded, that this is a Diſcontinuance to the other. Now there can be no Diſcontinuance before the Verdict. And that Book goes further, and ſays, That the want of Continuance in that Caſe, cannot be objected before Judgment, &c. And in 2 Buls, 35. an Indictment is ſaid to be amended even after Verdict.

Now there is great Reaſon, that ſuch Miſpriſions in Writs at the Queen's Suit ſhall be amended by the Common Law. And in Fitzherbert's Abridgment, Tit. Amendment, Placita 22. if the King bring any Writ which wants Form, &c. it ſhall be amended. But it is otherwiſe in the Caſe of the Subject. So ſays 8 Coke expreſly, fol. 156. An Original Writ is not amendable in the Caſe of a common Perſon, but it is amendable in the Caſe of the King.

Now it has been the conſtant Practice, that theſe Privileges have been preſerved to the Crown. The Queen may at any time amend her Information after Tryal, but a Subject cannot.

Theſe Privileges have been preſerved to the Crown, even at the Day of Tryal: And many Miſtakes of Clerks, in Informations and Indictments, have been ſo amended. This is a Right of the Crown by the Common Law.

In the next place, my Lord, I would obſerve, what is the Matter we are going to amend. It is not what alters the Party's Defence. It alters not the Iſſue, or Tryal; nor is it any Thing that tends to his Prejudice: And by the Common Law, that may be amended, which is not a Prejudice to the Party.

The Defendant has a Day given by the Roll; and the ſame Day the Diſtringas is awarded, he appeared: Every one muſt own, there was no Prejudice to him, whether the Diſtringas be of one Teſte or another. 'Tis true, there is the Year-Book, 20 Hen. VI. fol. 18. which is alſo in Brook's Abridgment, Tit. Amendment, Placit. 4. There was a Miſnomer in the Capias and ſubſequent Proceſs, and in the Exigent: And the Court held, that the Capias, &c. might be amended, but not the Exigent; becauſe of the Prejudice, if one might be outlaw'd on ſuch Proceſs, to which he never appear'd; and therefore it might not be amended for that Reaſon. But this Caſe ſtands clear of all Objections of that kind. He had a Day to appear, and make his Defence: He came in, and did appear accordingly; and no Prejudice happen'd to him.

Now, my Lord, as to the Exception they make, I muſt beg Leave to ſay, it can be of no weight. I agree, the Award of the Diſtringas muſt be according to the Writ of Venire: But, with Submiſſion, I obſerve not the Neceſſity that the Diſtringas ſhould be Teſte'd the ſame Day. No Authority of Law requires it, and by Reaſon it ſhould be otherwiſe. For ſuppoſe the Award is made by the Court the firſt of January, the Clerk has all that Day at leaſt to make it. For after the Court has made the Award, the Award is to be drawn up and delivered to the Clerk to make the Writ, and it cannot be ſuppoſed to be made at the ſame Time as the Award is. The Court awards one Day, and the Diſtringas is made the next Day, which is as proper and convenient a Time as can be; I ſee nothing in the Reaſon of the Thing againſt it.

My Lord, the Authorities they cite, that where Proceſs iſſues another Day, and not the ſame 'tis awarded, do not prove it a Diſcontinuance; and many Caſes are otherwiſe; as an Award to give notice of Tryal, &c. Alſo there is the Book of Fitzherbert's Natura Brevium 20 G. & Brook Title Diſcontinuance 59. which ſays, if the Plaintiff does not aſſign Error the ſame Term, then it is a Diſconttinuance. Now tho' a Writ of Error is returnable at a Day certain, yet he has all that Term to aſſign Error; but if he omits it a whole Term, it is a Diſcontinuance.

My Lord, I do not ſee but this is a regular Proſecution on a Writ not liable to Exception. There is another Book, 21 Ed. IV. that ſays, There ſhall be the ſame Day given to the Jury by the Diſtringas; but I ſee not the Neceſſity that the Teſte ſhould be that Day. Brook Diſcontinuance 53. At the Return of the Venire Facias the Defendant was eſſoyn'd, and the Eſſoyn adjourn'd: Now the Habeas Corpus ſhall have the ſame Day as the Eſſoyn had by Adjournment, and ſo not the ſame Day with the Return of the Venire; for, ſays the Book, you ſhall continue the Venire to the ſame Day of Adjournment; but that does not ſhew that the Proceſs ſhall be iſſued that Day, but rather the contrary. Now in this Caſe there is all done that is neceſſary, the Proceſs is continued, the Jury is adjourn'd to that Day that it is by the Roll, the Parties are continued to that Day. I know no Caſe that ſhews a Neceſſity of the Writ bearing Date the ſame Day, but one, and that, I think, is againſt them: 'Tis the Caſe of Bradley and Banks, in Yelverton 204. and that was in an Appeal, and that it was ſo, there was a Diſcontinuance in an Appeal, if there be any Time between the Return and the Capias, tho' the Defendant hath appear'd, yet all the Proceſs are diſcontinued; for in that Caſe the Teſte ought to be the ſame Day as the Proceſs was. Now if that were a general Rule, it would be againſt us; but that was founded on a ſpecial Reaſon and does them no Service. For all Appeals are to be without Intermiſſion, and if they are intermitted any Time the Appeal is loſt; for the Common Law is not alter'd by the Statute of Glouceſter, therefore there can be no Imparlance after Appeal; for if an Imparlance be thereon, it is a Diſcontinuance, and therefore that Caſe will be of no Authority to them.

But there is a Caſe in Crook. Eliz. (N. B. The Caſe intended ſeems that of Rogers vers. Bird. Cro. Eliz. 572. ſed vide ib. 433. contra.) where this Proceſs is taken notice of as good, and that is, that the Proceſs is the very next Day. There a Venire Facias was awarded Craſt. Trin. the Diſtringas was iſſued the Day after, and by that it ought to be ſo; and the Return was amended, and the Proceſs was the next Day after the Return. Now that being ſo particularly ſtated, ſeems to be an Authority that it may be ſo.

L. C. J. Holt. How does it appear to be a Day after?

Mr. Att. Gen. The Venire Facias was Craſt. Trin. the Diſtringas was Die Veneris, &c. which was the Day after. (Quære Cro. El. 433.)

Mr. Broderick. In a Criminal Caſe it is not allow'd.

Mr. Att. Gen. I do not tell you whether it was a Criminal or a Civil Caſe, but the Exception was taken notice of, and it was amended; but this I only premiſe. Now my Lord, with great Submiſſion, I don't know that there is any Neceſſity (it being a Proceſs at the Suit of the Crown) to have it Teſted on any Day certain; for it ſeems to be well on any Day. If it be in the ſame Term, and notice having been given to the Jury, and they and the Party appearing thereon, I cannot ſee why it may not be well. In Criminal Caſes the Courſe of the Court is to amend Errors (of Form) in Indictments and Informations the very Day of the Tryal, and that has always had its Weight in Criminal Proſecutions; but, with Submiſſion, if it be not right, it is to be made right; if it be a Miſtake of the Clerk it may be amended. If you award a Writ it is the Clerk's Duty to make it out; and if he miſtakes in Form or varies from his Inſtructions, &c. all theſe Matters are amendable by the Common Law, and therefore need not the Aid of any Statute. But I cannot give up that neither; for the Crown has certainly the Benefit of the Statutes of Amendments, and I think Coke is of that Opinion too, on the Statute of 14 E. III. That Statute is general, and to ſay it comes only to Cauſes between Party and Party and not to Cauſes of the Crown, I cannot underſtand, for there is nothing in it that leads that way. And yet becauſe it ſpeaks of Cauſes between Party and Party, this Rule has been laid down that it extends not to the Crown; this Rule has indeed prevailed: But where a Statute is in general, and the End of it is to ſuppreſs Fraud, according to all the Rules laid down for expounding Statutes, the Crown ought to have the Benefit of it. It is to take off the Scandal of the Law, and the Miniſters thereof, as the Statute 32 H. 8. ſays. Now the Statute of 14 E. 3. is general, that by the Miſpriſion of a Clerk no Proceſs ſhall be annulled or diſcontinued by miſtaking a Letter or Syllable, but as ſoon as it is perceived it ſhall be amended. Now I think there is no Reaſon to be given why it ſhould not extend to Proceſſes of the Crown as well as of the Subject, unleſs they thought the Subject only wanted it. I do not underſtand why a general Law may not extend to the King, as well as the Subject. Now as this Statute is general, I mean the Statute of E. III. ſo there is the Statute 16, 17. Car. II. Cap. 8. which is likewiſe general, and yet it has been always taken to concern the Crown, as well as the Subject. And why not one Statute as well as the other I cannot conceive. Now my Lord, we are not without good Opinion that the Benefit of the Statute 16 and 17 C. II. does belong to the Crown. 'Twas the Opinion of the L. C. J. Hale in the Caſe of the Lord Fitzwater there the Venire was directed to one Place, when it ſhould have been to two; and the Queſtion was, whether this could be help'd by the Statute of 14 Car. 2. He adher'd to that Opinion, and the Jury thereupon gave their Verdict. It was indeed ſet aſide; but Judge Hales always abode by that Opinion. And ſo is firſt Syderfin 148. The King againſt Wright. There it is ſaid the Statute of Jeofail does extend to it; and even by the Rule in Blackmore's Caſe the Statute does extend to it; For there ſays my Lord Coke, that Statute does not extend to Appeals, or Indictments, Pleas of the Crown or any Proceedings thereon, for they are excepted. That is his Opinion, where they are excepted, it does not extend to them. Now all Pleas of the Crown are not excepted, but only Appeals, Indictments, &c. And therefore Informations on particular Statutes are not excepted. Now on the reading of the Act, no Pleas of the Crown are excepted, but only Appeals and Indictments; therefore my Lord Coke's Opinion muſt be, that that Act extends to all Things that are not excepted therein, and conſequently to this Caſe. In Dyer fol. 153. there is indeed another Queſtion, whether it be a Diſcontinuance in the King's Caſe on the Statute of 32 H. VIII. (Vide Dyer 353.)

Now if he make a Quæry on that Statute, I cannot imagine why he ſhould not have doubted in other like Caſes. But when he came after to Fol. 346, 347. In an Information on the Statute of Uſury, the Book ſays the miſconveying of Proceſs and the misjoining of Iſſues, are amendable by the Statute of Jeofails, and accordingly Judgment was given againſt the Defendant, notwithſtanding divers Errors in the Proceedings; ſo that the Judges were of Opinion in that Caſe that the Statute did extend to Caſes of the Crown.

L. C. J. Holt. The Judges there did not directly conſider the Statute of Jeofails, 'twas but an Opinion obiter.

Mr. Att. Gen. Theſe are the Words of the Book, Tandem propter Statutum de Jeofailes que parle de miſconveying de Proceſs, &c. Judgment was given againſt the Defendant. But I ſhall have Occaſion afterwards to take notice, that a great deal of the Practice of the Courts goes on the amending of the Returns. That Statute is for amending of Returns, and I think we are within the Statute, or if not, That the Common Law will help us: But be that as it will, we are now on the firſt Point, and I think it is amendable by the Common Law; and I think I can give you an Account of much greater Amendments made by the Court at Common Law, than this which we now ask. Now for Blackmore's Caſe, if we had left it there, we might have done it by that Caſe; for it appears by the 8th Rep. 156 b without doubt there were Amendments by Common Law; and my Lord Coke gives Inſtances of it. Now I yield it was there in a Civil Caſe; but I think no Man can pretend that at the Common Law there were any Rules to diſtinguiſh between Caſes of the Crown, and Caſes of the Subject, unleſs the Crown had a much greater Power to amend than the Subject had, and that ſo it was, appears by many of our antient Books. And there are Authorities in the Statute Law likewiſe that the Crown could amend further than the Subject. For Coke in Blackmore's Caſe ſays, That Variance of the Writ from the Original was amendable by the Common Law, and any Part of the Record in the ſame Term; for that during the Term it is in the Breaſt of the Judges but Miſpriſions of Clerks in another Term in Proceſſes were not amendable by the Court. But I ſhall plainly ſhew, that Miſpriſions of Clerks were amendable at Common Law in Caſes of the Crown; and this is prov'd by all the old Authorities. The old Books ſay they ſhall be amendable in the ſame Term, and we are now within the ſame Term, and ſo hope we ſhall be deliver'd from that Queſtion. Now that Rule of my Lord Coke, and the Reaſon of it, extends to Criminal Caſes as well as Civil, and both Caſes are within the Power of the Court to amend. For if a Fine be ſet within the Term, the Court may in the ſame Term amend it or diſcharge it. This is allow'd to be in the Power of the Court by the Common Law in the Caſe of the Crown. In Trinity Term, vide 4 Mod. 395. between the King and Walcot, there was an Error in the Writ of Attainder, and and an Exception was taken, and it was amended in the ſame Term. For the Court finding the Form of Entry to be erroneous, they did the ſame Term order the Record to be razed, and made a Rule for the next Term; and this was done by the Power of the Court at Common Law. For while the Proceſs and the Record is in the Breaſt of the Court, they have a Power by the Common Law to make a new Judgment.

My Lord, the next Matter I would obſerve is, That all Miſpriſions of Clerks or their Aſſiſtants in the Caption of the Judgment, may be amended in the ſame Term. For that there is Saunders Reports fol. 209. Faulkners Caſe. If an Indictment be miſtaken in the Stile of the Court, &c. the Court may amend any Thing to make the Caption right, firſt Syderfin 259. King againſt Glover, and this was to amend a material Point. There is the like Caſe in 2d Croke. Theſe are Criminal Caſes. It was an Inquiſiton taken apud ---- it was not ſaid in Portibus Londini. The Clerk of the Peace was order'd to amend it. And in Jones's Rep. Stafford's Caſe, firſt Abridgment 196. there was an Error in the Reverſion of an Attainder. The Certificate was, that he was arraign'd the 18th of March, and convicted the 20th of--- In that Caſe Judge Barclay was of Opinion it might be amended by Common Law, and the Lord Coke agreed; but Judge Jones was of another Opinion, and he gave it for a Reaſon, eſpecially where the King had ſignified his Pleaſure of deſiring it; and afterwards it was not amended; but two Judges were of Opinion it might be amended. In Palmers Rep. 480. in Plums Caſe, there was an Indictment in Eſſex, and it is Exactus eſt ad Comitatum, without meum, and a Certiorari was awarded to the Coroners, to certify whether it was exact ad Com. meum, and amended accordingly. So 7 E. IV. 15. The Niſi Prius was Menſ. Mich. and the Roll was Quinden Mich. and that was amended. Now this ſeems likewiſe to be warranted by the Statute of E. III. and whether that Statute extend to it or not, yet the other Statutes extend to all.

For the old Books, I would only trouble you with ſome Caſes that were before the Statutes of Amendments; and there 'tis plain, both as to Civil and Criminal Actions, it was the ſame Thing. For in both Caſes it was frequently amended; ſo in 5 E. III. 25. an Entry of a Continuance was miſtaken, and it was amended by the Court: So in the Caſe of Chamber againſt Barrow ---- 430. there was a Scire Facias obtain'd, and it was returnable Sexto and the Entry is Septimo. This upon a Demurrer was objected, and that all was thereby diſcontinu'd; it was anſwer'd, the Court might do it at all Times by the Common Law, and this may be amended by the Common Law.

My Lord, this is an expreſs Authority for us, that the Proceſs is amendable at any Time before the End of the Term, and the Judgment is in the ſame Term. In the Book 9 Ed. 3. Placita 3. The Default in Proceſs may be amended at any Time before Judgment; wherever the Roll is contrary to the Writ, it ſhall be amended by it. After Iſſue joined, the Diſtringas was awarded, where no Tales was awarded; the Clerk found the Award of the Venire Facias; and there it is ſaid it is amendable, being in the Breaſt of the Court.

So Bro. Title Amendm. Placita br. The original was in Suſſex, and the Proſecution in Eſſex; yet 'twas held amendable, and no Diſcontinuance. Theſe are all by Common Law. So 40 Ed. III. Placita 13. and Brooks Amend. Placita 17. There was a Writ iſſued againſt Three: Two appear'd; and one made Default; againſt whom Proceſs iſſued, and the next Day he appear'd; and this was amended becauſe it was amendable by Common Law. Likewiſe Fitzherberts Amendment 6. There was a Variance by the Default of the Defendant, and it was amended, and it was after a Default. So 39 E. 3. In the Record it was---and in the Niſi Prius it was---- and it was amended. Now there is a modern Caſe, Croke Eliz. 222, 256, &c. in the Venire one of the Jurors was called Samuel Sutton, and in the Diſtringas Saul; but it appearing to be the Miſpriſion of the Clerk, and that the Writ was right, they held it was amendable by Common Law. And Brook's Amend. Placita 27. the Count or Declaration was ad damnum an Hundred Pounds, the Niſi Prius was to the Damage only of an Hundred Shillings, and the Court ordered the Niſi Prius to be amended, as being only the Miſpriſion of the Clerk. Now that goes a great Way, for the Teſte there had no Writ to try it; but yet that is adjudged to be amendable. And ſo in that Book Placita 24. and in divers other Places. So that it hath been always obſerved in common Practice as amendable, as being Vitium Clerici, Brooks Placita 26 and 29. Fitzherbert 16, 17 and 29. Theſe are all Caſes at Common Law, and ſo far will juſtify the Amendment in our Caſe. And in Fitz. Amend. 43. There is a Caſe to ſhew that where there is a Prejudice of the Party an Error may be amended, a Diſtringas is return'd, where there was a Default in the Teſte and the Jurors Names. The Teſte, &c. was amended, for they took it before the Roll was made up. There is another Caſe the 40th of E. III. the Proceſs was diſcontinu'd after the Appearance of the Defendant, and it was amended. There is likewiſe 44 E. III. (For I meddle not with thoſe ſince the Statutes of Amendments.) There was a Writ awarded againſt M. and G. the Proceſs was againſt M. only; and afterwards it was amended; and there it is ſaid both the Roll and the Writ may afterwards be amended, and they were amended accordingly.

My Lord, I cite theſe Caſes to ſhew that Amendments were made by the Common Law, and the Statutes cannot make any Alteration, tho' they ſhould not extend to the Crown. I believe there are not in the old Books many Inſtances of Proceedings by Information; but that ſeems a great Argument to me, that this Nicety that hath crept into theſe Proceedings are not by Common Law; in our old Books they are very little taken notice of; but it ſeems theſe Exceptions were not taken then, if they had we ſhould have found them; but the Books are quite otherwiſe. Now if the Amendments were allowed at Common Law, I believe none can diſtinguiſh and ſay, That it ſhall not be amended in our Caſe, for I think they cannot be diſtinguiſhed.

There are ſome other Modern Caſes wherein greater Things have been done. Firſt the Caſe of Sir John Aſhly, that has been cited (ante 677.) that it is an Amendment of a Judgment that was entred by Diſclaimer. In the Niſi Prius it was right, but all was left out in the Judgment. And it was objected that it was not amendable, becauſe it was not in the ſame Term, and that none of the Statutes of Amendments extended to ſuch Caſes; yet upon Examination it was amended, becauſe it was only a Miſpriſion of the Clerk by miſtaking his Book, there it was thought to be in the Power of the Court by Common Law to do right. Then in the Reverſal of the Attainder of the Lord Stafford, there were Proceedings in Court fourteen or fifteen Years; but by Neglect of the Clerk there were no Footſteps of any Thing appear'd, and yet there was a Rule for a Record to be made, whereby there was a Judgment of Reverſal enter'd. Now this Court did think they had a Power to ſet the Records right, and they gave them leave to make a Record, in order to make a Reverſal of that Attainder; and if it may be done againſt the Crown, no doubt it may be done for the Crown, for that it is but ſetting Things right. There have been other Caſes cited, as Harris's Caſe in Cro. Jac. 502. poſt 704. and that was a very extraordinary Amendment. It was an Indictment for a Nuſance. Not Guilty was pleaded indeed, but the Clerk who entred it join'd not Iſſue, and the Verdict was againſt the Defendant, and no Iſſue join'd; that was omitted; but the Return was allow'd. Now if we had done ſo, we ſhould have had a great Noiſe about it. But here the Court allow'd an Amendment to be made; and it was amended, as being done by the Clerk's Negligence, and this in the Time of another Clerk: And theſe Words were inſerted for it.

And it was ſaid, if ſuch Faults ſhould not be amended, many Courts would be deprived of their Juriſdiction. And I am ſure, if the Courts will not amend theſe Matters, it will overturn many Tryals.

There is another Caſe: 'Tis in Crooke James, 529. Parker verſ. Sir John Curſon & Ux. And that was a Tryal at Bar. The Iſſue was enter'd, Et prædict. Johannes Curſon & Magdalena veniunt, & prædicta Magdalena dicit, quod non eſt inde culpabilis; & de hoc ponit ſe ſuper Patriam, & Attornatus Domini Regis ſimiliter. After the Tryal at Bar, it was amended by the Docket; and there it was only, Quod J. Curſon, Mil. & Magdalena Ux. ejus, placitant non Cul. which was only a ſhort Memorandum: Which, I think, goes a great way further than that we labour for.

There is that Caſe too, 1 Siderfin 243. between the King and Godfrey. There the Award was Vicecomitibus, when it ſhould have been Vicecomiti; for there was but one Sheriff: But upon Examination, they found it was the Miſpriſion of the Clerk; and they ſet it right.

L. C. J. Holt. They indeed ſet it right; but how? Not by Amendment: But it was inſerted as a Memorandum on the Roll, that there was but one Sheriff.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, With Submiſſion, that's as well: For we do not do ſo much; for that was done after the Tryal.

L. C. J. Holt. There was no altering the Writ.

Mr. Att. Gen. If we ſhould ask the Court to alter what we did before the Tryal, it would be ſaid we ſhould have mov'd it before, and not after. Now to enter that after the Tryal, was much more than we ask.

There is another Caſe which had the Opinion of the Court, the Caſe of the Warden of the Fleet; where you were of Opinion, to amend, &c.

L. C. J. Holt. It is not amended yet.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I cite it as an Authority, that you would have amended it, if you had any Thing to amend it by.

L. C. J. Holt. I did not tell you what I would have done.

Mr. Att. Gen. My Lord, I was not in Court, but I heard it was ſo. If it was not, I was miſinformed. There was a Commiſſion taken out againſt him, as being guilty of ſeveral voluntary Eſcapes; and a Day was given to appear at the King's Bench the 8th of January. The Appearance was the 20th of January; but the Record was not enter'd it ſelf till the 3d of February following; ſo that there was a perfect Diſcontinuance.

This was not ſeen at firſt; but on Conſideration of the Court, they found it out; and the Council moved the Court to ſet it right. The Court made a Doubt of their Power; but they enquir'd when it came in, whether in Time or not; and what Minutes were for it. It ſeems, the proper Minutes were not to be found. Now that being ſo, it would be ſtrange for the Court to make any Amendments, without any Copy to amend by. If the Clerk's Man had come in, and produc'd the Minutes, I take it, the Senſe of the Court was, that they would amend it; tho' that was agreed to be a Diſcontinuance.

Now I cite that Caſe, not that you did amend it; but would have done it, if you had any Thing to amend it by: And there was a Diſcontinuance of the Party. Now if they could have amended that, this may be done here for a much better Reaſon. There was a Diſcontinuance, both before and after the Tryal. I think we have much ſtronger Reaſon for Amendment, than was in that Caſe: Tho' I muſt ſay, as to that Caſe, the Bar were of Opinion, that the Clerk might have enter'd it as on that Day, and ought to have done it; and therefore they thought it was amendable. And if that were true, no queſtion it was amendable. But however the Opinion of that Caſe was, it is an Argument to me, that the Court would have amended it, had they any Thing to amend it by: For it was the Opinion of this Court it is amendable. But I think that Caſe is no Authority for them: And whether that be done by the Help of the Statute or no, is not material: And the Court would have amended it, if it had been the firſt Day of the Term.

This I take to be the Opinion of the Court; and that they did not amend it, becauſe they had no Authority to amend it by.

There is one Matter more, which is, That this Slip is the Fault of the Clerk: For that the Miſteſting of the Writ is the plain Act of the Clerk; and in all the Caſes it has been held, Acts of the Clerk to be amendable by the Common Law: And for that there are a Thouſand Caſes. This is in Point of Law.

I would beg Leave to cite a few Authorities in Crooke's Eliz. 'Twas agreed, a Venire Teſte'd out of Term, is a Miſpriſion of the Clerk.

L. C. J. Holt. There are Abundance of the like Caſes.

Mr. Att. Gen. I believe a Thouſand, therefore I will not cite them.

We ſubmit it to your Lordſhip, whether it be right, and wants no Amendment: Or if it be not right, whether it be not amendable by Statute or Common Law. And I hope we ſhall have the Benefit of the Verdict.

Note, The following Argument ſeems to be made by Sir T. Powis, and is here miſplaced.

MY Lord, If the Diſtringas needs an Amendment, we pray, on the Behalf of the Queen, that it may be amended. And therein we think we are very proper.

1. The Award upon the Roll is right; which is the Warrant to the Clerk for the making out the Diſtringas. And if the Award be right, which is the Warrant for the Writ, but the Writ is wrong, and that only in the Date; it is merely the Miſtake and Miſpriſion of the Clerk, and ought to be amended.

1. It is amendable by the Common Law.
2. It is amendable by Statute.

That there were Amendments at Common Law before any of the Statutes of Jeofails, cannot be denied.

My Lord Coke ſays ſo expreſly: And ſo was the Opinion of the Court in Blackmore's Caſe, in the Eighth Report, fol. 156, 157. which is the great Caſe of Amendments.

That Book ſays, fol. 156. b. Without queſtion, at Common Law, the Default of Entry of a Continuance, or of an Eſſoign, (which was the Miſpriſion of the Court it ſelf in the Form of the Entry) was amendable by the Court. And the Objection here is, that there is a Diſcontinuance: And the Inſtance there given from the Caſe in 5 Ed. III. fol. 25. is very conſiderable; where, after a Venire Facias iſſued, and an Award, Quod jurat ponitur in reſpectum, in the Entry whereof there was a great Miſtake of the Parties, which made a Diſcontinuance; and yet amended at the Common Law.

The Inſtances of Amendments at Common Law out of the Old Books are many. 22 Edw. III. fol. 7 b. and 10. a. where a Diſcontinuance was amended. 29 Edw. III. fol. 32. b. a Habeas Corp. Jurator. amended. 7 Hen. VI. 29. Broke, Tit. Amendment, 32. 4 Hen. VI. 16. b. By which Books it appears, that the Judges had Power to amend in many Caſes at the Common Law, in the Caſe of a common Perſon. And if in the Caſe of a Subject, much more in the Caſe of the King: For by the Common Law, the King had many Privileges and Advantages in Legal Proceedings, which a Subject had not: And the King, in his Suits, hath many great Prerogatives. The King may plead one Title, and afterwards wave it, and plead another. He may wave a Demurrer, and afterwards take Iſſue. And many other Privileges belong to the Crown, of this Nature, which a Subject hath not.

And particularly, in the Matter of Amendments by the Common Law, the King had a Privilege, which a Subject had not.

An Original Writ was not amendable for a Subject at the Common Law, but in the Caſe of the King it was.

Therefore in Blackmore's Caſe, fol. 156. b. it is ſaid, That if a Quare impedit be ſued forth on the Behalf of the King, and the Writ is præſentere inſtead of præſentare; it may be amended in the Caſe of the King, after Exception taken; but not ſo in the Caſe of a Subject.

And ſo in Fitz. Amendment, 12, 19, 22. ſeveral Amendments at Common Law, eſpecially in the Caſe of the King.

Another Advantage which we have in this Caſe, is, That we are in the ſame Term wherein the Diſtringas was awarded and made forth.

And in the ſame Caſe of Blackmore, fol. 156, b. 157, a. it is ſaid, That at the Common Law, the Judges may amend as well their Judgment, as any other Part of the Record, in the ſame Term. For during the Term, the Record is in the Heart or Breaſt of the Court, or of the Judges, and not in the the Roll: But in another Term, by the Common Law, Miſpriſions of Clerks in Proceſs were not amendable by the Court; for in another Term, the Roll is the Record. So ſays that Book.

But here we are in the ſame Term: And it is the Miſpriſion of the Clerk in Proceſs, and in the making out a judicial Writ, which is in the Power of this Court, as iſſuing out from hence; whereas Original Writs iſſue out of Chancery: And Judicial Writs are often amended, where Originals are not. Vide Brook's Amendments, 20, 22. Owen, 62.

2. If this is not amendable by the Common Law, it is amendable by Statute.

The firſt Statute of Amendment was 14 Edw. III. Cap. 6. which extended to Miſpriſions of Clerks, in a Letter, or a Syllable, too much or too little. And in 40 Edw. III. the Judges were ſo nice, as to doubt whether they might amend a Word; becauſe the Statute ſpoke of a Letter, or a Syllable. And when ſome of the Judges went to the Houſe of Lords, to know whether by this Act they might amend a whole Word; they were look'd upon as unreaſonably ſcrupulous, and had an Anſwer accordingly.

Now here is nothing to be amended but a Figure: And this Statute being general, ſeems to extend to our Caſe.

But the Statute we rely upon, is the Statute of 8 Hen. VI. Cap. 12. and Cap. 15. which is the great Statute of Amendments; and which hath Words very full and general, extending to enable the Court to amend, as well for the Crown as the Subject. For the Words are general in the Beginning, and ſtrengthen'd by an Exception of Indictments of Treaſon, and Felony, and Outlawries thereupon: For the Rule is, Exceptio firmat Regulam, in Caſubus non exceptis. This Information is not one of the Caſes excepted; and therefore we may more ſtrongly conclude, that it is within the Purview of that Act.

If this Act did not extend to Pleas of the Crown, to what Purpoſe was that particular Exception inſerted? And yet, I know not how, an Opinion hath been taken up, that this Act doth not extend to Criminal Cauſes. To many Criminal Cauſes it doth not extend, by reaſon of the Exception: And therefore, perhaps, for want of a cloſe and ſtrict Obſervation, the Opinion obtained, that it extended to none. But a poſitive Law is not ſo to be born down. 'Tis true, all the later Statutes of Jeofails, in the Time of Henry VIII. and ſo downwards, do not extend to Informations, by reaſon of expreſs Exceptions, or plain Words: But this Statute of Hen. VI. is full for us, and we pray the Benefit of it.

It is not merely a new Motion, that this Statute of Hen. VI. doth extend to ſuch like Caſes with this; becauſe I ſhall cite ſome Caſes of Amendments in Criminal Proſecutions, in ſome of which this Statute hath been taken notice of.

As I have cited ſome old Authorities for Amendments in Caſes of the Crown, ſo I ſhall cite ſome Caſes of more modern Authority for that Purpoſe.

2 Cro. fol. 502. Harris's Caſe. An Indictment for a Nuſance was proſecuted againſt Harris; and a Tryal was had, and a Verdict againſt him. Afterwards it was removed by Certiorari; and upon View of the Record, it was found, that no Iſſue was joined: For the Clerk of Aſſize had omitted to enter the Iſſue, and ſo the Verdict was without an Iſſue. And upon Motion, the Court of King's Bench order'd it to be amended; for it was the Default of the Clerk. And this was done divers Years afterwards, and in the Time of another Clerk of Aſſize. And it was order'd, that the Clerk of Aſſize which then was, (for the former was removed) ſhould amend it; which was done by inſerting theſe Words, Et Richardus Warer (who was the former Clerk of Aſſize) qui pro Dom. Rege ſequitur ſimiliter, &c. And it was there ſaid by the Court, That if ſuch Faults ſhould not be amended, many Tryals upon Indictments ſhould be overthrown.

There is another Caſe in the ſame Book: 'Tis in 2 Cro. fol. 529. Parker verſ. Sir John Curſon & Ux. It was an Information againſt Sir John Curſon and his Wife for Recuſancy; and the Iſſue was, Quod præd. Magdalena dicit, quod ipſa non eſt inde culpabilis; & de hoc ponit ſe ſuper Patriam, & Attornatus Domini Regis ſimiliter. Upon a Tryal at Bar, a Verdict was given againſt the Defendants. It was afterwards moved in Arreſt of Judgment, that here was no Iſſue joined; for it was only the Plea of the Feme Covert, and no Iſſue joined, or Plea pleaded for the Husband. And yet in Regnard, the Docket was right, which was the Warrant for the Roll; and the Omiſſion of the Husband was the Miſpriſion of the Clerk: Therefore it was amended in ſo material a Part, even in another Term.

Another Caſe is in Cro. Car. fol. 144. Sir Humphry Tuſton's Caſe. A Quo Warranto was brought againſt the Corporation of Maidſtone, for claiming divers Liberties. Judgment was enter'd by Diſclaimer; and it was intended to have been only a ſpecial Diſclaimer of all Privileges, by Pretence of a Charter bearing Date 17 Jac. Regis: But the Clerk in entring the Judgment had omitted thoſe Words, Virtute vel Prætextu Literar. Patent. geren. dat. Anno decimo ſept. Jac. Regis: But upon Examination, the Court finding that it was merely the Miſpriſion of the Clerk, the Court was of Opinion that it was amendable by the Common Law, as well in the King's Caſe, as in the Caſe of a Common Perſon; and in another Term too; for ſo it was, and it was amended accordingly.

There is a Caſe in Siderfin, fol. 243, 244. The King v. Percival, Godfrey, & al.

Upon an Indictment for a Riot and a Battery, and Not Guilty pleaded; a Venire Fac. was awarded Vicecomitibus of the City of Canterbury; and upon a Tryal at Bar, a Verdict was given againſt the Defendants: And it was moved in Arreſt of Judgment, that the Venire Fac. and other Proceſs, was directed Vicecomitibus of Canterbury, and the Return was made by one Sheriff only; but the Court amended it, by endorſing upon the Writ that there was but one Sheriff of Canterbury. And this Amendment was made by the Common Law, and not by the Statutes of Jeofails; altho' it was ſaid at the Bar, that it was amendable within the Statute, becauſe it was not a Caſe within any of the Exceptions; it being an Information at the Common Law. And the Caſe of Sherington and Talbot was cited, and the Book of 39 Hen. VI. 40. for the ſame Purpoſe.

Upon

Upon the whole, we think, ſince the Matter objected was merely the Miſpriſion and Negligence of the Clerk, that it is amendable by the Common Law; becauſe the Award upon the Roll is right: Or if not by the Common Law, it is amendable by the Statute of 8 Hen. VI. ſince this is not a Caſe excepted out of it. And if this Statute extends to it, there are infinite Authorities for amending the wrong Teſte of a Diſtringas, in Civil Cauſes, between Party and Party: As where the Teſte hath been of a Day impoſſible, or upon a Sunday, or before the Iſſue joined, and the like.

The Books are ſo full of thoſe Inſtances, that it is to no Purpoſe to cite them.

And laſtly, We have this Advantage for an Amendment, That we are in the ſame Term wherein the Miſtake was made by the Clerk; and therefore I pray it may be amended.

The Tryal of Captain THOMAS GREEN, and his Crew, before the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty of Scotland. Publiſh'd by Authority.

THE Lords of Her Majeſties Privy Council having taken * Precognition of the Grounds of the Information againſt Captain Thomas Green, and others of his Crew; they thought fit, and ordered, That the ſaid Captain Thomas, &c. ſhould be put to a Tryal upon the Crimes informed, before the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty. And John Bannantyne, Seaman there.

All of them Indicted and Accuſed at the Inſtance of Mr. Alexander Higgins, Advocate Procurator-Fiſcal to the High Court of Admiralty, for the Crimes of Piracy, Robbery and Murder, in Manner mentioned in the two ſeveral Indictments raiſed againſt them * thereanent, and and whereof the † Tenor follows: Captain Thomas Green, Commander of the Ship called the Worceſter, now in Bruntiſland Harbour, Captain John Madder cheif Mate of the ſaid Ship, John Reynolds ſecond Mate of the ſaid Ship, Thomas Linſtead Aſſiſtant to the deceas'd Super-cargo of the ſaid Ship, James Burn Boat-ſwain of the ſaid Ship, James Sympſon Gunner of the ſaid Ship, Andrew Robertſon Gunner's Mate, John Brucklie Seaman there, and George Kitchen Seaman there, all Priſoners; You, and * ilk one of you are accuſed and indicted at the Inſtance of Mr. Alexander Higgins, Advocate Procurator-Fiſcal to the High-Court of Admiralty, of the Crimes of Piracy, Robbery and Murder, in manner after-mentioned, viz. That by the Law of GOD, the Laws of Nations, of this, and of all well-govern'd Realms, the Crimes of Piracy, Robbery and Murder, are prohibited, under all higheſt Pains; and that by the Laws of this Realm, the ſaid Crimes are prohibit under Pain of Death, and † eſcheat of Moveables. Nevertheleſs it is of Verity, that Captain Thomas Green, Commander of the Ship called the Worceſter, now in Bruntiſland Harbour, and his Crew, are guilty, * Art and Part of the ſaid Crimes, or one or other of the ſame, in ſo far as the ſaid Captain Thomas or his ſaid Crew, having ſailed from England, in the ſaid Veſſel the Worceſter, upon Pretence of Merchandizing towards the Eaſt-Indies; the foreſaid Captain, and his ſaid Crew belonging to the ſaid Veſſel, did, upon one or other of the Days of the Months of February, March, April or May, in the Year 1703. rencounter, or meet with another Ship or Veſſel, ſailed by its own Men or Crew, upon the Coaſt of Malabar, near Calecute; and the ſaid Veſſel bearing a red Flag, and having Engliſh or Scots aboard, at leaſt ſuch as ſpoke the Engliſh Language; the ſaid Captain Thomas Green and his Crew, after ſome * Intercommuning with them, did, without any Lawful Warrant, or a juſt Cauſe, attack the ſaid other Veſſel, or Ship, while expecting no ſuch Treatment; and invading her firſt by their Sloup, which they had manned with Guns and other Arms for that Purpoſe, they fell upon the ſaid other Veſſel in an Hoſtile manner, by ſhooting of Guns and otherways; and after ſome Time ſpent in Fighting againſt her by their Sloup, and partly by the approaching of the ſaid Thomas Green's Ship the Worceſter, they overcame, and Boarded the ſaid other Veſſel, and having ſeized their Men, they killed them, and threw them overboard, and then carried, or cauſed carry away the Goods that were aboard the ſaid other Veſſel, to their ſaid Ship the Worceſter; and then diſpoſed upon the ſaid Ship, by ſelling her aſhore on the ſaid Coaſt. Which Crime, being a wicked Piracy committed by Surprize in Parts ſo remote, and probably with all the Caution the Committers could uſe for concealing thereof, and for preventing Diſcoveries, comes now to be diſcovered in the ſeveral Parts and Circumſtances of the Action, and by ſuch as were preſent thereat; which being all conjoyn'd, does make up and infer the foreſaid Crime objected, and are as follows, viz. That the foreſaid Rencounter and Fight betwixt Captain Green and his Crew, and the ſaid Veſſel the Worceſter, and the foreſaid other Veſſel taken by her, hapned on the ſaid Coaſt as above: Likeas, at the ſame Time, one or more of the ſaid Ship the Worceſter, her Crew being on Shore, and at ſome diſtance from the Sea, heard the ſaid Shooting, which brought the ſaid Perſons to the Shore, where they, at leaſt the Chyrurgeon of the ſaid Ship the Worceſter one of them, ſaw her riding at a good diſtance from the Shore upon her Birth (as they ſpeak) and having the other Ship at the Stern, as it were tyed or towed to her, as being the Veſſel they had maſter'd or overcome, as ſaid is. Likeas, the ſaid Chyrurgeon did ſee the Boat belonging to the ſaid Ship the Worceſter coming aſhore from her, and the Chyrurgeon † demanding at ſuch of the Crew as were in her, what had brought them aſhore: They anſwer'd that they had been Busking, (a Sea-Term uſed for fitting and trimming a Ship for fighting) and they had Drunk, Spilt or Staved all their Water, and they were were come for a new Supply: And when a little Time thereafter the ſaid Chyrurgeon went aboard the ſaid Ship the Worceſter, he perceived the Deck thereof lumber'd and cover'd, and in a confus'd Manner, with Balls, Boxes and Goods; whereof when he asked the Reaſon, John Madder, one of the * Pannels, and a principal Actor in the Engagement, anſwer'd, Damn you, what have you to do to enquire, meddle with your Plaiſter-Box. And when the Chyrurgeon went down to his Station and Cheſt, he called for one of the Blacks Antonio Ferdinando, and one Duncan Mokay now Dead, and another in order to dreſs them; but when he asked what way they came by their Wounds, they declined to anſwer; whereupon the Chyrurgeon refuſing to dreſs them, if they would not tell him how they got their Wounds, the ſaid John Madder came to the Chyrurgeon in a Paſſion, and asked what was his buſineſs to ask ſo many Queſtions, when he did ſee the Wounds ſo plain before him, calling him a Block-head for not dreſſing them; and at length the Conteſt was ſo warm betwixt the ſaid Madder and Chyrurgeon, that Madder charged him to ask no more Queſtions, and he charged the Men wounded, not to anſwer a Word: And further order'd him back to the Shore, which the Chyrurgeon was forced to comply with; where the Chyrurgeon meeting with Franciſco de Olivera the † Linguiſter, asked him whether he ſaw any of the Worceſter's Men that had carried the foreſaid Ship ſo taken into Keilon River, and the Linguiſter anſwered, that he had not, but that they were ſome of the Worceſter's Company, who as ſoon as they had brought her in and made her faſt, took their Boat and went directly on Board: The Ship taken being carried into Keilon River as ſaid is, where ſhe was left with her Yards and Top-maſts down, all unrigged: And the ſaid Linguiſter told the Chyrurgeon further, that one Coge Commodo complained he had bought the ſaid Ship taken too dear; whereby it appears that the ſaid Ship taken by Violence, was ſold in manner aforeſaid. Likeas, for further Evidence of the ſaid Piracy, ſince the Time that John Reynolds one of the Pannels was ſeized with the reſt, for his Acceſſion thereto, there was found a Letter wrote to him by one Sarah Newlands, bearing Date January the 6th, wherein ſhe tells him, That tho' he had been baſely wicked, yet ſhe ſhould be ſorry to hear he were guilty of any thing that might bring him to the Gallows; and therefore adviſes him to confeſs; adding, that in his own Letter which ſhe had ſeen, he ſays, That ſome of their Men had baſely confeſſed (which ſays he) implies that they were guilty. And when Reynolds was queſtioned upon his Letter, he acknowledged that he had wrote a Letter to his Wife the ſaid Sarah's Siſter, which had occaſioned her writing the ſaid Letter to him; and thereupon he produced the Copy of the ſaid Letter to his Wife, which agrees with what Sarah ſays, as the ſaid Copy and Sarah's Letter both put in the Clerk of the Admiralty's Hands, to be ſeen by the Pannels, bear. And further, George Haines one of the Crew of the ſaid Worceſter, ſince his coming to Scotland, and when at Bruntiſland, being ask'd by one James Wilkie Taylor, † Burgeſs of Edinburgh, ſome Day in October laſt, about his Brother Andrew Wilkie, who went Chyrurgeon in Captain Drummond's Ship, if ever the ſaid Haines had ſeen the ſaid Andrew Wilkie in his Voyage, he flew in a Paſſion, and ſaid, what Devil was his concern with Captain Drummond? Upon which James Wilkie forbearing a little till he ſhould be calmer, asked the ſaid Haines, whether he had heard or ſeen any Scots Ship coming to or from the Eaſt-Indies during their Voyage? Haines anſwered, that when they were upon the Coaſt of Malabar, a Dutch Ship informed them, that one Captain Drummond, Commanding a Scots Ship, and having a Sloop in Company, was turned Pirate. Upon which Haines and they manned their Ship to be in readineſs, but ſaw him not; only a little thereafter Haines added, that he had in his Cuſtody, the Time the ſaid Ship the Worceſter was ſeized, which he would not have fallen into the Seizer's Hands for twice the Value of the Ship, but that he had thrown it over-board; adding further, that there was ſtill in the Ship what would never be found by the Seizers, unleſs they pulled her Board from Board, tho' he knew where the Thing lay. Likeas, when after the ſaid James Wilkie departed, one Anna Seaton in Bruntiſland, did at his Deſire further enquire at Haines about Captain Drummond's Ship; he anſwered, that he ſaw they had a Deſign to pump him, but that they ſhould not be the wiſer of him: At all which Paſſages, Kenneth Mackenzie * Indweller in Cannongate was a preſent Witneſs. And the ſaid Anna Seaton did further tell the ſaid Kenneth Mackenzie, that when ſhe expoſtulat with Haines for his being in Paſſion, as ſaid is; he anſwered, that he knew more of Captain Drummond than he would tell at that Time; and that if the ſaid Andrew Wilkie was with Captain Drummond, he would not be ſeen again. And further, the ſaid Anna Seaton heard the ſaid Haines own and declare their ſaid Wickedneſs; and ſhe and William Wood, one of the Gunners of her Majeſty's Artillery, with one John Henderſon † Writer in Edinburgh, being in September laſt, in Anna Seaton's Mother's Houſe, after having drunk one Health or two; the ſaid Haines, who was there preſent, fell in a Melancholy Fit, and expreſs'd himſelf, That it's a Wonder, that ſince we did not ſink at Sea, GOD doth not make the Ground to ſwallow us up for the Wickedneſs that has been committed during the laſt Voyage, on Board of that Old Bitch Beſs, pointing to Captain Green's Ship. And further, the ſaid Haines ſaid, That if what the ſaid John Madder had done in the ſaid Voyage were well known, he deſerved as much as his Uncle Madder met with at Amſterdam, who was there burnt in Oil, for attempting to burn their Ships. And when at another Time, the ſaid Anna Seaton told Haines, that ſhe had an old Sweet-heart who went away with Captain Drummond, and would gladly hear ſome Tidings, whether he was dead or alive; the ſaid Haines, who was then a * Suiter to Anna Seaton, aſſured her, ſhe would never ſee him again, if he was in Drummond's Ship. And for a further Confirmation of the Truth of the ſaid Piracy, when a Commitee of Council was ſent to Bruntiſland, to cauſe ſearch and unload the ſaid Veſſel, it was found by the Skippers and Seamen employed, that the Goods aboard her were not ſtow'd as Merchant Goods uſed to be, but were found in the Hold in ſuch Confuſion, as if taken by Piracy, and no otherways. Likeas, when the ſaid Ship the Woreſter was ſeized, the ſaid John Madder being queſtioned about Captain Drummond's Ship, he took out of his Pocket, or at leaſt ſhew'd in his Hand, the Seal of the African Company, which he could never lawfully have got. By all which, they they being joyned and connected together (as a Diſcovery of ſuch a Wickedneſs practiſed in ſuch remote Parts, and ſo induſtriouſly and obſtinately endeavour'd to be concealed, deſerves to be) the ſame in all the Points and Circumſtances thereof, at leaſt ſuch, and ſo many of them as are † relevant, and are offered to be proven by a cumulative Probation, do plainly amount to ſuch a plenary Evidence, as may fully convince all impartial Men, that the foreſaid Captain Green and his ſaid Crew, are all and each of them guilty, Art and Part, of the foreſaid Crimes of Piracy, Robbery and Murder, or one or other of them above charged; which being found by a Verdict of an † Aſſize before the Judge of the Admiralty, and the Lords Aſſeſſors appointed by the Lords of the Privy Council, the forenamed Perſons, and each of them, ought to be puniſh'd by Sentence of the ſaid Court, with the Pain of Death, and Confiſcation of their Moveables, to the Example and Terror of others, to do or commit the like in Time coming.

Where-

Whereupon the Chyrurgeon refuſing to dreſs them, if they would not tell him how they got their Wounds; the ſaid John Madder came to the Chyrurgeon in a Paſſion, and asked what was his Buſineſs to ask ſo many Queſtions, when he did ſee the Wounds ſo plain before him? Calling him a Blockhead for not dreſſing them. And at length the Conteſt was ſo warm betwixt the ſaid Madder and Chyrurgeon, that Madder charged him to ask no more Queſtions; and he charged the Men wounded not to anſwer a word: And further, order'd him back to the Shore; which the Chyrurgeon was forced to comply with. Where the Chyrurgeon meeting with Franciſco de Olivera, their Linguiſter, asked him, whether he ſaw any of the Worceſter's Men, that had carried the foreſaid Ship ſo taken into Keilon River? And the Linguiſter anſwered, that he had not; but that they were ſome of the Worceſter's Company, who as ſoon as they had brought her in, and made her faſt, took their Boat, and went directly on Board: The Ship taken being carried into Keilon River, as ſaid is, where ſhe was left, with her Yards and Top-Maſts down, all unrigged. And the ſaid Linguiſter told the Chyrurgeon further, That one Coge Commodo complained he had bought the ſaid taken Ship too dear: Whereby it appears, that the ſaid Ship taken by Violence, was ſold in manner foreſaid.

Likeas, for further Evidence of the ſaid Piracy, ſince the Time that John Reynolds, one of the Pannels, was ſeized with the reſt, for his Acceſſion thereto; there was found a Letter wrote to him by one Sarah Newlands, bearing Date the 6th of January; wherein ſhe tells him, That tho' he had been baſely wicked, yet ſhe ſhould be ſorry to hear he were guilty of any Thing that might bring him to the Gallows: And therefore adviſes him to confeſs; adding, That in his own Letter, which ſhe had ſeen, he ſays, that ſome of their Men had baſely confeſſed; which, ſays ſhe, implies, that they were guilty. And when Reynolds was queſtioned upon his Letter, he acknowledged that he had wrote a Letter to his Wife, the ſaid Sarah's Siſter, which had occaſioned her writing the ſaid Letter to him: And thereupon he produced the Copy of the ſaid Letter to his Wife, which agrees with what Sarah ſays; as the ſaid Copy, and Sarah's Letter, (both put in the Clerk of the Admiralty's Hands, to be ſeen by the Pannels) bear.

And further: George Haines, one of the Crew of the ſaid Worceſter, ſince his coming to Scotland, and when at Bruntiſland, being asked by one James Wilkie, Taylor, Burgeſs of Edinburgh, ſome Day in October laſt, about his Brother Andrew Wilkie, who went Chyrurgeon in Captain Drummond's Ship; if ever the ſaid Haines had ſeen the ſaid Andrew Wilkie in his Voyage? He flew in a Paſſion, and ſaid, What Devil was his Concern with Captain Drummond? Upon which, James Wilkie forbearing a little, till he ſhould be calmer, ask'd the ſaid Haines again, Whether he had heard or ſeen any Scots Ships, coming to or from the Eaſt-Indies, during their Voyage? Haines anſwered, That when they were upon the Coaſt of Malabar, a Dutch Ship inform'd them, That one Captain Drummond, commanding a Scots Ship, and having a Sloop in Company, was turn'd Pirate: Upon which Haines ſaid, they mann'd their Sloop to be in Readineſs, but ſaw him not: Only a little thereafter Haines added, that he had in his Cuſtody the Time the ſaid Ship the Worceſter was ſeized, which he would not have fallen into the Seizer's Hands for Twice the Value of the Ship; but that he had thrown it overboard. Adding further, That there was ſtill in the Ship what would never be found by the Seizers, unleſs they pull'd her Board from Board, tho' he knew where the Thing lay.

Likeas when after the ſaid James Wilkie's Departure, one Anna Seaton did, at his Deſire, further enquire at Haines about Captain Drummond's Ship; he anſwered, That they had a Deſign to pump him, but that they ſhould not be the wiſer of him. At all which Paſſages, Kenneth Mackenzie, an Indweller in Cannongate, was a preſent Witneſs. And the ſaid Anna Seaton did further tell the ſaid Kenneth Mackenzie, That when ſhe expoſtulat with Haines for his being in a Paſſion, as ſaid is; he anſwered, That he knew more of Captain Drummond than he would tell at that Time: And that if the ſaid Andrew Wilkie was with Captain Drummond, he would not be ſeen again.

And further, The ſaid Anna Seaton heard the ſaid Haines own and declare their ſaid Wickedneſs. And ſhe, and William Wood, one of the Gunners of Her Majeſties Artillery, with one John Henderſon Writer in Edinburgh, being in September laſt at Anna Seaton's Mother's Houſe; after having drunk a Health or two, the ſaid Haines, who was there preſent, fell in a melancholy Fit; and expreſs'd himſelf, That it's a wonder that ſince we did not ſink at Sea, God doth not make the Ground to ſwallow us up, for the Wickedneſs that has been committed during the laſt Voyage on Board of that Old Bitch Beſs; pointing to Captain Green's Ship. And further, the ſaid Haines ſaid, That if what the ſaid John Madder had done in the ſaid Voyage were well known, he deſerved as much as his Uncle Madder met with at Amſterdam; who was there burnt in Oyl, for attempting to burn their Ships. And when, at another Time, the ſaid Anna Seaton told Haines, That ſhe had an old Sweetheart who went away with Captain Drummond; and would gladly hear ſome Tidings, whether he was dead or alive: The ſaid Haines, who was then a Suitor of Anna Seaton's, aſſur'd her, ſhe would never ſee him again, if he was in Drummond's Ship.

And for a further Confirmation of the Truth of the ſaid Piracy; when a Committee of Council was ſent to Bruntiſland, to cauſe Search and unload the ſaid Veſſel; it was found, by the Skippers and Seamen employ'd, that the Goods aboard her were not ſtowed as Merchant Goods uſed to be; but were found in the Hold in ſuch Confuſion, as if taken by Piracy, and no otherways. Like as when the ſaid Ship the Worceſter was ſeized, the ſaid John Madder being queſtion'd about Captain Drummond's Ship; he took out of his Pocket, or at leaſt ſhewed in his Hand, the Seal of the African Company; which he could never have lawfully got.

By all which, they being joined and connected together, (as a Diſcovery of ſuch a Wickedneſs practiſed in ſuch remote Parts, and ſo induſtriouſly and obſtinately endeavour'd to be concealed, deſerves to be) the ſamen, in all the Points and Circumſtances thereof; at leaſt ſuch, and ſo many of them as are relevant, and are offer'd to be proven by a cumulative Probation; do plainly amount to ſuch a plenary Evidence, as may fully convince all impartial Men, that the foreſaid Captain Green and his ſaid Crew, are all and each of them guilty, Art and Part, of the foreſaid Crimes of Piracy, Robbery and Murder, or one or other of them above charged. Which being found by a Verdict of an Aſſize before the Judge of the Admiralty, and the Lords Aſſeſſors appointed by the Lords of Privy Council; the forenamed Perſons, and each of them, ought to be puniſh'd by Sentence of the ſaid Court, with the Pain of Death, and Confiſcation of their Moveables; to the Examples, and Terror of others, to do or commit the like in Time coming.

Additional Concluſion of the Indictment, at the Inſtance of Mr. Alexander Higgins, Procurator-Fiſcal to the Court of Admiralty, againſt Captain Tho. Green, &c.

Viz. THAT the Concluſion of the ſaid Indictment given on Saturday, the Seventeenth Inſtant, bearing the Pain of Death, and of Eſcheat and Confiſcation of Moveables, ſhould extend to the Eſcheat and Confiſcation of the ſaid Ship and Cargo, by reaſon of the foreſaid Crime of Piracy: And that the ſaid Captain Thomas Green, &c. ſhould anſwer to the foreſaid Concluſion, as thus explained, and extended to the Confiſcation of the ſaid Ship and Cargo, as in the Caſe of Piracy, the foreſaid Fifth of March, which is the Day of * Compearance aſſigned to the ſaid Pannels, or at leaſt upon the 6th, 7th, 8th, or 9th Days of March thereafter; as the true Import, or at leaſt a clear Conſequent of the foreſaid Crime and Indictment given thereupon: The Liſt of Witneſſes and Aſſizers remaining the ſame, as ſubjoined to the foreſaid principal Indictment.

Her Majeſties Advocat for the Purſuers craved, that the † Dyet againſt Captain Thomas Green and others, contained in that Indictment with him, might be continued.

It was objected by the Pannel's Procurators, that the Dyet could not be continued againſt them; being contrair to the Act of Parliament for preventing wrongous Impriſonment, and contrair to an expreſs Clauſe therein.

It was replied for the Purſuers, that the Act of Parliament is opponed; which only requires the Dyet of the Tryal to be fixed within Sixty Days after Intimation, which was done; but then allows to the Purſuers to inſiſt, and to the Judge to determine by a final Sentence, within Forty Days, if before the Lords of Juſticiary, and Thirty Days, if before any other Judge.

* INFORMATION

* Plea, or Brief.

For Mr. Alexander Higgins, Procurator-Fiſcal of the High Court of Admiralty:

AGAINST

Captain Thomas Green, Commander of the Worceſter, and his Crew and Complices.

THere being Two † Libels raiſed before the High Court of Admiralty, and the Lords Aſſeſſors appointed by the Lords of Privy Council, both at the Inſtance of the ſaid Mr. Alexander Higgins; but the firſt againſt Henry Keigle, Carpenter in the Ship called the Worceſter, now in Bruntiſland Harbour; Samuel Urline, his Mate; George Haines, Stewart of the ſaid Ship; Daniel Stringman, Cook in the ſaid Ship; Samuel Wilcocks, Chyrurgeon's Mate; George Glen, Seaman there; Henry Barnes, Seaman there; Alexander Taylor, Seaman there; and John Ballantyne, Seaman there: And the Second againſt the ſaid Captain Thomas Green, Commander of the ſaid Ship the Worceſter; Captain John Madder, Chief Mate of the ſaid Ship; John Reynolds, Second Mate of the ſaid Ship; Thomas Linſteed, Aſſiſtant to the deceas'd Supercargo of the ſaid Ship; James Burn, Boatſwain of the ſaid Ship; James Simpſon, Gunner of the ſaid Ship; Andrew Robertſon, Gunner's Mate; John Brucklie, Seaman there; and George Kitchen, Seaman there; all Priſoners.

Both the Libels being the ſame, the Tenor thereof prefixt to the Information is verbatim conform to the Indictments on the preceding Pages, in the Court holden the Fifth of March, 1705. and whereto this refers.

When the * haill foreſaids Pannels were brought to the Bar, and the ſaids Libels read againſt them; the Procurator-Fiſcal declared, That he inſiſted firſt upon the firſt Libel, viz. againſt the ſaids Henry Keigle, Carpenter,

penter, Samuel Urlane, George Haines, Daniel Stringman, Samuel Wilcocks, George Glen, Henry Barnes, Alexander Taylor, and John Ballantyne; and after ſome Debate moved by the Pannels Procurators, that the Pannels having uſed the Method preſcribed by the Act of Parliament, to bring themſelves to a Tryal within ſixty Days, they ought now all of them to be inſiſted againſt; and it being anſwered, That all that the Act of Parliament required was, That a Day ſhould be fix'd for the Tryal within ſixty Days after the Charge given for that Effect, the ſame was done, and alſo the whole Pannels ſo far inſiſted againſt, that their Libels were read, which fully ſatisfies that Part of the Act; and that as to further inſiſting, proſecuting and concluding, the Act of Parliament allowed fourty Days further before the Commiſſion of Juſticiary, and thirty Days before any other Inferior Judicature: So that the Procurator-Fiſcal might very well proceed againſt theſe contained in the firſt Libel this Day, and continue theſe contained in the ſecond Libel till the next Court Day. The Lord High Admiral repelled the foreſaid Alledgeance made for all the Pannels, and allowed the Procurator-Fiſcal to inſiſt againſt theſe in the firſt Libel, the foreſaid 5th of March, and continued the Dyet againſt theſe in the ſecond Libel, till the 7th of the ſaid Month.

It was then alledged for theſe in the firſt Libel, No Proceſs, in regard the Crimes charged were libelled to have been done in the Eaſt Indies in Malabar, far without the Scottiſh-Seas, nor was there any Accuſer either of the Owners of the Ship and Goods, or of the neareſt of Kin of the Perſons alledged, Murder'd; ſo that the Admiral was incompetent to this Tryal; For the competentia fori (Competency of the Court,) † in Criminals, being founded either in the locus delicti, (the Place where the Crime was committed) or in the locus domicilii (the Place of Habitation of the Pannels,) or in the locus originis (place of Birth) neither of theſe could be ſubſumed upon in this Caſe: The Pannels Engliſhmen and Strangers, and the Crimes libelled to have been committed in the Eaſt-Indies, as ſaid is. And * eſto, that the Crime of Piracy may be tryed any where, where the Pirates are found, yet that is only where the accuſed are notoriouſly ſuch. And farther, tho' the Pannels could be accuſed here in Scotland, yet they could be only accuſed before the † Commiſſion of Juſticiary, and not before the High Admiral, whoſe Juriſdiction extends no further than the Seas within the Compaſs of Her Majeſty's Sovereignty.

† Court for Criminal Caſes.

To all which it is anſwer'd by the Purſuer. 1. That tho' the Competency of the Judge in Criminals be ordinarily ſaid, to be found either in loco delicti, (the Place where Crime was committed) or in loco domicilii (Place of Habitation of the Delinquents,) or in loco originis (the Place of their Birth) yet there is a ſuperior Conſideration, and that is the locus deprehenſionis, (Place where they were taken,) where the Criminal is found and deprehended, which doth ſo over-rule in this Matter, that neither the locus domicilii (Place of Habitation,) nor the locus originis, (Place of Birth,) doth * found the Judges Competency, niſi ibi reus deprehendatur, (except the Criminal be apprehended there.) And ſo it is that here the Pannels were and are deprehended, which happening in the Cauſe of Piracy, a Crime againſt the Law of Nations, and which all Mankind have an Intereſt to purſue, wherever the Pirates can be found; the Procurator Fiſcal's Intereſt to purſue is thereby manifeſt, and the Pannels being here deprehended, cannot decline the Admiral's Juriſdiction as incompetent. 2. As to what is alledg'd, that the Pannels are not libelled to be habitual and notorious Pirates, but on the contrary, had and do produce a Commiſſion, which frees them of that Suſpicion.

* Juſtify or make good.

It's anſwered, That Piracy being † libelled, as to the Particular charged, even habitual Piracy is thence preſumed; but a ſingle Act of Piracy libelled doth both give the Purſuer a ſufficient Title and Intereſt, and likeways founds the Admiral's Juriſdiction, in reſpect the Pannels charged for Piracy are here found. And 3. The Lord High Admiral is moſt proper for this Cognition and Tryal, becauſe by the Act of Parliament, 1681. he is declared to be * Juſtice-General upon the Seas, which albeit it be limited inwardly towards the Land, yet outwardly is not limited; ſo that the Lord High Admiral is there declared to have the ſole Juriſdiction in all Maritime and Sea-faring Cauſes, Foreign and Domeſtick, whether Civil or Criminal, within this Realm, and over all Perſons, as they are concerned in the ſame, which as to the Seas and all Maritime Crimes whatſoever, makes the High Admiral Juſtice-General, as ſaid is, without Limitation; and therefore it is in vain for the Pannels to pretend, that if their Cauſe be cognoſcible here, it muſt at leaſt be tryed before the Commiſſion of Juſticiary, ſince the Lord High-Admiral is in this Caſe fully veſted with the Juſtice-General's Power; and as for what may be the Cuſtom of England, it doth not concern, nor can be any Rule for us.

* Lord Chief Juſtice.

And the Lord High Admiral and Aſſeſſors having * adviſed the Debates, they repelled the Declinator †, and found the Court competent.

Thereafter it was alledged for theſe in the firſt Lybel, That they were conveened*, as having been of Captain Green's Crew, and his Complices in the Crimes libelled; ſo that he being their Commander and Captain, they could not be put to anſwer, unleſs the Captain himſelf were inſiſted againſt; ſeeing firſt, it was obvious, that he being their Commander and Captain, ought firſt to be anſwerable. And 2. That they being under his Command, could not be charged for any Thing alledged done by them as his Crew, unleſs he were firſt tryed, ſeeing that he might have Defences both for himſelf and them, which probably they could not make for themſelves.

* Summoned or brought to the Bar.

To which it was anſwered by the Purſuer, That the Captain and his Crew were not * conveened for any Thing alledged acted by him as their Captain, and by them as his Crew, but were all conveened as Complices and ſocii, (i. e. Fellow-Criminals) and Partakers of the foreſaid wicked Crimes of Piracy, Robbery and Murder; which Crimes as they could be warranted by no Commiſſion or Character the Captain did or could pretend, ſo could they be as little warranted by their Condition of being ſubject to him as his Crew; for here the ſaying holds, That they were all hic ſocii & facinus quos inquinat æquat, i. e. (they were Fellows in this Caſe, and being defiled with the ſaid Crime, were in that reſpect equal.) As alſo the other Maxim, That † Wrong has no Warrant; and therefore, ſeeing that neither the

* brought before the Court.

Captain's

Captain's Character, nor their Condition as his Crew, could be pretended as a Defence either to him or them; and that the Libel of the foreſaid Crimes did charge them all, as being Socii, and together involved therein; and that without Queſtion, in the Caſe of ſuch an Accuſation for ſuch horrid Crimes, every one muſt anſwer for himſelf; the Alledgeance could not be * reſpected. Beſides that it was evident, that if Captain Green, and theſe in the Second Libel, were all confeſſing and pardon'd; yet the firſt Libel againſt theſe of his Crew therein contained, would ſtill lawfully proceed; and Captain Green himſelf, and thoſe joined with him in his Libel, might be made uſe of as Witneſſes againſt theſe contained in the firſt Libel. By all which it was evident, that the Tryal ought to proceed againſt theſe in the firſt Libel, without reſpect to the foreſaid dilatory Defence. This being the dilatory Defence objected againſt the firſt Libel, and anſwered above; and the † peremptory Defences againſt both Libels being common and coincident, for the more clear Method; the dilatory Defence proponed alſo for theſe contained in the Second Libel, with the Anſwers thereto, are hereunto ſubjoined.

The Dilatory then propoſed for Captain Green, and others, (in the Second Libel) was, The foreſaid John Reynolds was convened and † impannelled with him; whereas it was acknowledged by the Purſuer, that Reynolds was aſhore the Time of the Piracy, and other Crimes libelled to have been committed by Captain Green, and the reſt of his Complices; whereby Reynolds appeared, even by the Purſuer's Acknowledgment, to be innocent. Like as Captain Green, and the other Pannels, had raiſed an * Exculpation, and therein had cited Reynolds for a Witneſs: So that according to the Method practiſed in Criminals, Captain Green and the other Pannels had good Ground to demand, that Reynolds might be firſt tried, and ſo purged from being Socius Criminis, (a Fellow Criminal) and put in † Caſe to be a Witneſs, for the Captain and the other Pannels to prove their Grounds of Exculpation. For there could be nothing more reaſonable, as it was alſo ordinary, than that when a Purſuer did raiſe a Libel againſt ſeveral Perſons, (whereof ſome were innocent, and might be Witneſſes for the other Criminals and Pannels) theſe other Pannels might juſtly crave, that ſuch as they alledged to be innocent, might be firſt tried and purged, and ſo made capable to be Witneſſes; ſince otherways any malicious Purſuer might include both the Defenders and all their Witneſſes in one Libel: And thus by making the Witneſſes Socii Criminis (Fellow Criminals) in the Libel, prejudge the Defenders of all their Evidences and Defences.

† Condition.

To which it was anſwer'd for the Purſuer, That he acknowledged, that when ſuch a Courſe was taken, to include both Actors and Witneſſes in one Libel, with a Deſign to make the Witneſſes (which the Actors were to uſe) Socii Criminis, (Fellow Criminals) and ſo to deprive the Actors of their Defence, and the Probation thereof; theſe Actors might, and were allowed to † condeſcend upon thoſe whom they intended to uſe as Witneſſes, and at the ſame Time to propoſe a Ground of Exculpation for them; and ſo crave that they might be firſt tried upon the foreſaid Ground, to the effect that if thereupon acquit, they might be in Caſe to be Witneſſes. But this could never be pretended to by any of the Pannels: For an antecedent Tryal of ſuch of their Socii as they alledged were innocent, and to be their Witneſſes, unleſs at the ſame Time the Pannels did condeſcend upon the Ground of their Innocence, or upon the Ground of their Exculpation, whereupon they deſired them to be firſt tried: For otherways there could be nothing more groundleſs, and (in effect) manifeſtly tending to elude all Criminal Proceeding againſt Complices of the ſame Crime, than to allow any of them at random to crave others to be firſt tried; and ſo the Tryal to proceed of one ſingle Perſon after another, until all ſhould be † aſſoilzied. Whereas the true and plain Method was, and is, That the Purſuer inſiſts againſt ſuch as he pleaſes, either ſingly or jointly; and unleſs ſome * Speciality be alledged, why the Tryal of one ſhould proceed before the Tryal of another, it never was, nor could be left to the Arbitriment of the Pannels. And thus it was practiſed in all the Inſtances alledged by the Pannels, of trying ſuch as were impannelled for Socii Criminis, (Fellow Criminals) to be firſt purged, in order to be Witneſſes; viz. That the ſame was never allowed, unleſs ſome Ground of Exculpation was poſitively alledged for clearing of their Innocence. And therefore, unleſs Captain Green, and the other Pannels, will poſitively offer to prove, that Reynolds (whom they would have firſt tried) was alibi, (elſewhere) and not preſent in the Action; their Arbitrary Demand of having him tried in the firſt place, without any Reaſon aſſigned, cannot be regarded. Which Debate being heard, the Lord High Admiral and Aſſeſſors † ſuperſeded to give Anſwer, until the Defenders ſhould give in their other Defences, and all ſhould be informed upon together.

Theſe being the Preliminary Defences, ſeparately proponed by the Perſons convened in the Firſt and Second Libels; the following Defences were proponed in common, by the Defenders in both Libels.

And 1. That the Libel was informal and inſufficient, as being too general and indefinit. And 2. That it did not * condeſcend upon Day and Place. And 3. That the Qualifications whereupon the Relevancy appeared to be founded, were wholly † irrelevant. And 4. That the Additional Concluſion was groundleſs and unwarrantable.

And as to the firſt of theſe Defences, it was alledged, That the Libel was informal and inſufficient, as being too general and indefinit; not condeſcending upon the Name and Deſignation of the Ship * wrongouſly attacked, nor upon the Perſons and Deſignations of theſe alledged to be murdered, nor upon the Quantity and Quality of the Goods alledged to be robbed and ſpoiled: All which ought to be done, ſeeing that Criminal Libels ought to be certain, and not general and indefinit; whereby alſo the Defenders might be prejudged of Defences, that might ariſe to them upon a para particular Condeſcendance. As for Example; if the Name and Deſignation of the Ship were condeſcended on, they might prove the ſame Ship to be yet exiſting: And ſo of the Perſons alledged murdered, they might prove them to be yet alive: As alſo, that the Goods alledged robb'd, were yet extant, and lawfully diſpoſed on by their Owners.

To which it was anſwered by the Purſuer, That he oppones his Libel, which was libelled as definitly as the Thing would allow: For it being libelled, that the Pannels did, without any lawful Cauſe or Warrand, attacque a Ship ſailed by her own Crew, and having her own Cargo aboard, and that they over-maſter'd the ſaid Ship in hoſtile manner, and murder'd the Men, and robb'd their Goods. Theſe were certainly Crimes manifeſt in themſelves; and if the Pannels had acted them in ſuch manner, as to deſtroy the Ship and the Men, and embazled the Cargo, ſo as no farder Knowledge could be had thereof; it was only an Aggravation of their Villany and Wickedneſs, but could never hinder the Accuſation to proceed; ſeeing that whatever the Ship, or Men, or Goods were, it was certainly Piracy, Robbery and Murder, to attacque a Ship * hoſtilely, and to deſtroy the Men, and rob the Goods. And further, A Condeſcendance was not at all in this Caſe neceſſary, ſeeing that any ſuch Condeſcendance could be no Ground of Exculpation. For whether the Ship was of ſuch a Name and Deſignation, or of another; or whatever the Men and the Goods were, yet the Crime was ſtill the ſame; viz. To attack and invade a free Ship, without any Cauſe or Warrant, and to kill her Men, and rob her Goods.

And furder; It's very well known in our Criminal Practice, that Robberies and Depredations are ſuſtained, albeit neither the Quality of the Goods nor their Owners be condeſcended on: And in effect, the Pannels their Defence of Indefinitneſs upon the Ground forefaid is ſuch, that if even in the Road of Leith, before Hundreds of Spectators from both Coaſts, one Ship ſhould attack another, and hoſtilely invading her, ſhould deſtroy her Men, ſeize her Goods, and ſink the Veſſel, without ſuffering either Veſſel, Men or Goods to be known; there could be no Criminal Libel upon it; becauſe forſooth, tho' Hundreds ſee the whole Action, yet it could not be more definitly libelled; ſave that the Commander and Crew of the one Ship attack'd the other hoſtilely, and deſtroyed her Men, and ſeized her Goods, and ſunk her without further Condeſcendance; which were moſt abſurd. And therefore, the Libel, as it's libelled, both as to Ship, Men and Goods attack'd, murdered and robbed, without any juſt Cauſe or Provocation, is both ſufficiently definit and moſt relevant

And whereas the Defenders alledged, this Indefinit libelled ſhould the rather be rejected, becauſe that the Pannels were cloathed with Commiſſion; which tho' they did not plead to exculpat the particular Charge brought againſt them, yet was always a Ground of Preſumption that they acted lawfully; unleſs the contrair were made appear, by a particular Condeſcendance.

It was anſwered, That nothing did charge the Pannels more home than the pleading of this Commiſſion; in ſo far as firſt, They neither could, nor durſt plead it, to exculpat the Piracy, Murder and Robbery charged. 2. It did not ſo much as make any Preſumption for the Pannels; becauſe the very Tenor of the Commiſſion obliged them to keep a particular Journal of whatſoever Veſſel they ſhould attack hoſtily; and their Journals were produced by themſelves, and no ſuch Thing appeared in their Journals. And therefore it was manifeſt, that their Pretence of a Commiſſion, is only the more wickedly to cover their Villany; ſince they can alledge nothing acted ſuitably to their Commiſſion, but that their own Journals † redargues them.

The Second Defence alledged by the Pannels in both Libels, was, That the Libel was ſtill defective and imperfect, wanting Day and Place; in ſo far as the Place was generally deſigned the Coaſt of Malabar, which is of a long and vaſt Tract; and the Day was one or other of the Days of February, March, April, May, which is indefinit, and as good as no Day. And Day and Place were not only requir'd to be condeſcended on by our Old Law * Quon. attach, but the Condeſcendance is alſo neceſſary for the Defender's Exculpation; ſeeing that if Day and Place were condeſcended on, he might then prove himſelf alibi, (elſewhere) and ſo elude the Libel, which now he cannot do.

* a Book ſo called.

To which it was anſwered, That the Condeſcendance in the Libel, as to Day and Place, is ſufficient; becauſe the Facts objected are thereby declared.

2. Day and Place are never eſſential to a Libel, except where either the Nature of the Crime, or its particular Specification requires it; for then indeed it muſt be diſtinctly and poſitively libelled. As if a Man either charge another, or aggravat his Crime, by its being a Breach of the LORD's Day; then the LORD's Day muſt be condeſcended on. Or if a Man libel another for beating, or drawing his Sword within the King's Palace; where the Place is alſo eſſential. But as to other Crimes, which of their own Nature are Crimes at all Times; for what can the Mention of Day or Place ſignify in ſuch Crimes, as at all Times, and in every Place, are Crimes without Exception. And ſuch are the Crimes libelled. But,

3. If it be ſaid, that the Condeſcending on Day and Place, is neceſſary to afford the Defender his juſt Exculpation of alibi, (being elſewhere): It's anſwered, That in that Caſe, the Defender may put the Purſuer to condeſcend on Day and Place, for proving his Exception of alibi, (being elſewhere) as ſaid is. But then, in common Senſe and Law, it muſt be upon this Condition; That the Defender acknowledge the Crime charged to have been committed; and only endeavours to exculpat himſelf by offering to prove alibi, (being elſewhere) and that more pregnantly than the Purſuer offers to prove his Indictment. For what Senſe or Reaſon is there, that the Purſuer ſhould be put to condeſcend poſitively on Day and Place, in Crimes that are Crimes at all Times, and every where; unleſs it be for this very Reaſon, that the Defender acknowledging the Crime, offers to purge himſelf by the Exception of alibi, (being elſewhere)? And therefore, ſince Day and Place are libelled in ſuch a juſt Latitude, as may declare the Facts and Crimes charged; and that the Defender, on the other hand, doth not acknowledge the Facts and Crimes themſelves, and offer to clear themſelves by the Exception of alibi, (being elſewhere) there needs no further Condeſcendance. And this is the conſtant Opinion of Lawyers, and the perpetual Cuſtom of our Practique.

The

The Third Defence proponed for the Pannels, was, as to the Qualifications of the Libel, That they were no ways relevant, nor could be regarded to infer the Concluſion of the Libel, in as much as, 1. There was here no corpus delicti, viſible Effect or Subject of the Crime, offered to be proven, which is always neceſſary, and principally where the Crime is offered to be proven per preſumptiones & indicia, by Preſumptions and Tokens: For there cum conſtat de corpore delicti, when the Subject of the Crime is viſible, this ſuſtains the Preſumptions, and gives the indicia, Tokens or Signs, their juſt Weight.

To which it was anſwered, That the Pannels Procurators appear to be in a Miſtake, either as to what is the Corpus delicti, the Subject of the Crime, or as to what is meaned by it: And for clearing of this Point, it is to be conſidered, that Crimes are of two Natures, ſome cum effectu permanente, with permanent Effects, as the killing of a Man, or the burning of a Houſe; in which Caſes, the dead Body, and the Rubbiſh, are permanent Effects: But other Crimes have no ſuch permanent Effects, as treaſonable Plottings, Falſhoods, Blaſphemies, and the like, where indeed there is no ſuch corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, as in the former Crimes; but here all the Crime conſiſts in facto & animo, in the Fact and Way of doing it; and the Fact, tho' tranſient, yet if doloſe, unjuſtly done, makes the Crime. And therefore, according to this Diſtinction, the corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, is never requiſite to be proven, but in the foreſaid Crimes that leave permanent Effects; and neither then alſo, unleſs the Crimes be libelled with theſe Effects: For if it ſhould be libelled, for Example, that a Murderer not only killed, but burned the Body to Aſhes, or drowned it in the Sea, there would be no farther need to prove this corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, but only to prove the Fact of killing, and killing doloſe, unjuſtly, in which indeed the Eſſence of the Crime conſiſts. And thus in Confeſſions, as well as in Libels; if a Man confeſs a Murder, and yet the Body murdered no where appears; then the Confeſſion is not raſhly to be laid hold upon, becauſe it may proceed from Deſign, or Melancholy: But yet even in this Caſe, that the Confeſſion ſhould bear not only the Murder, but the deſtroying of the Body murdered, by Fire or Water, as ſaid is, then all the Enquiry would be, whether the Fact of Murder be proven or not? Which Things, if applied to our preſent Caſe, where it is expreſly libelled, not only that the Pannels invaded the Ship by Piracy, but that they threw the Men murdered over-board into the Sea, and alſo ſold the Ship; all the Enquiry that remains is, whether this Fact was ſo done or not? And the Libel is moſt relevant, tho' neither Ship or Men appear. And yet farther, if the Pannels Procurators will ſtill be ſo * graſſier as to require a corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, when it's expreſly libelled, that the Effect of the Delict was deſtroyed and put out of the way, they may ſatisfie themſelves, that the Goods robbed are ſtill extant, and were found on Board of Captain Green's Ship: And therefore 'tis plain, that in this Caſe, and to ſuſtain the Indicia, Tokens and Qualifications libelled on, there needs no farder either Condeſcendance or Proof of the corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, which was induſtriouſly deſtroyed.

* Dull or unreaſonable.

But, Secondly, It was objected, That all the Qualifications are inſufficient and remote, and at beſt but probable: Whereas the known Rule is, that Crimes muſt be proven either per Teſtes, by Witneſs above Exception, or per documenta clariſſima, very clear Proofs, or per indicia indubitata, undoubted Tokens: None of which hold in this Caſe; for as for the Indicia, Tokens, there is not one of them, but take the ſame ſingly, as the hearing of Shooting on the Shore, the ſeeing the Ship Worceſter, having another lying at her Stern, the Boats coming aſhore for Water, and the Crew ſaying, they had been a Busking, & ſic de cæteris, and ſo of the reſt; but take them ſingly, and they may all have a good and innocent Conſtruction: Nor can it be ſaid, that jointly they become ſtronger, and fortifie one another, as ſingle Arrows eaſily broken when apart, yet cannot be broken in a Sheaf, becauſe that all the Qualifications and Indicia, Tokens in the Libel, with the foreſaid Conſtructions, may be put upon them, the Conſtructions will ſtill take off the Face; beſides that, it's well known, that there are ſome Indicia only probabilia, ſome Tokens only probable, and that the Law requires Indicia indubitata, undoubted Signs; it being ſtill the ſafer ſide to ſpare doubtful Innocents, than to condemn only preſumed and probable Guilt. To all which is to be added, That it's the common Opinion of Doctors, that Preſumptions can ſcarce ever conclude ad pœnam ordinariam, to ordinary Puniſhment, but at the moſt only ad pœnam arbitrariam, to Puniſhment at Pleaſure of the Judge: And Mackenzie in his * Criminals, ſays, " Preſumptions are " only founded on may be's, which may " not be; and to allow Crimes to be " proven by Preſumptions, would leave Judges to be " Arbitrary". So that the common Opinion runs againſt Preſumptions. But,

* A Book ſo called.

To all this it's anſwered, That yet it is clear Law, that Crimes may be proven per indicia indubitata, by undoubted Tokens, which in Law are no more than violent Preſumptions, quæ fidem extorquent, that force a Belief: But the Truth is, that in this Caſe the Purſuer hath not only indicia indubitata, undoubted Tokens, but likewiſe poſitive Witneſſes, and alſo Documents in Writing; which all being conjoyned, do make a ſatisfying Evidence, and fix a clear Conviction; which is the utmoſt Deſign of Probation. But Secondly, it's moſt certain, both in Law and † Praticque, that many Crimes are only diſcovered and proven per preſumptiones & indicia, by Preſumptions and Tokens; and that the Doctors in ſeveral Crimes, eſpecially theſe more atrocious, as Treaſon, Piracy, Forgery, and the like, where Wickedneſs endeavours moſt induſtriouſly to hide it ſelf, do allow and approve Probation per Indicia, by Tokens, as moſt neceſſary for the puniſhing of theſe Crimes. It were needleſs to multiply the Citations both from the Law and Doctors, that might be adduced in this Caſe, as l. 3. §. 2. D. de Teſtib. where the Reſcript bears, Quæ argumenta ad quem modum probandæ, cuique rei ſufficiant nullo certo modo ſatis definiri poteſt: " The Ar- " guments to be us'd, and the Manner of proving " every Thing ſufficiently, can't certainly be defin'd and ſoforth: And ſo concludes, Non utiq; ad unam probationis ſpeciem cognitionem ſtatim alligari debere, ſed ex ſententia animi tui, te æſtimare opportere, quid aut credas aut parum probatum tibi opinaris. Item, l. 22. cod. ad legem Corneliam de falſis, ubi falſi examen inciderit tunc acerima fiat indago, argumentis teſtibus ſcripturarum collatione, aliiſque veſtigiis veritatis, &c. " You are not to be tied in taking Cognizance of a " Matter to one Method of Probation, but you " muſt act according to your own Judgment, and " conſider what you are to believe, and what you " think not fully prov'd. Item, &c. when the Fal- " ſhod of a Thing is to be enquired into, then a " moſt

" moſt ſtrict Search is to be made, by Arguments, " Witneſſes, comparing of Hands, and other Signs " of Truth, &c. By which Law it's plain, that Indicia & Preſumptiones, Tokens and Preſumptions, have place, and may make full Faith; and how can it be otherwiſe, ſince firſt, it is certainly the Intereſt of Mankind that Crimes be puniſhed. 2. It's no leſs certain, that Crimes endeavour to cover themſelves. 3. That Proof or Probation is only to make an Evidence for Diſcovery. 4. That the End and Standard of this Diſcovery, and of all Probation, is the ſatisfying Conviction of the Judge that has Power to puniſh. Now if moſt Crimes be committed without Witneſſes, and yet do otherways appear certainly to be committed; and if this Certainty ariſe from Preſumptions, and be withal ſatisfying, it is juſt the ſame as if the Crime was proven by many Witneſſes. And thus Matheus de Criminibus, Tit. de Probationib. cap. 6. per totum, and Gail. lib. 2. Obſ. 149. Numb. 9. where he reaſons moſt juſtly upon Probation by Preſumptions, where there is a Difficulty by reaſon of the Want of Witneſſes; and ſtill brings the Matter to this true Period, That whatever way Faith be fully made to the Judge, either per Teſtes, or per Indicia, or per Preſumptiones, either by Witneſſes, Tokens, or Preſumptions, the End of Probation is attained, and ſo the Evidence ſufficient.

The Procurators for the Pannels alledged, That this were to make Judges too Arbitrary; but tho' it hath indeed been the Care of all Lawyers to prevent Arbitrarineſs, yet it's moſt certain, that where Evidence doth only riſe as Providence offers, and Circumſtances concur, the Arbitriment of the Judge muſt take Place, and the Safety of Mankind doth preciſely lie here in the Integrity and Diſcretion of the Judge, helped indeed by ſome Rules of Law, but no ways bounded or fix'd to preciſe Rules, which the Matter will not bear. And therefore we ſee, that even in the moſt certain Manner of Probation, viz. by Witneſſes, and the higheſt Law of it, that in the Mouth of two or three Witneſſes ſhall every Thing be eſtabliſhed: There is ſtill an Arbitriment inſinuate, as to the Diſcretion of the Judge, or otherways the Law would not have ſaid, two or three, but would have fixed the Number preciſely; whence it is moſt certain, that in all Probation there is an Arbitriment of Diſcretion, and that tho' this Arbitriment may be bounded by ſome Rules, yet the ultimate and true Standard of all Probation, is the ſatisfying Conviction of the Judge, according to his beſt diſcerning.

Theſe Things then premiſed, viz. That a Proof may be ſufficient, per Indicia & Preſumptiones, by Tokens and Preſumptions, the Application to the preſent Caſe is plain; for where the Procurators for the Pannels would take off the Qualifications, as ſeparately inconcludent, and at beſt probable, it is clearly captious; it being certain, that many indicia, Tokens, conjoined and connected, as in this Caſe, may make a ſufficient Evidence, and that here quæ non proſunt ſingula multa juvant, i. e. " Thoſe Things " which taken ſingly, are of no Effect, yet many " of 'em together are. And thus, if firſt the Probation that ſhall be offer'd, of the Hoſtile invading the other Ship, by the Pannels be laid down and thereto added, the Surgeon's Declaration of other Circumſtances, with all the other Qualifications in the Libel, they will certainly force a Faith and full Perſwaſion upon all rational Men, tho' ſeparately they cannot have that Weight; one Witneſs proves not, yet two prove, and in ſome Caſes two are ſcarce ſufficient, but three are beyond Exception. If then even in Witneſſes there be a mutual and fortifying Concurrence, the ſame muſt alſo be admitted in Preſumptions & Indicia. So that upon the whole, the Purſuer craves no more, than that every Man that hears this Libel, and ſhall hear its Proof, lay himſelf fairly open, without any Prejudice to the Light ariſing naturally from the Matter it ſelf, and its Circumſtances, and the Proofs and Confirmations thereof, as they are ſet down in the Libel; and if he do not wilfully reſiſt, he will certainly be ſatisfied to a full Conviction. There are indeed hidden Crimes, and ſuch as are ſaid to be of * difficil Probation, and the moſt atrocious, as Treaſon, Aſſaſſinations, Piracy, Forgery, are ordinarily moſt hid; and Doctors ſay with Reaſon, that their Preſumptions ought to be examined, acerrima indagine, with the ſtricteſt Scrutiny; but all this ſhould be far from impreſſing any with the Prejudice, as if a ſatisfying Evidence may not be found in theſe Caſes. And therefore ſince all pleaded by the Purſuer, is, that firſt his complex Probation per Teſtes & Indicia, by Witneſſes and Tokens, may be fairly received. 2. That concurring and coming together, they may be allowed their juſt Weight. And 3. That if that juſt Weight, and the Evidence that attends it, be ſatisfying, it may be held as concludent. It's clear as the Sun-Light, that no Stretch is intended, but Juſtice fairly proſecuted; and tho' in this Caſe of ſuch an extraordinary Crime, and where ſo much Evidence appears, the Purſuer might even, according to the Claim of Right, preſs the Supplement of Torture, yet he contents himſelf to inſinuate, that tho' this may be both juſt and neceſſary, yet he is hopeful, the Force of his Evidence may otherways prevail.

* Difficult.

The Fourth Particular is the additional Concluſion; but as to that Concluſion, it is ſo natural in it ſelf, and ſo well fortified by the Authority of Doctors, and ſo certain, not only in the Caſe of Counterband, but even of other forbidden Goods, that nothing needs be added; for ſince every Pirate is preſumed to have the Ship and all in it at his Command, as his own; and ſince the Ship is certainly the Inſtrument, as well as the Goods are preſumed to be the Effect of his Piracy, it follows naturally, that the Confiſcation of both Ship and Goods ſhould be a Part of the Pains concluded.

In reſpect whereof, &c.

Here follows the Laws, and ſome other Quotations uſed in the Debate, where they are alſo Engliſh'd in their proper Places.

L. 2. §. 2. Ejuſdem quoq; Principis extat reſcriptum ad Valerium verum de excutienda fide teſtium, in hæc verba: Quæ argumenta ad quem modum probandæ cuique rei ſufficiant, nullo certo modo ſatis definiri poteſt, ſicut non ſemper, ita ſæpe ſine publicis monumentis cujuſque rei veritas deprehenditur, alias numerus teſtium alias dignitas & auctoritas, alias veluti conſentiens fama confirmat rei de qua quæritur fidem, hoc ergo ſolum tibi reſcribere poſſum ſummatim, non utique ad unam probationis ſpeciem cognitionem ſtatim alligari debere, ſed ex ſententia animi tui, te æſtimare oportere, quid aut credas aut parum probatum tibi opinaris. —— ' The true Reſcript of that Prince to ' Valerius, about enquiring into the Credibility of ' Witneſſes, is alſo extant as follows. What Argu- ' ments are ſufficient to prove any Thing, cannot ' certainly be determin'd; for tho' not always, yet it ' many times happens, that the Truth of a Matter

'is found out without publick Monuments. Sometimes the Number, sometimes the Dignity and 'Authority of the Witnesses, and at other times 'common Fame confirms the Truth of the Thing 'in Question. I can only therefore enjoin you, in 'short, that in your Enquiry, or Examination into 'a Matter, you are not to be tied to any one Sort 'of Proof; but you must judge according to your 'own Conscience, what you think to be prov'd, 'or not prov'd to you.

L. 22. C. ad Legem Corneliam de falsis. Ubi falsi examen inciderit, tunc acerrima fiat indago argumentis, testibus, scripturarum collatione, aliisque vestigiis veritatis: Nec accusatori tantum quæstio incumbat, nec probationis ei tota necessitas indicatur; sed inter utramque personam sit Judex medius: Nec ulla interlocutione divulget quæ sentiat; sed tanquam ad imitationem relationis, quæ solum audiendi mandat officium, præbeat notionem: Postrema sententia, quid sibi liqueat, prodituras:---' When you 'are to enquire into the Falshood of Evidence, you 'must make the strictest Inquisition that's possible, 'by Arguments, Witnesses, comparing of Hands, 'and other Signs of Truth. Neither must the Accuser only be question'd, or the whole Charge of the 'Proof be laid upon him: But the Judge must act 'an indifferent Part betwixt the Plaintiff and Defendant; and by no means divulge his Opinion, 'but give both Parties the Hearing, and at last pronounce according to his own Judgment.

Matthæus de Criminibus, Lib. 48. Dig. Tit. 15. de Probationibus, Pag. 675. Itaque si cum uno illo Teste nulla concurrant argumenta, nequaquam audiendus erit; sed cum Paulo dicendum in Lege duo 30 d. de Testam. tut. non Jus deficit, sed Probatio. At si argumenta alia concurrant, audiendus: Non enim necesse est unum Crimen, uno & eo Probationis genere ostendi, veluti testibus tantum vel tabulis, vel argumentis. Possunt & diversa genera ita conjungi, ut quæ singula non nocerent, ea universa tanquam grando reum opprimant. L. 3. Sect. 3. ejusdem d. de Testib. Hoc est, quod aliis verbis dicitur plures Probationes imperfectas posse conjungi.-----' Therefore if with that one Witness 'there be no concurring Arguments, he is not at 'all to be regarded: But we must say with Paulus, in Lege duo 30 d. de Testam. tut. The Law 'is not defective, but the Proof. But if other Arguments concur, he is to be regarded: For it is 'not necessary that one Crime be made evident by 'one manner of Proof only; as by Witnesses, by 'Writing, or by Arguments only: For several 'Sorts of Proof may be so conjoin'd, that those 'which taken alone, would not affect the Criminal, yet being put all together, come upon him, 'and overwhelm him like a Storm of Hail. L. 3. Sect. 3. of the same D. concerning Witnesses; 'That 'is, as it is expressed in other Words, Several imperfect Proofs may be join'd together.

Gail. Obs. 66. Num. 12. P. 416. Et regulariter Testes singulares plenam Fidem faciunt, quando aliquid in genere probandum est; puta Titium esse infamem aut furiosum, quo licet singulares sint respectu actuum, tamen si ratione finis conveniant, integrè probant.-----' And regularly single Witnesses make full Proof, when any Thing is to be 'proven in general; for instance, that Titius is an 'infamous Person, or a Madman: For tho' the 'Witnesses be single in respect of the Acts, yet if 'they agree in the End, the Proof is full.

It may be easily granted, that regulariter Indicia debent esse indubitata, ad condemnandum reum: 'That regularly Presumptions ought to be uncon'trovertible, when a Criminal is to be condemn'd 'upon them. But at that same Time it must always be owned, that there are Crimes excepted from the Rule, by the general Opinion of the Doctors; such as Crimen Læsæ Majestatis, & Crimen Assassinii, Treason and Assassination; of which last sort, the Crime of Piracy is the most atrocious. And therefore Giurba, in Consil. 22. Num. 5. saith, Sed Assassinii qualitas homicidio adjecta, novam constituit Delicti Speciem:----- The Quality of Assassination added to Murder, forms a new Sort of Crime. Num. 17. In Assassinio omnia procedant quæ in Crminibus exceptis:--- In Assassination, all Things are to proceed as in excepted Crimes. And Num. 18. *Assassini Crimen, ob illius Atrocitatem, æquiparatur Crimini Læsæ Majestatis:---*The Crime of Assassination, because of its Atrociousness and Enormity, is made equal to Treason. And then Num. 22. he concludes, That in Probatione Assassinii, probabilia sufficiunt Argumenta:---- In the Proof of Assassination, probable Arguments are sufficient. And Mascard, de Probationibus, Conclus. 1228. Num. 77. In Crimine Assassinii probabilibus Argumentis probari potest: Assassination may be prov'd by probable Arguments. And Num. 78, 79, 80, and 83. he names the other atrocious Crimes, where the like Probation is sufficient; and in that same Conclusion, Num. 51. Quod ex multis Indiciis simul junctis, resultat plena Probatio etiam ad quem criminaliter condemnandum:---- Many Presumptions joined together, make full Proof to condemn any Man in a Criminal Case. And Quæst. 8. Num. 8. *Probatio per Evidentiam omnibus est potentior, & inter omnes ejus generis major est illa, quæ fit per Testes de visu:---*Proof by Evidence is the strongest of all Proof, and especially by Eye-witnesses. And Conclus. 831. Num. 4. Probatio per Conjecturas & Indicia, in his quæ difficilia sunt probatu, & clandestinè committuntur, habentur pro evidenti & clara Probatione:--- Probation by Conjectures and Presumptions, in Things hard to be proven, and clandestinly committed, are held to be good and evident Proof.

Carpzovius, Quæst. 223. Num. 57. Secus tamen Res se habet, si plura Indicia concurrant & conjunctim reum aggravent, quorum unumquodque per testem singularem probetur; nam una Præsumptio aliam juvat, plurimaque Indicia conjuncta fidem faciunt:---- But the Matter is otherwise, if many Presumptions concur, and load the Defendant; of which any one may be prov'd by a single Witness: For one Presumption strengthens another; and many of them join'd together, make Proof.

And in the Tryal of John Swintoun for Murdering of his Wife, there was no direct Proof by Witnesses; but the Libel being qualified, the Proof was by a young Girl of 14 or 15 Years, who left John Swintoun and his Wife alone in the House, and went to the Smith's Shop, to enqnire for Letters; but returning, found the Door shut, and therefore went away for a little Space; and then coming back and knocking, her Master opened, and she perceived some Red, like Blood, upon his Shoes. And when she came in, she found her Mistress dead in the †Spence; which was all she could say. And then another Man declared, that he saw John Swintoun go from his House to a *Stank, and there wash his Shoes. Which Indicia, Presumptions, being joined with the Proofs of their ill Agreement, and frequent Quarrellings before, did determine the * Assize. And tho' it was strictly objected, that in the Mouth of Two or Three Witnesses, every Thing should be established; and that in the aforesaid Case there was no direct Witness at all, far less Two or Three; and that even the aforesaid Circumstances were only proven by single Witnesses; yet the Assize found that Evidence in the Presumptions and † Indicia laid together, that they brought in their Verdict proven; and Swintoun thereafter confessed, and was executed.

And in effect, unless that Indicia and Presumptions be sustained, and even single Witnesses for proving these several Presumptions and Indicia; which is called a Cumulative Probation, when all the Witnesses and Testimonies concur in idem Crimen, & ad eundem Finem, in the same Crime, and to the same End; Crimes, and these the most atrocious, would escape unpunished.

And therefore, upon the whole, it is most certain, when Presumptions, Qualifications, and † Indicia concur, and make a full persuasive Evidence; the Probation should be held for as fully sufficient, as the most direct Witnesses; since all that the Witnesses can do, is only to make full Faith in the Matter, which may be otherwise supplied, as said is.

As to the Additional Conclusion, it may be * noticed, that Molloy, de Jure Maritimo, Lib. 1. Cap. 3. Sect. 19. Pag. 60. saith, That when a Merchant procures Letters of Mark or Reprize, and then delivers the Commission to Persons to endeavour a Satisfaction; if such Persons commit Piracy, the Vessel is forfeited without Controversy.

THE said Captain Thomas Green, Captain John Madder, and others belonging to the Ship called the Worcester, being pursued at the Instance of the said Mr. Higgins, Procurator-Fiscal, before the High Court of Admiralty, and the Lords Assessors appointed by the Privy Council; for the Crimes of Piracy, Robbery and Murder, conform to Two Criminal Indictments, raised at the Instance of the said Fiscal. The Case being fully pleaded before the Honourable Judges of Admiralty, and the Lords Assessors; both the Accuser and Accused were ordained severally to inform, as Use is in such Cases.

The Criminal Indictments being holden as repeated, which * coincide both as to the Conclusion, and Media concludendi, way of concluding; and denied it is needless to repeat some preliminary Defences that were proponed, seeing it seemed just to the Honourable Court to repel the same: And therefore the Pannels proceed to their Defences, whereupon they were ordained to inform. These are of Two Sorts; First, * Dilator; and Secondly, † Peremptor.

And first, it was proponed for Henry Keigle, Carpenter, and others of the Pannels in the same Indictment with him, That they could not be put to answer, unless the Captain himself were first insisted against; because they being his Crew, and under his Command, they could not be charged with any Thing done by them, unless he were first tried.

It was answered for the Pursuer, That they were not * convened for any Thing alledged acted by their Captain, and by them as his Crew; but that they were convened as Socii, Fellow Criminals, and Partakers of the Crimes libelled; which could be warranted by no Commission nor Character the Captain did, or could pretend to: And that they were all charged as being Socii, Fellows, and involved together in one Crime; and so every one must answer for himself.

* call'd to the Bar.

It was replied for the said Henry Keigle, and the other Pannels with him, That the Pannels are libelled against as the Crew of the Worcester, under the Command of Captain Thomas Green; and that under his Command they did attack a Ship, &c. So that they are here libelled only as Complices, and Accessaries to the Crime alledged; and therefore, according to the Principles of Law, the principal Delinquent ought to be first try'd; especially where the Captain was in Custody, and might be brought to his Tryal; and that by the Commission produced under the Great Seal of England, superscribed by King William, the said Thomas Green was cloathed with a Power, authorizing him to attack and suppress Pirates, which is a Military Power, and consequently implies an Authority and Command over the Crew of the Ship, to give ready Obedience in all these Matters: So that the poor Pannels, who are of the Crew, have all Reason in the World to contend, That the Captain, whose Actings in these Matters they could hardly well debate, should first pass the Tryal upon the Crimes alledged; who might, by Virtue of his Commission, and otherways, † exculpate, and defend himself against the Crimes libelled; and consequently, all the Crew that were in Subjection under him.

This Defence the Pannel might perhaps plead, to a further Extent to absolve them entirely; but at present they conceive, it can hardly be denied, the Captain should first undergo the Tryal. And there is a great Difference betwixt Socii Criminis, Fellow Criminals, which are either independent upon one another, or if associate under one Head, as Banditti and Pirates usually are, (which is an illegal and unwarrantable Authority taken up) and Persons accused as Socii Criminis, Fellow Criminals, who by Legal Authority are subjected to the Command of others: In which Case, if the Person trusted with the Authority, has transgressed, or abused it; if it does not plead an absolute Exemption from the Punishment of the Transgression, at least it should have this Effect, That the Head and Chieftain should be obliged first to his Defence; which it is hoped the Honourable Judges will find just and reasonable.

The

The other dilatory Defence, propoſed for the Captain and others in the Second Libel, was, That whereas John Reynolds, Second Mate, was convened and pannelled with him, as alſo ſome others, as Socii Criminis, Fellow Criminals, whom the Captain and other Pannels had cited as Witneſſes in their * Exculpation; it was both ordinary and abſolutely neceſſary, that theſe Perſons ſo cited for Exculpation, ſhould be firſt tried; to the end, that being purged of the Imputation of any Crimes, they might be capable to be Witneſſes, for proving the Defences of Exculpation, that the Captain and other Pannels did propoſe and inſiſt upon, for the Vindication of their Innocency.

* Defence.

It was anſwer'd for the Fiſcal, That he owned, when both * Actors and Witneſſes were included in one † Libel, of Deſign to deprive the Actors of their Defences; the Actors might, and were allowed to condeſcend upon thoſe, whom they intended to uſe as Witneſſes: But then at the ſame Time, they were obliged to propoſe a Ground of Exculpation for them, and ſo crave that they might be firſt tried upon the foreſaid Ground; otherways they could not, without ſuch a ſpecial Condeſcendance, * intervert the Form of Tryal. And there could be nothing more groundleſs, tending to elude all Criminal Proceedings againſt Complices of the ſame Crimes, than to allow any of them at random to crave others to be firſt tried; and ſo the Tryal to proceed of one ſingle Perſon after another: Whereas the true and plain Method were, that the Purſuer inſiſt againſt ſuch as he pleaſes, either ſingly or jointly. And unleſs ſome † Specialty be alledged, why the Tryal of one ſhould proceed before the Tryal of another; it never was, nor could be left to the Arbitriment of the Pannels. And therefore, unleſs the Captain will offer to prove, that Reynolds, and others whom they would have firſt tried, were alibi, elſewhere; their arbitrary Demand of having them tried in the firſt place, without any Reaſon, cannot be regarded.

* Actors. † Indictment. * alter. † Special Cauſe.

It was anſwered for the Captain, and the other Pannels, That their Demand upon this Point was moſt conſonant to Reaſon, Law and Form, in Criminal Procedures: That Exculpation, which tends to the Proof of Innocence, and Freedom from Guilt, was moſt favourable; becauſe it is ſtill preſumed, till the Crime be proved. And therefore it is, that Witneſſes who are not regularly admitted for proving of a Crime, becauſe of ſome Exception, will be allowed to prove the Defender's Innocence. And upon this Account it is, that ſeveral Things in Form are remitted in Exculpation: And there is nothing more material for Defence of Perſons accuſed, againſt the Proſecutor, (who ordinarily is prejudged and prepoſſeſs'd) to guard them againſt all the indirect Methods that may be taken by the Purſuer; to preclude the Accuſed from the uſual Means of proving of their Defences, than what is now demanded. And ſince none can be more proper Witneſſes for proving a Pannel's Defence, (as for Inſtance, Moderamen inculpatæ Tutelæ, i. e. the Rule of blameleſs Self-Defence, as Perſons ſaid to be preſent) therefore a violent Purſuer might, in ſuch a Caſe of Deſign to preclude the Pannel from his Defence, cite thoſe preſent as acceſſary. Upon which Account it is, that both Reaſon and Law provides, that if the Pannel does offer to prove a relevant Defence, by the Socii Criminis, Partakers of the Crime accuſed with him; the Purſuer muſt neceſſarily firſt proceed to the Tryal of theſe Socii, Partakers, who otherways would have been led as † habile Witneſſes; to the end, that being purged, they may be yet habile.

This is ſo plain in Reaſon, and has been look'd upon as the •conſtant Practice in all Criminal Procedures in the Juſticiary Courts of Scotland, that it is admired the Fiſcal ſhould make any Oppoſition to it.

He ſo far owns in his Pleading, that it is Form and juſt upon the Matter; but would ſhift it in this particular Caſe, unleſs the Pannels would alledge and * found upon a particular Ground of Exculpation, and offer to prove and inſtruct the ſame, as that their Socii, Companions, cited as Witneſſes, were alibi, elſewhere; but this is altogether without Foundation. For in all criminal Proſecutions, the Accuſed are not put to prove their Defences, becauſe the denying of the Libel is a Defence ſufficient of it ſelf; and if the Libel be not proved, the Pannel goes free by the Rule Actore non probante abſolvitur reus, the Plantiff failing in his Proof, the Defendant is abſolv'd. ſo that when there are Perſons accuſed as Socii Criminis, Fellow-Criminals, who might be very habile Witneſſes for exculpating the reſt, if they did not lie under the Imputation, when their Tryal is firſt required, that they may be purged of the Imputation, there is no Neceſſity to propone for them any ſpecial Defence, * elideing the Libel; ſeeing the very Denial of the Libel is enough, and their Innocence is preſumed, except Guilt be proved. And if the Fiſcal will have the Captain, and the other Pannels, to condeſcend upon what Ground their other Socii, Companions, cited as Witneſſes, ſhould be acquit; they need ſay no more, but that they ought to be acquit, becauſe the Libel is not true. And is there not the ſame Reaſon to acquit Pannels, becauſe the Libel is not proved; and conſequently, to render them habile Witneſſes for other Perſons accuſed, as if the ſaid Perſons were acquit upon a Defence proponed, elideing the Libel; whereby it plainly appears, the Anſwer given is ſtrained, and does mightily increaſe the Suſpicion againſt the Fiſcal, that he has indicted the Witneſſes cited by the Captain, and the other Perſons in their Exculpation, of Purpoſe to preclude them from their Means of Defence; and the rather, that the Pannels appeal to the Honourable Judges, if it was not owned by the Purſuer in the Debate, that Mr. Reynolds was aſhore at the Time of the pretended Attack; beſides that, the Libel bears the Chyrurgeon, and others of the Crew, were aſhore the Time of the pretended Action, which frees the Pannels of all Calumny. There can be innumerable Inſtances given before the High-Court of Juſticiary in criminal Matters, that where there are ſeveral Complices indicted, if any of them have Grounds of Exculpation, which they can prove by others of the Pannels, their Tryal proceeds firſt. This is plainly aſſerted as unconteſted by Sir George Mackenzie, in his Book of the Laws and Cuſtoms of Scotland, in Matters Criminal, Tit. Excul. Par. 9. nor does he make any Diſtinction, or requires that any ſpecial Defence ſhould be condeſcended upon for purging Socii Criminis, the Fellow-Criminals, to render them habile Witneſſes. The Rule is plain in the Proſecution of † Delicts, before Civil Courts, in order to repair Damages, that if more Persons be cited, as Co-rei ejusdem delicti, guilty of the same Crime, and that some of them are necessary Witnesses for proving the Defences proponed for others; the Proof must first proceed against these. And so it was found by the Lords of Session the 24th of February, 1662, Mackartney against Irving, much more ought it to be in criminal Cases, as lately in the Case of Ross of Auchnacloich against Captain Monre, before the Lords Justiciary. Nor is there any Inconvenience from what is alledged, that this should tend to elude all criminal Proceeding against Complices, and occasion the lengthning out of the Tryal, to proceed to one single Person after another; for as no Time is to be grudged in the Enquiry of such Matters, which concerns the Life of Man, so the Pannels do not propone this preliminary Defence to protract or delay the Tryal, and therefore are satisfied, that not only Reynolds, but their other Socii, Companions, indicted, who are likewise cited in their Exculpation, go to the Tryal at one and the same Time. The Captain, and other Pannels with him, do plainly argue thus; Either Reynolds, and the other Persons cited in the Exculpation, are guilty or not; if they be guilty, it ought to be found so, for till that be, they are presumed innocent; if not guilty, what Law or Reason is there to preclude them from being Witnesses for the Captain, and the other Pannels Defence; or what Law is there that can oblige them to condescend upon, and propone a particular Defence elideing the Libel, when the Libel is not owned to be true, and that the Pannels have all denied the same? So it is hoped the Honourable Judges, and the Lords-Assessors, will not preclude them from the ordinary Privilege, which, hitherto, has not been denied to any Pannel.

For if this was allowed, a violent Pursuer might prevent Probation, and render it impracticable. For, suppose one Man kill another in Self-Defence, two Gentlemen walking can testify this; but to prevent the Probation of inculpata tutela, unblameable Self-Defence, they are cited as Parties; and they can prove by other two Persons, at a greater Distance, their alibi, being elsewhere, which when the Pursuer gets notice of, they are made Parties also; and so in infinitum. So that the said violent Pursuer might prevent all Probation, if the Defender were obliged to alledge alibi, being elsewhere, for the Witnesses of his Exculpation.

*The * peremptory Defences proponed for the whole Pannels in both Libels, as totally excluding the same as  Irrelevant, are as follows.*

* Positive.  Not good or sufficient in Law.

1. THAT the Libel was irrelevant, as being general and indefinite, not condescending upon the Name, Designation, or any other Sign or Evidence, by which the Ship alledged to be seized might be particularly distinguished, nor yet the Persons Names alledged to be murdered, or to whom the Ship and Goods robbed did belong; which seemed to be absolutely necessary in all such criminal Indictments, not only as a Requisite in Form, but in Equity and Reason; without which, Persons accused should be in great Hazard from general and indefinite Libels, and precluded from their Means of Defence, which otherways are obvious, when the Accusation is certain, special, and pointed.

It was answered by the Pursuer, That he had libelled as definitely and closely, as the Thing would allow; for it being libelled, that the Pannels did, without any lawful Cause or Warrant, attack a Ship, sailed by her own Crew, and having her own Cargo aboard, and that they over-maltered the Ship, in an hostile Manner, and robbed the Goods: These were certain Crimes manifest in themselves, and if the Pannels acted them in such a Manner, as to destroy the Ship and the Men, and imbezzelled the Cargo, so as no further Knowledge could be had thereof, it was only an Aggravation of the Crime, and could not hinder the Accusation to proceed; nor was any * Condescendance here necessary for Exculpation: for of whatever Designation the Ship was, and whatever the Men and Goods were, yet the Crime was still the same; and that it was known in our Practice, Robberries and Depredations are sustained, albeit neither the Quality of the Goods nor Owners be condescended upon; and in effect, the Pannels Defence of Indefiniteness is such, that if in the Road of Leith, before hundreds of Spectators, one Ship should invade another, destroy her Men, seize her Goods, and sink the Vessel, whereby none of all these could be condescended upon, there could be no criminal Libel upon it, because of the Defence of Indefiniteness, which were most absurd.

* Particular Instance.

It was replied for the Pannels, That what was said, did not take off the Objection of the Indefiniteness of the Libel, which by our Form and Law can be the Ground of no criminal Accusation; for in all such Procedures, debet constare de corpore delicti, the visible Effect or Matter of the Crime ought to appear; that is, that such a Ship is taken by Piracy, such Men murdered, and the like. It is inconsistent with the Nature of a criminal Accusation, that Men should be alledged to be murdered, Ships seized, and these not condescended upon, and by our constant Practice it is so required: Nor can it be instanced, that ever any such indefinite Libel was sustained. There are no Questions whatsoever, that are more nice than these concerning the Life of Man, and therefore the Englishman Coke, 7 Rep. Calvin's Case, observes, that an Indictment should be most curiously and certainly penned; and the † Old Books of the Majesty, requires several Things to be specially express'd, as the Names of the Parties, Day, Year, Place, Cause of Complaint, and Damage; and as it is necessary in Form, so this Form has been founded upon just Reason, for otherways these Inconveniences should plainly follow from general and indefinite Libels.

† A Law-Book so called.

First, A Person indefinitely accused of a Crime, as for Example, of Murder, without expressing the Person alledged to be murdered, can never be safe from any Absolution or Acquitment in Courts; for how can he oppone his * Sentence Absolviture to a special Accusation that afterwards may be raised, seeing he cannot make the one meet the other. And if Captain Green, and the other Pannels, shall be now † Assoilzied, this should not be a good Defence to them, neither in Scotland nor England, if they should be afterwards criminally pursued, for for attacking a Ship, and murdering of Men, ſpecially condeſcended upon, becauſe it is not clear, that the preſent Indictment, as drawn, did concern theſe ſpecial Accuſations; and therefore Accuſations of that Nature ſhould be ſo ſpecial, as that afterwards the accuſed be not brought to any further Diſturbance. 2. The Reaſon why ſuch Accuſations ſhould be ſpecial and definite, is, That the Pannels be not precluded from the obvious Defences, that tend to elide the Libel; as here in this Caſe, if the Libel were ſpecial and circumſtantiate, and ſome Deſignation given of the Ship and Crew, it might be in their Power to prove the obvious Defence, that ſuch a Ship was at the Time libelled, in ſuch another Part of the World; that ſuch a Ship was either caſt away by Storm, or taken by Pyrates in ſuch a Place; or that the Ship is yet extant, and the Crew alive: From all which, the Pannels are precluded by a general and indefinite Libel; and therefore Law has fixed the Forms in theſe Caſes, that ſuch Accuſations be not vagrant and looſe.

It will not be denied, but that the Time and Place muſt be expreſs'd: The ſame Parity of Reaſon obliges to a ſpecial Condeſcendance of the Party injured, Damage ſuſtained, as relating to ſuch particular Perſons. And the above-cited Sir George Mackenzie, in his Title of Libels, and the Forms thereof, does ſet down, That if the Defender crave the Purſuer to expreſs the Day, becauſe he offers to prove alibi, being elſewhere; then the Judge ſhould force the Purſuer to expreſs the Day, or elſe the Defender would be precluded from proving his Innocence. The ſame Reaſon is, that the Purſuer here ſhould be particular, as to the Ship alledged to be ſeized, &c. becauſe the Pannel might offer to prove that that Ship was alibi, elſewhere, at the Time: And many more Defences ariſe from the condeſcending upon the Corpus delicti, the viſible Effect of the Crime, than from the Circumſtance of either Time or Place. And this is not laid down conditionally, that theſe are not the Requiſites of a Criminal Indictment; except firſt the accuſed propone their Defence, verbi gratia, alibi, for inſtance, elſewhere: But it is laid down as a Rule, That theſe are the Requiſites of all Criminal Libels; and the Reaſon given is, That the Pannels be not precluded from their Defences: So that it is not more * noticed, whether in this or that particular Caſe this Defect is prejudicial, becauſe Neceſſity has firſt induced the Form; and then this Form turns to be a Law in all ſuch Caſes. And the forecited Sir George Mackenzie, in the ſame Paragraph, thinks it ſo far a Requiſite of a Criminal Libel that the Crime ſhould be particularly † ſubſumed, that he brings it as an Argument why it ſhould be ſo, that it is declared by the 148th Act Parl. 12 K. James VI. That a Libel bearing common Regrating, or Foreſtalling, in the general, ſhall be relevant, without condeſcending on the Time or Way of committing the ſame: And therefore concludes, that ſeeing this was an Act diſpenſing with the regular way; Exceptio firmat Regulam in non exceptis, an Exception confirms the Rule in Things not excepted. And hence it is not a good Argument, that the Purſuer has libelled as definitely and cloſely as he could in the preſent Matter: For better an Inconvenience ſhould be ſuffer'd in a particular Caſe, than that a dangerous Preparative be laid down, of admitting indefinite and general Criminal Libels, whereby poor Pannels may be precluded from their Means of Defence. And this will ſerve to obviate the Argument drawn from a very infeazible Chance, ſuppoſed to fall out in the Road of Leith; which as proponed, will likewiſe be otherwiſe circumſtantiate as to a poſitive Probation, and not founded upon Conjectures and Preſumptions, as this Caſe is.

Nor can the Fiſcal altogether excuſe his indefinite Libel, ſeeing the Means was not wanting of his coming to the Knowledge of the Ship, if it be true what is libelled; ſeeing the Ship was not ſunk, but ſold to a particular Perſon; and by ſome Evidence of the Ship, the Crew might likeways have been known.

3. As Law and Form require ſuch Libels to be definite and ſpecial, ſo more eſpecially in this Caſe; becauſe Captain Green was clothed with a Commiſſion under the Broad Seal of England, which empower'd him to act in Hoſtility againſt all Pirates: And therefore a general and indefinite Libel, upon attacking and ſeizing a Ship in his Caſe, would ſeem very improper: For the Preſumption muſt run in his Favours, That if any Acts of Hoſtility were done by him, they muſt be preſumed in Proſecution of his Commiſſion. This is not pleaded as a ſeparate Defence, to elide the Libel; nor is it pleaded to have given him full Liberty to have ranged impune, with Impunity, but as a Specialty in this Caſe; that as it is a Defect in all Criminal Libels to be general and indefinite, ſo much more in this Libel, he being clothed with a Commiſſion, and having Power to † aſſail. And therefore the Preſumption runs in his Favours; except the particular Ship were condeſcended upon, known to be a Merchant and Trading Ship, and conſequently he out of his Duty in attacking the ſame. And therefore it is frivolous to object, that the Commiſſion obliged him to keep a particular Journal of whatſoever Veſſel he ſhould attack hoſtily; ſeeing the attacking of any Veſſel whatſoever is denied, and the Argument from the Commiſſion only preſſed to this End, That no indefinite Libel of attacking Ships, is relevant againſt a Perſon clothed with a Power to attack in certain Caſes; and which the Accuſer was ſo far convinced of, that for ſupplying that Defect in his Libel, he in his Pleading and Information, is pleaſed to condeſcend upon this ſpecial Qualification, and Mark of the Ship attacked, that ſhe was a free Ship; which therefore he is obliged to prove.

The Purſuer was at the Pains to defend his Libels from an Objection, as if they had wanted Time and Place. The Pannels did indeed conjoin this with the other; That as the determining the Time and Place ſeem to be abſolutely requiſite; ſo likewiſe the Condeſcendance upon the particular Names, and Deſignations of the Ship and Perſon, both being equally and neceſſarily requir'd, that Pannels be not precluded from their juſt Defences. And the Time libelled comprehending the Space of Four Months, being too indefinite; it is likewiſe reaſonable in ſuch a Caſe, that the Accuſer ſhould be more ſpecial; which the Pannels humbly remit to the Honourable Admirals, and Lords Aſſeſſors.

The Second Peremptory Defence proponed for the Pannels, was, That this being a Libel founded upon ſeveral Qualifications and Preſumptions, the ſame was no ways relevant, to infer the Concluſion ſion of the Libel. A Proof of Crimes from Preſumptions, is very hazardous: And hence it is, that ſome Foreign Nations do not condemn to Death upon Indicia, Tokens, but make them only Ground to * put to the Queſtion. And many Lawyers are of Opinion, that the ordinary Pain of Death is not to be inflicted upon a Proof ariſing from Indicia, Tokens, tho' never ſo pregnant. Of this Opinion is Pharinacius, a great Criminaliſt, and many others; and ſo is Brunemanus, ad L. ult. Cod. de Prob.

* Torture.

But in the next place, whatever the Diverſities of Opinions and Practices of Nations may be in this Point, yet it is certain, where Indicia, Tokens, are taken as a Proof, in order to Puniſhment by Death, they muſt be ſuch as amount to a full Proof, and leave no room for any Scruple or Doubt. This cannot be better expreſs'd, than in the Words of that Excellent Conſtitution of Theodoſius the Emperor, L. ult. Cod. de Prob. Sciant cuncti accuſatores eam ſe rem deferre in publicam notitiam debere, quæ munita ſibi idoneis teſtibus, vel inſtructa apertiſſimis documentis, vel Indiciis ad Probationem indubitatis, & luce clarioribus expedita: - - - - Let all Purſuers take notice, that when they bring a Matter into Publick Judgment, it ought to be ſupported by proper Witneſſes, or plain Proofs, or undoubted Signs and Tokens, as clear as the Sun at Noon. And it will plainly appear from the Libel, that the Qualifications therein narrated, are not ſuch Indicia, Tokens, as that Excellent Conſtitution requires; indubitata, undoubted, apertiſſima, luce clariora, moſt evident, clearer than Sunſhine. There muſt always Difference be made: Some have a probable Shew, and incline the Mind of the Judge; and yet cannot go the Length of a full Proof. L. 5. in Principio Pand. de Pœnis - - - - Sed nec de Suſpicionibus debere aliquem damnare; ſatius enim eſt impunitum relinqui facinus nocentis, quam innocentem damnare: Nor ought any Man to be condemn'd upon Suſpicion; for it is better that a guilty Man paſs unpuniſhed, than that an innocent Man ſhould be condemned. Indicia & Præſumptiones, Tokens and Preſumptions, have much eaſier Place, where conſtat de Corpore delicti, where the Subject of the Crime is viſible; becauſe this helps to ſuſtain the Preſumption, and gives indeed the Indicia, Tokens, their juſt Weight. But theſe, in ſuch a Caſe as this, ubi non conſtat de Corpore delicti, where the Subject of the Crime is not certain, are hardly receivable, ſeeing they want to be applied to a particular Crime.

This ſo neceſſary a Qualification of a Criminal Libel, ut conſtet de Corpore delicti, that the Subject of the Crime ſhould be viſible, the Purſuer endeavoured to evade, by diſtinguiſhing betwixt Crimes that are cum Effectu permanente, have permanent Effects, and ſuch as have no permanent Effects. In the firſt, the Corpus delicti, viſible Effect of the Crime, was neceſſary, not in the latter; and therefore † ſubſumes that in the Caſes libelled, there could be no permanent Effects; becauſe all are libelled to be deſtroyed, and put out of Reach: But plainly this Diſtinction is againſt the Purſuer; becauſe certainly Piracy, Robbery and Murder, are ſuch Crimes as have permanent Effects.

By the Corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, is not meant, that the Subject of the Crime muſt be ſo extant, as to fall under the Senſes; but that the Loſs ſuſtained is felt and known. As for Example: In the Crime of Murder, tho' the Body cannot be reached, yet the particular Loſs is known: It is notorious the Queen wants a Subject; Friends want a Relation, whom they can point out: In Piracy and Robbery, Merchants want their Ships and Goods: So that the Loſs is felt and known, tho' (de facto) the Subject cannot be pointed out. Whereas in this Caſe, no ſuch particular Evidences can be given: None can complain of any particular Loſs, either Queen or Subject. And this is the true Meaning of what is Corpus delicti, a Subject of the Crime. And whatever be the Import of the Objection againſt the Libel, yet it is certain, to alledge Qualifications as the Proof of a Crime, ubi non conſtat de Corpore delicti, where the Subject of the Crime does not appear, is moſt incongruous. And granting, as the Purſuer does further contend, that he has libelled a Corpus delicti, a Subject of the Crime; in ſo far as he has libelled a Criminal Fact, and Deed of Piracy, Robbery and Murder; which ſtill being general, is not that Corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, that Law requires. Yet it was never heard, nor can there be any Lawyer whatſomever adduced, that owns the Corpus delicti, Subject of the Crime, can be made out by Preſumptions and Qualifications. When once it is known that a Crime is committed, it may be owned that Indicia indubitata, undoubted Tokens, ſuch as Law requires, may be a Ground to fix the Guilt upon particular Perſons; becauſe there the Certainty of a Crime committed, does negatively inforce and give weight to the Preſumptions adduced: But when it is not known that a Crime is committed, and that this is firſt to be made out; it is poſitively contended, this cannot be but by a poſitive Probation of concurring † habile Witneſſes: For Preſumptions may be apt to fix a Guilt, quando conſtat de Corpore delicti, when the Subject of the Crime appears, or that the Fact was done, but not before.

In the Third Place, the Preſumptions libelled are very far from being of that nature, as to be concluding to a Conviction; and of that Certainty and Clearneſs as Law requires. All Probations in Criminal Caſes ſhould be infallible and certain; and if there be any Meaning put upon Preſumptions founded upon for proving a Crime, other than to infer a Crime; that is to be laid hold upon, according to the manifeſt Principles of Law and Humanity.

Now the Qualifications libelled, are either ſuch as not only can bear an obvious Senſe, different from what is impoſed, but even a probable one; or are ſuch as are vagrant Expreſſions and Hear-ſays, importing little or nothing, and cannot be applied to the Crimes libelled.

1. The Chirurgeon his having heard Shooting at a Diſtance, while in the mean time he ſaw no Engagement; can eaſily be applied either to Shooting from other Ships, or Shooting upon Salutation, &c.

2. That he did ſee the Worceſter riding in her Birth, and another Ship (as it were) towed to her Stern. 1. It is only Conjecture, being at ſuch a Diſtance. 2. It is improbable, becauſe it is not the ordinary way; and hazards the Ships falling foul of one another, in ſuch common Roads; which might be a Ground to the Chirurgeon's Miſtake at ſuch a Diſtance.

3. That

3. That he did see the Goods lying lumber'd upon the Deck when he came aboard. 1. It is usual in Coast-Trading, that the Goods are brought by Sloops, and so laid upon the Deck till they be stowed. 2. This might be occasioned by the Ship's drawing Water. And to what concerns the Word Busking, and bringing Water from the Shore, it is taken notice of in the Exculpation.

4. That when the Doctor enquired what was the occasion of the Goods lying in confusion, Captain Madder should have answered, Damn you, &c. might proceed from the said Captain Madder's being in a Passion, and concerned for the Goods being damaged, and a Tarpauling-Temper, very usual among Seamen.

5. That the Chyrurgeon did dress two wounded Men; first, one is dead, another is not named in the Libel; and the Black as the other two also, might have got their Wounds by fighting among themselves, which is not unusual; and the rather, that they appeared unwilling to tell the Chyrurgeon, of purpose to conceal their Quarrel from the Captain.

6. As to what is alledged to have occurred betwixt the Doctor and the Linguister, First, It is only Hear-say; in the second Place, there might be a Ship sold to Coge Commodo, but not taken by Captain Green, and it is improbable he would have bought any Ship taken by Piracy upon that Coast.

7. What is libelled about Reynolds and his Sister, their missive Letters, is far from being any Qualification: For, First, Reynolds's Letter is only a † Double. It is strained to put such a Gloss upon the Expression (basely confess) to imply a Guilt, and a Guilt confessed; seeing the Words may easily bear the Meaning of a false Accusation, and is explained by a subsequent Expression, That he would rather die innocent, than accuse any Man falsely; and in the beginning of the Letter, declares, he knew nothing of the Matter.

8. What relates to Haines his Intercourse with Anna Seaton, and others, are nothing but general and ambiguous Expressions, from which nothing can be gathered of the Crimes libelled, and infers no more, than that he was using some Stratagems to gain his Mistress.

And as to the Expression of the Wickedness committed aboard their Ship, it may easily relate to other Crimes, which are but too frequent in such Voyages; as also, as to what was done aboard after the Ship was in the Harbour; and as to the libelled Expression used by Haines against Captain Madder, as the same is general and indefinite, relating to no particular Crime, so this might arise from some particular Pique and Prejudice against Captain Madder: As to what follows * anent the Condition of the Cargo, when the Committee of the Council unloaded the Ship, it is sufficiently taken off in the Exculpation.

* About.

Lastly, As to what is libelled anent the African Company's Seal; First, It will not be pretended, that the Company were in use to give their Seal to any Ship whatsomever trading by their Commission. 2. If any had casually gotten the Seal, there are an hundred Ways whereby the same might have come to the Worcester's Crew without Piracy. And 3. The Seal found aboard and which is lying in the Clerk's Hands, which has a Ship for its Crest, might have given occasion to this Mistake.

It being plain, that the Qualifications libelled, are not of that Import to give a full Conviction; the Pursuer's Argument adduced from the End of Probation, which is to find out the Guilt, and convince of the Truth, may be plainly taken off; that there is no such convincing Proof, as can fully and certainly determine any Judge, but, at most, resolves in a conjectural Proof, never to be admitted to take away the Life of Man.

The Pursuer allows, that if every one of the Circumstances should be taken separately, they would not be sufficient; but being taken jointly, and according to the Series of the Thing, they amount to a full Proof and Conviction; and this is the Nature of all cumulative Probations, which is not to be disjoined, Quæ non prosunt singula multa juvant: The Pursuer does likewise adduce Arguments and Authorities for a cumulative Probation to be of this Nature, that there needs not two concurring Witnesses for every Circumstance. In answer to which, the Pannels do still plead, there is a great Difference to be made betwixt Cases where previously constat de corpore delicti, the Subject of the Crime appears, and that Presumptions are only fixed upon to find out the guilty; and these Cases where in general a Crime is libelled, altho' Presumptions may be admitted in the first, yet never in the other, as is already observed. 2. In all Cases, Presumptions must be such as leave no room to doubt, and must not only have a Probability with them, but a concluding Certainty, which does not give ground to Suspicion, but plainly and firmly convinces; which Certainty cannot be inferred from the Qualifications libelled; all which either can bear a different Construction, or are such vagrant Hear-says, and indefinite Expressions, as amount to no certain and special Crime. 3. Such Presumptions cannot be conjoyned, which particularly taken, are either of small weight, or amount to very little, or that they can probably bear another Sense and Meaning, as has been demonstrated. And, 4. As to the Conjunction of a cumulative Probation, there is a difference to be made betwixt Crimes that are continued, and where the Proof may be had from the Reiteration of the Acts, and those other Crimes which consist only in Fact or Deed.

In the first, a cumulative Probation may be admitted; as in a Libel of Bribery, one Witness may be admitted for one Fact, another for another, and so a Third, which may conjoin, altho' there be not Two concurring for every particular Fact, if there be other concurring Evidences and Arguments: But where there is one positive Fact libelled, this does not so easily admit of a cumulative Probation, especially which is always to be taken along, where the Crime is not specified and determined, as in this Case, and that the ipsum corpus delicti, the Subject of the Crime it self, is still to be made out: So that the Texts of the Law, and Authorities made use of by the Pursuer, may be easily cleared, that either they relate to civil Cases, as l. 3. par. 2. digest. de testibus, where there must be a Preference of a Civil Right of the one to the other: Or if the Texts and Authorities relate to Crimes, the Indicia, Tokens, allowed by them, must be indubitata & luce clariora, undoubted, and clearer than Sun-shine; and presupposes a Crime committed, & corpus delicti, the Subject of the Crime, and tends only to fix the Guilt. And it is positively denied, that there is any Law, or Lawyers, allowing any cumulative Probation to prove a Crime in general, ubi non constat de corpore delicti, where the Subject of the Crime does not appear; and this is a Speciality in the Case of the present Pannels; and the Honourable Judges, and Lords-Aſſeſſors, are earneſtly intreated to conſider it; which does really diſtinguiſh them from the other Caſes mentioned by Lawyers; all * Crimes. which relates to * Delicts actually committed, and that the Preſumptions deduced tend only to fix the Guilt: But when a Crime is alledged in general to be committed, and no ſpecial Condeſcendance upon what Subject, upon whom, and againſt whom, Preſumptions there are not ſufficient, without concurring habile Teſtimonies; even ſuppoſing ſuch a general indefinite Libel could be relevant, againſt which there are abundance of Arguments already given; for unleſs a Fact be proved, even Confeſſion is not ſufficient to fix a Guilt, as muſt be acknowledged by all; much leſs Preſumptions, except the Fact be once known.

The Grounds of Exculpation.

As the Pannels are confident, the Lords Judges will not find the Libels ſo general and ſo qualified, relevant to infer the Pains of Death; So for further clearing their Innocence, they offer the Grounds of Exculpation following, which are either inſtantly inſtructed, or offered to be proved.

And this may be laid down, which cannot be denied, that Preſumptio non delicti excludit preſumptiones delicti, the Preſumption of a Crime not committed excludes the Preſumption of a Crime; to which Purpoſe, Carpz. Part. 3. Q. 123. Num. 69. and in the ſame Place, in dubio ſemper in mitiorem partem eſt preſumendum, In a doubtful Caſe we muſt always take the more charitable ſide; where he cites Multitudes of Lawyers.

1. There is no reaſon to ſuſpect the Pannels of the Crimes libelled, being Perſons of entire Fame, without any Imputation as to their antecedent Life.

2. That they were under a Charter-Party, commiſſioned to a Trading Voyage, and Inſurance made upon Ship and Cargo, which does remove all Suſpicion of Piracy, ſeeing ſuch do ordinarily aſſociate, and out-rig themſelves for that end.

3. A ſtrong Argument of the Pannels Innocence as to Piracy, is, That they were upon their Voyage homeward, to make account to their Fraughters and Owners of their outward Cargo and Returns; of all which they have exact Journals and Accompts, and upon their coming to Frazenburgh gave Advice to their Owners of their Arrival, which was inſert in the Publick Prints from London, as is uſual, and likewiſe ſent a Packet over Land from Frazenburgh to the African Company in Scotland, from Mr. Innes their Correſpondent in the Eaſt-Indies, which is not to be ſuppoſed a Pirate would be entruſted with: Whereas, when ſuch turn Pirates, it is uſually for their own Profit, and ſo not only rob others, but begin firſt with their Owners, and are not found to return to make any ſuch Accounts; which is a ſtronger Proof of the Pannels Innocence, than any Circumſtance libelled to the contrary.

4. Menocheus de preſumptionibus, lib. 5. Preſ. 59. treating of the Preſumptions of Innocence, lays down two very pregnant, Firſt, That if the guilty Perſon could flee and did not, that very Preſumption waſhes away the Guilt; and gives account of a Caſe out of Lucian de amicitia, that Antiphilus and Demetrius being accuſed of Sacrilege, were diſmiſſed by the Prætor, becauſe when they could have fled, they did not. A ſecond, when the accuſed Party offers himſelf to the Judge, it is a ſtrong Preſumption of his Innocence, ſince the Innocent fear nothing, and the Guilty have always the Puniſhment before their Eyes: Both theſe favour the preſent Pannels; for the Rumour was ſpread, and came to their Ears ſome Weeks before they were impriſoned, and yet none of them offered to flee; and one Ballantine being at full liberty amongſt his Friends the Time of the * Incarceration of the reſt, did of his own accord offer himſelf to Priſon. * Impriſonment.

5. That the alledged Confeſſion made by the Chyrurgeon, muſt certainly labour under ſome Miſtake, becauſe, altho' he mentions the Attack to have been at Callicut, and that he heard the Ship was ſold at Keilon, which are at leaſt Fifty Leagues diſtant: And altho' he was aboard all the Time; yet he makes no mention how the Ship was brought along, or any Thing relating to it.

6. It is offered to be proven, that the Black who is alledged to be wounded in the Action, was not aboard Forty eight Hours before the Worceſter ſailed from the Coaſt of Malabar. And further, that the Black declared when he came aboard, that he got the Wound in his Arm by the Bite of a Snake. And further, it can be inſtructed by Chyrurgeons, that the Wound, as it well appears, is more probable to have been got that way than by Gunſhot.

7. Whereas it is libelled, That the Ship was attacked by the Worceſter's Sloop upon the one ſide, and her coming up upon the other:

It is impoſſible a Piracy of that Nature could have been committed upon the Coaſt of Malabar, and not certainly known in England long before the Arrival of the Ship, ſuch is the exact Correſpondence, eſpecially as to ſuch Matters; nor could the Captain either have traded upon the Coaſt, or been received by the Factories and Governors there, if he had committed any ſuch Piracy; whereas it is offered to be proven, that after the Time libelled, he was aſhore kindly entertained, exchanging Letters with the Governor of Anjango, and had Inſtructions and Recommendation from thence to the Governor of Fort-William upon the Coaſt of Bengal, whither he was obliged to go for re-fitting his Ship, and ſtopping the Leak, which he could not conveniently do at Malabar, becauſe of the want of Timber, Cordage and Money to be taken up upon Bottomry.

8. It was aſſerted by the Fiſcal in the Time of the Tryal, that the Action laſted two Days and a half, which is a moſt improbable Story; for either the Night would have ſeparated them, or the Ship attacked might rather have run aſhore, than fall into the Hands of the Pirates.

9. That the Word Busking, libelled as a Term ſignifying a Ship preparing to fight, has a quite different Conſtruction in the ordinar Acceptation among Seamen, and ſignifies, bearing cloſe upon the Wind by a preſs Sail.

10. It is offered to be proven, that their Water was ſtaved on the Coaſt of Malabar in a Storm, and not by Busking as is libelled.

11. And to * redargue the Circumſtance libelled, that the Goods were not right ſtowed; it's acknowledg'd the Ship was ſix Months in a Harbour at Bengal after the libelled Engagement, and there loaded and unloaded: So that they had all opportunity to ſtow the Goods as they thought fit, and certainly they were ſtowed as ſuch Goods uſually are, which cannot be preſs'd without Damage. * Refute.

12. That

12. That the whole inward Loading does not amount to a Value beyond what might be reaſonably expected from the outward Cargo, in a Trading Voyage to theſe Places.

And Laſtly, That in January preceeding, the Time of the alledged Action, there was a Proteſt taken by the Pannels againſt the Governor of Cochin, for not allowing the Ship Worceſter to be refitted there, which ſhe extreamly needed before ſhe could return to Europe; and ſo was in no Capacity, either to fight or take a Ship, as is libelled, in the Months of February, March, April, or May thereafter; and was a Ship ſheathed with Lead, and therefore altogether unfit for ſuch Action; as alſo a ſlow Sailer, and has not the leaſt Mark of any Gunſhot upon her.

So that upon the whole Matter, The Qualifications libelled being ſo weak and conjectural, and the Preſumptions of Innocency ſo ſtrong upon the other Hand; it is confidently expected, that the Honourable Judges and Lords Aſſeſſors will reject the Libel, and let the Pannels go free; which they expect from the Juſtice of the Nation, and the † Humanity with which they are in uſe to treat all Strangers.

† Courteſy.

An ANSWER to the Fiſcal's Citations: With the Counter-Citations for the Pannels.

THO' the Doctors differ about the Force of Preſumptions, and the Effect of Probation, ab Indiciis & Argumentis, from Preſumptions and Arguments; yet they all agree, that Parallels drawn from Civil Cauſes to Criminal ones, are not univerſally to be admitted. Now the Fiſcal cites L. 3. §. 2. de Teſtibus, for evincing that Preſumptions, Indicia & Argumenta, Tokens and Arguments, are to be received.

This Law is taken out of the Fourth Book de Cognitionibus, written by Calliſtratus; the which Book only treats of Civil Caſes, as is manifeſt from the Title of that Book, diſpers'd in the ff. and * congeſted by Labittus, to which I refer. Wherefore this being a Reſcript of the Emperor Hadrian, in a Civil Cauſe, can never be applied in a Criminal one.

The next Citation is, L. 22. C. ad l. Cor. de falſis, which is a Reſcript of the Emperor Conſtantine to the Governor of Rome, about a forged Writ. Now as the Law ſays, ſuch Forgeries can only be diſcover'd by † Collation of Writs, Arguments inferr'd from thence, and Witneſſes. And it is well known, that in our Law we have Two Ways of * Improbation; the Direct, and the Indirect. Now to apply that to the Crime of Robbery or Murder, which muſt be proven † liquidiſſime, and not by * Writs, ſeems very ‖ anomalous. Beſides, Crimes, according to their different Nature, muſt be diverſly proven; ſome by Ear-witneſſes, as Blaſphemy, Hereſy, Curſing of Parents, &c. Others by Eye-witneſſes; as Robbery, Murder, &c. And the Witneſſes competent for proving the one Crime, are not ſo in the other.

The Third Citation is out of Antonius Matheus de Criminibus, ad Lib. ff. 48. Tit. 15. C. 3. N. 4. The Fiſcal cites the latter End of this Section; but omits to ſet down what the Author refers to in the C. 6. of that Title; the doing whereof will ſerve for an Anſwer. The Poſition is, Unus Teſtis non eſt audiendus; at ſi Argumenta alia concurrant, audiendus eſt: One Witneſs is not to be regarded; but if other Arguments concur, he is to be regarded. Now theſe Argumenta muſt be taken out of the C. 6. of that Title. Argumentum nihil eſt aliud, quam Ratio quæ rei dubiæ facit fidem; & eſt vel neceſſarium, vel contingens. Neceſſarium, cujus Conſequentia neceſſaria eſt; veluti coiviſſe eam quæ peperit, furtum feciſſe, qui rem furtivam efferens deprehenſus eſt. Contingens, cujus Conſequentia probabilis eſt; veluti, cædem feciſſe, qui cruentatus eſt: "An Argument is only a Reaſon which "proves a doubtful Thing; and is either neceſſa- "ry, or contingent. That is a neceſſary Argu- "ment, whoſe Conſequence is neceſſary: As for "inſtance, That ſhe who has brought forth a "Child, has certainly known a Man; or that he "who is taken in the Fact carrying off ſtoln "Goods, has certainly committed Theft. A con- "tingent Argument, is that whoſe Conſequence is "only probable: As for inſtance, That the Man "who is bloody, has committed Slaughter." The neceſſary Argument obtains in Criminal as well as in Civil Caſes; but the contingent one, which the Lawyers call a Preſumption, is not of ſuch Force. However, our Author is of Opinion, that Contingentia Argumenta quanquam ſingula fidem non faciant, plura tamen conjuncta crimen manifeſtare poſſunt. Rem uno atque altero exemplo declarabimus. Occiſus eſt Calendis Mævius: Titius perempti inimicus fuit; eidem ſæpius non ſolum interminatus, ſed & inſidiatus eſt: Cum deprehenderetur iiſdem Calendis in loca cædis, cruentatus, cum gladio cruento, ad menſuram vulneris facto, toto vultu expallait; interrogatus, nihil reſpondit, trepidè fugit. Hic ſingula quidem Argumenta infirmiora ſunt, univerſa tamen cædis autorem Titium evidenter deſignant. Simile eſt illud, Clodius cum Pompeia: Nudus cum nuda reperti ſunt in eodem Cubili; preteriit id momentum quo turpitudo perfici potuit. Jam olim ille mulierem deperibat, ad ſtuprum per literas ſollicitaverat. Quis dubitet utrumque Adulterii damnare? "Tho' contingent Arguments "ſingly by themſelves make no Proof; yet ſe- "veral of them join'd together, may make the "Crime evident. We ſhall make it plain by an "Inſtance or two. Mevius was kill'd on the firſt "Day of the Month: Titius was an Enemy to the "Perſon kill'd, and not only frequently threaten'd "him, but way-laid him. And when he was found "on that ſame Day of the Month in the Place "of Slaughter, bloody, with a bloody Sword, an- "ſwerable to the Dimenſions of the Wound; he "look'd as pale as Death: Being examin'd, gave "no Anſwer, but run away in a Fright. In this "Caſe, indeed, the Arguments ſingly conſider'd "don't ſay much; but taken all together, they "plainly prove Titius to have been the Author "of the Murder. What follows is ſuch another "Inſtance. Clodius and Pompeia were found naked "in the ſame Bed, but not in the Act; the Time "for that was paſt: But he had long courted the "Woman, and ſollicited her to Lewdneſs by Let- "ters:

" ters: Then who can make any Doubt to charge " them both with Adultery?" Now there being in the preſent Caſe no ſuch Preſumptions as theſe are; the Rules laid down by this Lawyer Mathæus, ſhew the Circumſtances libelled are not * relevant.

The Fourth Citation is from Gail. L. 2. Obſ. 66. N. 12. The ſetting down of the Title of the Obſervation, which is, Jus venandi an Servitus ſit realis vel perſonalis, Whether Hunting be a real or perſonal Service; and alſo the Apoſtile of the Section, which is, In Materia Decimarum, teſtes ſingulares probant; In Matter of Tythes, ſingle Witneſſes are good; does ſhew, that the Matter there treated is Civil, and not Criminal. And many Things are allowed in Civil Caſes, which are not in Criminal. A. Mathæus ad Lib. ff. 48. Tit. 15. de Probationibus, Cap. 2. Num. 1. Quicunque Teſtes in Cauſis civilibus eſſe non poſſunt, iis nec in Criminalibus Teſtimonii dictio eſt. At non contra; quicunque in Cauſis civilibus audiuntur, ii etiam in criminalibus audiendi ſunt. Graviora enim criminalia Judicia civilibus ſunt, ideoque & Teſtium major delectus adhibendus eſt. " Whoſoever " cannot be Witneſſes in Civil Cauſes, are not to " be admitted in Criminal Cauſes. But the contrary does not hold; viz. That whoever may " be Witneſſes in Civil Cauſes, may alſo be admitted in Criminal Cauſes: For Criminal Cauſes " are of more Weight than Civil Cauſes; and " therefore in Criminal Cauſes, we ought to be " more nice in the Choice of Witneſſes." And the Author illuſtrates this Doctrine, by Examples ſet down in that Chapter.

What has been ſaid, will ſerve to anſwer what is cited out of Giurba, and Maſcardus.

The Citation from Carpzovius's Criminal Practicks, Q. 123. N. 57. is imperfectly excerpted: For I ſhall give no other Anſwer, than what is in the ſame Place, from N. 55, to N. 59. Probantur etiam Indicia ad Torturam per unicum Teſtem, in caſu quo plura Indicia ſimul concurrunt, ſuper quibus Teſtes examinati diverſimodè deponunt; ac unus de uno, alter de alio, tertius etiam de alio teſtificatur: Tum enim omnium Teſtificatio ſimul juncta, veriſimiliter facit de Reo, qui propterea ſub Tormentis interrogari poteſt. Etſi enim hac de re non omni ex parte Interpp. conveniant, nec deſint qui Aſſertionem hanc ſimpliciter rejiciant: Teſteſque hoſce, ut ſingulares conjungendos non eſſe autument, eo quod ſinguli Teſtes haudquaquam fidem faciant. Veriſſimum tamen eſt, plures imperfectas Probationes in Cauſis capitalibus conjungendas eſſe ad plenam Probationem faciendam, quoad effectum torquendi: Quod communiter Dd. placuiſſe, licet namque unicum Indicium ab uno Teſte probatum, ſemiplenam Probationem & Fidem, ad Quæſtionem de Reo habendam non faciat: Secus tamen res ſe habet, ſi plura Indicia concurrant, & conjunctim reum aggravent, quorum unumquodque per Teſtem ſingularem probetur. Nam una Præſumptio aliam adjuvat; plurimaque Indicia conjuncta Fidem faciunt. Quod ipſum tamen non aliter accipi velim, quam hiſce tribus concurrentibus. Primò, Ut Teſtes ſint omni exceptione majores & idonei, ac Vitæ probatæ. Secundò, Ut deponant ſuper Indiciis proximis delicto, non etiam ſuper valde remotis Indiciis. Tertiò, Indicia ſuper quibus Teſtes iſti ſingulares deponunt ſunt plura, & talia quæ reddunt animum Judicis quaſi certum quod Reus deliquerit: Quorum alterutrum ſi deficiat, nullum in Jure habeant Effectum. " Preſumptions make " Torture lawful, when there is but one Witneſs, in a Caſe where ſeveral Preſumptions concur, upon which Witneſſes being examined ſwear " in a different Manner, and one witneſſes as to " one Preſumption, another as to another, and a " third concerning a Third. Then all their Evidence being joined together, makes the Charge " againſt the Perſon probable, who therefore may " be examin'd by Torture. For tho' Interpreters " don't all agree in this Point, and that ſome of " them do abſolutely reject this Opinion, and think " theſe Teſtimonies are not to be joined, becauſe " ſingle Witneſſes don't make Proof; yet it is a " certain Truth, that in Capital Caſes ſeveral imperfect Proofs are to be joined together in order " to make a full Proof as to the Effect of Torture. " This is the common Opinion of the Doctors; for " tho' one Preſumption prov'd by one Witneſs, does " not make half Proof in order to examine the " Priſoner by Torture, yet the Matter is otherwiſe, if ſeveral Preſumptions concur jointly to " charge the Priſoner, of which any one may be proved by a ſingle Witneſs; for one Preſumption " ſtrengthens another, and many of them joined " together make up a Proof. But I would not " have this to be underſtood to be ſo, except when " thoſe three Things concur: 1. That the Witneſſes be above all Exception, proper in the Caſe, " and of a good Life. 2. That they ſwear as to " Circumſtances immediately relating to the Crime, " and not as to thoſe which are very remote. 3. " That the Preſumptions upon which thoſe ſingle " Witneſſes ſwear, be ſeveral and ſuch as in a " Manner may ſatisfy the Judge, that the Priſoner " is guilty of the Crime. But if any of thoſe " Things be wanting, they can have no Effect in Law.

The Preſumptions in Swinton's Caſe were not in the Indictment, but in the Probation, and ſeem to have been very pregnant and near, whereas theſe libelled againſt Captain Green are moſt remote.

But to put this Matter in its true Light, the Honourable Judge and Aſſeſſors are deſired to remember, That Preſumptions never reſpect the Delict, or the Corpus delicti, but the Delinquent, and the Perſon of the Accuſed: For as Menoch. de Preſumpt. L. 1. Q. 8. N. 2. very well ſays, Præſumptio verſatur circa id quod geſtum eſt, ſed ignoratur qualiter geſtum; a Preſumption relates to the Thing done, but not to the Manner of doing it. Now, in the Opinion of all Lawyers, Delictum debet eſſe manifeſtum, a Crime ought to be manifeſt. Julius Clarus, Sententiarum Lib. 5. Q. 4. Sciendum eſt autem quod in omnem Caſum nunquam debet Judex procedere ad aliquem actum, niſi prius illi conſtet Delictum ipſum fuiſſe commiſſum: " But you muſt know, that " a Judge in no Caſe ought to proceed to any Act " of Court, except it appear to him before-hand " that the Crime was committed. And in that Place, illuſtrates this Doctrine by Examples, and the Authority of other Lawyers, to which I refer. His Sentiment in the End of that Queſtion being, Et ubi conſtet Scelus non interveniſſe, ſilebit Proceſſus: And where it appears that no Crime has been committed, Proceedings muſt ſtop.

So, that ubi conſtat de delicto, where the Crime is certain, the Doubt and Controverſy ariſes about the Delinquent, ſo as it is uncertain who is the Perſon guilty, or the Committer of this Crime, whether it be Robbery, Piracy, or Murder. Thoſe who admit of Probation, per Indicia & Argumenta, by Preſumptions and Arguments, diſtinguiſh theſe into Proxima & Remota, near and remote; and to each of them give a different Effect in Law. Carpr Q.

"2. 121. N. 1. Near and certain Preſumptions, "of which every one is ſufficient of it ſelf to ju"ſtify Torture. Preſumptions of this kind, ought "not to be likely or probable, but certain; not ſlight "or trifling, but urgent; not doubtful or equivocal, "that may admit of many Interpretations, but "concluding, really inferring the Crime, and ſo in"ſeparable from it, that thoſe Preſumptions ap"pearing, there ſeems to be nothing wanting but "the Confeſſion of the Criminal, & N. 14. and "following. To make the Preſumption of half full "Proof ſufficient to juſtify Torture, there are three "Things required. 1. That that one Witneſs be "beyond all Exception. 2. That the Witneſs "ſwear as to the immediate Act, which muſt be "underſtood, that the Witneſs give for the Rea"ſon of his Aſſertion, ſome bodily Senſe proper "to the Thing; as for Inſtance, that he ſaw the "Crime committed by the Priſoner, or was pre"ſent at the Time: Therefore if the Witneſs don't "ſwear concerning the Crime it ſelf, but concern"ing ſome Act that comes next to the Crime, it "is not a ſufficient Preſumption. So neither is his "Evidence proper and ſufficient, who ſwears con"cerning a Crime that is the Object of Sight, and "gives an Account of it from ſome other Senſe. "3. That the Evidence concerning the Crime be "in clear and not doubtful Expreſſions. After which our Author gives Examples; and it is to be obſerved, That theſe Indicia, Preſumptions, are requir'd in order to torture; for they are not, in this Author's Opinion, ſufficient to condemn, unleſs they be Certiſſima, Indubitatiſſima, & Luce Meridiana Clariora, moſt certain, undoubted, and as clear as the Sun at Noon, in which Caſe they have the Effect of a compleat Probation.

The Indicia remota, remote Preſumptions, which are alſo term'd, Dubitata, Semiplena, quæ rem veram eſſe arguunt, non ſemper ſed plerumque tantum, unde etiam non dicuntur ſimpliciter certa indicia, ſed veriſimilia & probabilia, ſeu veluti certa Indicia: "Doubtful, half full, which don't always "argue the Matter to be true, but almoſt always; "whence it comes, that they are not ſimply cal"led certain Preſumptions, but likely, probable, "or almoſt certain Preſumptions. And theſe cumulatively and in great Number concurring, may bring a Perſon to Torture, but never to Condemnation.

Now, by applying this general Doctrine to the Indictment, it is Juris Incontraverſi, uncontravertible Law, that the Delictum, Crime it ſelf, cannot be proven per Indicia & Preſumptiones, by Tokens and Preſumptions. And as to the Pannels, tho' a Delict Crime were proven per Teſtes omni exceptione majores, by unexceptionable Witneſſes, yet it will appear, That the Circumſtances libelled, do not deſerve the Name of Indicia, Preſumptions; and tho' they ſhould be allowed that * Compellation, yet they are Remotiſſima, very remote, and by Conſequence can have no Effect as to Condemnation.

* Name.

As to the additional Concluſion, that the Ship and Cargo ſhould be † eſcheated, the Fiſcal cites a wrong Place, and ſuppoſes the Caſe to be what it is not: But ſeeing he values Mr. Molley's Authority ſo much, his Opinion in this Matter, as expreſs'd in the ſame Treatiſe, C. 4. §. 21, 22. is thus: By the Law Marine, if Goods are taken by a Pirate, and afterwards the Pirate attacks another Ship, but in the Attempt is conquered, the Prize becomes abſolutely the Captors, ſaving the Account to be rendred to the Admiral; and it is accounted in Law a juſt Caption of whatſoever may be got or taken from ſuch Beaſts of Prey, be the ſame in their own or in their Succeſſor's Poſſeſſion. But then an Account ought to be rendred to the Admiral, who may (if they happen to be the Goods of the Fellow Subject of the Captors, or of Nations in Amity with his own Sovereign) make Reſtitution to the Owner; the Coſts and Charges, and what other Things in Equity ſhall be decreed to the Captor, firſt conſidered and deducted.

§ 22 By the Statute 27 Edward III. Cap. 13. If a Merchant loſe his Goods at Sea, by Piracy or Tempeſt (not being wreck'd) and they afterwards come to Land, if he can make Proof they are his Goods, they ſhall be reſtored to him in Places guildable by the King's Officers, and Six Men of the Country.

This Law hath a very near Relation with that of the Romans, called de Uſucapione, or the Atinian Law; for Atinius enacted, That the Plea of Preſcription or long Poſſeſſion, ſhould not avail in Things that had been ſtollen, but the Intereſt that the right Owner had, ſhould remain perpetual: The Words of the Law are theſe, Quod ſurreptum eſt, ejus rei Æterna auctoritas eſſet. Where by, Auctoritas, Authority, is meaned Jus Dominii, the Right of the Proprietor remains perpetual, tho' a Thing be ſtole.

The Aſſize lawfully ſworn, and no Objection of the Law in the contrary.

Mr. Alexander Higgins the Purſuer, for Probation, adduced the Witneſſes after Deponing, viz.

* Appeared. * COmpeared Antonio Ferdinando Cook's Mate of the Ship the Worceſter, which was commanded by Captain Thomas Green, aged twenty four Years, or thereby, unmarried; with Captain George Yeaman, Merchant in Dundee, ſworn Interpreter: And the ſaid Antonio Ferdinando being ſolemnly ſworn, ‖ purged of partial Counſel, examined and interrogate upon the Libels, or Indictments. And being interrogate if he believed in GOD, and if he was a Chriſtian: Depones, That he believes in GOD, and that he was born of Chriſtian Parents, and is a Chriſtian himſelf. And being interrogate upon the Indictment, Depones, That at Callicoiloan upon the Coaſt of Malabar, the Deponent did come aboard the Sloop belonging to Captain Green's Ship called the Worceſter; at which Time the Deponent did enter to the Service of Mr. Loveday Purſer of the ſaid Ship; and the Deponent cannot be poſitive of the Time of his coming aboard, but believes it was about Two Years and a half ſince; and went in the ſaid Sloop from Callicoiloan to Keilon, from thence to Cocheene, and from Cocheene to Calecut, and from that to Tillicherry: And Depones, That upon the Coaſt of Malabar thereafter, he did ſee an Engagement betwixt the ſaid Sloop, the Ship the Worceſter, and another Ship ſailed by White-men, ſpeaking Engliſh, and the ſaid Ship did bear Engliſh Colours. And being interrogate by the † Pannels, what were the Colours the ſaid Ship did bear: Depones, That they were of White, Red and Black, like to theſe that the ſaid Captain Green's Ship did bear; and that firſt the ſaid Captain Green, the Merchant and Mr. Loveday went aboard the ſaid Strangers Ship, and ſtayed for about the Space of a Glaſs, and then returned aboard the Worceſter, and then did man the Sloop of the ſaid Ship the Worceſter, with about Twenty Men, whereof were Captain Green himſelf, Mr. Loveday, and the Supercargo, the Carpenter and Gunner, and that the Gunner's Name was James Simpſon, whom the Deponent knows, and points to at the Bar; and that there were four Guns and two Pattereroes aboard the ſaid Sloop; and thereafter Captain Madder came aboard of the Sloop, and that they did engage the ſaid other Ship for the firſt and ſecond Days, and upon the third Day the ſaid Ship was boarded by thoſe in the Sloop, who when they came aboard, did take up thoſe of the Crew of the ſaid Ship from under Deck, killed them with Hatchets, and threw them over-board; and that Captain Green, Captain Madder, and James Simpſon, the Gunner, were three of theſe who went aboard and killed the Men: And Depones, That the Ship the Worceſter came up during the ſaid Engagement, and did fire at the ſaid Ship, but theſe in the Worceſter did not board her: And the Deponent believes, that the Men who were killed and thrown over-board, as ſaid is, were about ten in Number; and Depones, That there were but few Goods aboard the ſaid taken Ship, which were carried aboard the Worceſter, and amongſt the reſt he * minds of ſome China Root: And Depones, That the ſaid Ship which was taken, was ſailed by ſome of the Crew of the Worceſter, and carried to Callicoiloan, and there ſold, and that the ſaid Ship was not tied with a Tow to the Ship Worceſter: And the Deponent knows not what Men were killed aboard the Sloop or Worceſter, or if any were killed, but the Deponent himſelf was wounded in the Arm, and which Wound he now ſhews to the View of all. Depones, That Captain Madder told the Deponent, that if ever he did tell any Perſon, either white or black, of the ſaid Engagement, that he the ſaid Captain would kill the Deponent, and heave him overboard. Depones, That the Upper-Coat which the Deponent† preſently wears, was found aboard of the ſaid taken Ship, and which the Deponent has kept ſince that Time. Depones, That during the ſaid Engagement, Haines, Bannantine, Bruckley, Wilcocks, Burn, Robertſon, Glen and Taylor, eight of the Pannels, were aboard the Ship the Worceſter; and that Keigle, Kitchen and Linſteed were aboard the Sloop with Captain Green, Madder and Simpſon; and belives that Reynolds was then aſhore at Callicoiloan: And Depones, That the ſaid Ship was ſold to a King in Malabar, and that the Man who bought the ſaid Ship bears a Malabar Name, whoſe Servant is called Coge Commodo: And Depones, That the ſaid Engagement happened between Tillicherry and Calecut, upon the Coaſt of Malabar: And Depones, That he cannot poſitively tell how many Guns

∴ Maſter of a Ship. † Of, before a Place, in the Scots Dialect, denotes the Place to be the Eſtate of the Perſon nam'd.

‖ i. e. Solemnly ſworn, that he would tell the Truth, and nothing but the Truth; that he had no Prejudice or Ill-will againſt any of the Priſoners at the Bar, that he got no good Deed, or Promiſe of good Deed, for giving Evidence againſt them, nor was ſuborned, adviſed, or directed how to ſwear, or what he ſhall ſay in this Tryal.

Guns the taken Ship did bear, but thinks they were about Twenty, ſmall and great: And the Deponent believes, That the Engagement happen'd about a Month after the Deponent went aboard of Captain Green's Sloop; and cannot be poſitive when the Ship the Worceſter, did engage the ſaid taken Ship, whether firſt, ſecond, or third Day: Depones, That the Engagement was by way of a running Fight: Depones, That he knows not who did ſail in the ſaid taken Ship to Callicoiloan. Cauſa Scientiæ, the way how he came to know this, the Deponent was aboard the ſaid Sloop during the Time of the ſaid Engagement, and ſaw and heard, as he has deponed; and this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to GOD: Depones, He can write after the Malabar Character; and this Depoſition is alſo ſigned by the ſaid Captain George Teaman, the ſworn Interpreter.

ROB. FORBES.

COmpeared Charles May, Chyrurgeon of the Ship the Worceſter, Commanded by Captain Green, aged twenty ſix Years, or thereby, unmarried; who being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of partial Counſel, examined and interrogate upon the Libel: Depones, That he was aboard of Captain Green's Ship the Worceſter, and went from England with her; that when the ſaid Ship went to the Coaſt of Malabar, the Deponent was ſet aſhore at the Ibeck, which is the Landing-Place, and from thence went up ſome Miles to Callicoiloan; and ſome Time thereafter, about a Fortnight, the Deponent did hear the Firing of Guns as at Sea, and did meet with Coge Commodo, who was Merchant to the ſaid Ship, and bought ſome Things from them, with Franciſco de Olivera the Linguiſter of the ſaid Ship, who had come that Day from the Ibeck, and that the Deponent asked him what mean'd the Shooting, and that the ſaid Coge Commodo, and Franciſco de Olivera anſwered the Deponent, That the Worceſter had gone out, and was fighting at Sea with another Ship: And Depones, That the next Morning the Deponent came to the Shore, where he did ſee the Ship the Worceſter riding in her Birth, that is, much about the ſame Place where ſhe had lyen before, and that the ſaid Place was about four Miles from the Shore: Depones, That there was then another Veſſel riding with the Worceſter at her Stern: Depones, That about ſome Time thereafter, in the ſame Morning, the Deponent did ſee the Long-Boat of the Worceſter coming to the Shore in a great Haſte, and that when the Boat landed, the Deponent asked the Men what was the Matter that brought them aſhore, it not being ordinar for Boats to come over the Bar, by reaſon of a great Sea: And the Men anſwered, That Captain Madder had ſent them aſhore for a Pinguetta (which is the Name of a certain kind of Boat) with Water, becauſe they had ſpilt and ſtaved all their Water aboard, and that there had been Busking all Night, which the Deponent underſtood, meant, that they had been at ſore Labour and Fatigue, as if their Ship had been driven from her Anchor, and bearing up again: Depones, That he did not ſpeak at that Time with the Men in relation to any Fight, but that the ſaid Men told him, they had brought a Ship in with them; and that the Deponent made no Stay at the Shore, but returned immediately to Callicoiloan, where his Patients were: Depones, That five or ſix Days thereafter, the Deponent went aboard the Worceſter for ſome Medicines which he wanted for the Uſe of his Patients; and that when he came aboard, the Deponent ſaw the Deck of the Worceſter lumber'd with Goods, and five or ſix Cheſts alſo, and ſome Bales of Goods; and that the Deponent did then ſay to Mr. Madder Senior, What have you got there? You are full of Buſineſs. And that Mr. Madder did then curſe him, and bid him go mind his Plaiſter-Box. And depones, That the Deponent was afterwards informed, that the Ship which was riding at Stern of the Worceſter, was ſold to Coge Commodo, the Ship's Merchant at Keilon River; and the ſaid Ship was brought there by a Part of the Worceſter's Crew, who immediately left her ſo ſoon as they had brought her to an Anchor, or otherways fixed her. Depones, That the † Linguiſter likewiſe told the Deponent, That Coge Commodo complained, he had bought the Ship too dear; and that he ſaid, he had bought one the Year before cheaper, tho' Four times the Value. Depones, That ſome Time thereafter, the Sloop came down the Coaſt; and that Antonio Ferdinando was ſent aſhore to the Deponent at the Ibeck; and that the ſaid Antonio Ferdinando, the Black, was wounded in the Arm: And that the Deponent did take off the * Dreſſing of the ſaid Wound, and found it to be a Fracture; and that it look'd as if the Wound had been occaſioned by a Gun-ſhot. And that the Deponent asked the ſaid Antonio Ferdinando, the Black, who had dreſſed the Wound, or ſet his Arm? And that the ſaid Black did tell the Deponent, That he was ſet aſhore at Cochin, and there dreſſed by a Dutch Chyrurgeon. And depones, That ſome Time thereafter he went aboard the Worceſter, and called for the ſaid Black, and any other Perſons that were ill; and there came to him to his Cheſt, Duncan Mackay, and another, (which the Deponent thinks was Edward Cuming, but cannot be poſitive) and that theſe Perſons were alſo wounded; and that the ſaid Black was likeways there. And depones, That he did ask his ſaid Patients how they came by their Wounds? And that Mr. Madder hearing the Deponent ask Queſtions, he came to the Deponent, and bid him ask no Queſtions; and likeways diſcharged the Patients to anſwer the Deponent any Queſtions upon their Peril. And the Deponent then ſaid to Mr. Madder, that he had no Command over him; and that Mr. Madder anſwered, That he would go to one who had Command over the Deponent: And that the ſaid Madder went up accordingly; and thereafter returned, and ordered the Deponent immediately aſhore; and the Deponent was accordingly carried aſhore in the Pinguetta, that was lying by the Ship's ſide. Depones, That all this which the Deponent has before deponed upon, did fall out about the Months of January or February, 1703 Years. Depones, That while the Ship the Worceſter was going up the Coaſt of Malabar, Mr. Linſteed, one of the Crew, was left at Keilon, which was near Seven Leagues, or about Twenty one Miles from Callicoiloan; and that the ſaid Linſteed was left there with one Mr. Hammond, to take care of ſome Part of the Cargo which was to be put aboard of the Ship. Depones, That he did not ſee the ſaid Mr. Linſteed at Keilon; but only heard that he was left there, and remained there, as the Deponent heard, till the Ship came back. And depones, That the Shooting which the Deponent heard heard, was before the Ship came back, as he has already deponed. And depones, That thereafter, during the Voyage, he never heard the Crew, or any of them, talk of their taking a Ship. Depones, That whilſt the Deponent heard the ſaid Shooting, Mr. Loveday and Mr. Otlay were aſhore at Callicoiloan: And depones, That when the Worceſter ſailed from England, the Crew was about 35 or 36 in Number. Depones, That while the Deponent was aboard, the Ship went no further up than Callecut: And depones, That the Reaſon how he knows Mr. Hammond and Mr. Linſteed were aſhore at Keilon, was, that he heard the Supercargo deſire the ſaid Perſons to go aſhore, and take care of ſome Part of the Cargo. And depones, That he was but Two or Three Hours aboard after he heard the Supercargo give the ſaid Order; and ſaw not the ſaid Two Perſons (Hammond and Linſteed) go aſhore. And depones, That it was in the Ship the Worceſter's going up the Coaſt of Malabar, that the Deponent heard the Shooting. Depones, That upon that Coaſt the Ship ſprung a Leak, and did from thence ſail to Bengal, in order to have the ſame helped: And depones, That he knows not how many Leagues there was betwixt the Place where the Leak ſprung, and Bengal; but that it was about Five Weeks Sailing. Depones, That he knows not the Reaſon, why the Ship was not brought into ſome Place on the Coaſt of Malabar, for being refitted. Depones, That when the Deponent came aboard from Callicoiloan, that the Ship weighed Anchor, and ſailed to Cochin, and from that to Callecut, and thereafter came back the ſame way. Depones, That there were ſome Goods put aboard the Ship from Callecut, but none at Cochin, as the Deponent remembers. And further depones, That when the Deponent returned, he found Mr. Hammond and Mr. Linſteed aſhore at Keilon. Cauſa Scientiæ patet: The Way how he comes to know this is evident. And this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to GOD.

COmpeared Antonio Franciſco, Servant to Captain Thomas Green, Commander of the Ship the Worceſter, aged 22 Years, or thereby, unmarried; with Captain George Yeaman, Merchant in Dundee, his Interpreter: And the ſaid Antonio Franciſco being ſolemnly ſworn, purged of partial Counſel, examined and interrogat upon the Libel purſued by the Procurator-Fiſcal, againſt the ſaid Captain Green, and the other Pannels; Depones, That the Deponent believes there is a GOD; and his Miſtreſs at Pegu cauſed baptize him a Chriſtian; and he owns the Chriſtian Religion: And he came to the Service of Captain Green, at Delagoa. Depones, That upon the Coaſt of Malabar, while the Deponent was aboard of the Worceſter, he heard ſome Shooting of Guns from aboard the Worceſter, to the Number of Six, or thereby: And that the Deponent in the mean Time was chained and nailed to the Floor of the Fore-Caſtle in the ſaid Ship; and he heard no Shooting from any other Ship. Depones, That Two Days after the Deponent heard the ſaid Shooting, he ſaw ſome Goods brought aboard the ſaid Ship the Worceſter; and which Antonio Ferdinando, the other Black, told the Deponent, were brought from another Ship which they had taken: And likewiſe the ſaid Black told the Deponent, that at the ſame Time Captain Madder had given ſome Rack, id eſt, Brandy to the Men. And at the ſame Time, the other Black told the Deponent likeways, That there were Ten Men of the Crew of the taken Ship killed, when ſhe was taken. And that the ſaid Black did let the Deponent ſee a Plaiſter on his Arm, upon which he ſaid he had got a Wound by a Shot, while in the Sloop taking the other Ship: And that he told the Deponent, that the ſaid Ship was taken by the Sloop belonging to the Worceſter: And that the Deponent neither heard of, nor did ſee any other wounded Men. Depones, That he does not know where they were ſailing, after he heard the Shooting; but he was told by the other Black, that they were ſailing to Callicoiloan: And the ſaid other Black did forbid the Deponent to tell any Perſon whatſomever of the ſaid Engagement. And the Deponent does not remember how long it is ſince he heard the ſaid Shooting of Guns. And depones, That Antonio Ferdinando, the other Black, told the Deponent all theſe Matters upon the Coaſt of Malabar: And that the ſaid Antonio came aboard the Ship the Worceſter, when they were going to Bengal. And depones, That while he was chained to the Fore-Caſtle, he knows not who were aboard, or who were aſhore: And that he was ſo chained for the Space of Two Months; and that he was ſo chained to the Fore-Caſtle about Ten Days before he heard the ſaid Shooting: Cauſa Scientiæ patet. Depones, He cannot write.

At which the ſaid Haines fell in a Paſſion, and ſaid, D--n me, what have I to do with Captain Drummond? Depones, That the Deponent ſeeing Haines in ſuch a bad Humour, forbore for ſome Time to ſpeak about his Brother or Captain Drummond: But after that they had taken ſome Cups about, and that the Deponent thought Haines in a better Mood, the Deponent asked the ſaid Haines, If he had not heard of, or ſeen any Scots Ship coming to or from the Eaſt-Indies? Depones, That Haines then ſaid, That while their Ship was upon the Coaſt of Malabar, (where

‖ On both ſides, in their Turns to ſpeak to the Jury.
* Jury.

Gentlemen of the INQUEST,

YOU have before you Indictments againſt the Pannels upon very atrocious Crimes, and theſe Indictments have been ſuſtained relevant, as libelled by the Honourable Judge-Admiral, to be proven by clear and plain Evidence. But for your further Satisfaction, at the Deſire of ſome of your own Number, made openly in Court, the Judges have declared, That by theſe Words, Plain and clear Evidence, they do not confine the Aſſize to two concurring Witneſſes, but have left to you what Evidence is neceſſary to make Faith according to the Nature of the Crime, to your Conviction.

Your Buſineſs then, Gentlemen, is to apply or compare the Probation with the Indictment, and to return your Verdict diſtinct, concerning what you think proven or not.

It is a Happineſs, that this Truſt is in the Hands of Perſons ſo diſcerning and faithful, and therefore the leſs needs to be ſaid, either for clearing the Nature of the Crime, the manner of the Diſcovery, or for ſumming up the Evidences: But to comply with the Cuſtom of ſuch Tryals in this Kingdom, and for preventing the Miſtakes into which the Lawyers on the other Part, ſeem to lead you: Forgive me if after a * Sederunt of Twelve Hours ſpent in † leading of the Probation, I detain you a little longer in Recapitulating what has paſt, with ſome few Obſervations, I hope not improper, before ye ‖ encloſe.

‖ Withdraw.

As to the Crimes contained in the Indictment, it is obvious how heinous they are, and how hateful they render the Perſons who are truly guilty in the Eye of the Law: A Pirate is in a perpetual War with every Individual, and every State, Chriſtian or Infidel. Pirates properly have no Country, but by the Nature of their Guilt, ſeparate themſelves, and renounce on the Matter, the Benefit of all lawful Societies: They are worſe than ravenous Beaſts, in as far as their fatal Reaſon gives them a greater Faculty and Skill to do Evil: And whereas ſuch Creatures follow the Bent of their Natures, and that promiſcuouſly, Pirates extinguiſh Humanity in themſelves, and prey upon Men only, eſpecially upon Traders, who are the moſt innocent. The Crime of Piracy is complex, and is made up of Oppreſſion, Robbery, and Murder, committed in Places far remote and ſolitary. And indeed if GOD had not, in a moſt wonderful way, brought the Crimes whereof the Pannels ſtand accuſed, to Light, they might have eſcap'd unpuniſhed in this World, to their own eternal Deſtruction, and to the great Loſs of ſuch who may be amended, or prevented by the Example of their Puniſhment. But altho' the Abuſes now complained of, happened in the vaſt Ocean, and at no leſs diſtance than the Eaſt-Indies, and that the Actors were tied by obvious Reaſon to Secrecy on their own Account, and were bound by a † regulous Command, not to reveal or anſwer Queſtions: And beſides all theſe, it is moſt probable there was a moſt impious Oath interpoſed, as uſes to be in ſuch Caſes, and which has more Force to reſtrain Men of ſuch deſperate Principles and Practices, than all the Ties of Religion or Nature: Yet GOD, in his Providence, has let in Light upon theſe dark and cruel Crimes, as it were by meer Accident: For I preſume, you are not ignorant, that the firſt Notices of this Matter proceeded from Words which were dropt in Paſſion, or expreſs'd by the Weight of Guilt, concerning the Wickedneſſes which have been done aboard the Worceſter during the laſt Voyage. Theſe, and ſome other Grounds of Suſpicion which appeared upon better Enquiry, were the Occaſion of the Information given to the Government, and how cautious the Lords of Her Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Conncil, have been in examining the Matter before any Proſecution was appointed, I perſuade my ſelf, that you and the whole Nation know, and are ſatisfied. And now that the Probation has been ſolemnly led in Preſence of this Court, and of the great Number of all Qualities who have been preſent; I doubt not, it will appear to you and all Men, who will ſuffer their Reaſon to act freely, that theſe Informations have been but too well founded.

† Arbitrary Command of their Captain.

The Indictment, as it concerns the Facts libelled, conſiſts chiefly of two Parts. The firſt concerns a Murder and Piracy happening upon the Coaſt of Malabar.

Malabar. The ſecond concerns Circumſtances which help to give Light to that Piracy, and which Circumſtances have happened ſince the Arriving of the Worceſter into this Country.

As to the firſt, Gentlemen, You have a Teſtimony of the firſt Witneſs Antonio Ferdinando, who depones, He came aboard of the Worceſter upon the Coaſt of Malabar, and that about a Month after, he ſaw an Engagement betwixt the Sloop belonging to the Worceſter, and another Ship ſailed by White-Men, ſpeaking Engliſh, and bearing ſuch Colours as Captain Green's Ship did bear; and that the Captain and ſome others of the Worceſter's Crew, went aboard the Stranger's Ship, and ſtayed about the Space of a Glaſs; that upon their return to the Worceſter, the Sloop was mann'd out with twenty Men, of which Number were the Captain himſelf, with Madder, Simpſon, Keigle, Kitchen, and others; that the Sloop was mounted with 4 Guns and 2 Patteraroes; that the Sloop engaged the Stranger's Ship, and that there was a running Fight for 3 Days, during which Time the Worceſter came up and fired at the ſaid Ship, and that upon the third Day, the ſaid unfortunate Ship was taken, (and what is fearful even to repeat) The Crew being about Ten, were murdered and thrown over-board; that the Goods were brought aboard of the Worceſter, and the taken Ship was ſailed with a Part of the Worceſter's Crew to Callicoiloan, and there ſold to Coge Commodo; that the Deponent himſelf was wounded, the Scar of which Wound was ſhown to you, Gentlemen, and the Court; and that he was commanded to keep Secrecy under the higheſt Peril, and that the very Upper-Coat which he wears (and in my Judgment, appears to be Scots * Rugg) was a Part of the Spoil.

* Coarſe Cloath.

As to this Teſtimony, Gentlemen, There are ſeveral Things very obſervable, ſuch as the † Stayedneſs, Simplicity and Conſtancy of this Witneſs, who, in many Examinations before the Council, and Committee of Council, has uniformly given the ſame Account which he has now deponed before this Honourable Court; not in the ſame Form of conceived Words, but materially the ſame, tho' the ‖ Interrogators have been changed: And I think, it adds to the Weight of his Teſtimony, that ye are Witneſſes how it was * emitted, while he was under heavy Sickneſs, and forced to lie down at the End of the Table.

* Given.

2. It is obſervable, that this Witneſs Antonio Ferdinando had no acceſſion to the diſcovering of this Matter, nor was at all an Informer: But the Matter being enquired into, he did plainly and honeſtly acknowledge from the Beginning, as he has now deponed: Neither was the Story firſt told at Leith, nor ſince the Pannels arriving in our Harbours: But it appears by the Teſtimony of Antonio Franciſco the other Black, (who ſhews a great Inclination to favour Captain Green and the Pannels) that Ferdinando gave him the ſame Account in ſubſtance upon the Coaſt of Malabar: And this is further confirmed by Stringman the Cook, who told in ſeveral Examinations before the Council, that ſhortly after the ſaid Stringman came aboard on the Coaſt of Bengal, Ferdinando who was his Mate, gave him the like Account of the Story: So that it is morally evident, that this Account of the Crime was not invented with any View of a Trial againſt the Captain and his Crew.

3. It is worthy your Notice, that Captain Green had been aboard of the unfortunate Ship taken, as a Friend, and had Opportunity to ſpy, that the Crew being but about ten, were too weak to man or defend a Ship of 20 Guns, which, no doubt, emboldned him to undertake the Wickedneſs complained of.

It is obſervable, That the ſeveral Parts of Ferdinando's Teſtimony are fortified by concurring Proofs. As firſt, by the Books found aboard, it appears, that the Sloop was furniſhed with Arms in the Month of February libelled, and that the Arms were ſuch as the Teſtimony mentions. 2. He ſhows you the Scar of his Wound upon his Arm; and as he depones, that he got it in the Engagement, ſo the Chyrurgeon depones, That he not only ſaw it, but that ſhortly after the hearing of the Shooting, he had taken the * Dreſſing from off the Wound, and found it a Fracture, and that it look'd like a Gun-ſhot, and that the Black came to his Cheſt a few Days thereafter to have it dreſt aboard. 3. The Teſtimony of Ferdinando is alſo confirmed by the Depoſitions of Franciſco and Mr. May, as to two very notable Articles, viz. The bringing of the Goods aboard about that Time: And by the Teſtimony of the ſaid Mr. May, as to the Ship taken riding at the Stern of the Worceſter. 4. Captain Madder's ſevere Commands for obſerving of Secrecy, is not only deponed upon by Ferdinando the firſt Witneſs, but alſo by May the Chyrurgeon, very circumſtantially: When Mr. May asked an innocent Queſtion, as one ſhould think, upon ſeeing the Deck lumbered with Goods, Mr. Madder anſwers, curſing him, and bids him mind his Plaiſter-Box. When May goes to his Cheſt, there came three Men to be dreſſed of their Wounds, of which the Black was one. May asks them how they came to be wounded, but Madder had followed, and commands Silence on their Peril; but Mr. May perſiſting in his Enquiry, Madder goes to the Commander, and brings a poſitive Order to anſwer no Queſtions: Thus Ferdinando and May concur as to the Command of Silence. Now, I put it to your Conſciences, Gentlemen, if ye think this Myſtery was uſed to cover a common Accident; or, if rather you are not ſatisfied, that, joyning the Teſtimony of Ferdinando with the Wounds, and the Silence ſo rigorouſly impoſed, the Goods brought aboard, the riding of the taken Ship at the Stern of the Worceſter, they do not evince the Certainty of the Piracy and Murder libelled, as far as the Nature of the Thing can admit.

* Plaiſter.

To theſe, Gentlemen, Ye would be pleaſed to join in your Obſervation, That it is owned and demonſtrated, from the Books taken aboard of the Worceſter, that there ſprung a Leak in the ſaid Ship on the Coaſt of Malabar; and that it had been moſt natural for the Pannels to have carried their Ship to Goa, or to Surat, which was within Ten Degrees Sailing, or thereabouts; yet the Pannels did chuſe, rather than continue on that Coaſt, to run along in a leaky Veſſel, a dangerous Courſe, round the Peninſula, and the Iſland Keilon, to the Bottom of the Bay of Bengal, a Courſe of about Seven or Eight Hundred Leagues. But that Fatigue and Riſque was ſmall, when compared with the Danger of repairing their Ship on a Coaſt, where their Crimes might be more eaſily diſcovered. 2. It is remarkable, that the Books found aboard, and now lying before you, contain the full Inſtructions given to Captain Green and his Company, from their alledged Owners, which have something myſterious from the very Beginning. I have had little * Occaſion to peruſe them, having ſeen them this Morning for the firſt Time. But one Thing I could not but † notice, That in the Inſtructions, one Article contains a Cypher, in which the Captain or Supercargo was to correſpond with their Owners. And altho' this Cypher ſeems to be nice, and well enough deviſed at firſt to cover the Correſpondence from any ordinary Curioſity; yet ſo great Anxiety has been ſhown concerning this Cypher, that the Freighters ſend a Letter after the Ship; adding an Inſtruction, That beſides the Character to be uſed, there ſhould be this further Diſguize added, That the laſt Letter of the preceding Word ſhould be always repeated before the firſt Letter of the next Word; of which, for Illuſtration, the Letter contains an Example, giving Direction how Letters ſhould be addreſs'd to the Writer himſelf. But neither was this Caution ſufficient: For next Day another Letter is written, relating ſtill to the Cypher; and wherein the Writer expreſly adviſes, that the Letters from the Ship ſhould not be directed to himſelf, but to a Scrivener living in - - - -Street, London; and that they ſhould not be ſubſcribed. Why all this Myſtery? The Correſpondence muſt be in Cypher; and this Cypher exquiſite and refin'd: And yet the Letters to be addreſs'd to a Third Perſon, obſcure, for what I know. They were not to contain any Addreſs or Subſcription, which ſhould either diſcover the Writer, or the Perſon to whom he writes. Fair Trading requires no ſuch Affectation.

* Opportunity. † obſerve.

But further, you will be pleaſed to take notice, That the outward Cargo for a Ship of 200 Tuns, and 20 Guns mounted, ſailed with 36 Men, was in Value but 999 l. 17 s. 2 d. Sterling; which appears by the * Document produced by themſelves, for inſtructing their Entry at the Cuſtom-Houſe; and that too, for the moſt part, Arms. I have not ſo much Experience in Matters of Trade; but to me it ſeems very ſtrange, that a Voyage ſo exceedingly hazardous and expenſive, ſhould have been undertaken with ſo ſmall † Means. And theſe Things, in the very undertaking of the Voyage, being joined with the ſhrewd Evidences of the Crimes, whereof theſe Pannels ſtand accuſed, ſeem to be of very great weight: And where ſuch * Fineneſs occurs in the Entry, and the Effects are ſo Tragical, in ſuch an Enquiry; I hope, I ſhall be forgiven by every body, having laid them before you with as much Tenderneſs to the Freighters (with whom I have nothing to do) as poſſible.

* Voucher. † Stock. * Cunning.

As to the Second Part of the Libel, I mean theſe Circumſtances which concur to give Light to the Crimes chiefly libelled; there is alſo ſufficient Evidence. The firſt of theſe Circumſtances, is what concerns Mr. Reynolds, one of the Pannels. The Indictment bears, That there was a Letter found, writ to him by his Wife's Siſter, in Return to one of his writ to his Wife; wherein his ſaid Siſter adviſes him to confeſs; adding, That in his own Letter, which ſhe had ſeen, he ſays, That ſome of their Men had baſely confeſs'd; which implied, that they were guilty. And Reynolds being queſtioned upon this Letter, produced the Copy of his Letter to his Wife, which occaſioned his Siſter's writing to him, agreeing with this Letter. Theſe you have before you.

I am not ignorant, that Ferdinando (the firſt Witneſs) ſays, He believes Reynolds was aſhore: But the Teſtimony as to that is not poſitive; neither is it, in my Judgment, ſufficient to take off the Acceſſion to the Crime, or † Art and Part libelled; ſince the ſaid Reynolds was of the ſame Crew, and did not ſeparate himſelf from them; and it is moſt preſumable, had his own Share of the Booty. Beſides, it's plain from the Letters, he was conſcious to the Truth, which (he ſays) was baſely confeſs'd: And it is of little weight, what has been offer'd as a Gloſs; viz. Baſely confeſs'd, is as much as if he had ſaid, falſly told Stories. For in the ordinary way of ſpeaking, to confeſs, is to tell true; and the Adverb baſely, implies no more than if he had ſaid, that they had ungenerouſly confeſſed; tho' it be indeed rather a Duty, whatever Mr. Reynolds thinks.

† Contriving and Acting.

The next obſervable Circumſtance is what concerns George Haines: As to whom, by laying together the Teſtimonies of James Wilkie, Kenneth Mackenzie, William Wood, John Henderſon, and Anne Seaton, you will find it proven, That upon asking a Queſtion about Drummond's Ship, Haines fell in a Paſſion; by the Depoſitions of Wilkie and Kenneth Mackenzie. 2. That Haines ſaid, That when the Ship the Worceſter was ſeized in the Road of Leith, he had that in his Cuſtody, which he would not have fallen in the Seizers Hands for twice the Value of the Ship; and that he threw it overboard; is proven by the Teſtimonies of James Wilkie and Anne Seaton. 3. That James Wilkie's Mother employ'd Anne Seaton to enquire of Haines concerning her Son, who had gone Doctor to Drummond's Ship; is proven by the Teſtimonies of Wilkie and Seaton. And Kenneth Mackenzie depones, That he was preſent when the ſaid Anne Seaton gave an Account of what had paſs'd betwixt her and Haines; and that ſhe told, that Haines ſaid, They had a Deſign to pump him: And that being ask'd why he fell in a Paſſion at the mentioning of Captain Drummond? He anſwered, That he knew more of Captain Drummond than he would tell. And Anne Seaton concurs with Mackenzie as to theſe Particulars. 4. That Haines, in a melancholy Fit, * burſt forth in theſe, or like Words, It's a wonder that ſince we did not ſink at Sea, God does not open the Earth, to ſwallow us up at Shore, for the Wickedneſs committed during the laſt Voyage, in that old Bitch Beſs; (pointing to Captain Green's Ship) is proven by the concurring Teſtimonies of William Wood, John Henderſon, and Anne Seaton. And 5. That Haines ſaid, If what Captain Madder did during the laſt Voyage, were as well known as what his Uncle undertook at Amſterdam; he deſerv'd as much as his Uncle met with; which was, to be boil'd in Oyl; is only atteſted by William Wood. Nor does every minute Circumſtance need a concurring Probation.

* broke out.

Having thus laid before you the Indictment and Probation, conjoining theſe Proofs; which, I am confident, to all impartial Men, will appear clear and plain Evidence of the Crimes of which theſe Pannels are accuſed; I ſhall take Liberty, in the next place, to precaution you againſt certain Inſinuations, which the Pannels Lawyers have diſcover'd when the * Probation was a leading.

* Evidence was giving in.

I need

I need be at little Pains to convince you, that the firſt Witneſs, tho' a Black, is a legal Witneſs; ſeeing that, upon full Debate, has been already determined by the Honourable Judges. And indeed, beſides that, he is not only a Man, but a Chriſtian, and adduced for proving a Crime covered, committed at Sea, which is more ſolitary than any Deſart at Land. His Teſtimony had ſuch a diſtinguiſhable Air of Truth and Sincerity, as made him not only a legal Witneſs, but a very material and probative one. But the Pannels Lawyers would fain have obſerved ſome Inconſiſtency in his Teſtimony, and betwixt it and that of Mr. May's: For, ſay they, Ferdinando depones, that he came aboard Two Years and a half ago; and that the Action happen'd about a Month after he came aboard; ſo that it muſt have been in the Month of November, 1702. and not in the Months of February, March, &c. 1703. But ye were Witneſſes, that the Black did not depone poſitively as to the Time of his coming aboard, but ſaid it was about Two Years and a half ago; and that the Engagement was about a Month after. Both theſe Deſignations of the Time admit a Latitude: And he was ſo cautious, that he ſtopt again before he ſigned his Oath; until it was told him, that it could not be otherways underſtood.

But then they urge, That he depones, that the Engagement happen'd betwixt Tillicherrie and Callecut, upon the Coaſt of Malabar; yet Mr. May depones, that he heard the Shooting at Callicoiloan; which, ſay they, being at ſuch a vaſt Diſtance from Tillicherrie, was impoſſible.

But theſe Gentlemen do not obſerve, that the Engagement continued for Three Days; and that it is expreſly deponed, there was a running Fight during that Time: So that tho' the Beginning of the Attack might have been betwixt Tillicherrie and Callecut, yet it might have continued along the Coaſt.

Neither is it of more Moment what theſe Gentlemen obſerve, that the Strangers Ship attacked might have in Three Days got off: Becauſe it appears, ſhe was attacked and purſued by the Sloop, which was a light Veſſel; and the Ship it ſelf attack'd was weakly mann'd, having but about Ten Men aboard, and a Ship of 20 Guns.

But it may poſſibly be further urged, That the Black deponed, that Mr. Loveday and Mr. Linſteed were aboard the Sloop; whereas Mr. May depones, That Mr. Linſteed was left at Keilon; and that he heard him order'd to go aſhore before, and ſaw him taken into the Ship ſome Time afterwards.

But neither is there any Inconſiſtency in this Particular, betwixt theſe Two Oaths: For Mr. May depones, that when the Ship came upon the Coaſt of Malabar, he himſelf was put aſhore: And altho' before he was put aſhore he heard Linſteed and Hammond ordered aſhore, yet he did not ſee them go; ſo that Linſteed might have continued in the Ship notwithſtanding. Or, in the next place, let us ſuppoſe that Linſteed had once gone aſhore; does it from thence neceſſarily follow, that he did not come aboard again, till the Doctor ſaw him taken up? Certainly it does not; for Mr. May continued a very long Time aſhore. But now granting what theſe Gentlemen ſo earneſtly deſire, that Ferdinando had been miſtaken as to ſome ſuch Circumſtance; can that overturn his Teſtimony? The Thing happening upwards of Two Years ago: The Subject was an Engagement at Sea; perhaps the firſt Fighting ever he was Witneſs to: And the Confuſion which, for the moſt part, is incident to the firmeſt Spirits in their firſt Adventures, might excuſe this Witneſs, if in a * minute Circumſtance he had miſtaken; ſeeing his Oath, as to what is material and eſſential, is moſt pregnantly † aſtructed, as has been already ſaid.

It may be likeways obſerved, That it was very much urged for the Pannels, that Ferdinando came aboard the Ship at Anjango, only Two Days before the Ship parted from the Coaſt of Malabar: But tho' that were true, it would be little to the Purpoſe: For it is evident by his own Depoſition, that at firſt he enter'd to the Service of Mr. Loveday, the Purſer; and that he came aboard of the Sloop at Callicoiloan with Loveday; and the Sloop was the chief Inſtrument made uſe of in the Piracy libelled.

It is not unlikely, that the Lawyers on the other ſide will amuſe you with Obſerves upon Mr. May's Teſtimony; as that he is but a Witneſs * de auditu, not having been preſent at the Action: But in this they are again miſtaken; for, as I take it, a Witneſs de auditu is ſuch an one, who repeats at ſecond-hand: As if Mr. May had deponed, that another Perſon had told him he had heard Shooting. But ſince our Hearing is as much to be depended on as our Seeing, in what concerns the proper Object of the Ear; Mr. May's Teſtimony, which chiefly conſiſts of what he heard and ſaw himſelf, is not in the Senſe of Law de auditu. Mr. May depones he heard the Shooting; and the next Day that he came down, he ſaw the Worceſter riding, with another Ship at her Stern; and that he ſaw ſome of the Crew come aſhore in a Boat; and that they told him that they had brought in a Ship; and that Coge Commodo, or the Linguiſter, told him he had bought the Ship. He ſaw and handled the Black's Wounds: He was Eye and Ear-witneſs to Madder's threatning, and impoſing a rigorous Silence. In all this there is nothing properly de auditu; for that the Seamen told him they had brought in a Ship, did not depend barely upon their telling, but upon theſe Circumſtances, that they were the Perſons brought it in; and that the Ship was riding under his Eye, at the Stern of the Worceſter. And juſt ſo what he heard from Coge Commodo, and the Linguiſter, being upon the Place, and ſeeing the Ship under his Eye, is not to depone only de auditu, but has as much Evidence, as is neceſſary to create a full Certainty in the Mind of any reaſonable and indifferent Perſon.

As for the other Circumſtances, I beg Liberty to forewarn you, Gentlemen, That every Thing material is proven; and that even as to the leaſt Circumſtance, there is ſome Evidence. That the Goods were not regularly marked, as is ordinar in fair Trade, is proven by the Oaths of * Skippers: That the Seal of the African Company was ſeen in the Hand of Captain Madder; is deponed by Glen, a Seal-Cutter, who could not well be miſtaken in a Matter of that kind. And in like manner, that there was ſomething aboard of the Worceſter, which would not be found, tho' they ſhould tear her Board from Board; is deponed by James Wilkie. None of theſe Circumſtances are abſolutely without Evidence: And the reſt of the Libel, both what is eſſential, and even as to leſſer Circumſtances, is diſtinctly and plainly proven.

To conclude, Gentlemen, As, on the one Hand, you are to be very tender of admitting that for a Proof, in a Caſe of Life and Death, which ought not to be admitted; ſo you muſt be careful not to reject ſuch Evidence, as muſt convince the whole World, that theſe unhappy Criminals are guilty of the cruel and atrocious Crimes libelled. Take the Matter in its whole Series: The affected Darkneſs in the Entry to the Undertaking, a Correſpondence in Cypher, wherein the Parties were neither to be mentioned on the Cover, nor in the Letters, nor were they to ſubſcribe. That the Cargo was inconſiderable, and chiefly compoſed of Arms, not to the Value of a Thouſand Pounds Sterling. And it ſeems almoſt ridiculous, that a Ship of 200 Tuns, with 20 Guns mounted, ſailed by 36 Men, ſhould be ſent to the Eaſt-Indies upon an ordinary Adventure, with ſo invaluable a Cargo: And join with that the Evidence of the Murder and Robberies, mentioned in the Indictment. Conſider how much Light the Providence of GOD has diſcover'd in ſo dark a Crime, committed in a Place ſo diſtant and ſolitary; and I am confident, you will conclude with me, That the Murder and Piracy is proven.

Edinburgh, 16th March, 1705.

DECLARATION by Thomas Linſteed, emitted in Preſence of Sir James Steuart Her Majeſty's Advocate, hereto ſubſcribing with the ſaid Linſteed.

THomas Linſteed declares, That being in the Ship the Worceſter as Aſſiſtant to the Supercargo, when the Veſſel came to Callicoiloan, upon the Coaſt of Malabar, which was about the Beginning of the Year 1703. Mr. Hammond and he were ſent aſhore to look after the Goods they had ſold, and the Returns they expected at Callicoiloan and Keilon; That the Ship the Worceſter left Callicoiloan with her Sloop in January 1703. for to go to Callecut, and other Places up that Coaſt; but within five or ſix Days after the Ships parting, there came in Fiſher-Boats to Callicoiloan, who told them that their Ship the Worceſter had had an Engagement at Sea, and that it was the Sloop that firſt attack'd the Veſſel, and that they fought until they were out of ſight of the Fiſhermen, who could give no further Account of it. But thereupon the Declarant and Mr. Hammond wrote and ſent a Meſſenger either to Cocheene or Callecut, to know what was become of the Worceſter; and that they got a Return after ſome Days, that they ſhould mind their Buſineſs, and not concern themſelves with any Thing that Callant the Supercargo did aboard. That ſome Days thereafter, the Declarant met with Coge Commodo in the Ibeck of Keiton, who told him, that he had bought a Ship, and he took the Declarant aboard; that the Veſſel was about 100 Tons, and did bear about twelve or thirteen Guns, and that ſhe appeared to be of the Country Build. And Coge Commodo ſaid, he had bought her from the Pirates of Cota or Burgara, which are two little Pirating Towns on either ſide of a River on the Coaſt of Malabar; but when the Declarant came to Keilon, the Dutch and Portugueſe there told him, that that Veſſel which Coge Commodo had bought was brought in in the Night Seaſon by ſome of the Crew of the Worceſter, and that her Top-maſt was taken down, and her Sails taken off, and the Yards lower'd; and that the Dutch and Portugueſe made no more reckoning of it, becauſe 'tis what is ordinary on that Coaſt. That the Declarant and Mr. Hammond ſtayed, for two or three Months after their parting from the Ship, at Callicoiloan and thereabouts, until the Ship the Worceſter came back to the Road of Callicoiloan, and that there he went aboard: That when he went aboard, he told them what he had heard, but they gave him no Account of the Action; nor could he learn more of it. That the Doctor was aſhore at Ibeck while the Ship was at Anchor at Callicoiloan, and that at that Time the Declarant was gone up to Callicoiloan, and knows no more of the Doctor's being aſhore. That the Sloop with Mr. Loveday and others aboard did firſt come back to Callicoiloan, and advertiſed the Declarant and Mr. Hammond to be in readineſs, for the Ship was coming back; and that when ſhe came back they went aboard, and the Declarant went aboard at Anjango, from whence they ſailed to Bengal. And this the Declarant declares to be a Truth. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet.

T. Linſteed.
JA. STEWART.

Edinburgh, 27 March, 1705.

IN Preſence of Mr. James Graham Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, George Haines one of the Crew of the Worceſter, being deſirous to make a Confeſſion of what he knew in relation to the Crimes for which he and the reſt of the Crew are purſued; Declared, That when the Ship the Worceſter was in the Downs, the Declarant received a Letter from a Friend in London, telling him, that it was ſurmiſed in London that their Ship was going out upon ſome ill Deſign; and that he had likeways another Letter from his Father to the ſame Purpoſe, and heard the Gunner James Sympſon ſay, he had alſo another of the ſame Nature. The Declarant declares, that thereafter he uſed all his Endeavours to get aſhore, and accordingly he having got leave to ſee ſome Friends aboard the Fleet-Frigat that was then riding in the Downs, he got into her Long-Boat that was then going aſhore, but ſome of the Frigat's Crew having got notice where the Declarant was, after he went aſhore, they came to him, and having drunk with him to ſome Pitch, perſuaded him to go aboard of his his own Ship again; and the Declarant was accordingly carried aboard, in one of the Boats belonging to the Town of Deal. And ſome Time thereafter, the Declarant deſigned likewiſe to have got into a Man of War, riding hard by their Ship; but Mr. Callant, the Supercargo, came after him, and brought him back: And the Declarant believes the Name of the Man of War was the Salisbury. That the Ship Worceſter ſailed from the Downs the 8th of March, 1702. in the Morning. That in the Month of June, or July thereafter, the Ship arrived at Delagoa, where their Sloop was built of Timber, and other Materials which they had brought from England aboard the Ship. That having ſailed from Delagoa, ſome few Days before they came upon the Coaſt of Malabar, he heard ſome of the Crew, and particularly John Eruckley the Cooper, talk of turning Pirates, and perſwading others of the Crew to go in with them. That when they came upon the Coaſt of Malabar, and had been there about a Month, they endeavoured to take a large Country Boat; and for that end, the Sloop endeavour'd to get betwixt the ſaid Boat and the Shore, that ſo the Ship might come up with the ſaid Boat; but there being ſeveral Hands aboard, and the Boat having Fifty Oars, out-ſailed both Ship and Sloop, and got off. Declares, That Coge Commodo was aboard the Ship the Time of the aforeſaid Chaſe; and that he drew his Sabre, and encouraged the Crew of the Worceſter. Declares, That hereafter the Ship and Sloop ſailed for Cochin, with a Deſign to have cleaned both at that Place; (the Sloop being much ſpoil'd with Worms) but the Governor would not allow them to be cleaned there; and therefore they went up to Callecut, where the Sloop was cleaned and refitted, and mann'd with about Eight Men, and Two Guns, Two Patteraroes, and other ſmall Arms and Ammunition put aboard; and then the Sloop alone ſailed up towards Tillicherry, and ſtayed away from the Ship about Eight Days. Declares, That the Sloop took no Goods along with her when ſhe went out; but when ſhe returned, ſhe had aboard Eight Hogſheads of Rack and knows not how ſhe came by them. But John Roberts, one of the Crew who had been with the Sloop at that Time, was very melancholy after his Return; and the Declarant having a Coco-nut full of Rack in his Hand, deſired Roberts to take a Part; but he would not, and went down to his Hammock mightily concern'd: And afterwards told the Declarant, that the Reaſon of his Concern and Melancholy, was, That he was acceſſary to the cutting off of ſome Mens Heads at Sacrifice Rock, betwixt Tillicherry and Callecut. Declares, That the Sloop did ſail by her ſelf from Callecut thereafter; and the Ship followed down to Callicoiloan, and did there meet with the Sloop: And having diſcover'd a Ship coming as from the Southward, the Sloop was under Sail, and made to get in betwixt the ſaid Ship and the Offing, that ſo ſhe might not get to Sea: And the Ship coming nearer to the Worceſter, in which the Declarant was at the Time; the Worceſter ſlipt her Anchors, and made towards the foreſaid Ship, and at length came up with her, and fired a ſharp Shot, to cauſe her come to; which ſhe did accordingly, by bracing her Head-ſails back to the Maſts; and that thereafter ſhe was boarded. Declares, That the Ship was about Seventy Tuns Burden, and ſquare-ſterned, and painted in the Quarters with Red and Yellow; and that ſhe had a Main Deck, and a Quarter Deck, and a little Fore-Caſtle, and was of the Indian Build: And that there was in the Ship, when boarded, about Twelve or Fourteen Men, all white, and ſickly, as the Declarant clearly perceived before the Ship was boarded. But when the Declarant was endeavouring to know of what Country the Men were; Edward Carry, one of the Worceſter's Crew, knock'd him down with a Hand-ſpike into the Midſhip Hitch: But he afterwards heard amongſt the Crew, that the Men of the taken Ship were Britons. Declares, That he knew not what became of the Men which were aboard of the taken Ship, not having been able to come above Deck, with the Stroke which he received from Edward Carry, and whereof he yet bears the Mark: But declares, that the Sloop went off before he came above Deck, and ſtayed away for Three or Four Days; and that the Declarant thereafter heard the Men were put into the Sloop. And what was done with the ſaid Men of the taken Ship he cannot tell; but doubts not they were murdered and made away, becauſe they could not be put aſhore at any Place at hand on that Coaſt; there being Engliſh and Dutch Factories all along the Coaſt, very near each other. Declares, That theſe of the Crew who went with the Sloop from the Ship at that time, were Mr. Loveday, Thomas Calcute, Andrew Roberiſon, Gunner of the Sloop, John Roberts, Edward Carry, Duncan Mackay, Alexander Taylor, and Antonio Ferdinando the Black; but cannot be poſitive who beſides were there. Declares, That the next Evening after the Action, the Ship which was taken the Day before, was carried in by ſome of the Crew to Callicoiloan, and ſold to Coge Commodo for 1500 Rupies: And that the Goods of the ſaid taken Ship were ſome Bales and Matts of China Roots, and Four Cheſts of Copper; which Cheſts were ſold afterwards at Bengal, to a Bannion Merchant named Tagodas. Declares, That ſome Days after the Action, the Declarant was ſent aſhore with a Letter to the Supercargo; and that he then heard that Coge Commodo, to whom the Ship was ſold, was a great Aſſiſter of all Pirates, and was very ſerviceable to Kidd and Avery when upon that Coaſt, and bought of their Goods, as the Declarant was credibly informed of the People on that Coaſt. And declares, That the Time the Declarant was on Shore, the Supercargo, Mr. Linſteed, Reynolds, Hammond, and the Doctor were aſhore. And the Declarant did likeways ſee Antonio Ferdinando, the Black, at the Ibeck of Callicoiloan, who complained of a Wound in his Arm. Declares, That after the Action, and before the Declarant went aſhore, the Doctor, Charles May, came aboard from the Ibeck of Callicoiloan; and ſeeing the Cheſts which had come out of the taken Ship upon the Deck, he asked Captain Madder, What did all that Lumber upon the Deck? And that Madder anſwer'd him with a Curſe, and told him to mind his Plaiſter-Box, and ask no Queſtions. Declares, That while the Ship was upon the Coaſt of Malabar, ſhe ſprang a Leak in the Strake next the Keel, which made the Crew to pump conſtantly: However, they went not into any Place upon the Coaſt of Malabar, to refit her, but ſailed to Bengal, which was about Five Weeks Sailing; and there the Ship was refitted, not only of the Leak, but of an Hurt which the Ship got in the Action, in the Plank, betwixt the Midſhip's Crupper and the Cheltree, and a new Plank put in, in the Larboard ſide, where the Hurt was. Declares, That the Declarant did keep a Note, by way of Journal, during the Voyage, which contained the Subſtance of what he now declares in relation to the above Particulars: And that when the Ship was ſeized in the Road of Leith, he heaved the ſame over-board, leſt it ſhould have fallen in the Seizers Hands. Declares, That he would have emitted this Declaration and Confeſſion ſoonet, but that he was always made believe by Captain Green's Agents, that the Defences made for the Crew, would certainly bring them off: And if they did all agree in one Mind, and keep cloſe Mouths, there would be no Fear; for nothing could be otherways proven, that could do them Harm. And declares, That Wilcocks, the Chirurgeon's Mate, told the Declarant, that he ſaw a Letter from the Owners of the Worceſter, in London, to Captain Green; which bore, That altho' the Crew were condemned in Scotland, they had Pardons ready to ſend down for them. And this the Declarant was likeways informed of from the Carpenter's Wife.

Edinburgh, 28 March, 1705.

IN Preſence of Sir Robert Forbes, Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, * compeared George Haines, one of the Crew of the Ship the Worceſter, and declared that he now adds to his former Declaration; That after the Ship therein mentioned was ſeized, he ſaw the Men which were therein killed and murdered with Pole-Axes and Cutlaces, and ſaw their dead Bodies put into the Sloop, and thereafter thrown over-board: And, to the beſt of the Declarant's Knowledge, the ſaid Men ſo killed were Scotſmen; the Declarant having heard them ſpeak the Scots Language. And further declares, That the ſaid Ship then ſeized, was underſtood by the Crew of the Worceſter to have been Captain Drummond his Ship; and particularly he heard Captain Madder, John Bruckley, and the deceas'd Edward Carry ſay ſo. And further adds, that he would have emitted what is above before this Time, but was afraid leſt his mentioning the Ship ſo ſeized to belong to Captain Drummond, and the Men aboard of the ſame to have been murder'd, might have render'd the Government offended, and obliged them to deal hardly with the Declarant. And this he declares to be Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to GOD.

Edinburgh, 31 March, 1705.

IN Preſence of Mr. James Graham, Judge Admiral; John Bruckley, Cooper of the Ship Worceſter, being deſirous to make a Confeſſion of the Crimes, whereupon he and the reſt of the Crew were purſu'd; declares, That ſome Time after the Ship the Worceſter came upon the Coaſt of Malabar, that ſhe and the Sloop gave Chaſe to a Country Boat, which eſcaped by reaſon of her Oars. That afterwards the Ship and Sloop ſailed in Company to Cochin, where they were denied Acceſs to clean; and therefore they thereafter ſailed to Callecut, where the Sloop (which had been ſpoiled by the Worms) was hal'd upon the Shore, and clean'd, and thereafter was mann'd with about 10 Men, and 2 Guns, 2 Patteraroes, with other ſmall Arms put aboard. From Callecut, the Sloop was order'd to ſail towards Tillicherry, but there was no Goods ſent along; and in about Six or Eight Days thereafter, the Sloop came back in Chaſe of another Ship. Declares, That when the Ship the Worceſter ſaw the Sloop in Chaſe of the other Ship, ſhe ſlipt her Anchors, and made out to Sea to meet them. Declares, That he ſaw the Sloop board the ſaid Ship towards Night; and that the Long-Boat was after order'd to be mann'd, and Captain Madder went along in the Long-Boat. Declares, He does not know what became of the Men who were on Board the taken Ship; but that the Declarant did ſee they were white Men. And the Reaſon why he knows not what became of the Men, is, that the Declarant was never on Board the taken Ship; and that the Sloop which had boarded the Ship, was ordered away next Morning; and he doubts not but the Men were alongſt which were taken out of the Prize Ship. Declares, That the Ship which was taken, was mann'd with ſome of the Worceſter's Crew, and ſailed alongſt with the Worceſter till they came to Callicoiloan, where they found the Sloop. Declares, That whilſt the Worceſter, with the other Ship, came in ſight of the Sloop, the Sloop weighed Anchor, and ſtood to the Offing; ſo that the taken Ship came into Callicoiloan betwixt the Sloop and the Worceſter; and all Three came to an Anchor together. Declares, That after they came to an Anchor, the taken Ship rode under the Stern of the Worceſter, and was thereafter ſent into Callicoiloan River, and ſold to Coge Commodo, as the Declarant ſuppoſes. Declares, That thereafter the Declarant was ſent aſhore for Water to the Ibeck of Callicoiloan, where he met with Doctor May; and that he ſent on Board a Pinguetta, with Water, according to his Orders. Declares, That ſome time after they came to an Anchor before Callicoiloan; and before the Declarant was ſent aſhore for Water as above, they ſaw a Ship at Sea coming from the Southward; that the Sloop was under Sail at that Time, being a cruiſing about: That ſhe ſailed towards the Sea, and bore down the Ship towards the Worceſter. That the Worceſter, when the Ship came near, ſlipt from her Anchors, and made towards the Ship; which thereafter was boarded, firſt by the Sloop, and then by the Worceſter, about Ten or Eleven a Clock in the Forenoon. Declares, That there was both Whites and Blacks on Board that Ship, and moſt part Whites; but the Declarant did not know what became of them; but that the Sloop went off in a few Hours after the Engagement, and did not return till after Two or Three Days. That the Declarant does not know what became of that Ship; but declares, that he was in a Mooriſh King's Houſe, with about Six of the Crew; and that that King was Coge Commodo's Maſter, who had bargained for one of the taken Ships; the Declarant cannot be poſitive which: And that at the ſame Time the Supercargo, who was along with them, preſented the King with a ſmall Fowling-Piece. Declares, That the Declarant ſtayed aſhore, trimming the Casks, for about Six Weeks thereafter: And does not remember at preſent any more of the Affair. And declares he cannot ſign but by this Mark.

Edinburgh, 3 April, 1705.

IN Preſence of Sir Robert Forbes, Judge of the High Court of Admiralty, compeared John Bruckley, one of the Crew of the Ship the Worſter; and declares, That he adheres to his former Declaration, emitted before Mr. James Graham, Judge Admiral, the Thirty firſt of March. And now adds, That the Men which were aboard the Ship, which was ſeized before Callicoiloan, were for the moſt part White Men; and the Declarant heard them ſpeak the Engliſh Tongue, being in Number about Twelve or Fourteen. And declares, That Captain Madder was in the Sloop, and one of thoſe that boarded the ſaid Ship; and that the Men were put into the Sloop, and carried away to the Northward in the Sea; and the Declarant never heard any more of them. And that the Goods aboard the taken Ship were brought into the Ship the Worceſter, and conſiſted of China Root, and Four Cheſts of Copper; which Cheſts were ſold at Bengal, to a Bannian Merchant. And further adds, That the Men ſeized in the taken Ship were killed after they were put into the Sloop, and before they were carried to the Sea Northward. And further adds, That immediately after the Action was over, the Declarant did hear the Supercargo, Callant, Captain Madder, John Roberts, and Edward Carry ſay, That the ſeiz'd Ship was Captain Drummond's Ship, belonging to the Scots African Company. And adds, That when the Worceſter ſailed from the Downs, the Declarant did not know where the Ship was bound; but heard it frequently ſaid, they were going upon a Diſcovery. And declares this is the Truth, as he ſhall anſwer to GOD. And declares he cannot write, but by this Mark.

ROBERT FORBES.

APPENDIX.

THE foregoing Account of the Trial of Captain Green and his Crew, being taken † cloſly from the Records of Court; and the uſual Form of the Court being to Hear and Diſcuſs Objections againſt the Witneſſes, before they be examined, viva voce, without any written Debate; it is therefore thought fit here to add the Objections that were made againſt the Witneſſes, and the Anſwers given thereto, with the Interloquitors paſs'd thereon; that there may be nothing wanting to the Reader's full Information.

And firſt, It was objected againſt Antonio Ferdinando, the Cook's Mate, That he could not be a Witneſs, becauſe of his Poverty; he not being worth (as the Stile of the Court is) the Queen's * Unlaw, that is, Ten Pounds Scots, in caſe he ſhould tranſgreſs: And ſo, according to the Law of this Kingdom, was to be rejected. 2. That he was not a Chriſtian, and therefore could not be received as a Witneſs againſt Chriſtians, ſpecially in a Purſuit that reached their Lives and Fortunes. Nor could he indeed be ſuppoſed to have the juſt Knowledge of the Religion of an Oath.

* Fine.

To which it was anſwer'd, 1. That tho' the Standard of Ten Pounds Scots, ſettled by the Law and Cuſtom of this Kingdom, as to the Quality of Witneſſes, might well be refuſed in a Tryal of Crimes of this Nature againſt the Law of Nations, and which were to be tried accordingly; yet the Matter of Fact was falſe; Antonio Ferdinando being worth more than Ten Pounds Scots, by the very Wages due to him; and which, by the Pannels own Books, were atteſted to be Fifteen Shillings per Menſem, whereof, to this Hour, he hath got no Payment. 2. Antonio Ferdinando was a Chriſtian, as he himſelf owned from the Beginning; and that he was born of Chriſtian Parents: Like as it's known, that ſuch Names are only given to Chriſtians. Beſides, tho' his not being a Chriſtian might be a † Prejuge againſt him, yet it could be no juſt Exception againſt his Teſtimony as a Witneſs; ſince he both profeſs'd the Knowledge of GOD, and the Conſcience of an Oath, as he had often declared.

The Judge and Aſſeſſors having conſider'd the foreſaid Objections and Anſwers, they repel the Objections in reſpect to the Anſwers, and allow the Witneſs to be admitted.

2. It was objected againſt Antonio Ferdinando, That he was not worth Ten Pounds Scots; and had indeed nothing; beſides, that he was no Chriſtian, but a Servant or Slave to Captain Green; and alſo had no Religion.

To which it was anſwer'd, 1. That tho' Ten Pounds Scots be the Rate of Witneſſes in our Scots Law; yet, as hath been ſaid, this Rule cannot * vie in the Caſe of the Crimes libelled, committed againſt the Law of Nations in remote Parts, & in alto Mari, in the deep Sea; which made the Crimes to be Crimes excepted. And it's known to be the Rule and Privilege, as to Crimes atrocious and † occult; and therefore excepted to exempt even the Witneſſes from the ordinary Qualifications. Nor was Antonio Ferdinando to be reckon'd no Chriſtian; ſince, 1. He bears a Chriſtian Name; and next declares, that a Chriſtian Miſtreſs he had in Pegu, who gave him to Captain Green, did firſt procure him to be Baptized and Chriſtned. And 3. He profeſſes the Knowledge of the True GOD. Nor, being a Chriſtian, can he be reckon'd any longer a Slave.

But upon the whole, As to theſe Two, and the whole other Witneſſes; the Nature of the atrocious Crime againſt the Law of Nations, with the Manner of their having been committed, and the Endeavours uſed for their Concealment, ought principally cipally to be remembred; since thereby, in the Opinion of all Lawyers, they become Crimes excepted: And that it is the known Privilege of Crimes excepted, to relax from the ordinary Rules, and to proceed on such Evidence, as the Matter doth afford, the Substance of the Probation being only observ'd.

The Judge and Assessors having considered the foresaid Objections and Answers, they repel the Objections, in respect of the Answers, and allow the Witness to be admitted.

3. It was objected against Anne Seaton, that she could not be a Witness, because a Woman.

To which it was answered, that in Crimes where the Probation proceeds not upon Testes requisiti, but such as Providence offers, even Women are admitted. But 2. It's the general Opinion and Practice over all, that in Crimes atrocious, occult and excepted, a Woman is never refused.

The Judge and Assessors having considered the foresaid Objection and Answer, they repel the Objection, in respect of the Answer, and allow the Witnesses to be admitted.

* Excerpts out of the Instructions and Letters found in Captain Green's Books, to which Sir David Dalrymple's Speech to the Jury relates.

* Extracts.

IN the Instructions or Orders given by the Freighters of the Worcester, Captain Thomas Green Commander, to Mr. Robert Callant Supercargo there occurrs one Article in these Words,

We would have you write us by all Opportunities, especially from Sinde, by any Ships bound from thence to Persia; And for the greater Secrecy, especially of the Letter to be sent to Mauritius for us, here under is an Alphabet for you to write us by; Your Subscription must be in common English, directing all such Letters to Captain Thomas Bowrey in Well-close-Square, London.

(Nota, At this Place the whole Alphabet is insert distinctly, and above each Letter a different Character is set down, to be used in Place of the Letters of the Alphabet.)

When your Cargo for England is provided, or near compleated, then we would have you sell the Sloop for what you can get, and invest the Produce in Goods for England.

And lower amongst the same Orders in another Article are these Words,

You must engage the Master of the Sloop not to let any Letter from himself or any other be sent to England, but only our Letter, in which you may insert the Names of any Dead; and for the Care and Secrecy of those who go in the Sloop, in case no Letter or News comes to England, but our Letter concerning our Business, then we will on the return of the Ship give the Master and Crew one Month's Pay Gratis, and they shall also have their Shares of the Benefit promised the Ship's Company for the Whale Fishing.

By a Letter dated London, 3 February 170½, from Captain T. B----y to Mr. Callant, the said Captain advises him in these Words;

For the greater Security of our Affairs, when you write by the Alphabet in your Instructions. I would have you carry the last Letter of each Word to be in the room of the first Letter to the next Word, as for Example.

Captain Thomas Bowrey, Sir wee are all well.
Captai nthoma sbowre yſi rwe ear eal lwell.

Make no Title (as is usual) to begin your Letter, nor no Date, nor Compliment, no Name at last; But let all be comprehended in the Lines of your Letter, so as to make no distinction, and make but one Paragraph of all your Letter, and if any Men dead, set their Names immediately after your own Name subscribed to the Letter, all in Characters before directed, and please to keep this as Directions therein.

By another Letter from the said Captain T. B----y to the said Mr. Callant, dated London, 16 February 170½, he adds concerning the foresaid Cypher in these Words,

On further Consideration, I think, I have committed an Error in my Letter to you Yesterday, it being wrote in it as, viz.

Captai nthoma sbowre yſi rwe ear eal lwell.
That is, Captain Thomas Bowrey, Sir we are all well.

Now, I doubt the naming any Name in the beginning, or making any Compliment there, may be a Means to find the Key of the Alphabet, therefore pray strike out of the Letter I sent you yesterday, as above done, and begin directly with your Business, following the Directions given you. And whereas you are ordered to direct your said Letter to me, I would not have you mention my Name in the Subscription, but direct the said Letter to Mr. Nicholas Pope Scrivener, in Nicholas Lane. London, to pay 5 l. to the Bearer as in your Instructions.

The Tryal of ROBERT FEILDING, Esq;

Die Mercurii quarto Decembris, Anno Regni Annæ Reginæ, quinto, Annoq; Dom. 1706.

AT the Sessions-House in the Old Baily, This Day came on the Tryal of Robert Feilding, Esq; for Felony, in Marrying Her Grace the Dutchess of Cleaveland; Mary Wadsworth, his First Wife, being then alive. The Court being sat, proceeded in this manner.

Clerk of Arraignment. SET Robert Feilding to the Bar. (Which was done.)

Clerk

Clerk of Arr. Robert Feilding, hold up thy Hand. (Which he did.)

Clerk of Arraignment. ROBERT Feilding, you ſtand indicted by the Name of Robert Fielding, late of the Pariſh of St. James's, within the Liberty of Weſtminſter, in the County of Middleſex, Eſq; For that you, on the Ninth Day of November, in the Fourth Year of Her now Majeſty's Reign, at the Pariſh aforeſaid, in the County aforeſaid, took to Wife one Mary Wadſworth, Spinſter, and the ſame Mary Wadſworth, then and there had for your Wife; and that you the ſaid Robert Feilding, afterwards, viz. on the Twenty Fifth of the ſame Month of November, in the Year aforeſaid, at the Pariſh of St. Martins in the Fields, in the ſaid County, did feloniouſly take to Wife the moſt Noble Barbara Dutcheſs of Cleveland, (the ſaid Mary Wadſworth, his former Wife, being then living); againſt the Peace of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, her Crown and Dignity, and againſt the Form of the Statute in that Caſe made and provided.

How ſay'ſt thou, Robert Feilding, art thou Guilty of this Indictment, or not Guilty?

Feilding. Not Guilty.

Clerk of Arr. Culprit. How wilt thou be tryed?

Feilding. By God and my Country.

Cl. of Arr. God ſend thee a good Deliverance.

Cl. of Arr. Call the Jury. Mr. Feilding, if you except to any of the Jury, you muſt do it before they are ſworn.

Feilding. I do not challenge any of them.

The Jury ſworn, viz.

Francis Chapman,	Edward Boſwell,
Thomas Moody,	John Mills,
Peter Levigne,	Richard Hazzard,
Hugh Merchant,	Samuel Chace,
Joſeph Devenish,	Thomas Yeomond,
Edward How,	John Johnſon.

Proclamation made, That if any can inform the Queen's Juſtices, and the Queen's Council, of any the Matters the Priſoner ſtands charged with; let them come forth and they ſhall be heard.

Mr. Raymond, the Queen's Council. My Lord, and you Gentlemen of the Jury, I am, in this Caſe, Council for the Queen. The Priſoner at the Bar, Robert Feilding, ſtands indicted, That he on the Ninth Day of November, in the Fourth Year of Her now Majeſty's Reign, &c. (the Indictment repeated) To which Indictment he has pleaded not Guilty, and put himſelf on God and his Country, which Country you are. I hope if we prove the Indictment, you will find him guilty.

Sir James Mountague. My Lord and Gentlemen of the Jury, I am of Council with the Queen againſt the Priſoner, Mr. Robert Feilding, who ſtands indicted for taking to Wife Barbara Dutcheſs of Cleveland, after he had before marry'd one Mary Wadſworth, who is ſtill alive: This is a Crime that amounts to Felony; and tho' the Law doth not take away from him that ſhall be convicted thereof, the Benefit of his Clergy; yet, ſince it is ſuch a Crime as doth take away from the Priſoner the Aſſiſtance of Council, I ſhall only ſtate Matter of Fact, which is as followeth.

About a Year ago, or a little better, there was a young Lady left a Widow by Mr. Deleau, and reputed a great Fortune: Mr. Feilding thinking himſelf qualified for the greateſt Fortune, had a Deſign upon this Lady; and in Auguſt, 1705. he applied himſelf to one Mrs. Streights to conſult with her, and contrive ſome Method how he might have Acceſs to court this Widow. This Mrs. Streights had no Acquaintance with the Widow her ſelf, but knew Mrs. Charlott Villars was acquainted with her, and uſed to cut her Hair; ſo the beſt Thing they could think of at that Time, was to make Mrs. Villars their Friend, that by her Means he might have Admittance into the Lady's Company; for he did not queſtion if the Lady had but once a Sight of his very handſome Perſon, ſhe would have the ſame Affection for him, that he had met with from other Ladies, even on their firſt ſeeing of him. Mrs. Villars was promiſed 500 l. to bring this Affair about; and tho' ſhe doubted with her ſelf, whether ſhe could ever accompliſh it, yet by theſe Means ſhe might perhaps make a Penny of it to her ſelf; and thereupon ſhe promiſes Mrs. Streights to uſe her endeavour to ſerve the Major-General, meaning Mr. Feilding, tho' Mrs. Villars could not be ſure ſuch an Overture would be well received by Mrs. Deleau: Yet being acquainted with one Mary Wadſworth, a young Woman not much unlike in Perſon to Mrs. Deleau, ſhe imagined it would be no difficult Matter for her to ſet up the ſaid Mrs. Wadſworth to repreſent Mrs. Deleau; and accordingly it was done, and Mr. Feilding proved ſo intent upon the Matter, that he went in few Days to Doctors-Commons, to ſee for Mr. Deleau's Will (and found thereby that Mrs. Deleau was left very conſiderable.) And that he might judge the better whether ſhe were truly the Fortune ſhe was repreſented to him, he took a Copy of the ſaid Will, and ſoon after went to Mrs. Villars and told her, That what Mrs. Streights had ſaid concerning Mrs. Deleau's Fortune was true: And being very well ſatisfied with her Fortune, he was reſolved to get a View of her. Soon after, Mr. Feilding went to Tunbridge, and after two or three Days ſtay there, returned and called at Waddon, the Place where Mrs. Deleau reſided, with a Pretence to ſee the Houſe and Gardens, but in reality it was to ſee the Widow; he thought nothing elſe was then to be done, but to give the Lady a ſight of his handſome Perſon he deſigned to lay at her Feet; but it happened that the Lady would not be ſeen her ſelf, but her Servants were permitted to ſhow him the Gardens, and he fancied himſelf that he had had a Sight of Mrs. Deleau too; for a Kinſwoman of Mrs. Deleau's looking out into the Garden while he was there, gave him the Sight of a Woman at the Window, and he preſently concluded it could be no body but Mrs. Deleau admiring Beau Feilding. About three Days after Mr. Feilding's Return from Tunbridge, which was about a Fortninght after St. Bartholomew-tide laſt was Twelve-month, he told Mrs. Villars of his calling at Waddon, and that he had acquainted the Dutcheſs of Cleveland of the fine Gardens that were there, and he ſaid that her Grace had a great Deſire to ſee them, and therefore directed Mrs. Villars to go from her Grace to Mrs. Deleau, to ask the Favour of her to permit her Grace to ſee the Houſe and Gardens. Accordingly Mrs. Villars went down to Waddon; and Mrs. Deleau treated her very civilly, and told her, whenever her Grace pleaſed, ſhe ſhould ſee her Houſe and Gardens; but as ſhe was a Widow ſhe could not attend upon her Grace: But tho' the Dutcheſs was expected after this, yet she did not go, for indeed she did not know any Thing of the Message. So the next Time Mr. Feilding attempted to see her, was at a Horse-Race at Banstead-Downs, whither he went for that Purpose, but did not see her. After this, or some Time before, he sent a Letter to Mrs. Deleau's House, but the Servants when they saw the Name to it, knowing the Character of Mr. Feilding, threw it into the Fire.----- When Mrs. Villars found that the Dutchess of Cleaveland knew nothing of her being sent to Waddon, and that it was only a Contrivance of Mr. Feilding's to get an Opportunity of seeing Mrs. Deleau, and that in Truth he had never seen her, she resolved to play Trick for Trick with him, and thereupon proposed the Matter to Mary Wadsworth, the Woman I beforementioned to be of her Acquaintance, but one that Mr. Feilding did not know, and one that would not worst her self much by such an Undertaking, whether it succeeded or not. Mrs. Wadsworth, upon the first opening of it, readily embraced the Offer, and thereupon Mrs. Villars went to Mr. Feilding and told him, she had proposed the Matter to the Lady (Mrs. Deleau) which she at first rejected, but at last did give a favourable Ear to it; and that she did not fear, but if Matters could be prudently managed, his Desires might be accomplished.----- A little before my Lord Mayor's Day last was Twelve-month, she told Mr. Feilding that she had at length obtained of the Lady the Favour of a Promise of an Interview, and that she was shortly to bring her to his Lodgings, but he must take care not to let her know they were his Lodgings, or to give her the least Cause to suspect he had any Thing to do there: Accordingly Mrs. Villars, the Evening of my Lord Mayor's Day, brought Mrs. Wadsworth in a Mourning Coach and Widow's Dress to Mr. Feilding's Lodgings: He was not within at the Time they came thither, but being sent for, came in soon after, and was extreamly complaisant for some Time; but at length, tho' he had been cautioned not to let the Lady know they were his Lodgings, yet he could not forbear shewing her his fine Cloaths, and what Furniture he had; and in a little Time after sent for Mrs. Margaretta to sing to her; and pretended he was so extreamly taken with her, that nothing would satisfie him but being married that Night; but she, with a seeming Modesty, check'd his forward Behaviour, and made a shew of going away in displeasure; but before they parted, he prevail'd upon her to promise not to put off their Marriage longer than Wednesday Seven-night. My Lord, Mr. Feilding rightly judged by this Conversation what an Interest he had fix'd in the Lady, and looking upon himself to be sure of her, he actually went to a Goldsmith and bespoke a Ring, and directed himself what Posie should be engrav'd. When the Day came which had first been agreed on, sham Pretences were made, not to seem over-hasty in so serious a Matter, and the Marriage was put off till the Friday following, being the 9th of November last was Twelve-month; at which Time Mrs. Villars and the Lady came again to Mr. Feilding's Lodging, where he received her with an extraordinary Transport of Joy, and the Marriage must immediately be proceeded on; but she for some Time framed several Put-offs, and at length made an Offer to have gone away; but Mr. Feilding by no Means would permit her to go, without making her his own, which he was resolved should be done presently; and to make all Things sure, he ran out and lock'd the Chamber-door to keep her and Mrs. Villars in, whilst he went for a Priest; and taking Coach immediately drove to Count Gallas's, the Emperor's Envoy; when he came to his Gate, he enquired of the Porter for one Francisco Drian, that was stiled, The Father in Red, upon account of a red Habit he usually wore; but he not being within, Mr. Feilding asked for another Father; and one Father Florence was called to him, whom he acquainted with the Business he came about; but whilst he was treating with Father Florence, the Father in Red luckily came in, and Mr. Feilding immediately took him away with him in the Hackney-Coach to his Lodgings. My Lord and Gentlemen, we shall shew you that this Father in Red stay'd there about an Hour, and then went away.---- We shall shew your Lordship likewise, That Mr. Feilding and Mary Wadsworth supped together, and after Supper he was actually marry'd to Mrs. Wadsworth. And that this Marriage was consummate, we shall prove by several Particulars, viz. That clean Sheets were laid upon the Bed, and all Ceremonies performed that are usual upon such Occasions; and they actually went to Bed together, and lay together all that Night; and the next Day the Lady and Mrs. Villars went away, and as Mr. Feilding supposed, to Waddon, the Widow Deleau's House; to which Place your Lordship and the Jury will find he directed his Letters to her afterwards, and in the Superscriptions stiles her the Countess of Feilding. To corroborate this Evidence we shall likewise prove to your Lordship, that about a Week after, he lay with her again at the very same Lodgings; and we can make it appear that he hath lain with her three several Times since this first Night, twice before, and once after his Marriage with the Dutchess of Cleaveland. My Lord, we shall shew you that he made her Presents, furnish'd her with Money, and treated her as his Wife, until the Cheat was found out, which was not till May after; and then finding how he had been served, that instead of marrying a Fortune of 60000 l. he had been imposed upon, and marry'd one not worth so many Farthings, he discarded her in great Wroth.

My Lord, we will call our Witnesses who will prove to your Lordship, step by step, how this Matter was brought about; and first we will begin with Mrs. Villars.

Mrs. Villars. My Lord, there came one Mrs. Streights to my Lodgings and wanted to speak with me (it was Bartholomew tide was Twelve-month) but I was not at home; when I came home, they told me Mrs. Streights had been there, and left word that I was always out of the way when it was to do my self good; she said it would be Five hundred Pounds out of my way if I did not come to her. I met with her and Mr. Feilding, and being acquainted with Mr. Feilding's Design upon Mrs. Deleau, he asked me whether I knew the Lady? I said I had no particular Acquaintance with her, but I used to cut her Hair: He told me that he was in Love with her, and asked me whether I could assist him in his Courtship? and whether a Marriage might be brought brought about? I told him I could not tell, I did not know whether I had that Intereſt in the Lady as to be made ſerviceable in ſuch a Deſign. Mr. Feilding enquired very ſtrictly after her, and ſaid, he would try Means to come into her Company that he might gain her Acquaintance: Upon which we parted at that Time. - - - - And about Three Days after, Mrs. Streights came to my Houſe again, and ſaid, Mr. Feilding would ſpeak with me. I went to him; and he told me, he found that the Lady was worth 60000 l. as he had been told before. He asked me where it was ſhe liv'd? I told him, in Copthal-Court, near the Change. I told him likewiſe where her Country-Houſe was; That it was at Waddon in Surrey. Mr. Feilding told me, He would go to Tunbridge, and call by the way to ſee the Gardens; and by that means he might have an Opportunity of ſeeing Mrs. Deleau; which he did accordingly. I was ſent for again; and he told me he had ſeen the Gardens, and they were very fine: And that he ſaw the Lady through a Caſement; and that ſhe might have the more perfect View of him, he took divers Turns in the Garden, pull'd out his Watch, and ſet it by the Sun-Dial: And that he came round the Country, and almoſt murder'd his Horſes, to get a Sight of her. But he deſired to be in her Company, that he might have a full View of her. He deſired me to go to Mrs. Deleau, and tell her, that the Dutcheſs of Cleveland had heard a great Character of her Gardens, and was very deſirous to ſee them. - - - I went and acquainted Mrs. Deleau with it: She ſaid, ſhe would not refuſe a Woman of her Quality; but would take it as a great Favour, to ſhew her any Thing that belong'd to her: But deſir'd that it might not be that Week, but the Week following; becauſe ſhe was to ſee a Race on Banſtead Downs. I told Mr. Feilding this; and he made Anſwer for the Dutcheſs of Cleveland, and ſaid, The Dutcheſs was not well; and could not go to ſee the Gardens. When I found that Mr. Feilding did not ſend me from the Dutcheſs, but from himſelf; I was out of Countenance, that I ſhould innocently impoſe upon the Lady. Mr. Feilding told me, he would go and ſee the Race upon the Downs; and when he came back, he would ſend for me, and acquaint me whether he had ſeen the Lady. And when he came to Town again, he ſent Mrs. Streights to me, to come to him; and when I came to him, he told me he ſaw Mrs. Deleau, he believed, upon the Downs. Mr. Feilding made a Bow to them, and they to him. He ſaid, From thence he went to Epſom, and ſent a Letter to be deliver'd into Mrs. Deleau's own Hands, by a Servant of his, not in a Livery. I think it was accordingly deliver'd. Mr. Feilding told me Mrs. Deleau read it, and ſaid it requir'd no Anſwer; and ſaid no more. Mr. Feilding ask'd me, whether I could not get a Letter to Mrs. Deleau? He ſaid, he was much in Love with her. I told him, I believ'd he was miſtaken; and that it was another whom he ſaw. - - - I perceiv'd that he had no Knowledge of Mrs. Deleau. - - - - I acquainted a young Woman (whom I ſuppoſed he might have ſeen) with his Inclination, (Mrs. Wadſworth): She ſaid, ſhe did not expect to be ſo happy; but wiſh'd it might be ſo. I engag'd to Mr. Feilding to do what I could to bring it about. - - - - There were divers Letters paſs'd between them till my Lord Mayor's Day. Divers Preſents were ſent from Mr. Feilding, by me, to the Lady. The firſt Preſent was a Gold Apron, ſtruck with Green: That was the firſt Preſent Mr. Feilding ſent to Mrs. Wadſworth, whom he thought was Mrs. Deleau all the while; but it was Mrs. Wadſworth. I did not think Mrs. Deleau, who was a great Fortune, would agree to marry a Man of Mr. Feilding's Character. Mr. Feilding kept ſending of Preſents and Letters from that Time, from the latter End of Bartholomewtide, to my Lord Mayor's Day. He ſent her a Suit of white Sattin Knots, and Gloves, and other Things. He deſir'd I would bring her to his Lodgings on my Lord Mayor's Day, at Night; which I did about Nine a Clock, in a Mourning Coach. Mr. Feilding was not at home, but came immediately. When he came in, he fell down upon his Knees, and kiſs'd her, and expreſs'd Abundance of fond Expreſſions. He asked her, why ſhe ſtayed ſo long? And whether ſhe loved Singing? He ſaid, He would ſend for Margaretta to come up. When ſhe came, Mr. Feilding bid her ſing the Two Songs which he lov'd; - - - which ſhe did: The one was, Charming Creature; and the other, Ianthe the Lovely. After which, Mr. Feilding ſent for Two Pints of Wine, and ſome Plumb-Cakes. He urg'd very much to marry her; but ſhe declin'd it, and made him a Promiſe to come to him the Wedneſday following. In the interim ſhe ſent him a Letter, to acquaint him ſhe could not come according to her Appointment; but ſhe would come to him on the Friday following, which was the 9th of November. Then he ſent her another Letter, to deſire her not to fail, but come to his Arms; and told her, That there wanted nothing but the Holy Father to join their Happineſs; for their Hearts were all one already. And when Friday came, Mrs. Wadſworth and I went to Mr. Feilding's Lodgings again: He was not within; but came running into the Room in a little Time after with a great deal of Joy, and took Mrs. Wadſworth into his Arms, and ſaid, Nothing could eaſe his Mind, but a Promiſe to make him happy, in Marrying him preſently. - - - - He ſaid, he would fetch the Prieſt; but Mrs. Wadſworth refus'd his Propoſal, and would have diſſuaded him from going then; and deſired him to put it off till another Time, and would have gone away: But he would not hear of it; and ſaid, She had diſappointed him before; and that he repented he had let her go away before; but now he was reſolved to make her his own, before ſhe went away. Mr. Feilding then went for the Prieſt, and lock'd the Chamber-Door after him, and took the Key with him, for fear Mrs. Wadſworth ſhould go away; and order'd Boucher to let no body into the Dining-Room till his Return. Mr. Feilding returned in a little Time, and brought a Prieſt with him, in a long Red Gown lin'd with Blue, and a long Beard, and a Fur-Cap. Mr. Feilding told her, that this was the Holy Father that was to make them one. Mr. Feilding then ordered the Man to lay the Cloth, and fetch'd a Diſh of Pickles to Supper. - - - - At Supper Mrs. Wadſworth ſeemed cautious; and for fear the Prieſt ſhould not be in Orders, ſaid, How ſhall I know that this is a Prieſt in Orders? Mr. Feilding queſtion'd him. Then the Prieſt pull'd a Picture out of his Pocket, about the Bigneſs of a Crown-Piece; and told them, That none but Prieſts had ſuch Pictures. And that ſhe might be ſtill further ſatisfied, ſhe deſired another Token.

After this, Boucher, and the reſt of the Servants were order'd down Stairs. Then the Prieſt call'd for Water, Salt and Roſemary, to make Holy-Water. Boucher brought up Water and Salt, but could get no Roſemary. Mr. Feilding and I received it at the Dining-Room Door. Then Mr. Feilding lock'd the Door, and took the Key in the Inſide. Mr. Feilding ask'd Mrs. Wadſworth, Whether it ſhould be done in the Bed-Chamber, or Dining-Room? Mrs. Wadſworth agreed it ſhould be in the Bed-Chamber. There were none preſent, but Mr. Feilding, Mrs. Wadſworth, the Prieſt, and my ſelf. The Prieſt made Holy-Water, and bleſſed it: Then he ſet Mrs. Wadſworth at the right of Mr. Feilding: The Prieſt ſtood before them, and read the Ceremony in Latin, as I underſtood; and Mrs. Wadſworth ſaid, She was not yet ſatisfied he was a Prieſt. Then he laid down his Book, took from under his Gown a Piece of Silk like a Scarf, that was mark'd with a Croſs in the Middle; and ſaid, None but Prieſts us'd ſuch a Thing. Then Mrs. Wadſworth was well ſatisfied he was a Prieſt. Says Mr. Feilding to her, Do you think, my Dear, that I would have any body to do this Buſineſs, but the Holy Father? Mrs. Wadſworth was well ſatisfied till he came to that Part, Wilt thou have this Woman to thy wedded Wife? She deſir'd it might be ſpoke in Engliſh by him, as well as he could. He did ſo. He ask'd Mr. Feilding, Whether he would have this Gentlewoman to be his wedded Wife? He ſaid, Yes, with all my Heart. He asked the Lady then, Whether ſhe would have this Gentleman for her Husband? She ſaid, Yes, faintly: But, ſays Mr. Feilding, You don't ſpeak it ſo earneſtly as I do: You muſt ſay, With all my Heart and Soul. Which ſhe did. Then the Prieſt bleſſed the Ring, and gave it to Mr. Feilding, to put it on the Lady's Finger. He ſaid ſomething in Latin, but what it was I know not. Then we went into the Dining-Room. Boucher brought up Wine; and when all had drank, the Prieſt was diſcharged. Mrs. Wadſworth and I went into the Bed-Chamber, and I put her to Bed. Mr. Feilding called her his Dear Wife, the Counteſs of Feilding; and ſaid, He would make haſte and fly to her Arms. After I put her to Bed, he went to Bed to her; and order'd me to come into the Room to ſee them in Bed; which I did. I roſe the next Morning, and came to Mr. Feilding's Room, where Boucher came ſoon after to light a Fire: Then I ſaw Mrs. Wadſworth in naked Bed with Mr. Feilding. Mrs. Wadſworth put on her Cloaths as ſoon as ſhe could; and a Hackney-Coach was call'd for her, and ſhe went away. At parting with Mr. Feilding, ſhe told him, ſhe did not know when ſhe could return; but about a Fortnight after, ſhe came again. There were Fires made in both Rooms, and Candles lighted up; clean Sheets upon the Bed, and every Thing prepared for her lying there. Mrs. Wadſworth went to Bed. Mr. Feilding did not come home till late that Night. I ſaw them that Night in Bed, and went into the Room the next Morning, and ſaw them in Bed again: She roſe, and went away as before. Mr. Feilding deſired her not to ſtay ſo long as ſhe had done before; for if ſhe did, he would come and fetch her. She promis'd him ſhe would return ſooner. Mr. Feilding kept ſending of Letters to her between Times, which was about Fifteen or Sixteen Days, till ſhe came to him again. He deſired her to come to him, and he would be at home to receive her. She accordingly came to him, after having given him notice of her coming. He was not at home when ſhe came; but ſhe went to Supper by her ſelf.---She had for her Supper ſome toaſted Cheeſe, a Pint of Wine, and a Bottle of Oat Ale. When he came home to her, he asked her, Why ſhe did not ſend for ſomething better for Supper? They went to Bed again, as before; and I ſaw them in Bed together. Mrs. Wadſworth got up in the Morning; Mr. Feilding treated her; and away ſhe went as before. Then Mr. Feilding kept writing to her, [which Letters are inſerted in their proper Places] and deſir'd her to come to him again, as being the laſt Night ſhe ſhould lie with him at his Lodgings; for he was going to leave his Lodgings for altogether, and be with her Grace the Dutcheſs of Cleveland. Mrs. Wadſworth came; but neither Mr. Feilding nor Boucher were at the Lodgings: But ſhe had not been there long, but Boucher came in, and ſaid, That he had brought his Maſter's Night-Gown and Slippers from the Dutcheſs of Cleveland's.

Council. Mrs. Villars, You ſay, moſt of the Service was in a Language you did not underſtand.

Mrs. Villars. It was, my Lord---But one Part of it was in Engliſh. I heard Mr. Feilding ſay, He would take this Lady to be his wedded Wife.

Council. Who is that Lady?

Mrs. Villars. That Lady, Mrs. Wadſworth; pointing at her; (She being in Court.)

Council. What did you hear Mrs. Wadſworth ſay?

Mrs. Villars. I heard her ſay, That ſhe took Mr. Feilding to her wedded Husband.

Council. What did you obſerve elſe that was remarkable?

Mrs. Villars. I ſaw the Ceremony of the Ring performed. I ſaw the Prieſt bleſs the Ring with Holy-Water, and ſign himſelf with the Sign of the Croſs. The Prieſt held Mrs. Wadſworth by the lower Joint of the Finger, and put the Ring on.

Council. What is Mrs. Wadſworth's Chriſtian Name?

Mrs. Villars. Mary.

Council. What did he ſay further, when he ſaid, I take thee to be my wedded Wife?

Mrs. Villars. He named no Name, but I take this Lady, &c.---The Prieſt ask'd him, Whether he took her with all his Heart and Soul? He ſaid, I take her with all my Heart, and Soul, and Blood, and every Thing elſe.

Council. What Time was this?

Mrs. Villars. It was Bartholomewtide was Twelve Months, as near as I can remember to the Time.

Council. Did Mr. Feilding tell you he had been at Waddon?

Mrs. Villars. Yes, he did; and ſaid, That he had ſeen the Lady thro' the Window, whence he fell in Love with her.

Council. Why was this Marriage kept private?

Mrs. Villars. Becauſe Mr. Feilding took the Lady to be Mrs. Deleau.

Juſtice Powel. How long was it before it was diſcover'd?

Mrs. Villars. It was not diſcover'd till the latter End of May laſt, or the Beginning of June.

Juſtice Powel. When was the Time Mr. Feilding was marry'd?

Mrs. Villars. It was the 9th of November was Twelve Months.

Council. What was the Reaſon why the Marriage was carry'd on ſo privately?

Mrs. Villars. The Reaſon was, becauſe Mrs. Deleau had a Father alive, who had in his Hands a Part of her her Fortune; and for fear of diſobliging him, Mrs. Wadſworth, that went for Mrs. Deleau, was willing it ſhould be kept private.

Council. Can you tell the Reaſon of its being diſcovered?

Mrs. Villars. Mrs. Wadſworth ſent to Mr. Feilding for Money. - - - Then Mr. Feilding found he had not a Woman of that Fortune which he took her to be. When Mr. Feilding did find it out, he took Mrs. Streights into a Cloſet, at the Dutcheſs of Cleveland's, and ſent for me there: Then Mr. Feilding wanted to have the Preſents returned. Mr. Feilding then beat me, and asked me whether that was a fit Wife for him? And then took a Thing made of Steel at one end, and a Hammer at the other end; and told me, If I would not unſay what I ſaid of his Marriage with Wadſworth, he would ſlit my Noſe off: And that he would get Two Blacks; the one ſhould hold me upon his Back, and the other ſhould break my Bones.

Juſtice Powel. One would have thought you ſhould have been afraid to have ſeen Mr. Feilding.

Mrs. Villars. My Lord, It was not till then found out.

Sir James Mountague. My Lord, I think ſhe hath clearly proved the Marriage; and that ſhe ſaw them Three times in Bed together, in the Space of Six Weeks after the Marriage.

Mr. Feilding. By what Name did Mrs. Wadſworth go?

Mrs. Villars. By no Name at all.

Mr. Feilding. Did I ever appear with her in Publick?

Mrs. Villars. No, never.

Mr. Feilding. What was the firſt Place I ſaw her in?

Mrs. Villars. The firſt Place you ſaw her, was at your Lodgings, laſt Lord Mayor's Day was Twelve Months.

Mr. Feilding. My Lord, I deſire it may be asked her, how ſhe came to think that I ſhould ſend ſuch mean Preſents as ſhe hath mentioned, to a Lady of Mrs. Deleau's Fortune? They were not at all ſuitable to Mrs. Deleau.

Juſtice Powel. Ay, Mrs. Villars, What ſay you to that? Mr. Feilding thinks it a very ſtrange Thing, that he ſhould ſend ſuch Trifles to a Lady of Mrs. Deleau's Quality.

Mrs. Villars. He did think, at that Time, [illegible] he made his Addreſſes to Mrs. Deleau; and I am ſure ſuch Preſents were ſent; and he was really marry'd to her, and marry'd her for Mrs. Deleau.

Juſtice Powel. Mrs. Villars, Mr. Feilding deſires this Queſtion ſhould be ask'd you; When was the firſt Time you acquainted the Dutcheſs of Cleveland with this Matter?

Mrs. Villars. I will tell your Lordſhip. Mrs. Feilding that is now, told me, Mr. Feilding beat her at the Lodge at Whitehall, (I did not ſee the beating) and ſaid, ſhe ſhould have Occaſion to bring me upon my Oath, to prove that Mr. Feilding was marry'd to her the Ninth of November. I went with Mrs. Feilding to the Duke of Grafton, and told him, I was ſure he was marry'd the Ninth of November before.

Juſtice Powel. How long was it after the beating, before you and Mrs. Feilding went to the Duke of Grafton?

Mrs. Villars. It was about Three Weeks.

Juſtice Powel. Are you ſure it was before that Time that there was any Parting betwixt Mr. Feilding and the Dutcheſs of Cleveland?

Mrs. Villars. Mrs. Feilding acquainted me with it her ſelf, that the Beating was before the Difference between the Dutcheſs of Cleveland and Mr. Feilding.

Council. Altho' you did not ſee what paſs'd at Whitehall; Whether was this before the Difference between the Dutcheſs and Mr. Feilding?

Mrs. Villars. I believe it was about a Fortnight, or Three Weeks.

Mr. Feilding. How came it to paſs that it was not diſcover'd till now of late?

Mrs. Villars. It was not diſcover'd till ſhe ſent to Mr. Feilding for Money, about May, after the Marriage.

Juſtice Powel. Why did not you apply your ſelf to Mr. Feilding for the Reward?

Mrs. Villars. I was to have no Reward.

Mr. Feilding. Mrs. Villars, What Reward did the Dutcheſs of Cleveland promiſe you?

Mrs. Villars. I never ſaw the Dutcheſs of Cleveland; and I was never promis'd any Reward.

Juſtice Powel. Was you not to have had a Reward for helping Mr. Feilding to Mrs. Deleau?

Mrs. Villars. Mrs. Streights left ſuch word at my Lodgings; but I had no Promiſe of it from Mr. Feilding.

Sir James Mountague. My Lord, Mrs. Villars has given you ſo full an Account of every Thing I have open'd, that all that we have to do now, is to ſupport Mrs. Villars's Evidence; and to make it appear to your Lordſhip, that ſhe is right in all theſe Particulars that ſhe tells you of. And the better to make our ſelves underſtood, we will go on, and give your Lordſhip an Account how theſe Things were carry'd on from Time to Time. But firſt we ſhall prove to your Lordſhip, How that after Mr. Feilding was thus marry'd to Mrs. Wadſworth, he did actually marry the Dutcheſs of Cleveland.

Mr. Feilding. My Lord, I do not deny my Marriage to the Dutcheſs of Cleveland.

Sir James Mountague. Then, my Lord, we will not trouble you with any Proof of that Matter, but go on with making out the Circumſtances of his Marriage with Mrs. Wadſworth; and we ſhall verify, in every Particular, Mrs. Villars's Evidence. And firſt we ſhall prove, that he actually took a Copy of Mr. Deleau's Will. For that call Mr. Searle. (Who was ſworn.)

Sir James Mountague. Mr. Searle, Give my Lord and the Jury an Account of what you know of Mr. Feilding's coming to Doctors Commons, to ſee the Will of Mr. Deleau.

Mr. Searle. My Lord, I am Servant to Mr. Cottle, Proctor to the Prerogative Office. Mr. Feilding came to Doctors Commons about the Beginning of Michaelmas Term, 1705. and deſired me to ſearch, and ſee whether Mr. Deleau's Will was come into the Office, or no. I look'd in the Kalendar, and found it was come in; and ſpoke to the Clerk, in whoſe Poſſeſſion it was, and he read it over to him; and he deſired a Copy of it, which I wrote out. Mr. Feilding came in Three Days after for it, but it was not done. I deſir'd him to come another Time; which he did, and had it.

Council. Who did he beſpeak it of?

Mr. Searle. He beſpoke it of me, and had the Copy of me.

Council. When was this?

Mr. Searle. It was about the Beginning of Michaelmas Term.

Sir James Mountague. The next Thing we ſhall prove, is, That Mr. Feilding was actually at Waddon, Mrs. Deleau's Houſe: And we ſhall prove that even by Mrs. Deleau.

(Who was ſworn.)

Council. Pray, Madam, have you any Acquaintance with Mr. Feilding?

Mrs. Deleau. None at all.

Council. Do you remember he came to your Houſe in the Country?

Mrs. Deleau. He did about Bartholomewtide was Twelve-month.

Council. When he was there, had he a ſight of you, Madam?

Mrs. Deleau. No, my Lord; he was not in the Houſe, but in the Garden.

Council. Do you know Mrs. Villars?

Mrs. Deleau. I do, my Lord.

Council. Did ſhe ever come to you upon ſuch a Meſſage, That my Lady Dutcheſs of Cleveland and Mr. Feilding had a Deſire to ſee the Gardens?

Mrs. Deleau. She did ſo; and it was about the ſame Time Mr. Feilding had been there, or ſome little Time after, I believe.

Council. Did you go to the Race on Banſtead Downs?

Mrs. Deleau. No, my Lord.

Council. Did Mrs. Villars uſe to Cut your Hair?

Mrs. Deleau. No, my Lord---Her Miſtreſs did.

Council. Was there any Letter brought to your Houſe from Mr. Feilding?

Mrs. Deleau. I heard there was.

Council. Who receiv'd the Letter from Mr. Feilding?

Mrs. Deleau. Some of the Servants, but I receiv'd none; but ſome of the Servants receiv'd it. I was then at my Father's, and left Orders that they ſhould take in no Letters but ſuch as came from my Relations, which would come by themſelves.

Council. When had you Notice of Mr. Feilding's being at your Houſe?

Mrs. Deleau. My own Butler came up, and acquainted me Mr. Feilding was below. He came to my Houſe with the Character of Major General Villars. I did not ſee him; but here's the Lady that ſaw him out of the Window; who, it ſeems, he took for my ſelf.

That Lady Sworn.

Council. My Lord, we only bring this Lady to prove what the firſt Witneſſes ſaid, That Mr. Feilding ſaw Mrs. Deleau thro' a Window --- Madam, Do you remember Mr. Feilding was at Waddon, and when?

Lady. He was there about Bartholomew-tide was Twelve-Month. I did ſee him thro' a Window, and inform'd my Couſin of it.

Council. Then call Mr. Boucher, (who was Sworn.)

Council. Mr. Boucher, Pray give my Lord and the Jury an Account of all you know of this Matter.

Mr. Boucher. My Lord, I went with Mr. Feilding to my Lord-Mayor's Show laſt Lord-Mayor's Day was Twelve-month. He went in his Chariot to Mr. Feilding's a Linnen-Drapers at the Three Legs in Cheapſide. I looked into the Balcony and ſaw Mrs. Villars there --- My Maſter came down again, and went to Sir Baſil Firebraſs's; from thence I was order'd to go home, and meet my Maſter in Bond-Street; which I did. He ask'd me whether any body had been at his Lodgings to enquire for him? I ſaid, No, and went home again. Then I found the Lady and Mrs. Villars at Mr. Feilding's Lodgings. They had been there but a little time, but Mr. Feilding came in. Mr. Feilding complimented the Lady, and ask'd her if ſhe lov'd Singing? Mrs. Margaretta was ſent for, and accommodated this Lady and Mrs. Villars with two Songs. Mr. Feilding treated them with a Bottle of Wine and a Plumb-Cake --- Margaretta went away; and ſoon after Mrs. Villars and this Lady went away. So, ſays Mrs. Heath afterwards to me, Do you know what Woman of Quality that is in the Coach? This Mrs. Heath is the Landlady where Mr. Feilding lodged. Mrs. Villars and the Lady went away in a Coach. She was in a Mourning-Dreſs, and the Coach was a Mourning-Coach.

Council. What Time was this?

Mr. Boucher. It was my Lord-Mayor's Day was Twelve-month, on the Twenty ninth of October.

Council. Well, go on, and tell what you know of the Marriage.

Mr. Boucher. Not long after this, my Maſter order'd me to be at home, to get clean Sheets for the Bed, Wax-Candles, and Sconces, and Fires in both the Rooms: He told me ſome Ladies would be there that Night; and order'd if he was not at home when they came, to tell them, that he would be there preſently. Accordingly they came, and he was not at home; but in a little time he came and went up to them. Some time after that, he came down Stairs in great Haſte, and ſaid, Boucher, go and beſpeak a Diſh of Pickles. I did ſo; and brought over a Cloth, and the reſt of the Things, and left them in the Window. I ſtay'd by the Stairs till he came back in a Hackney-Coach, with a Prieſt along with him in a long Gown, and long Beard, and a Furr Cap; I knew him to belong to the Emperor's Envoy; and I heard Mr. Feilding call him, Reverend Father. Then I was order'd to ſet the Table and Glaſſes, and Wine, and Things of that kind, upon the Side-board. I waited at Table all the while. When Supper was over, Mr. Feilding order'd me to go down and fetch Water, Salt, and Roſemary. I went and got Water and Salt, but could get no Roſemary. Then I was order'd to go down, and they were lock'd in about three quarters of an Hour: He then call'd, Boucher, ſays he, will you fill ſome Wine? --- I did ſo, and perceiv'd upon the Thumb of this Lady, upon her Left Hand, a plain Gold Ring, which before Supper ſhe had not. When this was over, the Prieſt went away. Preſently after, ſays Mr. Feilding, Take the Sheets from my Bed, and lay them on the other Bed, for Mrs. Villars; and ſee that none lye there. I told my Maſter 'twas done. Mrs. Villars, in the mean time, put the Lady to Bed. When I came down to tell them of it, I ſaw the Ladies Cloths upon a Stool in the Chamber; and Mrs. Villars folding them up, and laying them in another Room. I then light Mrs. Villars to Bed, and then went to Bed my ſelf. In the Morning I was call'd to make a Fire; I then perceiv'd Mr. Feilding and this Lady in Bed together. The Fire being made, I was order'd to get a Hackney-Coach. Mrs. Villars dreſſed the Lady haſtily, and ſhe was carried away in the Hackney-Coach. About a Fortnight after, Mr. Feilding order'd me to prepare the Lodgings again. This Lady came to my Maſter's Lodgings that Night, and had ſomething for Supper; my Maſter order'd me to get ready Mrs. Villars's Bed: I did ſo. In the Morning was call'd down to make a Fire, which I did; the Curtains being open next the Fire, I perceiv'd them in Bed again. I was order'd to get a Hackney-Coach, which I did; and they went away again.

again. This was about the Twenty fifth of November. Soon after this, I understood by some of the Dutchess of Cleveland's Servants, that Mr. Feilding was marry'd to my Lady Dutchess. At the same time Mr. Feilding order'd me to go to Mrs. Heath's, to bring his Night-Gown, Cap and Slippers to the Dutchess of Cleveland's House, and to attend the next Morning with clean Linnen, his Wig, &c. And about, or on the Fifth of December, says he, Boucher get my Lodgings in Order again, for I expect Mrs. Villars and the Lady to be there; which accordingly I did. I was sent from the Dutchess of Cleveland's with his Night-Gown, Cap and Slippers. Mrs. Villars and the Lady came accordingly that Night, and had a Boil'd Chicken for Supper. Mr. Feilding and the Lady lay together that Night; and in the Morning I saw them in Bed together; and when she got up, she went away again in a Hackney-Coach. That was the last time I saw the Lady in Mr. Feilding's Lodgings.

Council. Were you at Epsom with Mr. Feilding?

Mr. Boucher. I was there with him, and went to Waddon with him to Mrs. Delean's. Mr. Feilding went into the Gardens and walk'd in them.

Mr. Feilding. I would ask you, Boucher, whether the Priest that came in a Red Gown lin'd with Blue, whether you did not sometimes see him dine at the Dutchess of Cleveland's House?

Mr. Boucher. I did see him there, I cannot say often; but once I am sure I did.

Justice Powel. Was not that Priest that was there that Night upon which Mr. Feilding was suppos'd to be Married, at the Dutchess of Cleveland's.

Mr. Boucher. I saw him there once.

Justice Powel. Was it before or after that suppos'd Marriage?

Mr. Boucher. I cannot be positive whether it was before or after.

Mr. Feilding. Whose Servant are you at this time?

Mr. Boucher. I am now Cook to Coll. Webb's Regiment.

Mr. Feilding. How came you here?

Mr. Boucher. My Master desir'd me to go to the Duke of Grafton's House, where his Grace told me I was to justify the Truth of what I knew of Mr. Feilding's Marriage; that's all. I was sent to England for by my Master.

Mr. Feilding. I desire to know whether he did not only make Mrs. Villars's Bed, but lye with her likewise?

Council. Call Mrs. Martin, (who was sworn.)

Sir Ja. Montague. Mrs. Martin, Will you give my Lord and the Jury an Account of what you know of Mrs. Villars?

Mrs. Martin. I know Mrs. Villars.

Council. What do you know of her, and of any Body else coming to your Sister's House after Mr. Feilding?

Mrs. Martin. The next Day after the Lodgings were taken, Mrs. Villars came and ask'd for the Major-General, and continu'd coming almost every Day as long as he was at our House.

Council. What time did Mr. Feilding come first to your House?

Mrs. Martin. It was the beginning of October was Twelve-month.

Council. Did you ever see any other Gentlewoman come with her?

Mrs. Martin. My Lord, on my Lord-Mayor's Day at Night I saw Mrs. Villars come in, and another Gentlewoman with her.

Council. Did you see the Coach they came in?

Mrs. Martin. There are others that saw the Mourning-Coach.

Council. What time was this?

Mrs. Martin. It was my Lord-Mayor's Day at Night.

Council. Where do you live?

Mrs. Martin. At Mrs. Heath's, my Sister's in Pall-Mall, at that time.

Council. Did Mrs. Villars and the Lady continue there all Night?

Mrs. Martin. No, they did not.

Council. Was there any Body came in afterwards?

Mrs. Martin. I did not see any Body.

Council. How long did they continue in your Sister's Lodgings that Night?

Mrs. Martin. I cannot tell.

Council. Did you see them there again?

Mrs. Martin. The second time was about November.

Council. Who came then?

Mrs. Martin. I did not see them come in; but Mrs. Villars came into the Parlour, and said, that there was the same Lady that had been there the Night before.

Council. Did they stay then that Night?

Mrs. Martin. I believe they stay'd there that Night.

Council. Did you see them go away in the Morning?

Mrs. Martin. I did not see them in the Morning.

Council. Did you ever see any Body come at them whilst they were there in an extraordinary Habit, a Red Gown, &c.?

Mrs. Martin. There was a tall Man knock'd at the Door in a long Gown, Blue Facing, and Furr-Cap, with a long Beard. He was conducted to the Major-General's, up Stairs.

Council. Do you remember the Supper that Night?

Mrs. Martin. I remember a Dish of Pickles.

Council. How long did the Gentleman in Red stay?

Mrs. Martin. I know not; I did not see him go away again.

Council. Do you remember that the Lady and Mrs. Villars, with a Gentleman in Red, and Mr. Feilding were together?

Mrs. Martin. I remember when they were together, Boucher was sent down.

Council. Do you remember any Bed got ready?

Mrs. Martin. I remember that Orders was given to his Servant to make ready a Bed, and to put on clean Sheets.

Justice Powel. Do you believe there was any Marriage that Night?

Mrs. Martin. I do not know any thing of the Marriage.

Council. Then call Mrs. Heath, (who was Sworn.)

Sir Ja. Montague. Mrs. Heath, give an Account what time Major-General Feilding came to take Lodgings at your House.

Mrs. Heath. About the Beginning of October last was a Twelve-month.

Council. Do you remember that one Mrs. Villars came to see him there?

Mrs. Heath. Yes, frequently, my Lord, she has been in my Parlour, and told me there frequently, that she came from a Lady of Quality.

Council. Did you ever see this Lady.

Mrs.

Mrs. Heath. I never saw her, my Family being retired from Lodgers.

Council. What Discourse did you hear from Boucher?

Mrs. Heath. He said that a Woman of Quality was there, and that she came there two or three Times with Mrs. Villars.

Council. What Time did you hear of that Lady's being there first?

Mrs. Heath. On my Lord Mayor's Day; for I dined in the City, and when I came home, my Family acquainted me with it. Mrs. Villars came down to me one Night, which was the Night the Man in Red was there, but I did not see him.

Sir James Mountague. Do you know of their staying there all Night?

Mrs. Heath. Mrs. Villars came to me, and said that her Lady was a Person of Quality worth 80000 l. she shewed me a little Picture, which she said was her Lady's Picture: That Night she came to me, and desired that the Lady and she might lie in a Room up two Pair of Stairs; for they had stay'd late, and did not care to go home. I disputed it, but she said we should have no trouble, for Boucher should make the Bed, and the General's Sheets should serve them.

Council. Do you remember at any Time after that, that Mr. Feilding came to you, and rail'd against Mrs. Villars?

Mrs. Heath. He did come to my House, after he had discharged my Lodgings, and he told me that Mrs. Villars was a very bad Woman; and that she imposed a Woman of the Town upon him for a Woman of Quality.

Council. What Time was it that Mr. Feilding told you so?

Mrs Heath. It was two or three Months ago, but I don't well remember the Time; says he, Damn her, I do not know how she contrived it, but I saw her at a Woman of Quality's House in the Country. He said this at that Time.

Council. Let's hear it again.

Mrs. Heath. Mr. Feilding told me, That Mrs. Villars was a Bitch, and had imposed a base Woman upon him, instead of a Woman of Quality. He said likewise, That he thought he saw the Lady look out of a Window of a Person of Quality's House in the Country.

Justice Powel. Mrs. Heath, Did you ever hear or believe that they were married?

Mrs. Heath. I did not believe it a Marriage, but a Conversion; because his Man came down into the Parlour, and asked for Salt and Water and Rosemary; which occasioned these Words, Lord, said I, I fancy they are making a Convert of this Woman; because they said it was a Priest above. And his Man at that Time said, there was a Priest above.

Mr. Feilding. Did my Man, at that Time, tell you I was married to that Woman, or any Time else?

Mrs. Heath. Nothing, my Lord; no body told me Mr. Feilding was married at that Time.

Council. Then call Mrs. Margaretta, (who was sworn.)

Mrs. Margaretta. My Lord, I remember that Mr. Feilding sent for me to his Lodgings in Pall-Mall; I was sent for in the Evening, but I can't tell how long it was before he was married to my Lady Dutchess.

Council. What Company was there in the Room at that Time?

Mrs. Margaretta. I cannot tell.

Council. What were the Songs you sung?

Mrs. Margaretta. I sung several Italian Songs, and one English, and that was Ianthe the lovely.

Council. Who was then in the Room?

Mrs. Margaretta. No body was there then, as I remember, but the Gentlewoman, Mr. Feilding and I.

Council. What sort of Woman was this you speak of?

Mrs. Margaretta. She was in Mourning; she had a Velvet-Scarf. I never heard her speak, for he desired me to sing that Song, Ianthe the lovely; for he said he had the Original of it, and had translated it out of Greek.

Justice Powel. Were you then more than once at Mr. Feilding's Lodgings?

Mrs. Margaretta. But once; and saw no more there than the Gentlewoman that sat by the Fire with her Back towards me. But I did not see her Face, nor hear her speak.

Justice Powel. What Time was it?

Mrs. Margaretta. I cannot tell justly the Time; it was dirty Weather and dark: I believe it might be about Six a-Clock, but am not sure.

Mr. Feilding. My Lord, she says there was but one Woman there: Mrs. Villars was not there.

Justice Powel. Name the Persons that were there.

Mrs. Margaretta. There was that Gentlewoman in Mourning, whose Name I do not know, Mr. Feilding, and my self; there was no body else that I saw; and no body could be there, but I must see them, for I was Mistress of all the Doors.

Justice Powel. Did Mr. Feilding pretend it was to entertain his Wife?

Mrs. Margaretta. No; he desired me to come to him, and left a Direction at my Lodgings, and said, there were some People of Quality there; and when I came I saw none but the Lady that sat by the Fire.

Council. Then call Mrs. Price, (who was sworn.)

Council. Mrs. Price, do you live at Mrs. Heath's House?

Mrs. Price. I do.

Council. Give an Account to my Lord of the Mourning-Coach coming to Mr. Feilding's Lodgings on Lord Mayor's Day was Twelve-month.

Mrs. Price. I saw a Mourning-Coach come to Mr. Feilding's Lodgings at Mrs. Heath's House, but did not see the Ladies come out of it; two Ladies were lighted into Mr. Feilding's Lodgings, Mrs. Villars and another; and Mrs. Villars followed the other Lady up Stairs, and immediately Mrs. Villars came down, and ask'd for the General: Boucher in the mean Time came in, and told them he would be there presently. Accordingly he came. They continued some Time, and when they were gone, the Coach was gone.

Council. Was Mrs. Margaretta there?

Mrs. Price. I did not see her.

Council. Do you know of any other Time of their coming there?

Mrs. Price. Some Time after my Lord Mayor's Day, this Gentlewoman and Mrs. Villars came again; at the same Time Mrs. Martin told me she let in a Gentleman in Red, in an Armenian Habit; but I cannot tell what he came there for; I think his Man Boucher said he was a Priest.

Council. Whilst the Priest was there, do you remember Boucher's coming down for any remarkable Thing?

Mrs. Price.

Mrs. Price. I remember Boucher came down, but do not remember what he came down for.

Council. How long did they ſtay the ſecond Time?

Mrs. Price. They ſtaid there all Night; there were clean Sheets put on the Bed, and Lodgings prepared for the Lady and Mrs. Villars.

Council. Do you know Mrs. Villars?

Mrs. Price. I did know Mrs. Villars by her coming to Mr. Feilding.

Juſtice Powel. Do you know what Reputation Mrs. Villars has?

Mrs. Price. I do not, my Lord.

Mrs. Heath called again.

Mrs. Heath. My Lord I never had any Acquaintance with Mrs. Villars, no more than by her coming to the Major General. One Mrs. Howard came with her, and ſhe has told me that ſhe was a Woman of no Reputation, and that ſhe was a Singer too, my Lord.

Council. Then call Thomas Sone, (who was ſworn.

Council. What do you know of Mr. Fielding's buying a Ring of you? Give us an Account of it?

Mr. Sone. I know Mr. Fielding by ſight, he bought a Gold Ring of me, but I cannot remember the Time.

Council. How long ago do you think it is?

Mr. Sone. I believe it may be a Year ago.

Council. Was there any Poſie in it?

Mr. Sone. Yes, I grav'd the Poſie whilſt he took a turn in the Alley: The Poſie was by his Direction, (Tibi Soli.)

Council. Who did you deliver this Ring to?

Mr. Sone. I ſold it out of my Glaſs to Mr. Feilding.

Council. Swear Mr. Wilkins, (he was ſworn.)

Council. What do you know of Mr. Feilding's buying a Ring of Mr. Sone? The Time when this Ring was bought?

Mr. Wilkins. It is about a Year and two Months ago; I was by when the Gentleman gave Direction for it; and I ſaw him write down (Tibi Soli.)

Council. Then ſwear the Regiſter of Doctors-Commons.

The Regiſter of Doctors-Commons Sworn.

Council. Shew the Regiſter the Ring.

Regiſter. My Lord this Ring, was brought by my Lady Dutcheſs's Proctor with the Letters.

The Ring produced, and ſhewn to Mr. Sone the Goldſmith, who depoſed, That that was the Ring which he made for Mr. Feilding; and the Poſie the ſame which Mr. Feilding directed.

Council. How do you know it to be the ſame which you ſold to Mr. Feilding?

Mr. Sone. I know it to be the ſame by my Mark and Work.

Mr. Cooke, Proctor, ſworn.

Mr. Cooke. My Lord, there was a Ring brought, it is the ſame that was exhibited in Court, and the Ring was brought firſt of all by the Lady, Mrs. Feilding; it was afterwards in the Cuſtody of my Brother; my Brother brought it to me, and I delivered it to the Regiſter, and believe it to be the ſame Ring by the Poſie (Tibi Soli.)

Council. Now, my Lord, we ſhall prove Mr. Feilding's coming to Count Gallas's for a Prieſt.

Call Conſtantine Pozzy, (who was ſworn.)

Council. Where do you live?

Pozzy. I am Servant to the Emperor's Envoy.

Council. Do you know Mr. Feilding?

Pozzy. I know General Feilding by ſight; I remember one Night he came and asked for the Father in Red? I told him that he was not within; then he ask'd for Count Gallas's Almoner (meaning Father Vanderber, his Lordſhip's firſt Chaplain,) but he happened not to be within neither. I told him that Father Florence, one of the Chaplains was within. Then ſaid Mr. Feilding, call him to me; I did ſo. Upon which Mr. Feilding gave me Half a Crown. Mr. Florence came immediately to Mr. Feilding.

Council. Was there a Prieſt at that Time in Red that had a long Beard.

Pozzy. My Lord had ſuch a Prieſt then; after Mr. Florence and Mr. Feilding had been diſcourſing ſome Time in the Hall together, Mr. Florence went up Stairs to Count Gallas; whilſt Mr. Florence was up Stairs, the Father in Red came in; I ſaw Mr. Feilding and the Father in Red go away together in the Hackney-Coach before Mr. Florence came down.

Council. What Time was this?

Pozzy. It was in November, the begining of it.

Council. Did you hear what Mr. Feilding and Mr. Florence did diſcourſe of?

Pozzy. No, nothing.

Council. Then ſwear Mr. Florence, (who was ſworn.)

Council. Give my Lord, and the Jury an Account of what you know of Mr. Feilding's coming to you?

Mr. Florence. I have ſeen Mr. Feilding.

Council. Upon what Occaſion had you any Diſcourſe with him?

Mr. Florence. It was on Friday Night, Poſt-Night, about the beginning of November, Conſtantine Pozzy came under my Chamber-Window, called to me, and ſaid, Here is Major General Feilding, he wants one of the Chaplains, he deſires to ſpeak with you. I went to him immediately, and introduced him into the Hall. The Major General ſpoke to me in French. Sir, ſays he, I come here to look for the Father in Red; but I underſtand he is not at home; you will do as well, be pleaſed to go along with me. He told me he had courted a young Lady for ſome Time, and now found her well diſpos'd, and therefore deſir'd me to go along with him to marry them. I underſtood there had been ſome Treatment between him and the Dutcheſs of Cleveland, and therefore I ask'd him whether it were to the Dutcheſs; He did not inform me. I told him I did not care to do any Thing out of the Houſe; and deſir'd him to let me ask my Lord; ſays he, give my Service to Count Gallas and tell him. I went up to him and ſpoke to him, and told him the Buſineſs Mr. Feilding came about. He bid me, ſays he, What you do, do it wiſely. When I came down Mr. Feilding was gone, I was told that the Gentleman in Red came in, and that Mr. Feilding and he were gone away together.

Council. That which he would have you to do, was to have married him with a certain Lady, was it not?

Mr. Florence. It was ſo.

Council. What Time was that?

Mr. Florence. It was upon Friday, I am ſure.

Council. Had you any Diſcourſe with Mr. Feilding after this?

Mr. Florence. The next Sunday after this, ſays he, I give you many Thanks for the laſt Favour. I knew of no other Favour I did him but this.

Council. Then call Matthew Paul, (who was ſworn.)

Council. Do you give my Lord and the Jury an account of Mr. Feilding's beating a Gentlewoman; and if any Marriage was claimed at that Time by a Gentlewoman.

Paul. Mr. Feilding came to Whitehall-Gate in a Chariot, he litt out of it. There was a Hackney Coach brought two Women, one of theſe Women got out of the Coach and came up to Mr. Feilding: Mr. Feilding called her Bitch; the Lady called him Rogue, and ſaid ſhe was his lawful Wife; at that Mr. Feilding having a Stick, he punch'd it at her; it happen'd upon her Mouth, and made her Teeth bleed. He order'd the Centry to keep her 'till he was gone, and he would give 'em a Crown. She ſaid, as I told you before, That ſhe was his lawful Wife, and for that Reaſon they did not care to meddle with her.

Council. Sir, Do you know what Time this was?

Paul. I cannot juſtly tell: It was as near as I can judge, about the latter End of May.

Council. Pray call Mrs. Feilding, and let the Witneſs ſee if he knows the Woman again that he ſaw Mr. Feilding beat.

Mrs. Feilding called into Court.

Council. Is this the Woman you ſaw?

Paul. This is the Woman, my Lord, I really believe.

Council. Then ſwear Mr. Seymour, (who was ſworn.)

Council. Do you know Mr. Feilding?

Mr. Seymour. Yes, Sir.

Council. Do you remember his beating any Woman at Whitehall-Gate?

Mr. Seymour. Yes, Sir.

Council. What Time was it?

Mr. Seymour. It was in the laſt Summer, but I cannot be poſitive to the Time.

Council. Do you know the Gentlewoman when you ſee her?

Mr. Seymour. Yes, I do; that's the Gentlewoman (pointing to Mrs. Feilding) I am ſure of it.

Council. What did ſhe ſay to Mr. Feilding?

Mr. Seymour. She ſaid to him, you are a Rogue, I am your lawful Wife.

Council. Then ſwear Captain Eaton, (who was ſworn.)

Council. Captain, do you know any Thing of Mr. Feilding's beating a Woman?

Captain Eaton. I was at the King's Arms Tavern, and whilſt I was there, the Drawer came to me, and told me there was two Women would ſpeak with me; this Woman (pointing at Mrs. Feilding) and another, whom ſhe call'd Mother. She told me ſhe was married to Mr. Feilding, before he was married to my Lady Dutcheſs; and deſired me to acquaint my Lord Duke of Northumberland with it, that the Dutcheſs of Cleveland might know of it: I told her I did not deſign to concern my ſelf about it. She told me ſhe had been much abuſed by him.

Council. What Time was this?

Captain Eaton. It was ſome Time before the 18th of Auguſt; it was the latter End of June, or beginning of July.

Council. Was it before the Difference between Mr. Feilding and my Lady Dutcheſs?

Captain Eaton. It was before that Time.

Council. Now we ſhall produce Mr. Feilding's own Letters, where under his Hand your Lordſhip will find he took Mrs. Wadſworth for Madam Deleau.

Divers Letters produced in Court.

Council. Call Mr. Lilley. (He appears.)

Council. Do you know theſe Letters to be Mr. Feilding's Hand-Writing?

Mr. Lilley. I am a Stranger to his Hand.

Boucher called.

Council. Can you read and write?

Mr. Boucher. Yes, my Lord, I can.

Council. Do yo know theſe Letters to be Mr. Feilding's Hand-Writing?

Mr. Boucher. This is his Hand, I believe. I have ſeen him write an hundred Times; I have had the Curioſity to obſerve his Hand, and this is his own Writing.

Council. Then ſwear Frances Beale, (who was ſworn.)

Council. Do you know Mr. Feilding's Hand-Writing?

Beale. I do, my Lord.

Council. Do you know that Letter to be his Hand?

Beale. I have ſeen him write ſeveral Times, and believe it to be his Hand.

Council. Now, my Lord, we will beg the Favour to read theſe Letters, and firſt of all, one directed To the Counteſs of Feilding. Sunday Night.

I Hope my Deareſt Wife will eaſily believe that nothing can be Welcomer to me than the Aſſurance of her Health; but as I receiv'd hers but this Day, I could not have the Felicity of ſeeing her to Morrow, and ſhe have notice of it; therefore if ſhe thinks fit on Thurſday next at Four a-Clock, I will ſee her at Puggy's, and there endeavour to repair this tedious Abſence.

Eternally Your own Feilding.

Another Letter prov'd to be his Hand by Boucher and Beale.

To my Deareſt Wife, the Counteſs of Feilding. Friday.

I Had return'd my Dear Wife's Favour long before now, but my Lady Dutcheſs's Sickneſs on one hand, and more than ordinary Buſineſs (of which I will give my Dear a particular Account) on the other hand, has not given me a Moment of Time to write to my Love. Puggy brings you the Set of Knots you deſir'd, and the Pattern of the Damask; or if my deareſt Life wants any Thing elſe, ſhe may with Pleaſure command it; for I am never ſo well pleas'd as when employ'd by my Deareſt Wife, and muſt be ever her affectionate Husband, till Death,

Feilding.

Another Letter proved by Boucher and Beale.

Nov. 27. 1705.

THE laſt Letter I had from my deareſt Wife has mortified me much, finding, that notwithſtanding all my Kindneſſes, ſhe taxes me with Coldneſs in my Letters, which I call Heaven to witneſs I never in the leaſt intended; and beg my Deareſt to give me ſome Warning before ſhe taxes me of Unkindneſs. Puggy tells me that my Dear deſigns to come to Town to Morrow, which I hope ſhe will put off till another Day, becauſe I am obliged to be at her Grace's to morrow all the Afternoon, and till late at Night; but any other Day my Dear ſhall find ſhe is always welcome to the Arms of him who loves her more than Life it ſelf; ſelf; and I ſhall never fail of giving her freſh Proofs that I am,

Her Loving and Affectionate Husband,
Feilding.

Juſtice Powel. It is plain it is his Hand; and that he wrote to one whom he terms his Wife.

Council. Do you know theſe Letters to be writ by Mr. Feilding, and ſent to his Wife?

Mrs. Villars. I have ſeen them before, and I believe them to be Mr. Feilding's Hand. I ſaw Mr. Feilding write them, as well as I can ſee by my Eyes; and when he had writ them, he deliver'd them into my Hands, and order'd me to deliver them to his Dear Wife.

Council. What does he mean by Puggy, in his Letters? Who is Puggy?

Mrs. Villars. He us'd to call me Puggy.

Council. My Lord, We have done for the preſent, (having proved clearly his Marriage with this Woman) without Mr. Feilding denies his Marriage to the Dutcheſs of Cleveland.

Mr. Feilding. My Lord, I own my Marriage with the Dutcheſs of Cleveland.

Juſtice Powel. Mr. Feilding, You have heard from the Evidence that hath been given againſt you, That you were married to another Woman, before you were married to the Dutcheſs of Cleveland: And now is the Time to make your Defence.

Mr. Feilding. All the Evidence againſt me, conſiſts in what Mrs. Villars hath ſaid: She is the only Evidence that ſwears poſitively to this Fact; the reſt are very inconſiſtent with themſelves. I beg of your Lordſhip, in a Caſe ſo nice as this is, where my Honour and Reputation, and every Thing that is dear lies at Stake, that the Evidence in this Cauſe may be clear and poſitive. Mrs. Villars (my Lord) hath forſworn her ſelf; 1. In that ſhe ſwears ſhe cut Mrs. Deleau's Hair: Mrs. Deleau takes notice, that ſhe never cut it. And as to her Reputation, it's ſo bad, that when our Witneſſes are heard, I hope your Lordſhip will ſee little Reaſon to believe any thing ſhe ſays to be true. My Lord, We will prove, that ſhe hath been in Cuſtody of a Maſter of Bridewel; that there ſhe hath received the Correction of the Houſe; therefore I think ſhe is not fit to appear as Evidence in this Court. She ſwears, That the Singing-Woman was at the Marriage; but it appears ſhe was not, for the Singing-Woman contradicts it. And as to this Mrs. Wadſworth, who they ſet up, ſhe was married to another Man, one Bradby.

Juſtice Powel. I muſt deal plainly with you, Mr. Feilding, from the Proof: I cannot ſpeak of Mrs. Villars's Credit, for ſhe is an ill Woman (no doubt) from her own Evidence, in that ſhe put a falſe Woman upon you: But her Evidence is well ſupported by Circumſtances of Time and Place; and all of them put together, bid fair for a Proof, that you were married to this Woman. You may call what Witneſſes you pleaſe to Mrs. Villars's Reputation, and they may be heard. No Woman of Reputation will bring a mean Woman to a Man, inſtead of a Perſon of Quality. I think you ſay, Mrs. Wadſworth was married to another Man at the ſame Time: Indeed that will be to the Purpoſe, if you can make it out.

Mr. Feilding. My Lord, I can. She was married to another Husband, one Bradby. Call Elizabeth Baſſet. (Who was ſworn.)

Juſtice Powel. Do you call this Woman to be Witneſs to the Marriage?

Mr. Feilding. My Lord, I do.

Juſtice Powel. Do you know Mrs. Wadſworth?

Mrs. Baſſet. My Lord, I do not know her from another Woman; but there was a certain Woman, Two or Three Months ago, came to take a Name out of the Regiſter-Book.

Council. What Regiſter do you ſpeak of?

Mrs. Baſſet. The Regiſter of Marriages in the Fleet.

Council. Who keeps that Book?

Mrs. Baſſet. I keep it at preſent: My Father-in-Law is the Keeper of them; but he is ſick, and therefore he hath left them in my Charge.

Council. Where is your Father?

Mrs. Baſſet. He is not able to appear.

Council. Do you keep them in your Cuſtody?

Mrs. Baſſet. Yes, I do.

Council. Does no body elſe come at them but your ſelf?

Mrs. Baſſet. No, not this Twelve-month; ſince they have been in my keeping.

Council. Who then makes the Entries?

Mrs. Baſſet. Theſe were my Father's Books when he was in Health.

Council. What can you ſay of this Woman?

Mrs. Baſſet. I do not know her. But ſome Time ago there was a Woman came to my Houſe: She told me, ſhe wanted to ſpeak with Mr. Baſſet. I told her, ſhe could not ſpeak with him. She preſſed to ſpeak with him: But when I told her he was ill, and could not be ſpoken with; ſays ſhe to me, Here is a Marriage in your Book, of one Lilly Bradby and Mary Wadſworth. Says ſhe to me, If you'll put it out of your Book, I'll give you a Piece of Money.

Council. Is this the Woman that made you this Offer?

Mrs. Baſſet. I will not ſwear to the Woman: I never ſaw her but that one Time, my Lord. I am not poſitive in the Matter; but I believe it is.

The Certificate of the Marriage read.

Lilly Bradby Marry'd to Mary Wadſworth, the 28*th of* October, 1703. The Man of St. James's, the Woman of St. Margaret's Weſtminſter.

Juſtice Powel. Who us'd to write down the Certificates in the Regiſter-Book?

Mrs. Baſſet. Several People, my Lord, we hir'd to do it.

[The Place of the Regiſter ſhewn Mrs. Baſſet.

Council. Have not you your ſelf look'd upon this Place now given as Evidence?

Mrs. Baſſet. Yes, I have.

Council. Whoſe Hand is that?

[Pointing to the Certificate.]

Mrs. Baſſet. It is my Father-in-Law's: He that was Clerk of the Fleet.

Council. Is the whole Leaf of his Hand-Writing?

Mrs. Baſſet. I cannot tell.

Juſtice Powel. Can you read Writing?

Mrs. Baſſet. Yes, my Lord.

[The Certificate view'd by the Court, and prov'd to be a different Hand from the reſt.]

Council. There are Hands various in this Book.

Mrs. Baſſet. My Husband's Brother us'd to make Entries ſometimes.

Sir James Mountague. Does your Husband's Brother uſe only to make Entries at the latter End of the Book?

Mrs. Baſſet. I don't know.

Council. Do you know when the Entry was made?

Mrs. Baſſet. I do not know when the Entry was made.

Council. Do you remember, that there were any Gentlemen with you to examine the Book?

Mrs. Baſſet. Yes, Sir, there were.

Council. Did you ſhew them this very Book?

Mrs. Baſſet. I did not; becauſe Mrs. Wadſworth ſaid there would be ſome Trouble about it.

Council. Have you ſeveral Regiſters at the ſame Time?

Mrs. Baſſet. Yes; there are ſeveral Miniſters, and therefore are Entries made in ſeveral Books.

Council. Why were you ſo friendly to Mrs. Wadſworth; when the Gentlemen came to examine the Book for this Regiſter, and you ſhew'd them other Books inſtead of this?

Mrs. Baſſet. I did not ſhew them that, becauſe Mrs. Wadſworth deſired me.

Council. What did Mrs. Wadſworth give you?

Mrs. Baſſet. She gave me nothing. I will not ſay it was Mrs. Wadſworth.

Council. Do you remember you ſhew'd any Books to theſe Gentlemen, where there were Marriages regiſtred in 1703?

Mrs. Baſſet. The Book is at Home in my Houſe.

Council. Do you keep Two Books for the Regiſter of Marriages, for one and the ſame Year and Time?

Mrs. Baſſet. There are ſeveral Books; and we Enter ſometimes in one, and ſometimes in another; by reaſon that there are ſeveral Miniſters, and each hath his particular Book.

Council. Did the Gentlemen ask you at that Time, whether there were more Books of Marriages?

Mrs. Baſſet. I do not remember.

Council. How many Books have you of that Year?

Mrs. Baſſet. But Two.

Council. Did you ſhew them any falſe Book? That is, Did you ſhew them a falſe Regiſter of Marriages for a true one?

Mrs. Baſſet. I know nothing of that.

Mr. Feilding. Call Mrs. Drinkwater.

[Who was ſworn.]

Juſtice Powel. Do you know Mrs. Villars?

Mrs. Drinkwater. I have known her above a Year.

Juſtice Powel. What is her Character and Reputation?

Mrs. Drinkwater. I know nothing of that - - - But I know ſo far of her, That ſhe ſaid ſhe was married to Colonel Feilding on the Fifth of November: She accordingly gave it out that ſhe was with Child by him. And that ſhe told me, that the Dutcheſs of Cleveland proffer'd to give her 200 l. and 100 l. a Year, for Fifteen Years, if ſhe would prove a Marriage with Mr. Feilding: But that ſhe would do more for Mr. Feilding for 40 l. than ſhe would for the Dutcheſs of Cleveland for a much greater Sum. And ſaid, it was purely Want, that made her comply with my Lady Dutcheſs's Deſire. I have read all the Letters between Mrs. Villars and the Colonel; and I never heard of any Marriage between Mrs. Bradby and Mr. Feilding, but between Mr. Feilding and Mrs. Villars.

Council. When was this Diſcourſe between you and Mrs. Villars?

Mrs. Drinkwater. I cannot tell exactly the Day; but the Time they were marry'd was the Fifth of November was Twelve-month, as ſhe ſaid.

Sir James Mountague. You pretend to ſay, ſhe ſaid, That if Mr. Feilding gave her 40 l. ſhe would do more for him, than ſhe would do for a greater Sum from my Lady Dutcheſs. How long was this ago when ſhe ſaid this?

Mrs. Drinkwater. It was about Three Months, or better.

Council. Where was this Diſcourſe, pray?

Mrs. Drinkwater. It was at her Lodgings, when ſhe lodged at the Back-ſide of Red Lion Square, at a Widow-Gentlewoman's Houſe.

Council. How came you to be there when this Diſcourſe was?

Mrs. Drinkwater. She, ſome Time before, gave me an Invitation to her Lodgings; and I went to give her a Viſit, and then this Diſcourſe happen'd.

Council. Who was by then?

Mrs. Drinkwater. None but I and She. She ſaid it was Want and Neceſſity, that made her act after this manner.

Mr. Feilding. Did ſhe not ſend for you, to tell you ſhe was going to forſwear her ſelf?

Mrs. Drinkwater. She talk'd of it firſt.

Council. When did you tell the Colonel of it?

Mrs. Drinkwater. I do not know juſtly the Time.

Council. How long have you been acquainted with Colonel Feilding?

Mrs. Drinkwater. Not but ſince this Thing happen'd. I never had any further Converſation with him, than to ſpeak in her Behalf to him. But I have this further to ſay; That an Outlandiſh Man came to me about a Fortnight's Diſtance, and ſaid, If I could do any thing on the Behalf of the Dutcheſs of Cleveland, it would be a conſiderable Sum of Money in my way.

Council. Where do you live your ſelf?

Mrs. Drinkwater. I live in the ſame Houſe where Mrs. Villars lodged: I am a Servant to one Captain Howard: My Maſter is now in the Service.

Council. Who lives in the Family?

Mrs. Drinkwater. We have none but a Footman, and my Maſter.

Mr. Feilding. Call Mrs. Engliſh.

[Who was ſworn.]

Juſtice Powel. What have you to ſay?

Mrs. Engliſh. My Lord, I went down to Mrs. Villars's Lodging the Morrow after laſt Valentine's Day, for ſome Money; for I waſhed for her: Says ſhe, I have none at preſent. She told me, ſhe would ſend to her Spouſe for ſome. A Gentleman came in and ſaid, I have none for you: Says he, My Maſter ſays, If a Crown will do, he will ſend it you out of Charity; but he cannot ſupply your Extravagancies. On the Fifth of November (ſhe ſaid) ſhe was marry'd to Mr. Feilding; and ſhe ſaid, ſhe would have Money from Mr. Feilding, or ſhe would ſend her Soul to the Devil.

Mr. Feilding. Call Mrs. Fletcher; (who was ſworn.) Give my Lord an Account of what you know of Mrs. Villars.

Mrs. Fletcher. All I know of her and Mrs. Bradby, is, Mrs. Villars lived with me a Twelve-month. She told me ſhe had had Two Baſtards; one one by my Lord Torrington, the other by my Lord Stamford.

Juſtice Powel. How long was this ago, that ſhe was at your Houſe for a Twelve-month ?

Mrs. Fletcher. It was about Four Years ago. She confeſs'd ſhe had had Two Baſtard-Children ; and that ſhe had been in Bridewel. I have nothing more than from her own Tongue, that ſhe was a very infamous Woman.

Sir James Mountague. Miſtreſs, How long have you been acquainted with Mrs. Villars ?

Mrs. Fletcher. She was recommended to me by one in the Court, and by her good Behaviour.

Sir James Mountague. Would you have a Correſpondence with a Woman that had Two Baſtards ? Pray what is your way of Living in the World ?

Mrs. Fletcher. My Husband is a broken Mercer ; he allows me 20*l*. a Year.

Council. What Vocation are you of ?

Mrs. Fletcher. I drive little Trade, but work Plain-Work.

Sir James Mountague. You are acquainted with Mr. Feilding ; are you not ?

Mrs. Fletcher. I know him.

Council. How long have you known him ?

Mrs. Fletcher. About Three or Four Years.

Council. You would not ſcruple to aſſiſt Mr. Feilding, if he wanted a fair Lady. Look upon that Letter, and ſee whether it be your Hand-Writing, or no ?

[Then a Letter was ſhewn her.]

Mr. Longford. If you deny it, we will prove it.

Mrs. Fletcher. It is my Hand-Writing.

Juſtice Powel. Miſtreſs, You can ſay no more of it.

Mrs. Fletcher. No, my Lord.

Mr. Feilding. Call Mrs. Gardiner.

[Who was ſworn.]

Juſtice Powel. What have you to ſay ?

Mrs. Gardiner. My Lord, Mrs. Villars lodged in my Houſe ; and ſhe came one Morning.

Council. When was it ?

Mrs. Gardiner. It was the 6th of November laſt was Twelve-month : She came in then, and had been abroad all Night. She told me, ſhe was married to Colonel Feilding. She gave a Pair of Gloves to me, and to this Gentlewoman ; and likewiſe gave Favours and Garters in the Houſe. But ſhe deſir'd me to keep it ſecret. Mrs. Bradby, about a Fortnight or Three Weeks before Chriſtmas, came into Mrs. Villars's Lodging, and happen'd to fall down as if ſhe had been in a Swoon ; and within a few Days ſhe fell in Labour.

Juſtice Powel. Was it a Boy, or a Girl, ſhe was deliver'd with ?

Mrs. Gardiner. I was not there. It was not at my Houſe, but at new Lodgings.

Juſtice Powel. Where was it ſhe was brought to Bed ?

Mr. Feilding. We can bring Evidence of that, my Lord.

Juſtice Powel. Woman, How can you ſwear, that ſhe was brought to Bed before Chriſtmas ?

Mrs. Gardiner. I may ſay it, my Lord, becauſe here is one, I believe, that will ſwear it. Mrs. Villars her ſelf told me ſo ; and the Midwife ſaid ſhe deliver'd her, for which Mrs. Bradby gave her a Guinea. The next Day after her Fall ſhe was very ill, and continued ſo till ſhe was brought to Bed.

Juſtice Powel. Was ſhe big ?

Mrs. Gardiner. She was paſt breeding ; ſhe was very big.

Mrs. Drinkwater call'd again.

Juſtice Powel. What can you ſay about Mrs. Bradby's Labour ?

Mrs. Drinkwater. My Lord, Mrs. Villars and I were at Mrs. Bradby's Labour.

Council. When was this ?

Mrs. Drinkwater. To the beſt of my Remembrance, it was about a Fortnight before Chriſtmas ; but ſhe did not look before February. I do not know, but the Fall ſhe had in Mrs. Villars's Houſe, might be the Occaſion of her coming before her Time.

Juſtice Powel. Was ſhe deliver'd of a live or dead Child ?

Mrs. Drinkwater. I do not remember that, my Lord.

Council. Was it a Boy, or a Girl ?

Mrs. Drinkwater. I know not that neither.

Juſtice Powel. I thought verily that if you were at her Labour, that you could tell whether ſhe had a Child, or no Child ?.

Mrs. Drinkwater. There were others that were at her Labour, can juſtify that the Midwife ſaid ſhe had a Child.

Council. Don't you know what became of the Child afterwards ?

Mrs. Drinkwater. To the beſt of my Knowledge, I think it dy'd as ſoon as it was born.

Council. Juſt now you ſaid, you did not know whether it was alive or no ?

Mrs. Drinkwater. Here is Madam Luet will juſtify it.

Mrs. Villars called again.

Juſtice Powel. Mrs. Villars, Do you know ſhe was with Child ?

Mrs. Villars. I know that ſhe miſcarried.

Council. What time was it ?

Mrs. Villars. After Chriſtmaſs.

Mr. Feilding. Call the Keeper of the Houſe of Correction, (who was Sworn.)

Juſtice Powel. What can you ſay ?

Keeper. All that I know of Mrs. Villars, is, that ſhe was a Priſoner in the Houſe where I live.

Juſtice Powel. Where is that ?

Keeper. In Weſtminſter. I remember this Perſon was in my Cuſtody above Five Years ago.

Juſtice Powel. Had ſhe the Correction of the Houſe ?

Keeper. She had not the Correction of the Houſe, becauſe ſhe was then with Child.

Mr. Feilding. Call Mr. Minors, (who was Sworn.)

Juſtice Powel. Mr. Minors, What have you to ſay ?

Mr. Minors. My Lord, in October was Twelvemonth, when Mr. Feilding lodged at Mrs. Heath's, I was then with Mr. Feilding almoſt every Day ; I ſaw this Woman there every Day, except Saturday and Sunday. I din'd there, and there was Mrs. Margaretta, and ſung theſe Songs which ſhe ſpoke of now. Two or three Days after this, Mr. Feilding communicated to me his Treaty of Marriage with the Dutcheſs of Cleveland, and ſpoke to me to ſettle ſome Writings between them. (He produced the Writings.) Mr. Feilding deſired me that I would be ready with them by the beginning of November, or the latter end of October. This is all I can ſay of this Matter. As to the Women, I ſaw theſe, and Abundance of common Women of the Town : I ſaw him take no more notice of Mrs. Bradby, than he did of any of the others.

Juſtice Powel. When did you ſee Magaretta there ?

Mr. Mi-

Mr. Minors. I cannot ſpeak to a Day; but ſhe was at Dinner when I dined there about October was Twelve-month.

Mr. Feilding. Call Mr. Chomley.

[Who was ſworn.]

Juſtice Powel. What can you ſay?

Mr. Chomley. My Lord, Not long ago there was a certain Perſon taken up, by the Name of Villars, about a Twelve-month ago.

Juſtice Powel. Do you know her, when you ſee her?

Mr. Chomley. My Lord, I believe that is the Perſon; (pointing at her) but whether ſhe was committed or not, I cannot ſay. I have ſeen her divers times at a lewd time of Night, when ſhe ought to have been at home.

A Letter produc'd of Father Dryan's, and ſhown to Mr. Florence. (Mr. Florence Sworn.)

Council. Mr. Florence, Do you know this Letter?

Mr. Florence. I have ſeen it, and given an Anſwer to it accordingly.

Council. Is it Dryan's Hand?

Mr. Florence. I cannot ſay poſitively it is his Hand. There are ſome more of his Letters in the Houſe; I cannot believe, or diſbelieve it.

Council. Could Francis Dryan ſpeak Engliſh?

Mr. Florence. Very little.

Council. How long was he in England?

Mr. Florence. About Eleven Months. He hath been gone a conſiderable Time.

Juſtice Powel. This Father that is now gone, Did he ſpeak Engliſh at all?

Mr. Florence. He was learning of it. Some Engliſh he could ſpeak; for I taught him from time to time.

Juſtice Powel. Do you think that he could enquire for Mr. Feilding in Engliſh?

Mr. Florence. I believe he might ſay, Is Mr. Feilding at home? But could ſpeak little Senſe in Engliſh.

Juſtice Powel. Do you think that if he were deſired to ſpeak theſe Words, I take this Man for my Huſband, that he underſtood ſo much?

Mr. Florence. I believe he might ſay what another ſaid before.

Then the Queen's Council Reply'd.

Sir James Montague. My Lord, Mr. Feilding's Defence conſiſts of Two Parts. Firſt, he does endeavour to falſify his Marriage with Mrs. Wadſworth, by contradicting the Evidence of Mrs. Villars; and for that he calls divers to prove Mrs. Villars to be a diſhoneſt Woman. My Lord, we think there is no Occaſion for us to make a Reply to that Particular, ſince we our ſelves do not pretend to ſay ſhe is a Woman of very good Reputation. That which we inſiſt upon is, that Mr. Feilding hath been impos'd upon, and marry'd this Woman; and this we hope we have prov'd not only by Mrs. Villars's Evidence, but by other concurring Circumſtances, which are ſo ſtrong, that they cannot poſſibly be deny'd. And as to theſe Facts, he hath not at all contradicted our Evidence. For he does not ſo much as give your Lordſhip an Account how he came by the Ring, or for what End and Purpoſe he beſpoke it. He does not deny that he directed the Poſy of it to be Tibi Soli. So that, my Lord, he gives no manner of Anſwer to all theſe Matters.

In the next place, he ſeems to admit that he had been fooliſh enough to be thus impos'd upon by theſe Intrieguing Women. But, ſays he, they have not gain'd their Point; for this impoſing upon me ſignifies nothing, becauſe this Woman was Wife to another Man, when we ſaid ſhe was marry'd to Mr. Feilding. Now this ſort of Defence does, in great meaſure, admit the Thing we contend for, His Marriage with Mrs. Wadſworth; and whether he hath made it appear that this Marriage is null and void, ſhall be taken into Conſideration next, by making ſome few Obſervations on the Nature of the Evidence that he hath produced to prove this Woman's Marriage with another Man. He ſays ſhe is the Wife of one Lilly Bradby. That Man, by the Book, is deſcrib'd to live in St. James's, and the Woman to be of St. Margaret's Weſtminſter. But he hath not ſo much as given you any Account that there is ſuch a Man in the World, that he would have to be the ſuppos'd Huſband of this Woman. In the next place they have not undertaken to produce one Witneſs that was by at this Marriage, not one Witneſs. And what do they rely upon to prove this Wedding? Truly, nothing but the Regiſter-Book; and the Man that keeps the Regiſter-Book is not here. It's true, indeed, they ſay that it's a true Regiſter, but we deſire the Jury may inſpect it; for it appears by divers Circumſtances to be a Counterfeit-Entry; for it is written in another Character than what the reſt are; and it is written in the lower part of the Leaf, where we may ſuppoſe a Vacancy left to inſert ſuch a thing as this is, upon occaſion. The Perſon that wrote it is not here. The whole Year that is ſet down here, is all entirely one Hand Writing; and it is not at all like the Writing of this Entry. I think they pretend to ſay, there is ſomething of the like Hand-Writing in the ſame Book; and that they make uſe of to be a corroborating Circumſtance. But that appears likewiſe to be at the latter end of another Book. The Book is Rul'd, and this Entry is writ below Lines without a Rule.

My Lord, this is what I think fit to take Notice upon the View of the Thing. We had an Intimation given us of this Book. It was rumour'd about the Town that this was the Defence which we were like to meet with. Therefore we did ſend to all Places where ſuſpicious Regiſters were kept, and among the reſt to this Fleet-Regiſter. My Lord, we ſhall ſhew you that our Witneſſes went to enquire for this Book; but there they found no Book where this Entry was written. It's a very unaccountable thing that this Book ſhould be concealed. Here is a Woman indeed gives you a Reaſon why ſhe did it.—She ſays ſhe did it, becauſe ſhe was deſired to keep it ſecret by a Woman whom ſhe never ſaw before; and of whom ſhe ſays ſhe never had a Penny. This, methinks, is very extraordinary. But this very Book was ſhown them, if my Inſtructions be true, and the Place where this Entry is made was then a Blank, and filled up ſince. There was no ſuch Entry at that time when they look'd upon it. This is all we ſhall ſay in reſpect of the Regiſter, which is all the Evidence they bring to prove this Marriage.

But there is another thing they inſiſt upon; They make it an Objection, That this Father in Red was ſeen at Dinner with the Dutcheſs of Cleveland, after Mr. Feilding was marry'd to my Lady Dutcheſs. As to that Matter, we ſay it does not appear when that time was; nor do they make it out that the Father in Red did know that he was married to the Dutcheſs of Cleveland at that time; tho' in Fact they might be marry'd. Twenty People might be at Dinner there, and yet might be ignorant of this Marriage. It's poſſible that a Man may eat and drink with another, and yet not know whether he be married or unmarried. They do not make it appear that there was any Occaſion given at Table that would would give Riſe to ſuch a Diſcourſe. The Man not having an Opportunity to ſpeak of it, To what end and purpoſe ſhould he do it? The next thing they inſiſt upon, and have endeavour'd to prove, is, That Mrs. Feilding was with Child, and brought to Bed the Chriſtmaſs after ſhe was marry'd to Mr. Feilding. But they do not pretend to tell whether the Child ſhe was brought to Bed of, was dead or alive; or whether it was a Boy or a Girl; but at laſt it proved a Miſcarriage. We have given your Lordſhip an Account how it is likely ſhe ſhould be with Child; for we have proved to you undoubtedly that ſhe was married to Mr. Feilding; that they lay together ſeveral times; and we have no Reaſon to ſuſpect Mr. Feilding's Ability. Mr. Feilding knew ſhe was with Child by him. He was the proudeſt Man in the World of this thing, and call'd it young Lord Tunbridge. To prove this, my Lord, here is a Letter written by himſelf. The Stile is ſomething peculiar too, it is directed, To the beſt of Wives, Anne Counteſs of Feilding. Now, my Lord, Mrs. Deleau, whom Mr. Feilding thought he had married, her Name is Anne, but Mrs. Feilding's Name is Mary.

The Letter produced and proved by Boucher and Beal, and it was directed,

To the beſt of Wives, Anne Counteſs of Feilding, at Waddon.

Novemb. 14. 1705.

THere is nothing can pleaſe me more upon this Occaſion, than to hear my Deareſt Wife ſay I had made her ſick, by turning her Liver; for without that we could not hope for a young Lord Tunbridge; which would be, the next to my Dear her ſelf, the moſt welcome Preſent to my Arms. Make haſte then, my Deareſt Life, to Cultivate the young Spark; and be ſure you don't ſtarve my Boy. As for your coming to me, it wholly depends upon your ſelf, who can beſt judge when it is moſt proper to come to me; which you can do, by giving out you are to ſtay all Night in London; and then you and Puggy have nothing to do but to come to me at Bed-time, and ſo we may go to Bed and lye till Morning, when Puggy may come again and call you. Adieu my Soul's Love, whom I muſt ever value more than Life. Feilding.

Council. Call Mr. Longford (who was Sworn.)

Sir Ja. Montague. Were you directed to go to the Fleet, and look into the Regiſter-Book.

Mr. Longford. Mr. Attorney General telling me that he heard there would be ſome Pretence of a Marriage that would be ſet up, adviſed me enquire after it. I was informed, that ſome Certificate was, or would be given in the Fleet. I went with Mr. Reſcorloe to ſee the Books. We look'd all over thoſe Months for the Year 1703. This Book is the very Book I take it to be, but am not poſitive. That which we ſaw, I obſerved had an Entry dated the Year 1705. before the Marriages in the Year 1704. in yellowiſh Ink at the Top of a Leaf.

Council. Call Mr. Reſcorloe (who was Sworn.)

Sir Ja. Montague. Do you remember that you ſaw that Book?

Mr. Reſcorloe. I do remember that I ſaw that Book with Mr. Longford. Mr. Longford and I went by the Attorney General's Order, to ſearch the Books at the Fleet, to ſee whether we could find any Entry of Lilly Bradby's Marriage with Mrs. Wadſworth. This Woman that gave her Evidence here brought in this Book, and we look'd back for three Years. We found no ſuch Entry as ſhe ſhows here in this Book. We ask'd her again, whether there were any other Books of Entries of Marriages? She ſaid, No. I ask'd her, whether there had been any one there to ſee after ſuch a Certificate? She ſaid, there was a Woman and a Man about a Week or Fortnight ago. I ask'd her, Whether ſhe ſhewed them this Book? She ſaid, ſhe had ſhewed them this Book, and they gave her a Shilling for ſearching it. She ſaid poſitively there was no ſuch Certificate entred in the Book, and that there was no other Book for the Entry of Marriages. We ſearch'd the Month of October more ſtrictly; we look'd for the very Certificate with the greateſt Care and Induſtry that could be. We went to Baſſett's Houſe, who, this Woman ſaid, was not at home. She laugh'd in her Sleeve, and ſaid, he was a doating Man; and if he ſpoke two Words, he could not ſpeak a third. I do really believe this to be the Book. I took good Notice of the Blank where this Certificate is entred, and did remark that there was a vacant Space under this Certificate, where was no Writing. Mr. Longford and I turned back again to the Year 1705, which was put before the Year 1704, and obſerved it then, as it appears now, to be the Book, Except this Entry. I do believe it to be the ſame Book we then ſaw.

Sir Ja. Montague. There is but one thing more that I would mention, which is, that the Woman in the Top-knot confeſs'd that this Letter was her own Hand-Writing. I deſire it might be read.

The Letter was read. It is directed.

To Major-General Feilding.

Tueſday Morning.

ALL that know the Name of Major-General Feilding, muſt own the Generous and Charitable Actions that your Honour daily beſtows upon 'em. I, among the reſt, ſhall ever acknowledge your Goodneſs. It's Neceſſity that forces me to diſpoſe of this Picture. Your Honour is a nice Judge of Painting, as well as an Admirer of ſuch Pieces, which makes me humbly preſent it to you firſt; and in accepting the ſame, your Honour will highly oblige, as well as ſerve,

Your humble Servant,
M. FLETCHER.

POSTSCRIPT.

I long to ſee you. For your Encouragement, to grant me that Favour; I am now acquainted with a young Lady that's Pretty, and lives in good Faſhion. Your Honour will oblige me in letting me receive your Commands.

Juſtice Powel. Gentlemen of the Jury, The Priſoner, Mr. Robert Feilding, ſtands Indicted for a capital Offence, for Felony, in marrying a Second Wife, his Firſt being then Alive. This is the Offence charged againſt him. The Council for the Queen have called ſeveral Witneſſes to prove this Matter upon him. And the firſt is one Mrs. Villars. She hath given her Evidence from one end to the other, if you believe what ſhe ſwears. She ſwears, that one Mrs. Streights came firſt to her Lodging, and ſhe was not at home; but left word that ſhe muſt needs ſpeak with her; that ſhe was always out of the way when any thing offer'd that would do her a kindneſs; and that it would be 500*l.* out of her way if ſhe did not ſee her. It ſeems, that when Mrs. Streights met her, ſhe acquainted her with Mr. Feilding's Inclinations; and being inform'd that ſhe was acquainted with the Lady, that ſhe us'd to cut her Hair, thought that she might have such an Interest in her, as to be made serviceable to bring the Matter about; which if she was, it might be worth 500 l. to her. Mrs. Villars undertakes the Business to bring Mr. Feilding and Mrs. Deleau together; she did readily accept of it; thereupon Mr. Feilding and she discours'd together concerning this Matter: She told him she was acquainted with Mrs. Deleau, and that she would do the best she could to bring it about. Mr. Feilding upon this went to Mrs. Deleau's Country-House at Waddon in Surry, that thereby the Lady might have an Opportunity of seeing him. She says, Mr. Feilding told her that he had Access to the Gardens; that when he was there he saw the Lady thro' the Glass-Window; he was willing to give the Lady a full View of him, therefore he stood still and set his Watch by the Sun-Dial, and took several Turns in the Garden; and he did afterwards send a Letter to her. Mrs. Villars was afterwards sent of a Message, as tho' it was from the Dutchess of Cleveland, to acquaint the Lady that the Dutchess had a great Mind to see the Gardens. Mrs. Deleau told Mrs. Villars that she should be proud that a Person of her Quality should come to her. She said that Mr. Feilding sent her, and she found afterward that the Dutchess of Cleveland did not intend to go; nay, that she knew nothing of the Matter. But see how she managed the Matter, and play'd this Trick upon Mr. Feilding; it is no better, if true. They agreed together that Mrs. Deleau should come to a Place where Mr. Feilding should appoint; that something of Musick, or some Entertainment should be provided; they contrived when it should be, the Time was on my Lord Mayor's Day at Night, and according to Appointment Mrs. Villars came with Mrs. Deleau, as Mr. Feilding thought, but in reality it was one Mary Wadsworth, which represented Mrs. Deleau; she came in a Mourning Coach, and dress'd in a Widow's Habit; after this manner they came to Colonel Feilding's Lodgings in Pall-Mall. The Lady truly was not to know that they were Mr. Feilding's Lodgings; however Mr. Feilding was not at home, but it was not long before he came: He came up to the Lady: You have heard what Addresses he made to the Lady, and how much Love he express'd towards her: Ask'd her, whether she lov'd singing? One Margaretta was sent for, and sung two Songs. Mr. Feilding was so taken with her, he would have marry'd her presently; but she being coy, modestly declin'd it, and so they parted for that Time. Mrs. Villars was to bring her afterwards, which was on the 9th of November, on the Night the supposed Wedding was; Mrs. Villars brought her. When she came there, Mr. Feilding propos'd to be married to her forthwith; she seem'd to be shy at present, but Mr. Feilding said he would fetch the Priest immediately; he lock'd them in, took the Key with him, and returned in three Quarters of an Hour; the Priest she describes to be in a long red Gown lin'd with blue, a long Beard and a Fur-Cap upon his Head, so he brought him along with him; when he came, he said, This is the Man that should joyn their Hearts together. She tells you further that Mrs. Wadsworth question'd the Priest; required of him a Proof to shew he was a Priest in Orders. The Priest pull'd a Picture of the Pope out of his Pocket, which he said was a Credential for Priests. After Supper the Marriage was propos'd, whether it should be in the Dining-Room, or Bed-Chamber? That was the Question. The Lady thought the Bed-Chamber best; he thought so too. Well then, in the Bed-Chamber it must be. The Priest did want Water, Salt and Rosemary, Things that he us'd in performance of the Ceremony; Boucher was sent down for them; he brought up Water and Salt, but could get no Rosemary; after these Things were brought up, Boucher the Servant was turned out, and the Doors were shut. Then there was no body present but Mr. Feilding, the Lady, the Priest and Mrs. Villars. Then she tells you of the Ceremony of the Wedding, the Ceremony of the Water, and the Ceremony of the Ring. After that was done, they proceeded to the Marriage; the Office was in Latin; when they came to the Marriage Words, I take thee to be my Husband, &c. Mrs. Wadsworth desir'd it might be spoke in English; thereupon Mr. Feilding did say it in English, I take this Woman to be my wedded Wife, with all my Heart and with all my Soul. The Gentlewoman she said her part likewise in English; I take this Man to be my Wedded Husband; but Mr. Feilding observing her to speak it too low, desir'd her to speak it as earnestly as he did: Whereupon she did say, I take this Man to be my Husband, with all my Heart, and with all my Soul. The Ceremony of putting on the Ring the Priest directed; that was, to take hold of the End of one of her Fingers and put it on; she saw that done, and when the Ceremony was over, the Priest went away; that when he was gone away, she undressed the Bride, and put her to Bed, and then gave notice to Mr. Feilding that the Lady was in Bed. Then Mr. Feilding went to Bed, and she saw them in Bed together. Then she went to Bed her self in a Lodging that was provided for her up another Pair of Stairs: That the next Morning she arose, came down, went into the Room where there was a Fire made by Boucher; that then she saw them in naked Bed together. If you believe her, she swears the Marriage by this Priest, and the Consummation of it. Mrs. Villars goes further, and swears, that she brought her two other Times, and that those Times she saw them in Bed together as Man and Wife. I ask'd Mrs. Villars at last how Mr. Feilding came to be undeceived? She says, it was kept secret from November to May. Then Money was wanted; that was a great Disappointment to Mr. Feilding, for he thought he had marry'd a Lady that would have furnish'd him with Money. Then he discover'd the Fraud, and found he had been impos'd upon; then he was angry with her, beat her, and call'd her Names. Indeed, Gentlemen, I must deal plainly with you, if her Evidence stood alone, her Reputation is shaken to that degree, that in Truth, where a Man stands upon his Life, one would not have a great Regard for what such a Woman swears, if it were not supported otherwise. Now, tho' by her self she be not a good Evidence, yet the Matters of Fact which she swears to, are likewise proved by the concurrent Testimony of others.

First, They call Boucher, and truly he fortifies her Evidence in a great many Particulars, gives an Account of Mrs. Villars bringing Mrs. Wadsworth to Mr. Feilding's under the Character of a Person of Quality; gives an Account, just as she does, of their coming to Mr. Feilding's Lodgings in a Widow's Habit and Mourning Coach; their having a Treat of Plumb-Cake and two Bottles of Wine. He further gives an Account of their coming a second Time, and an Account of the Priest:

knew the Prieſt; knew him to be the Emperor's Envoy's Prieſt. He remembers the Prieſt coming to the Place; he remembers alſo the Circumſtances of being ſent for Water, Salt and Roſemary. He ſays he was order'd down, and the Chamber-door was ſhut, and the Prieſt was then in the Chamber with Mr. Feilding, the Lady, and Mrs. Villars; and that when the Prieſt was gone, Mr. Feilding and the Lady went to Bed; that he ſaw them in Bed together; that the People that were below, when Boucher was ſent down for Salt and Roſemary, they could conclude no otherwiſe but that they were making this Lady a Convert. Now, Gentlemen, this is a material Thing, that there was a Prieſt at that Time, and they were private together; this is a concurrent Evidence to ſtrengthen Mrs. Villars's Teſtimony. There is Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Heath, and Mrs. Price, they remember ſeveral of theſe Matters perfectly well. Mrs. Martin ſaw this Perſon and her Mourning Coach; ſhe ſaw the Lady and Mrs. Villars go up Stairs, and the Time when the Prieſt came in, ſhe let him in; deſcribes him by his particular Habit as the reſt do. Mrs. Heath remembers Mrs. Villars coming with a Woman that ſhe thought was a Woman of Quality, but ſaw not the Prieſt. Mrs. Villars told her ſhe was worth 80000 l. ſhe ask'd her whether ſhe might lie there that Night, for it was too late to go home? She agreed they ſhould lie together, Mrs. Villars and Mrs. Wadſworth. But now here is another Circumſtance that hath mighty Weight in it, that is, the Ring; they have brought the Perſon of whom Mr. Feilding bought the Ring to the Value of 20 s. that the Ring was ready made, and Mr. Feilding directed the Poſy (Tibi Soli) to be engrav'd in it. There was another Man by, when Mr. Feilding bought the Ring and order'd the Poſy for it; and this very Ring with this Poſy has been produc'd firſt by the Proctor and Regiſter; the Proctor does ſay it was firſt brought to him by Mrs. Wadſworth, who came to retain him in an Action of Nullity of Marriage; he took notice of the Ring, and ſaid that it had this Poſy in it. Afterwards when Mrs. Wadſworth came again he was not at home; it was in the Hand of his Brother, and he is ſure it is the ſame Ring. The Goldſmith ſwears it to be that Ring Mr. Feilding bought of him; he knew it by the Mark and Workmanſhip of it; for Goldſmiths know one anothers Work. This, Gentlemen, hath a great deal of Weight in it; it is a very great Circumſtance, unleſs they could tell you, which they have not, upon what Occaſion this Ring was bought at this Time.

Gentlemen, They give a further Account of this Matter, by the Teſtimony of Letters, which they prove to be Mr. Feilding's Hand. Mrs. Villars was the Carrier of theſe Letters; Mr. Feilding ſtiling her in them by the Name of Puggy, a Name by which it ſeems he uſed to call her. Theſe Letters are proved by Boucher and a Lady in the Gallery, to be Mr. Feilding's Writing. Theſe Letters have been read to you, they are written as from a Husband to a Wife; in them he owns her to be his Wife, calls her Counteſs of Feilding, ſtiles himſelf her Husband. Theſe Letters have been read to you. This Gentlemen, as I remember, is the Subſtance of the Evidence that hath been given for the Queen.

Sir James Mountague. My Lord, be pleaſed to take notice of Mr. Feilding's going to the Emperor's Envoy for the Father in Red.

Juſtice Powel. It is true, I had forgot the Evidence of Mr. Florence a Chaplain, that is a Prieſt, now belonging to Count Galas the Emperor's Envoy, and the Porter. They tell you about this Time Mr. Feilding did come to enquire for this Prieſt; and gave the Porter half a Crown (by a good Token:) but the Prieſt he asked for not being at home, he enquired for Mr. Florence; he told Mr. Florence that he had been in Love with a young Lady a good while, but now had prevailed with her to marry him. And ſeeing the Father in Red was not there, he deſired he would go along with him and do the Office. Mr. Florence told him it was improper for him to go without the Envoy's Leave; he went up to the Envoy and acquainted him with it, the Envoy gave him Caution to do it with Diſcretion; but when he came down again, it ſeems that the Red Father had been with Mr. Feilding in the mean Time, and were both gone together.

Now, Gentlemen, you hear what Defence Mr. Feilding makes againſt this great Charge againſt him.

Firſt, He calls a great many Witneſſes to prove that this Mrs. Villars was married as ſhe pretended to Colonel Feilding, and that ſhe was a very common Woman, ſo far as that ſhe has been in a publick Houſe of Correction; and one of their Witneſſes does bear hard upon her Teſtimony; that is, that ſhe ſhould declare to her that ſhe was married to Colonel Feilding, and that my Lady Dutcheſs ſhould ſay to her, If you can make that out that you are married to Mr. Feilding, ſhe would give her two hundred Pounds, and ſettle 100 l. a Year upon her for Fifteen Years together. Then as for Mrs. Wadſworth, they call you divers to prove that ſhe was brought to Bed about Chriſtmas, after this ſuppos'd Marriage. But when they came to be examined they did not prove very much of that; for indeed it proved to be a Miſcarriage; the Woman could not ſay ſhe ſaw the Child, could not tell whether it was a Boy or a Girl; whether it was dead or alive; it did not appear by their Evidence that ſhe went out her Time with a Child. Another part of Mr. Feilding's Evidence is this, to prove Mrs. Wadſworth married to another Perſon; and then admitting ſhe was married to Mr. Feilding, 'tis a null Marriage. To prove that Mrs. Wadſworth was before married to another, they have brought the Book of Marriages of the Fleet, and in that Book there is an Account of one Lilly Bradby, married ſuch a Time to Mrs. Mary Wadſworth; the Man of St. James's, the Woman of St. Margaret's Weſtminſter. The Woman of the Fleet, in whoſe Cuſtody this Book was, pretends that Mrs. Wadſworth came to her, and deſired if any came to ſee the Book, that ſhe would not let them ſee the Entry of her Marriage; and why? Becauſe there would be Trouble about her Marriage. This Woman ſwears that there were two Men came to ſearch the Book, but ſhe ſhewed them another Book; but this Book ſhe did not ſhew them. She was ask'd whether ſhe had two Books of Marriages for the ſame Year? She ſaid ſhe had ſeveral Books for the ſame Year: One Parſon made his Entry in one Book, and another Parſon in another Book. She pretends ſhe did not ſhew them this Book; but the Book ſhe ſhewed them was at home. I cannot conclude much from what this Woman hath ſaid; but Gentlemen you have look'd upon this Book, and if you are ſatisfied from this Evidence, that Mary Wadſworth was married to Bradby at this Time, I confeſs Mr. Feilding will not be within the Statute. You have look'd into the Book; they give you no Account that there was ever any ſuch Man as Bradby, nor of no Cohabitation; but a meer Book is produced, and not of the beſt Credit neither; it is entred in the Bottom of the Leaf, but not in the Middle; it is written with another coloured Ink, and in another Hand. I ask'd the Woman whether ſhe knew the Man that wrote it? She ſaid, yes; and it was her Husband's Brother's Hand. He is alive, why is not he produced?

Gentlemen, they have called no Witneſſes to prove the Marriage with Lilly Bradby. There were two Gentlemen on the other ſide, they went to the Fleet to ſearch the Books of the Entry of this Marriage. They ſay that a Perſon inform'd them that there had been there a Man and a Woman before them; theſe Gentlemen went and deſired to ſee the Book, particularly for the Year 1703. They ſay the Woman did produce the Book of Marriages, but they could not ſee ſuch an Entry; ſhe denied to them that ſhe had any other Book for that Year; they cannot ſwear poſitively that this is the Book that was ſhewn them; but one of them ſays he believes it to be the ſame, for in that which he ſaw, he obſerved Entries of the Year 1705. before the Year 1704. He took good notice of it, and ſo it is found in Court. The other Gentleman ſays, he took particular notice of the Space that was in the Book, where this Entry is now written. Now the Woman does not bring the other Book ſhe pretended to have ſhewn them. Now, as to the Labour, they have produced a Letter under Mr. Feilding's Hand, whereby Mr. Feilding takes notice of her being with Child, directs the Letter to Anne Counteſs of Feilding at Waddon; he took it that he had married Mrs. Deleau, for her Name is Anne, he directed his Letter to her Country-Seat. There is another Thing, of Mr. Feilding's coming to Mrs. Heath, and complaining what an ill Woman Mrs. Villars was, for ſhe had ſerved him a baſe Trick, inſtead of a Woman of Fortune, ſhe had put a common Woman upon him. Gentlemen, you have heard the Account too concerning his beating of her; for this Woman, it ſeems, was troubleſome to him at White-Hall; ſhe demanding him as her Husband, ſaid ſhe was lawful Wife; he ſtruck her, and cauſed her to be held till he got away from her.

Gentlemen, It is a very great Charge, upon Mr. Feilding, it is true, if there be Evidence to maintain it; it does not really depend upon Mrs. Villars's Evidence; for if her Evidence were to ſtand alone, no Credit ſhould be given to it; but as it is ſupported by concurring Evidence, I leave it with you whether it be not ſufficient to find Mr. Feilding Guilty. But if you think that Mrs. Wadſworth's Marriage to Lilly Bradby is proved ſufficiently, then, altho' you think Mr. Feilding's Marriage with Mrs. Wadſworth ſufficiently proved, yet you are to find for the Defendant.

The Jury having withdrawn for ſome Time, brought in their Verdict, That Mr. Feilding was Guilty of the Felony he ſtood indicted of.

Mr. Feilding, (in Caſe he was found Guilty,) had obtained the Queen's Warrant to ſuſpend Execution of this Sentence; and then by his Council took Exceptions to the Indictment, and moved in Arreſt of Judgment; but they were anſwered by the Council for the Queen; but Mr. Feilding having obtained a Suſpenſion of the Execution, the Judges by a Cur' adviſare vult (as the Form is) ſuſpended giving Judgment till the next Seſſions, and accepted Bail for Mr. Feilding's Appearance the next Seſſions.

The next Seſſions, being the Fifteenth of January following, Mr. Feilding appear'd, and his Council waving their Exception (as being Frivolous) he was ask'd what he had to ſay why the Court ſhould not proceed to Judgment and Execution? And then he craved the Benefit of his Clergy; which was allow'd. And then Judgment was given (as uſual) That he ſhould be burnt in his Hand. But he having the Queen's Warrant to ſuſpend Execution, he was admitted to Bail.

The Proceedings againſt Robert Feilding, Esq; in Doctors Commons.

NOtwithſtanding Mr. Feilding was found Guilty of Felony at the Old Baily, her Grace the Dutcheſs of Cleveland having inſtituted a Cauſe of Nullity of Marriage againſt the ſaid Mr. Feilding, by Reaſon of a former Marriage with the ſaid Mary Wadſworth, in the Arches Court of Canterbury; and having by Examination on Oath, of divers credible Witneſſes, made good and ſufficient Proof of the ſeveral Articles of the Libel by her Grace exhibited in the ſaid Court againſt the ſaid Mr. Feilding, did proceed to obtain the Sentence of the ſaid Court; and accordingly on the 23d day of May, in the Year of our Lord God 1707. the Right Worſhipful Sir John Cooke, Kt. " Foraſmuch as we have by the Acts enacted, " deduced, alledged, exhibited, propounded, pro- " ved and confeſs'd, That the Proctor for the ſaid " moſt Noble Lady, Barbara Dutcheſs of Cleve- " land, hath fully and ſufficiently prov'd and " founded his Intention in a certain Libel, and " other Matters now remaining in the Regiſtry of " this Court, propounded and exhibited in this " Cauſe on the Part and Behalf of his ſaid Client; " And that nothing hath been, on the Part and Be- " half of the ſaid Robert Feilding, effectually ex- " cepted, deduc'd, alledg'd, exhibited, propound- " ed, prov'd and confeſs'd, which might, or could " in any wiſe (touching our Sentence hereafter to " be pronounc'd) hurt or weaken the Intention of " the ſaid moſt Noble Lady, Barbara Dutcheſs of " Cleveland:

Cap. 2. it is ſtatute, That if any Perſon ſhall Plot, Contrive or Intend, Death and Deſtruction to the King, or Bodily Harm tending thereto; or Deprive, Depoſe, or Suſpend Him from the Stile, Honour, and Kingly Name of this, or any other His Majeſty's Dominions; or levy War, or take up Arms againſt Him, or any commiſſionate by Him; or entice Strangers, or others, to invade any of His Dominions, and expreſs and declare ſuch Treaſonable Intention; he ſhall be adjudged a Traitor, and puniſhed as in the Caſe of High Treaſon. Likeas by the Act of Parliament, 1702. intituled, Act Recognizing Her Majeſties Royal Authority, it is declared, That it ſhall be High Treaſon in any of the Subjects of this Kingdom, by Writing, Speaking, or any other manner of way, to diſown, quarrel, or impugn Her Majeſties Royal Power and Authority, or Right and Title to the Crown. And by the Act of Parliament, 1703. intituled, Act Aſſerting and Recognizing Her Majeſties Authority, it is again ſtatute and declared, That it ſhall be High Treaſon, in any of the Subjects of this Kingdom, to diſown, quarrel or impugn, Her Majeſties Right and Title to the Crown of this Kingdom, or Her Exerciſe of the Government thereof. NEVERTHELESS it is of Verity, That the ſaid James Stirling of Keir, Archibald Seaton of Touch, Archibald Stirling of Carden, Charles Stirling of Kippendavie, and Patrick Edmonſton of Newtown, all and each of them were guilty of the ſaid Crimes, in ſua far as they all, and each of them, ſhaking off all Fear of GOD, and Regard to Her Majeſties Perſon, Authority, and Laws, upon one or other of the Days of the Months of February, March, or April laſt, when an Invaſion of that Part of Great-Britain called SCOTLAND was threaten'd, by an Enemy-Fleet of Ships with Forces, and an Army aboard, ſent by the French King, or by the Pretender, who went ſome Time by the Name of the Prince of Wales, and now aſſumes to himſelf the Name, Stile and Title of King James, as King of Her Majeſties Dominions; with a manifeſt and open Deſign to invade Her Majeſties Dominions, and to deſtroy Her Majeſty and Her good Subjects; at leaſt to deprive and depoſe Her Majeſty from the Stile, Honour, and Princely Name of theſe Her Dominions; Did convocate and convene in Arms, with others their Accomplices; ſuch as Major William Graham, Alexander Steuart, Uncle to Ardvorlich, George Seaton, Brother to the ſaid Archibald Seaton, and Mr. Charles Fleeming, alias Hay, Brother to the Earl of Wigtoun, all ſince abſconded, and upon the ſame Account declared Fugitives: And thus did riſe and continue in Arms without Her Majeſties Special Authority firſt interponed; poned; and did levy War, and take up Arms againſt Her Majeſty. And farder, they having never before qualified themſelves by any Mark of good Affection to Her Majeſty or Her Government, did (at the Time foreſaid) gather themſelves together, with their Accomplices, in Arms, with Swords and Piſtols, and other offenſive Weapons, in an open Correſpondence with the ſaid Enemies and Invaders, at the very Time of their ſaid Invaſion; and being ſo convocate and convened in Arms, did march in one Body, or Company, with their ſaid Accomplices, ſeveral Days and Nights, to and from ſeveral Places, in the Shires of Stirling, Perth, and other Shires adjacent, on purpoſe to encourage and ſtrengthen the ſaid Invaders, or at leaſt to raiſe Her Majeſties other Subjects in Rebellion againſt Her. Likeas for that End, they did openly drink to the good Health of their Maſter, as they called him; who could be none elſe but the ſaid Pretender. And did by their ſaid Riſing in Arms, and open Correſpondence with Her Majeſties ſaid declared Enemies, and otherways, entice them and others to invade Her Majeſties Dominions, to the deſtroying of Her, and Her good Subjects; at leaſt to deprive and depoſe Her from the Stile, Honour, and Princely Name of Queen and Sovereign of this and Her other Dominions; or at leaſt thereby endeavour the Alteration of the Right of Succeſſion to the Crown, ſo happily by Law ſettled upon Her Majeſty and Her Succeſſors. By all which, they, and each of them were guilty, Art and Part, of the foreſaid Crimes of Treaſon, Rebellion, and Leſe-Majeſty, at leaſt of Treaſonable Riſing and Convening in Arms, without Her Majeſties Special Authority firſt had thereto; at leaſt of a moſt unlawful Convocation in Arms, in a moſt dangerous and threatning Seaſon, and in open Correſpondence with the ſaid Enemies and Invaders, to the Deſtruction of Her Majeſties Government, and of the Quiet and Peace of Her Dominions. Which Crimes, all or any of them, being found proven againſt all or any of the forenamed Perſons, by the Verdict of an Aſſize, before the Lords, Juſtice-General, Juſtice-Clerk, and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary; They, and each of them, ought to be condemn'd by Sentence and Doom of the ſaid Lords Commiſſioners, to forfault their Lands, Lives and Goods, as Traitors; and be otherways puniſhed in their Perſons and Goods, by the Pains of Law, to the Example and Terror of others to commit the like in Time coming.

My Lord Advocate judicially produced Her Majeſties Letter, authorizing and requiring his Lordſhip to raiſe and inſiſt in the aforeſaid Proceſs; whereof the Tenor follows, ſuperſcribed thus:

ANNE R.

'Right Truſty, and Well-beloved, We greet you 'well. Whereas James Stirling, Laird of Keir, 'Archibald Seaton, Laird of Touch, Archibald Stir'ling*, Laird of Carden, Charles Stirling, Laird of 'Kippendavie*, and Patrick Edmonſton, of New'town*, were about the Time of the late intended 'Invaſion apprehended by Warrants, for Suſpicion 'of Treaſon, and Treaſonable Practices, againſt Us 'and Our Government; and have ſince been com'mitted by Warrants for High Treaſon, Depoſiti'ons upon Oath having been made againſt them: 'Our Will and Pleaſure is, and We do hereby 'authorize and require you, to raiſe a Proceſs in 'the ordinary Form, before the Commiſſioners of 'Juſticiary, againſt them, and each of them, for 'the Treaſonable Practices wherewith they, or any 'of them, are, or ſhall be charg'd. And herein you 'are to take the Aſſiſtance of Sir David Dalrym'ple*, Mr. William Carmichael, Sir Walter Pringle, 'and Sir Francis Grant, Advocates; or any Two 'of them, if neceſſary; and who are hereby re'quired to concur with you accordingly. Directed on the Back thus:

To Our Truſty and Well-beloved,
Sir James Steuart, Our Advocate for Scotland.

Which being read in Preſence of the ſaid Lords, Juſtice-General, Juſtice-Clerk, and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, they ordained the ſame to be recorded.

CROMERTIE, I.P.D.

Thereafter, there was a Petition preſented to the ſaid Lords, by James Stirling of Keir, Archibald Seaton of Touch, Archibald Stirling of Carden, Charles Stirling of Kippendavie, and Patrick Edmonſton of Newtown, humbly ſhewing, 'That the Petitioners 'being indicted at the Inſtance of Her Majeſties 'Advocate, for the Crimes of Treaſon and Leſe-'Majeſty; and this being the Day of their Com'pearance and Tryal, they had, according to the 'Privileges allowed to all the Lieges, and confirm'd 'by Acts of Parliament, made choice of the fol'lowing Lawyers, to appear before their Lordſhips 'in their Defence; viz. Sir Patrick Home, Sir Da'vid Forbes*, Sir James Steuart, Mr. Alexander 'Macleod*, Mr. Walter Steuart, Mr. James Graham,

'Mr.

'Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Mr. Charles Cockburn, and 'Mr. John Elphingſton. And it being alſo uſual in 'Caſes of Treaſon, That Lawyers are publickly au-'thorized and warranted to Manage the Tryals in 'their Pannels Defence; therefore humbly craving 'their Lordſhips would be pleaſed to allow of the 'Petitioners Choice of the Lawyers above-men-'tioned, and to authorize theſe Gentlemen accor-'dingly, as the ſaid Petition bears.

Which being conſider'd by the ſaid Lords, They, by their Deliverance thereon, allowed ſuch Advocates as the Pannels ſhould think fit to employ to appear and debate for them in the above-mentioned Indictment; they being already ſufficiently authorized by Law for that Effect.

Sic ſubſcribitur,
CROMERTIE, I. P. D.

The ſaid Indictment being read, and fully debate viva voce, in Preſence of the ſaid Lords, Pannels and Aſſizers; the ſaid Lords, Juſtice-General, Juſtice-Clerk, and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, ordained the Pannels to give in their Information thereon, betwixt and Wedneſday's Night next; and Her Majeſties Advocate to give in his, betwixt and Friday's Night thereafter, in order to be recorded; and continued the Dyet till Monday next, at Nine a Clock in the Forenoon; and ordained the whole Aſſizers and Witneſſes to attend then, each of them under the Pain of One Hundred Merks; and the Pannels to be carried back to Priſon.

INFORMATION for the Laird of Keir, and Others, againſt Her Majeſties Advocate.

IT is alledged for the Pannels, denying always the Indictment, and haill Articles and Qualifications thereof; 1. That the Indictment is not relevantly libelled, in reſpect it does not condeſcend upon any Overt-Act or Deed done by them, that could poſſibly be ſtretched to infer the Pains libelled; and the Acts of Parliament libelled on, expreſly require ſuch Facts and Deeds, to infer the Pains of Treaſon therein mentioned. As Act 3. Parl. 1. James I. That none rebel openly or notourly. And Act 14. Parl. 6. James II. bears, And if it happens, any within the Realm, openly or notourly againſt the King to rebel, or makes War againſt the King's Lieges, againſt his Forbidding, &c. And Act 2. Seſſ. 2. Parl. 1. Charles II. has theſe Words: And ſhall, by Writing, Printing, Preaching, or other malicious and adviſed Speaking, expreſs or declare ſuch their Treaſonable Intentions, &c. And the Act 1702. bears, That it ſhall be High Treaſon, by Writing, Speaking, or any other manner of way, to diſown or impugn Her Majeſties Royal Authority, &c. Which Laws, and generally all Laws, as well as the Nature of Crimes, require, That the ſame ſhould be by expreſs Words, Writs, or Deeds; and not ſtrained by remote Inferences and Conjectures: And in the preſent Caſe, there is neither Words, Writ, or Deeds condeſcended on, that could poſſibly be drawn to infer the Crimes libelled.

2. Whereas the Indictment bears, That the Pannels did convocate and convene in Arms, with others their Accomplices, and ſo did riſe and continue in Arms, without Her Majeſties Special Authority firſt interponed; and did levy War, and take up Arms againſt Her Majeſty, &c. It is anſwered, That albeit Levying War againſt Her Majeſty, or riſing and continuing in Arms without Her Majeſties Authority, be undoubtedly Treaſon when duly qualified; yet there is no Circumſtance of Fact, Word or Writ, condeſcended on in the Indictment, that can be imagined to infer a Riſing in Arms, or Levying War againſt Her Majeſty. And albeit the Law ſtatutes anent Riſing in Arms, or Levying War generally; yet in all Libels duly founded thereupon, the Subſumption muſt condeſcend upon particular Facts and Deeds, capable to be found and conſtrued a Riſing in Arms. The Common Law expreſſes it thus: Qui injuſſu Principis bellum geſſerit, delectumve habuerit, exercitum comparaverit. And our Law, Act 75. Parl. 9. Q. Mary, explains what it is to riſe in Arms; viz. That no manner of Perſons attempt to do, or raiſe any Band of Men of War, or Horſe or Foot, with Culverins, Piſtolets, Pikes, &c. or other Munition bellical whatſomever, for Daily, Weekly, or Monthly Wages, in any Times to come, without ſpecial Licenſe in Writ had of our Sovereign Lady, and Her Succeſſors thereto. And Sir George Mackenzie, in his Obſervation on Act 2. James I. defines Riſing in Arms thus; The Riſing of Men in warlike manner, by Muſtering them, or Forming them in Companies, or Swearing them to Colours. Nor are theſe Qualifications by themſelves ſufficient, unleſs there be a formidable Number: And therefore he cites the Caſe of Macleod of Aſſint, Feb. 2. 1674. where the Lords of Juſticiary refuſed to ſuſtain the Articles wherein it was libelled, the raiſing of Men, and diſpoſing of them under Colours, to be relevant; except it were alledged, that they were an Hundred Men or upwards, and were under Colours, or muſtered under weekly or daily Pay. Whence it is evident, that the Riſing in Arms muſt be by publick and notour Appearance of Companies in Arms, ſo as their Deſign and Oppoſition to Authority could not be doubted; whereof the leaſt Shadow cannot be alledged in this Caſe.

3. Whereas the Libel bears further, That the Pannels did gather themſelves together, with their Accomplices, in Arms, with Swords and Piſtols, and other offenſive Weapons, in an open Correſpondence with the ſaid Enemies and Invaders, at the very Time of the Invaſion. It is anſwered, That the ſaid Article anent Correſpondence is not relevantly libelled; there being no particular Condeſcendance of any Acts of Correſpondence paſs'd betwixt the Pannels and the Enemy, as is neceſſary to be condeſcended on for inferring the Crime libelled. Correſpondence with the Enemy, in the Common Law, is thus expreſs'd: Quive hoſtibus nuncium literaſve miſerit, ſignumve dederit, feceritve dolo malo quo hoſtes conſilio juventur. And no ſuch Fact or Qualifications can ever be pretended, or alledged in this Caſe. And their meeting together ſo few in Number of near Relations and Neighbours, as it were lawful for them to do at all times, ſo the accidental Circumſtance of an imminent Invaſion could never render the ſame unlawful. Nor could their Travelling together for ſome Space in the Country, be ſtrained to any Deſign of encouraging Enemies, or to raiſe the Subjects in Rebellion; whilſt they were no other ways appoint-appointed or attended, than as they (and others of their Character) do uſually travel, in a moſt peaceable manner, without giving the leaſt Occaſion, by Word or Deed, to any Rebellion or Sedition. And as there was not then any Body of Men in Arms in the Kingdom, againſt Authority, to whom they could be imagined to reſort; ſo it is an Evidence that they had no mind of Convocating themſelves againſt Authority, that they did not uſe the Means in their Power, by convocating their Tenants and Followers in Arms, either for aſſiſting themſelves, or giving Countenance and Encouragement to others on any ſuch Deſigns.

4. Whereas the Libel mentions, That the Pannels did openly drink to the good Health of their Maſter, as they called him; who could be none elſe but the Pretender; it is no ways relevant. 1. Becauſe the drinking of any Perſon's Health is not a Crime, there being no Law againſt it. 2. There is no Perſon named, whoſe Health is ſaid to be drunk; and therefore cannot infer any Crime. And the Gloſs put thereupon, That it could be no other but the Pretender, is only a Conjecture and uncertain Inference of the Purſuers; which can be no wiſe ſufficient to fix a Crime upon others, who can only be anſwerable for what is clearly expreſs'd and declar'd by them, by plain Words, Writs, or Deeds.

It was reply'd for the Purſuer, 1. That the Libel was moſt relevant, in ſo far as it did expreſly bear, That the Pannels did riſe and continue in Arms, without Her Majeſties Special Authority firſt interponed: And the ſaid Act 5. Parl. 1. Car. II. declares it Treaſon to the Subjects, or any Number of them, more or leſs, upon any Ground or Pretext whatſomever, to riſe and continue in Arms, without His Majeſty's Special Authority. And the particular Qualifications and Circumſtances of their ſaid Riſing in Arms, will appear from the Probation.

2. The Pannels riſing in Arms, leaving their own Houſes, and marching in a Body thro' the Shires of Stirling and Perth, in Company with the other Perſons mention'd in the Libel, whereof ſome have been ſince denounced for not Compearance, to underly the Law therefore; at the ſame time that the Nation was threatned by an Invaſion of a French Fleet, with Land-Forces Aboard, cannot be underſtood to be upon any other Deſign, than on purpoſe to encourage and ſtrengthen the Invaders, and in open Correſpondence with them, eſpecially whilſt the Pannels can adduce no reaſonable Cauſe for their ſo Convocating and Travelling together; and this was ſuſtain'd Treaſon in Caldwel's Caſe.

3. The Laws libelled on, do not only make actual Riſing in Arms, and Levying War againſt the Sovereign, to incur the Crimes and Pains of Treaſon, but likewiſe any Attempt ſo to do: For any Attempt or Conatus in the Caſe of Treaſon, is to be puniſhed with the ſame Pains as the conſummate Crime, as the Law ſays, Eadem enim ſeveritate voluntatem ſceleris qua effectum puniri Jura voluerunt. And Attempts are reckon'd as Treaſon in the Acts abovemention'd.

4. The Libel bearing Art and Part, is ſufficiently relevant, notwithſtanding the Generality thereof, ſuch Libels being expreſly ordained to be relevant by the Act of Parliament 151. Parl. 12. Ja. 16th. So that no Objection can be ſuſtained againſt the Libel as Irrelevant, upon the Account of the Generality thereof, ſince Art and Part is libelled; which takes off any Objection, for not particularly condeſcending upon the Pannels Acceſſion to the Crimes libelled.

It is Duplyed for the Pannels to the Firſt, That albeit the Riſing in Arms without Authority be mention'd in General, to infer the Crime of Treaſon, ſince the Law could not deſcend to every particular Qualification, that might happen to infer Riſing in Arms to be Treaſon, but left the ſame to be determined by the Judges competent: Yet the Purſuer of a criminal Libel muſt adduce ſpecial Qualifications, and circumſtantiate Matter of Fact, that may be ſufficient to infer, That the Pannels did Treaſonably riſe in Arms, or otherways the Libel cannot be ſuſtain'd. For as it could not be allowed to libel in General, that a Perſon is guilty of Murder, ſo no more can it be allowed to libel in General, that a Perſon is guilty of riſing in Arms without Authority; the Propoſitions in theſe Libels being equally founded in Law; but the Subſumption muſt be cleared and qualified by circumſtantiate Matters of Fact, inferring the reſpective Crimes; and if it were otherways, theſe evident Inconveniencies would follow.

As, 1. That the Pannels would be deprived of the Benefit of Exculpations, which could not eaſily be brought to meet with general Libels; whereas, ſpecial circumſtantiate Matters of Fact might have been more readily taken off by proper particular Grounds of Exculpation, whereby the Deeds condeſcended on, might be applied to other reaſonable Cauſes, that might wholly exclude the animus delinquendi, or dolus, requiſite in all Crimes.

2. This Inconveniency would likeways be inevitable, That the Aſſize would become Judge of the Relevancy, as well as of the Probation. For if the Libel bearing in General, the Pannels to be guilty of riſing in Arms againſt Authority, ſhould be ſuſtain'd, and the Qualifications left to be determin'd by the Probation, then the Aſſize would be Judges both of the Relevancy and Probation; for they behoved to determine, whether the Qualifications ariſing from the Probation, did amount to a Riſing in Arms, or other Crimes, generally mention'd in the Statute; whence it might come to paſs, that Pannels might be put to the Knowledge of an Inqueſt upon irrelevant Crimes; and therefore Crimes ſhould be particularly ſubſumed, as Sir George Mackenzie obſerves in his Criminals Tit. Libels. Page 465.

To the 2*d.* it's Duplyed, That whether the Pannels Travelling for ſome Space from their own Houſes, either for Diverſion or Buſineſs, in the moſt peaceable Manner imaginable, had happen'd in the Time in the threatned Invaſion or not, could never alter the Nature of that Deed, ſince it cannot ſo much as be pretended, that they were verſantes in illicito; the Travelling in ſuch a peaceful Manner ſingly with Domeſtick Servants, being unqueſtionably allowed by Law. And this Defence of the Pannels Travelling in their uſual Manner, and with their ordinary Equipage, was ſo evident of it ſelf, that the Purſuers acknowledged there could nothing culpable be inferred from it at other Seaſons; but that the Crime now inſiſted on, was founded, in that their Meeting and Travelling was the Time of the threatned Invaſion, when a Fleet of Enemies Ships was upon the Coaſt. And yet the Libels does not bear, that the Pannels knew of any ſuch Deſign, or that the French were actually upon the Coaſt; and without this Knowledge, the Circumſtance which the Purſuers inſiſt chiefly to make the Crime, was, as to the Pannels, no Circumſtance at all. So that the Libel ſhortly reſolves in the Pannels Travelling with with their ordinary Equipage, after their uſual way, in a peaceable Manner; which neither in common Senſe, nor in the Conſtruction and Interpretation of our Law, and Opinion of our Lawyers above-mention'd, can be pled a Riſing in Arms againſt Her Majeſty or Government, or give the Occaſion of the leaſt Suſpicion of any Intention that way. Neither can Suſpicions, albeit there had been more evident Grounds for them, be ſufficient to infer a Crime; the Law ſaying expreſly, That ex ſuſpitionibus nemo eſt damnandus, Leg. 5. ff. de Pœn. And whereas it is pretended, that the Pannels have given no reaſonable Account of their Progreſs and March at that Time; and therefore leaves place for the Purſuer's Conjectures; the ſame is noways of any weight to fortify the Purſuers Libel; it being ſufficient for the Pannels to alledge, That the Meeting of a few Gentlemen, and Travelling with Swords and Piſtols, as they were hitherto uſed, does not infer a Riſing in Arms. And to pretend that the Pannels ſhould give ſpecial Accounts of their Progreſſes, is plainly to found a Criminal Charge or Libel ſuper inquirendis, and ſo expreſly diſcharged by Law: And doubtleſs it is ſufficient for the Pannels to ſay, that their Meeting or Travelling together with ſuch ſmall Retinue, and in ſuch peaceable and unprovided Manner, could not give the leaſt Jealouſy to any Perſon whatſomever; and if this Defence were not ſuſtained, the natural Liberty of the Lieges would be very much circumſcribed; and no Man could be ſure, but the Action of his Life which he intended ſhould be moſt innocent, ſhould be the moſt fatal, as concluding him under Treaſon, and the worſt of Crimes. And the Practique in Caldwel's Caſe is greatly differenced from this, in that there was a conſiderable Body of Men with all ſorts of Arms actually in Rebellion againſt the Government at the Time; and that Caldwel, with his Aſſociates, likewiſe of a conſiderable Number, had intercepted common Poſts, and particularly ſome Letters to the Earl of Eglingtoun, a Privy-Counſellor, which was an Ouvert-Act, and ſufficiently declared their bad Deſign; beſides theſe Sentences were reduced, and the Perſons reſtored per modum Juſtitiæ.

To the 3d. it is Duplyed, That albeit it be generally received by Lawyers, that Attempt or Conatus in Treaſon is puniſhable as Treaſon; yet that is never to be underſtood of a naked Deſign or actus animi; the Law ſaying expreſly, that Cogitationis pœnam nemo patitur Leg. 18. ff. de Pœn. and neminem qui male facere voluit plecti equum eſt niſi quod factum voluit etiam fecerit. But that Voluntas or Conatus mention'd in Law, muſt break out into an external Act; if not conſummating the intended Crime, at leaſt inchoating the ſame, ſo as to become a Deed obvious to the external Senſes, before it can be ſubjected to the Cenſure of humane Laws. And albeit Dolus or Propoſitum be requiſite in all Crimes; yet not as it is latent in the Mind, but as it is expreſs'd and declar'd by an external Act. And ſo Matthæus de Crim. in Proleg. ſays, Dolo contrahi crimen diximus, per dolum autem factum doloſum intelligimus. As it is clear by the expreſs Statutes libelled upon, particularly the ſaid Act 2d. Seſſ. 2d. Parl. 1ſt. Ch. II. That Treaſonable Intentions ſhould be expreſſed and declared by Writing, Printing, or adviſed Speaking, before the ſame can be ſaid to have inferred the Pains mention'd in the Act; yea, even where there was Writing alledged upon; yet in Mr. Robert Caddel's Caſe, that was not found ſufficient to infer the Crimes in the Statute, unleſs it ſhould have been qualified, that the Writing was publiſhed, and out of the Writer's Hands, whereby the Attempt would become manifeſt; and in the Caſe of an Ouvert-Act, which was the Point upon which Balmerino's Tryal proceeded; and without which, no Crime could have been found againſt him. And in the preſent Caſe, as the Pannels had truly no manner of ill Deſign, ſo no external Act whatſomever is, or can be condeſcended on, either of Word or Deed, that infers any Deſign of the Pannels to oppoſe Authority, or to act any thing contrair to Law, or their Duty to the Sovereign; for as they uſed their natural and innocent Liberty of Travelling in a peaceable Manner with their near Relations and Neighbours, for their Diverſion or Buſineſs, ſo when they were called by Authority, they did not abſent or withdraw themſelves, but readily appeared and gave Obedience, upon the firſt Citation.

To the 4th, it is Duplyed, That the Libelling of Art and Part, is not ſufficient to exclude the Objection upon the Generality of the Libel, becauſe Art and Part relates to the particular criminal Facts, and Qualifications thereof libelled, and includes an Alternative, that the Perſon complained upon, was either Actor, or Art and Part of the criminal Facts and Deeds particularly libelled. Which general and indefinite Qualification of Acceſſion, Law and Cuſtom has not allowed, without a more ſpecial Condeſcendence of the Parties Acceſſion to the Deeds libelled, which could only be certainly and diſtinctly known by the Probation: But ſtill that does not take off the Neceſſity of ſpecial Condeſcendences of the Qualifications that make up the principal Crime libelled, without which Pannels could not have the Benefit of Exculpations; nor could the Relevancy be determined by the Judges, but remitted with the Probation to the Aſſize, which always has been cautiouſly ſhunned, as of dangerous Conſequence. And in the preſent Caſe, the ſuſtaining of the Libel in the Generality thereof above-mention'd, would be a moſt dangerous Preparative; it being evident, that if a few Gentlemen, Meeting and Travelling together with their ordinair Retinue and Equipage, which is generally with Swords and Piſtols, could be thought to fall under the Act of Parliament, of Riſing in Arms without the Sovereign's Conſent, no Gentleman in the Kingdom could be free from Grounds of a Criminal Proceſs, if the bearing ſuch Weapons ſhould be conſtrued a Riſing in Arms; and few or many, making no Difference, as the Purſuer contends, it would neceſſarily follow, that two or three Perſons meeting or travelling with Swords or Piſtols, might be lyable to a Proceſs of Treaſon, as riſing in Arms without Authority; which were moſt abſurd, and of dangerous Conſequence to the Lieges. And as no Company can ever be found to have met and travelled in a more peaceable and inoffenſive manner than the Pannels have done, doing no Injury by Word or Deed, to any Perſon whatſomever, and travelling in ſuch a ſimple Manner, as did exclude all imaginable Jealouſy of their having any Warlike Deſigns, or creating the leaſt Diſturbance to themſelves or others, and giving a ready Obedience when called by Authority on a ſimple Citation: So they ought to be Aſſoilzied from the ſaid Groundleſs and Irrelevant Libel.

The Pannels ſhall not take up the Lords Time in informing more particularly upon the other Circumſtances of the Libel, ſuch as drinking of Healths, Correſpondence, and enticing of the Country; by reaſon that my Lord Advocate did not inſiſt upon theſe in the Debate, but only pretended to to have libelled them as Aggravations, which is of no Moment in a Proceſs of Treaſon, and can be of no manner of Effect in this Caſe, where the Crime libelled is ſo manifeſtly elided. Sic ſubſcribitur, Alexr. Mcleod.

Information for Her Majeſty's Advocate. againſt the Lairds of Keir, Touch, and others, now Priſoners in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh.

HER Majeſty's Advocate, holding the Indictment as repeated, and here premiſed, before he offer to anſwer and remove the Exceptions and Objections made againſt it for the Defenders; takes leave to remember what cannot well be forgot, That the Occaſion of the preſent Tryal was an actual Invaſion of an Enemy-Fleet, with French, Iriſh, and Popiſh Forces aboard, in March laſt, threatning an imminent Invaſion upon our Coaſt, to deſtroy Her Majeſty, and all Her good Subjects, and ruin our Religion, Laws and Liberties.

Which Invaſion was the more formidable, that it was intended and carried on by Papiſts and French, and by Iriſh Papiſts, the Dregs of both, which are certainly the worſt Characters that can be apprehended in an Enemy.

While we ſtood thus threatned by ſuch Enemies that had riſen up againſt us, and were ready to ſwallow us up quick, ſo that the Waters had overwhelmed us, and the Stream had gone over our Soul, if GOD had not appeared for us; and her Majeſty, by His Bleſſing upon her careful and moſt vigilant Conduct, interpoſed for our Delivery, and when the Enemy was upon our Coaſt, and ready to enter our Firth, and when all good Men were in the greateſt Suſpenſe of the ſaddeſt Apprehenſions of what might enſue, by turning our Country at leaſt to a Field of Blood, and Scene of all Confuſions and Miſchiefs: Yet there were found amongſt us, even among Scots Proteſtants, a Knot of Men who may juſtly ſeem to have wiſhed and longed for that which all Men beſides feared.

It is now indeed made an Argument to exculpate, that they were ſo few; and yet it may far more reaſonably be wondered, that there was ſo much as one Man to be found of ſuch a deſperate Reſolution and Practice.

The Five Gentlemen now in the Pannel, being of the Knot mentioned, ſo ſoon as this Invaſion was noiſed abroad, and when it was brought juſt upon our Coaſt, then they think fit to leave their Houſes, and going with their Horſes and Servants, and all well armed with Swords and Piſtols, and other invaſive Weapons, they riſe and continue in Arms, without any lawful Authority interpoſed: And thus appearing in Arms, and Marching from Place to Place in ſeveral Shires, and for ſeveral Days and Nights, as it were in Correſpondence with the foreſaid Invaders, did what in them lay, (if not to riſe to their Aſſiſtance, at leaſt) to diſturb Her Majeſty's good Subjects, from the Oppoſition and Defence that was at that Time ſo neceſſary.

It's true, when their Hopes were diſappointed, then they ſhrunk home, and ſuch of them as had more to loſe than they knew how to ſave otherways, compeared and rendred when called; when others of them that had no more Guilt, but leſs to loſe, thought fit to retire and abſcond: Whereupon Her Majeſty moſt juſtly ordered, that the Perſons now in the Pannel ſhould be brought to this preſent Tryal.

The Indictment exhibit againſt them, founds upon moſt plain and poſitive Laws and Acts of Parliament, That none rebel openly againſt the King's Perſon or Government; That none levy War and take up Arms againſt the King and His Government; And that for any of the Subjects, more or fewer, to riſe and continue in Arms upon any pretext, or to attempt the ſame without His Majeſty's ſpecial Authority firſt interponed, it ſhall be High Treaſon; and that if any levy War, or take up Arms againſt the King, or entice Strangers or others to invade, and expreſs and declare ſuch treaſonable Intentions, he ſhall be adjudged a Traytor, and puniſhed as in the Caſe of High Treaſon. And then the Indictment ſubſumes in the very Terms of the Law, That at ſuch a Time, and in ſuch a Manner, and with the other Circumſtances mentioned, the Defenders did actually riſe and convene, and continue in Arms without her Majeſty's ſpecial Authority firſt interponed; which in Law is juſtly conſtrued to be the Levying of War, and taking up Arms againſt Her Majeſty, and did plainly appear to be in a real Correſpondence with, and for the Encouragement of the French Invaders; whom thereby, and otherways they did entice, to the invading of Her Majeſty's Dominions, and the deſtroying of Her and all Her good Subjects: Of which Crime the Defenders being Actors, Art or Part, ought to be puniſhed with the Pains of Law.

To this Indictment, the Defenders made Anſwer, denying the Crime libelled with all its Qualifications; that the Indictment is not relevant, in reſpect it doth not condeſcend upon any Overt Act or Deed that can be ſtretched to infer the Crime, or any treaſonable Intention; and that all the Acts of Parliament libelled upon, require ſuch open Facts and Deeds; and the Act of Parliament, Car. II. Par. 1. Seſ. 2. requires expreſly, That by Writing, Printing, Preaching, or other malicious and adviſed ſpeaking, ſuch treaſonable Intentions ſhould be expreſſed or declared; nothing of which can be found in this Caſe.

To which it is replied, 1. That it is granted, That neither inward Thoughts nor Intentions, unleſs ſome way expreſſed or declared, can be made criminal, and far leſs treaſonable; but on the other Hand, when the Law and Acts of Parliament does ſet down a ſpecifick palpable Deed, ſuch as riſing and continuing in Arms, which is viſibly an open Overt Act, and requires no more for the declaring of the Rebels Intention, ſave his ſo riſing and continuing in Arms, without having Her Majeſty's Authority interponed; what more can be required, either as to the Overt Act, ſince the Fact it ſelf is truly and openly ſuch; or as to the Certainty of the Parties Intention when the Law hath aſcertained it, viz. By the want of Authority; which is plainly the preſent Caſe? But 2. It is to be adverted, That our old Laws libelled upon, do indeed bear open and notour Rebellion: As likeways, The levying of War againſt the King and His Perſon and Government: But theſe Laws having been found very liable to the very Exceptions that the Defenders now make againſt the Indictment, when in the Year 1661 this came to be conſidered, and the Parliament judged fit to aſcertain and define the Crime of Treaſon, ſo as every Man might moſt plainly underſtand it, and that there could be no Place for any of the former Evaſions: The Act of Parliament condeſcends upon riſing and continuing in Arms, as the very open and Overt-Act requiſite to the Crime; and withal fixes the treaſonable Intention, upon this one Qualification, That the riſing and continuing in Arms, is without His Majeſty's Authority interponed; a Negative that proves it ſelf, and requires no other Evidence. 3. As to what the Act of Parliament, Car. II. Par. 1. Seſ. 2. Cap. 2. requires, That ſuch treaſonable Intentions ſhould be expreſſed and declared; theſe Words are plainly ſubjoined to a long Enumeration of ſeveral Points and kinds of Treaſon, and are certainly only to be applied to the Caſes wherein the Intention may be doubtful, but can never in any good Senſe or Reaſon be applied to ſuch Deeds as the Law it ſelf declares to be open and to import the Intention, ſuch as riſing and continuing in Arms, levying of War, or taking up Arms; where both the Deed and the Intention are manifeſt, and by Law declared and condemned. And in effect to alledge, where there is an open riſing in Arms, or a levying of War, or the Maintaining a Fort or Gariſon, That yet the Intention ſhould be deſiderate, where the Law requires no more to prove, but that it is done without Authority, is viſibly abſurd.

Secondly, Where it is objected, that albeit riſing and continuing in Arms without Her Majeſty's Authority be undoubtedly Treaſon, yet it muſt ſtill be qualified by ſome Circumſtances of Fact, Word or Writ, to infer the Intention; and to libel riſing in Arms is but general, and it ought to be cleared by ſome particular Fact and Deed libelled, to make the riſing Criminal. Thus the common Law ſays, Qui injuſſu principis bellum geſſerit, delectumve habuerit exercitum Comparaverit, &c. And our Act of Parliament, Q. Mary, explains the Matter, viz. That no Man raiſe Bands of Men of Weir on Horſe or Foot, with Piſtols and other bellical Arms, for daily or monthly Wages, without ſpecial Licenſe, &c.

To all which it is anſwered, That it is granted by the Defenders, that riſing and continuing in Arms, if duly qualified to be againſt Her Majeſty, is undoubtedly Treaſon: But then is it not as evident, that all the Qualification that the Act of Parliament requires, is, that the ſame be done without Her Majeſty's Authority? So that where the Qualification is ſo plainly defined, to require any farther, is to impoſe on the Law. It's true, that the Act Queen Mary, ſpeaks of raiſing of Bands of Men of Weir, and keeping them under Pay; and the Common Law may alſo have ſomething of that Nature. But if the Act of Parliament 1661, thought fit ſo far to ſecure the Prerogative, as to cut ſhort and forbid all riſing in Arms without Her Majeſty's Authority, under the Pain of Treaſon, is not this plain Law, which the Defenders could neither miſken, nor ought to have tranſgreſſed?

The Caſe of Aſſint is much inſiſted in, That it was not found to be a treaſonable Riſing, unleſs there had been more than an Hundred Men conveened, and muſtered under Colours and Pay. But 1. A Practick cannot change the Law. 2. The Reaſon of that Practick is manifeſt, viz. That Aſſints Convocation was covered with another Colour and Pretext, and was certainly not againſt the Government; and therefore the ſaid Qualifications were required, which doth no ways hold in this Caſe.

For to deal plainly, and to cut off all the Defenders groundleſs Pretexts, that they were only innocently convened, that they had no Arms, but ſuch as are ordinary and allowed to Gentlemen in their Travelling; that they were only a ſmall Number of Friends and Neighbours for their Diverſion and Recreation: That they had no Correſpondence with the Invaders, tho' their meeting and travelling together happened about that Time: And laſtly, that if they ſhould be overtaken on the Fact and Deed libelled againſt them, none could be in Safety to travel with Arms, even in the ſmalleſt Company.

To all this it is anſwered, 1. For all that the Defenders have alledged or can alledge for Excuſe, yet their meeting and marching in Arms, at the Time and Manner that they did, is generally under this Prejugee by all that ever heard it, that it was at leaſt the Height of Folly, and had the worſt of Appearances.

But 2. If the Defenders would have the Deed to be conſidered with all its Circumſtances, it is not declined. Now as to the Deed it ſelf, it is open and palpable, viz. riſing and continuing in Arms. 2. It has all the Qualification that Law requires to make it criminal, viz. That it was without Her Majeſty's Authority being interponed. But 3. Admit of all the Circumſtances that the Defenders can alledge for alleviating, are they not only bare Suppoſition and Queſtion? What if they meet by Rencounter? What if they met for Diverſion? Are not ſuch Meetings ordinary? And what was acted by them againſt the Government? All which do not import ſo much as one poſitive colourable Excuſe. Whereas to conſider the Deed certainly condemned in Law on the other ſide with its undeniable Circumſtances, viz. That the Defenders left their own Houſes, having no juſt Occaſion to invite them abroad: That they met in ſuch a Company as perhaps all of them never met before; that they met well mounted, and with Swords and Piſtols of all ſorts, better appointed than moſt Men that go to War; that they were thus well mounted and armed, beyond what the Law and Act of Parliament 1693, allows to Men of their Faſhion, there being none of them qualified to the Government; that all this happened when the Invaſion was generally known and juſt upon our Coaſt: That they marched backward and forward for ſeveral Days and Nights, as it were hovering in expectation of what they look'd after: That they did not at all diſſolve and go home, until their Hope of the Invaſion was loſt; and that ſince ſeveral of them have abſconded. Can any Man lay and reflect upon theſe Things together, but he muſt ſay, That beſides their being clearly guilty in the Terms of Law, as having riſen and continued in Arms without Her Majeſty's Authority, which in the Conſtruction of Law, is to levy War againſt Her Majeſty, their Intention was as treaſonable as the Law preſumes; ſo that upon the whole, this Judgment may be both righteouſly and ſafely paſs'd in this Matter, viz. That their riſing and continuing in Arms at the Time and in the Manner, and with the other Circumſtances libelled, without Her Majeſty's Authority firſt interponed, was Treaſon, unleſs they could exculpate, by at leaſt ſome colourable or probable Pretext, which they never can prove, or have ſo much as alledged.

Nor could a Judgment of this Nature ſo clearly founded, be of the leaſt ill Conſequence or Inconvenience, ſince every ordinary Meeting bears its own Excuſe; nor can indeed a lawful Meeting of this Sort be found without Excuſe. And further, it would ſecure the Government according to the true Intention of the Law, againſt all ſuſpicious and evil Deſigns and Attempts in Time coming. The

The Defenders object, That the Indictment doth not libel relevantly, as to the Point of Correſpondence with the Invaders; which ſhould be qualified by a Condeſcendance on the particular Acts of Correſpondence; and, as the Common Law expreſſes it, That Hoſtibus nuncium literaſve miſerunt, ſignumve dederunt, feceruntque dolo malo quo hoſtes conſilio juventur.

To which it is anſwer'd; If Correſpondence with Invaders had been the principal Crime libelled, the Defenders might have contended for ſuch a Condeſcendance quo modo they correſponded: But when the Correſpondence is only libelled, viz. an open and real Correſpondence, by their riſing at the ſame Time in Arms without Authority, that a Foreign Enemy was actually invading: This real Correſpondence, or this Correſpondence in re ipſa, is more than ſufficient to make out the Preſumption of Law; viz. That their Riſing and Continuing in Arms without Authority, was plainly againſt Authority. If at the Time of the Invaſion, ſome Hundreds of diſaffected Perſons had got together in Arms; would it have been doubted, but that their getting together at that Time in Arms, without Her Majeſties Authority, was really to correſpond with the Invaders, and to countenance and encourage them in their Invaſion. If then all the Difference be, that the Defenders did convene in a ſmaller Number; it only remains to be conſider'd, That the Act of Parliament doth expreſly declare againſt any Number, their Riſing and Continuing in Arms without Authority; and that the ſame is Treaſonable; which fully reaches the Number libelled.

As to what is added, of their being ſo ſmall a Number, and only arm'd in the ordinary manner accuſtomed by Gentlemen Travellers; it is already anſwer'd, and withal it is certain, that the greateſt Miſchiefs may have their Riſe from ſmall Beginnings. And as for the Defenders, they were very early in their Appearance, and viſibly did what in them lay, both to encourage the Invaders, and to raiſe an Inſurrection in the Country: And it was only the Goodneſs of GOD, and Her Majeſties vigilant Conduct, that cut off both their further Hopes, and the increaſing of their Numbers; which might have been infallibly expected, if the Invaſion had ſucceeded.

The Defenders take notice of that Part of the Indictment, which alledges, That they did openly drink the good Health of their Maſter, who could be none elſe but the Pretender; which they alledge is no ways relevant to infer the Concluſion of the Libel.

To which it is anſwer'd, That the foreſaid Drinking having been only mention'd in the Libel, for a further Illuſtration of the Defenders Intentions, it is granted, that per ſe it is not relevant to infer a Crime. But, 2. Being join'd with the other Circumſtances above-mention'd, even in its doubtful Senſe, it cannot be deny'd to import a further Diſcovery of theſe Gentlemens Intentions, in appearing and continuing in Arms without Authority; which (in effect) is the principal Crime, ſufficiently declar'd by the Act of Parliament it ſelf, tho' it were not adminiculate by this and the other Circumſtances above-mention'd.

The Defenders go on to reſume and anſwer the Charge brought againſt them; but the whole of the Matter being above abundantly cleared, it may ſuffice to notice, that they ſtill inſiſt, That the Riſing in Arms libelled without Authority, is but general, and ſo could not infer the Crime of Treaſon, unleſs more particularly qualified: Whereas it is certain, that the Riſing in Arms is a ſpecifick Act; and of the which, if libelled circumſtantiately as to Time and Place, as it here is, makes a moſt particular Libel: And for qualifying the Intention of the Act, and of the Riſers, all that the Law requires, is, That the Riſing and Continuing in Arms, be without Her Majeſties Authority firſt interponed; which, in the Conſtruction of Law, is to levy War againſt Her Majeſty.

The Defenders alledge, That to libel Riſing in Arms in general, is no better than to libel Murder in general: But if Murder be libelled circumſtantiately, as to the Perſon murder'd, and the Time and Place; the Libel is no doubt particular and relevant, without any further Qualification. What then ſhould hinder, why Riſing and continuing in Arms, circumſtantiately libelled as to Time and Place, and plainly qualified as the Law requires, (viz. without Her Majeſties Authority) ſhould not alſo be a particular and relevant Libel of Treaſon?

But the Defenders ſay, That by ſuch a Libel they are deprived of the Benefit of Exculpation. But this is wholly groundleſs; it having been often ſaid, That if the Defenders can but qualify any probable Pretext for their Riſing and Continuing in Arms without Authority, to take off the Preſumption of the Law, it ſhould be admitted. But when they can qualify no Pretext, nor can aſſign the leaſt probable Cauſe for their Riſing and Continuing in Arms as they did, except it was to countenance Invaders, or to raiſe Inſurrection within the Country; how is it poſſible, that this their Riſing in Arms without Authority, as is libelled, ſhould not be Treaſon? Nor is there any Thing here left to the Judgment of the Aſſize, ſave moſt plain and palpable Matter of Fact; viz. That the Defenders roſe, and continued in Arms; which being qualified as the Law requires, viz. That it was without Her Majeſties Authority, it inevitably preſumes the Treaſonable Intention; which being further joined with the Circumſtances mentioned in the Indictment, cannot but evince to all Men, That the Riſing, and Continuing in Arms without Authority, and in the Circumſtances above-mention'd, was an Overt-Act of Rebellion; ſpecially when nothing is, or can be adduced, to give it a more probable Interpretation.

The Defenders inſiſt much, That they were not verſantes in Illicito; That they only went out for Diverſion, or Buſineſs, with their ordinary Arms and Servants: But what can be more Illicitum, than to riſe and continue in Arms without Authority; the very Deed forbid by the Law as Treaſonable? And what need of any further Qualifications of their Intention, ſince the Law makes without Authority to be ſufficient? And the Indictment doth alſo ſuperadd moſt pregnant Circumſtances, to verify their ill Intention; which are not ſo much as offered to be cavilled, except by, What if this? or, What if that? which plainly ſignify nothing.

The Defenders ſeem to inſinuate, That they did not ſo much as know there was an invading Fleet upon our Coaſt: But it is ſo notour, that at that Time the Invaſion was univerſally known, and likewiſe ſignified by a Proclamation; That this Alledgeance is manifeſtly diſingenuous.

But the Defenders further alledge, (Eſto) That Riſing and Continuing in Arms, as they did, was ſuſpicious; yet Suſpicions cannot found a Libel of Treaſon. But the Defenders advert not, That it is not Matter of Suſpicion that is objected, far leſs their Travelling with their ordinary Horſes, Arms and Equipage, as formerly they were wont; but plainly, That at ſuch a Time, when the Country was openly invaded by a Foreign and moſt formidable Enemy, they, being never qualified to the Government, ſhould have run together in Arms, without Her Majeſties Authority; which is all that the Law requires to make them guilty; and which in effect, with the other Circumſtances libelled, declares their Treaſonable Intentions to a Demonſtration.

The Defenders ſay, That their Caſe differs from Caldwal's: But albeit they may vary in ſome Circumſtances, yet it's certain, that as to the main, Caldwal and his Complices were found guilty of Treaſon, only for their raiſing of about Thirty or Forty, and continuing in Arms without Authority, when there was another Party in the Country engaged in an open Inſurrection. So that the Defenders having in like manner riſen and continued in Arms without Authority, when there was a far more dreadful Enemy imminent upon our Coaſt, cannot but fall under the ſame Conſtruction. And that Caldwal's Proceſs and Doom was afterwards reduced, ſignifies nothing; ſince it was reduced for Reaſons wholly different and alien from the Caſe in Hand, and which are ſo well known, as they need not be repeated.

The Defenders do alſo endeavour to take off what was alledged from the Act of Parliament, That even the Attempt and Conatus in this Caſe is condemned, by telling us, That this Conatus doth alſo require an Overt-Act. But Eſto, it be ſo; what more Overt-Act can be required, than open Riſing in Arms? And what doubt can there be of the Intention and Deſign, when both the Act of Parliament, and the other Circumſtances of the Deed, do ſo fully clear it? And therefore it is in vain to notice either Caldwel's Caſe, wherein there was indeed no Sentence; or yet Balmerino's Caſe, where the Overt-Act was thought to be doubtful; when the Riſing and Continuing in Arms, is, in this Caſe, an Act both Overt in it ſelf, and expreſly defined to be ſuch by the Act of Parliament.

The Defenders are at ſome Pains to make it believed, That the Libelling of Art and Part cannot ſuſtain this Indictment. But, 1. The Advocate adheres to his Indictment, as libelled and qualified with Art and Part. 2. Tho' Art and Part be libelled, and the Act of Parliament makes it a Supplement for Relevancy in all Caſes; yet Her Majeſties Advocate finds no Neceſſity to enter further into that Debate, than to adhere as above; ſeeing that his Indictment is founded on clear Law, and that he as clearly ſubſumes in the Terms of Law; viz. The Riſing and Continuing in Arms without Her Majeſties Authority interpoſed; the Levying of War, and taking up Arms againſt Her Majeſty, and open Correſponding with Her Majeſties Enemies and our Invaders; and that not only by the above-mention'd real Correſpondence, but even by enticing them other ways to invade; as ſhall be proven, if needful. All which are too manifeſtly Acts and Deeds of Rebellion, to need the conſtructive Support of Art and Part, further than that Actor, Art and Part, are perpetually connected together.

And therefore, upon the whole, ſince, as hath been ſaid, the Country was (at the Time libelled) in the moſt imminent Hazard of a moſt deſtructive Invaſion; and that at that very Time, the Defenders, to the great Surprize and Aſtoniſhment of all Her Majeſties good Subjects, did flee out in Arms, and convene and march, and troop together in Arms, without Her Majeſties Authority, which in Law is ſufficient; and that with the other aggravating and moſt concludent Circumſtances above libelled, which were not offer'd to be taken off with any rational or probable Pretext: It appears to be without Queſtion, That the Defenders fall under all the Concluſions of the Libel, and ought to be made liable in the Pains thereof.

CROMERTIE.

Daniel Morriſon, Servant to the Laird of Keir, Aged twenty three Years or thereby, unmarried, ſolemnly Sworn, purged of partial Counſel, examined and interogate, Depones, That about the Time libelled, he ſaw the Pannels, with ſome others, to the Number of 10 or 12 Horſe at Dunkeld, and at Appinadove, and at the Head of Lochearn; and that they had Swords and Piſtols, but no other Weapons that he ſaw; Depones, That the firſt Place he ſaw the Pannels was at a Place near the Bridge of Turk, and went then to Appinadove, and from that to Dunkeld; Depones that he heard, That there was one Campbell who commanded a Party at the Bridge of Allan; and that Keir being informed thereof, and that they deſigned to apprehend him and his Horſes, occaſioned his going away with his Horſes; and that Touch was with him that Morning, and went along with him to Dunkeld, and that they met Carden and Kippendavie at the Bridge of Turk; and that Newtown came there that Night, and from thence went all to Lochearn; Depones, he heard them ſpeak nothing of the pretended Prince of Wales, or of the Invaſion then intended; and that Keir, Carden and Touch, came home together from Dunkeld; and that to the beſt of the Deponent's Memory, it was on the 23*d* of March that they were at Dunkeld, and that he knows not what was the Occaſion of their parting; and Depones, That it was on the Seventeenth of that Month that they went from Keir; and Depones, That Carden and Newtown had neither Sword nor Piſtol that he ſaw, and that none of the Servants had either Piſtol or Sword, except Keir's Man, who had a Sword. And Depones, that Touch's Brother, who was in Company, had neither Sword nor Piſtol that the Deponent ſaw; Cauſa ſcientiæ patet. And this is the Truth as he ſhall anſwer to GOD. And Depones he cannot Write. Sic ſubſcribitur.

Cromertie.

Peter Wilſon, Servant to the Laird of Keir, Aged Thirty Years, or thereby, ſolutus, ſolemnly Sworn, purged of partial Counſel, Examined upon the Libel, and Interrogate, Depones, That about the Seventeenth Day of March laſt, Keir, accompanied with Touch and his Brother, and others, to the Number of five Horſe, came from Keir, and were that Night at the Bridge of Turk, where Carden and Kippendavie met them, and went all of them next Day to Appinadove, where one Mr. Hay met them: Depones, That the Occaſion of Keir's going from his Houſe, was the Apprehenſions he had of being ſeiz'd with his Horſes, by the Forces then lying at Stirling, as he heard. Being Interrogate, if he heard the Pannel ſpeak any thing concerning the Government, the Prince of Wales, and the intended Invaſion, depones Negative; but that they heard, that Admiral Bing had chaſed the French Fleet off the Coaſt, before they went from Keir; depones, That ſeverals of them had Swords and Piſtols, but cannot be poſitive whether Carden and Touch's Brother had any or not; or if any of the other Servants had any, except the Deponent himſelf, and that they had no other Weapons that he ſaw; and depones, that it was at Lochearn, and not at Appinadove, that Mr. Hay met them. Cauſa ſcientiæ patet: And this is the Truth as he ſhall anſwer to GOD. Sic ſubſcribitur.

Curia legitime affirmata.

The ſaid Day, the Perſons who paſs'd upon the Aſſize of James Stirling of Keir, and others, returned their Verdict in Preſence of the ſaid Lords, whereof the Tenor follows.

Edinburgh 22d. November, 1708.

The above Aſſize having incloſed, did choiſe Sir James Fleeming of Rathobyres their Chancellor, and Gilbert Campbell Merchant in Edinburgh, to be their Clerk. And having conſidered the Indictment purſued at her Majeſties Advocate's Inſtance, as having ſpecial Warrant from Her Majeſty for that Effect, againſt James Stirling of Keir, Archibald Seton of Touch, Archibald Stirling of Carden, Charles Stirling of Kippendavie, and Patrick Edmonſton of Newton; for the Crime of Treaſon and Leſe-Majeſty, with the Debate thereupon, the Lords Juſtice-General, Juſtice-Clerk, and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary their Interloquitor pronounced thereupon, and Depoſitions of the Witneſſes adduced, They all in one Voice Find the Libel not proven. In Witneſs whereof (written by the ſaid Gilbert Campbell) Theſe Preſents are ſubſcribed by our ſaid Chancellor and Clerk, Day and Date aforeſaid. Sic ſubſcribitur, James Fleeming.

Gilb. Campbell, Clerk.

After Opening and Reading of which Verdict of Aſſize, the Lords Juſtice-General, Juſtice-Clerk, and Commiſſioners of Juſticiary, Abſoilzied the Pannels, and diſmiſſed them from the Bar: Whereupon they took Inſtruments. Sic ſubſcribitur.

The

The Tryal of Dr. HENRY SACHEVERELL. Begun in Weſtminſter-Hall on Monday, February 27, 17$^{09}_{10}$.

The Firſt Day.

ABOUT Eleven of the Clock the Lords came from their own Houſe into the Court erected in Weſtminſter-Hall, for the Tryal of Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, in the manner following.

The Lord Chancellor's Gentlemen Attendants, two and two.

The Clerks of the Houſe of Lords, with the Two Clerks of the Crown in the Courts of Chancery and King's-Bench.

The Maſters in Chancery, two and two.

Then the Judges.

The Peers Eldeſt Sons, and Peers Minors, two and two.

The Yeoman-Uſher of the Houſe.

The Gentleman-Uſher of the Black Rod.

Then the Peers, two and two, beginning with the youngeſt Barons.

The Serjeant at Arms with his Macé.

Then one of the Heralds.

Then the Lord Chancellor alone.

The Lords being Seated in the Place for that Purpoſe prepared in Weſtminſter; and the Commons in a Committee of the whole Houſe being in the Seats prepared for them, and the Managers for the Houſe being at their Lordſhips Bar, the Serjeant at Arms made Proclamations as follow.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez! Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez! Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, ſave thee and thy Bail, or thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

Then Doctor Henry Sacheverell came to the Bar and kneeled; his Council, viz. Sir Simon Harcourt, Mr. Dodd, Mr. Phipps, Mr. Dee, and Dr. Henchman, ſtanding near him at the Bar; and riſing again by Direction of the Lord Chancellor, the Serjeant at Arms again made Proclamation as follows.

Serjeant at Arms. Oyez! Whereas a Charge of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors has been Exhibited by the Houſe of Commons, in the Name of themſelves and all the Commons of Great Britain, againſt Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity; all Perſons concerned are to take Notice that he now ſtands upon his Tryal, and they may come forth, in order to make good the ſaid Charge.

Lord Chancellor. Doctor Sacheverell, it is needleſs to give you any Directions concerning your Behaviour during the Time of your Tryal, or the ordering your Defence, becauſe the Lords have not only allowed, but aſſigned you the Council you deſired, ſome both of the Civil and Common Law, who will be well able to direct and adviſe you, not only in the Subſtance, but Form of your Defence. The Lords have alſo made an Order for ſummoning all ſuch Witneſſes as you have propounded to appear for you. And that you might be the better able to provide for your Defence, you have had your Liberty on the firſt Application for it, and giving Security for your Appearance; you have alſo had all the Time you thought fit to deſire, in order to prepare for your Defence: So that you ought ever to remember, that their Lordſhips have uſed towards you all the Indulgence you could reaſonably expect.

Lord Cowper.

Then the Clerk, by Direction of the Lord Chancellor, read the Articles of Impeachment, Doctor Sacheverell's Anſwer, and the Replication of the Houſe of Commons, as follows.

ARTICLES Exhibited by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes in Parliament aſſembled, in the Name of Themſelves and of all the Commons of Great Britain, againſt Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, in Maintenance of their Impeachment againſt him for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

WHereas his late Majeſty King William the Third, then Prince of Orange, did with an armed Force undertake a glorious Enterprize, for delivering this Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power; and divers Subjects of this Realm, well affected to their Country, join'd with and aſſiſted his late Majeſty in the ſaid Enterprize: And it having pleas'd Almighty God to Crown the ſame with Succeſs, the late happy Revolution did take Effect and was Eſtabliſh'd. And whereas the ſaid Glorious Enterprize is approv'd by ſeveral Acts of Parliament, and amongſt others, by an Act made in the firſt Year of the Reign of King William and Queen Mary, Entituled, An Act, declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown; and alſo by one other Act made in the ſame Year, Entituled, An Act for preventing Vexatious Suits, againſt ſuch as acted in order to the bringing in their Majeſties, or for their Service; and alſo by one other Act made in the ſame Year, Entituled, An Act for appropriating certain Duties for paying the States General of the United Provinces, their Charges for his Majeſty's Expedition into this Kingdom, and for other Uſes: And the Actings of the ſaid well-affected Subjects in Aid and Purſuance of the ſaid Enterprize, are alſo declared to have been Neceſſary, and that the ſame ought to be Juſtified. And whereas the happy and bleſſed Conſequences of the ſaid Revolution are, the Enjoyment of the Light of God's true Religion Eſtabliſh'd among us, and of the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom; the Uniting Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects in Intereſt and Affection, by a legal Indulgence or Toleration granted to Diſſenters; the Preſervation of Her Majeſty's Sacred Perſon; the many and continual Benefits ariſing from Her Majeſty's Wiſe and Glorious Adminiſtration, and the Proſpect of Happineſs for future Ages, by the Settlement of the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, and the Union of the Two Kingdoms. And whereas the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament Aſſembled, did, by their Addreſs of the Seventeenth of December, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred and five, lay before Her Majeſty the following Vote or Reſolution, viz. That the Church of England, as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, which was reſcued from the extremeſt Danger by King William the Third, of Glorious Memory, is now, by God's Bleſſing, under the Happy Reign of Her Majeſty, in a moſt ſafe and flouriſhing Condition; and that whoever goes about to Suggeſt or Inſinuate that the Church is in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, is an Enemy to the Queen, the Church, and the Kingdom: And by their ſaid Addreſs, did humbly beſeech Her Majeſty to take Effectual Meaſures for making the ſaid Vote or Reſolution Publick, and alſo for Puniſhing the Authors and Spreaders of ſuch Seditious and Scandalous Reports; and on the twentieth Day of the ſame December, Her Majeſty was pleaſed to Iſſue Her Royal Proclamation accordingly. Yet nevertheleſs the ſaid Henry Sacheverell Preach'd a Sermon at the Aſſizes held at Derby, Auguſt the fifteenth, in the Year of our Lord One thouſand ſeven hundred and nine, and afterwards publiſh'd the ſame in Print, with a Dedication thereof; and the ſaid Henry Sacheverell alſo Preach'd a Sermon at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, before the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of London, on the Fifth Day of November laſt, being the Anniverſary Thankſgiving to Almighty God, for the Deliverance from the Gunpowder-Treaſon, and for beginning the late Happy Revolution, by giving his late Majeſty a ſafe Arrival here, and for compleating the ſame, by making all Oppoſition fall before him, 'till he became our King and Governor; which ſaid Sermon, he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell afterwards likewiſe publiſh'd in Print, with a Dedication thereof to Sir Samuel Garrard, Baronet, Lord Mayor of the City of London; and with a Wicked, Malicious, and Seditious Intention to Undermine and Subvert Her Majeſty's Government and the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law Eſtabliſh'd; to Defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; to Aſperſe the Memory of his late Majeſty; to Traduce and Condemn the late Happy Revolution; to Contradict and Arraign the Reſolutions of both Houſes of Parliament; to Create Jealouſies and Diviſions amongſt Her Majeſty's Subjects; and to Incite them to Sedition and Rebellion.

ARTICLE I.

He, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in his ſaid Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, doth ſuggeſt and maintain, That the neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the ſaid Happy Revolution, were Odious and Unjuſtifiable: That His late Majeſty, in His Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and that to impute Reſiſtance to the ſaid Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty, and the ſaid Revolution.

ARTICLE II.

He, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in his ſaid Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, doth ſuggeſt and maintain, That the aforeſaid Toleration, granted by Law, is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it Unwarrantable: And aſſerts, That he is a Falſe Brother with relation to God, Religion, or the Church, who defends Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience: That Queen Elizabeth was deluded by Archbiſhop Grindall, whom he ſcurrilouſly calls a Falſe Son of the Church, and a Perfidious Prelate, to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline: And that it is the Duty of Superior Paſtors to thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons intitled to the Benefit of the ſaid Toleration; and inſolently dares, or defies, any Power on Earth to Reverſe ſuch Sentences.

ARTICLE III.

He, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in his ſaid Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, doth Falſely and Seditiouſly Suggeſt and Aſſert, That the Church of England is in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and in order to Arraign and Blacken the ſaid Vote or Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, approv'd by Her Majeſty as aforeſaid, he, in oppoſition thereto, doth ſuggeſt the Church to be in Danger; and, as a Parallel, mentions a Vote, That the Perſon of King Charles the Firſt was voted to be out of Danger at the ſame time that his Murderers were conſpiring his Death; thereby wickedly and maliciouſly inſinuating, That the Members of both Houſes, who paſs'd the ſaid Vote, were then conſpiring the Ruin of the Church.

ARTICLE IV.

He, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in his ſaid Sermons and Books, doth falſely and maliciouſly ſuggeſt, That Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution: And that there are Men of Characters and Stations in Church and State who are Falſe Brethren, and do themſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and do encourage, and put it in the Power of others, who are profeſſed Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment; and chargeth Her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under Her, both in Church and State, with a general Male-Adminiſtration: And as a publick Incendiary, he perſuades Her Majeſty's Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Factions and Parties; inſtills groundleſs Jealouſies, foments deſtructive Diviſions among them, and excites and ſtirs them up to Arms and Violence: And that his ſaid Malicious and Seditious Suggeſtions may make the ſtronger Impreſſion upon the Minds of Her Majeſty's Subjects, he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth wickedly wreſt and pervert divers Texts and Paſſages of Holy Scripture.

All which Crimes and Miſdemeanors the Commons are ready to prove, not only by the general Scope of the ſame Sermons or Books, but likewiſe by ſeveral Clauſes, Sentences and Expreſſions in the ſaid Sermons or Books contain'd; and that he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, by Preaching the Sermons, and Publiſhing the Books aforeſaid, did abuſe his Holy Function, and hath moſt grievouſly offended againſt the Peace of Her Majeſty, Her Crown and Dignity, the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, the Laws and Statutes of this Kingdom, and the Proſperity and good Government of the ſame. And the ſaid Commons, by Proteſtation, ſaving to themſelves the Liberty of Exhibiting at any time hereafter, any other Article or Impeachment againſt the ſaid Henry Sacheverell; and alſo of replying to his Anſwers, or any of them, and of offering Proofs of all the Premiſes, or of any of them, and of any other other Article or Impeachment that ſhall be Exhibited by them, as the Caſe according to Courſe of Parliament ſhall require, do pray that he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell be put to Anſwer to all and every the Premiſes; and that ſuch Proceeding, Examination, Tryal, Judgment and Exemplary Puniſhment may be thereupon had and executed, as is agreeable to Law and Juſtice.

The ANSWER of Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, to the ARTICLES Exhibited by the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled, in the Name of themſelves and of all the Commons of Great Britain, in Maintenance of their Impeachment againſt him for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

THE ſaid Henry Sacheverell, ſaving to himſelf all Advantages of Exception to the ſaid Articles for the Generality, Uncertainty and Inſufficiency thereof, and of not being prejudiced by any Words or want of Form in this his Anſwer, admits, That at the Requeſt of George Sacheverell, Eſquire, High Sheriff of the County of Derby, he Preached a Sermon at the Aſſizes held for that County, on the Fifteenth Day of Auguſt, One thouſand ſeven hundred and nine; and that at the Deſire of the Right Honourable Sir Samuel Garrard, Baronet, Lord Mayor of the City of London, he alſo Preached a Sermon at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, before the ſaid Lord Mayor, and the Aldermen and Citizens of London, on the Fifth Day of November laſt; and that he cauſed the ſaid Sermons to be Printed: But denies that he Preached, or cauſed the ſame to be Printed or Publiſhed, with any ſuch wicked, malicious or ſeditious Intent, as in the Preamble of the ſaid Articles is affirmed; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell having been induced to Print the Sermon he Preach'd at Derby, at the Requeſt of the Gentlemen of the Grand Jury for that County, to whom he humbly preſumed to Dedicate the ſame, as the moſt publick Acknowledgment he was capable of making, for the peculiar Honour he had receiv'd by their publick Approbation of that Sermon. And the ſaid Lord Mayor having been pleaſed to expreſs his good Liking of the ſaid Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, at his Requeſt, caus'd the ſame to be Printed, with a Dedication thereof to him. And for Anſwer to the ſaid Articles, humbly ſaith, Anſwer to the Firſt Article.

To the Firſt Part of the Firſt Article, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell denies, That, in his ſaid Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, he doth ſuggeſt and maintain, that the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the happy Revolution were Odious and Unjuſtifiable. Nor doth he in any Part of that Sermon affirm any thing concerning the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Happy Revolution. The ſaid Henry Sacheverell is ſo far from Reflecting on His late Majeſty, or the Happy Revolution, that he endeavours, in that Sermon, to clear the Revolution and his late Majeſty from the black and odious Colours which their greateſt Enemies had endeavoured to caſt upon both.

And as to that Part of the ſaid Article, whereby the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is charged with ſuggeſting and maintaining, that his late Majeſty, in his Declaration, diſclaimed the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth acknowledge himſelf to have made ſuch Suggeſtion; and declares, that he made it not in Diſhonour, but in Vindication, of his ſaid Majeſty. The Reſiſtance the ſaid Henry Sacheverell repreſents the late King to have diſclaimed, being ſuch a Reſiſtance as tended to the Conqueſt of this Realm, as plainly appears from that Part of his late Majeſty's Declaration which is referr'd to, and verbatim ſet forth at the Bottom of the ſame Page in which he mentions his late Majeſty's declaiming any ſuch Imputation.

Whether the ſaid Henry Sacheverell was miſtaken or not, in expreſſing himſelf as if the late King had diſclaimed any Imputation of Reſiſtance, when he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell meant thereby, that the late King diſclaimed the Imputation of a Deſign of Conqueſt, he humbly conceives, ſuch a Suggeſtion by him, plainly deſign'd for the Honour of the late King, cannot in any reaſonable Conſtruction be thought a Reflection on his ſaid Majeſty, or deemed any Crime or Miſdemeanor.

For the further Juſtification of what the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaid in reference to his late Majeſty's having diſclaimed any the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell humbly obſerves, That in his late Majeſty's Declaration, the following Paſſages are contain'd: We have thought fit to go over to England, and to carry over with us a Force, ſufficient, by the Bleſſing of God, to defend our ſelves from the Violence of Evil Counſellors.----- We think fit to declare, that this our Expedition is intended for no other Deſign but to have a Free and Lawful Parliament Aſſembled.

As to the laſt Charge in the ſaid Article, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell denies, that he doth in his ſaid Sermon ſuggeſt and maintain, that to impute Reſiſtance to the ſaid Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the ſaid Revolution; the Perſons whom the ſaid Henry Sacheverell in his Sermon deſcribes, as caſting Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution, are not thoſe who impute Reſiſtance to the late Revolution, of whom the ſaid Henry Sacheverell affirms nothing, but thoſe new Preachers and new Politicians, who teach, in Contradiction to both Goſpel and the Laws, that the People have the Power veſted in them, the Fountain and Original of it, to cancel their Allegiance at their Pleaſure, and to call their Sovereign to Account for High-Treaſon againſt his Subjects; nay, and to Dethrone and Murder him for a Criminal, as they did the Royal Martyr by a Judiciary Sentence; who are Maintainers of Antimonarchical Schemes, and of ſuch damnable Poſitions as are, by the Laws of Church and State, condemned for Rebellion and High-Treaſon; and who urge the Revolution in Defence of ſuch Principles. Unleſs therefore thoſe who impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, be the ſame with thoſe new Preachers and new Politicians above ſpecified, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell affirms nothing concerning them.

The ſaid Henry Sacheverell, upon the ſtricteſt Search into his ſaid Sermon Preached at St. Paul's, doth not find that he hath given any the leaſt colourable Pretence for the Accuſation exhibited againſt him in this firſt Article, but barely by his Aſſerting the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power upon any Pretence whatſoever; for which Aſſertion, he humbly conceives he hath the Authority of the Church of England, which in divers Paſſages of her Homilies, too large and too numerous to be here ſpecified, but by the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ready to be produced, hath taught and inculcated this Doctrine, as founded on the Word of God; particularly in the Second Part of the Sermon of Obedience, contained in the former Book of Homilies, ſet forth in the Time of King Edward the Sixth, where are theſe Words: Here good People, let us all mark diligently: It is not lawful for Inferiors and Subjects in any Caſe to reſiſt and ſtand againſt the Superior Powers; for St. Paul's Words be plain, that whoſoever withſtandeth, ſhall get to themſelves Damnation; for whoſoever withſtandeth, withſtandeth the Ordinance of God.

Which ſaid Book of Homilies is affirmed in one of the Thirty Nine Articles of Religion, which concern the Confeſſion of the true Chriſtian Faith, to contain a godly and wholſome Doctrine, and is order'd to be read in Churches, by the Miniſters diligently and diſtinctly, that they may be underſtanded of the People. And the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in further Maintenance of the ſaid Doctrine and Poſition, contained in the Books of Homilies, and of the Authority of thoſe Books, ſaith, That by an Act of Parliament made in the Thirteenth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, Entituled, An Act for the Miniſters of the Church to be of ſound Religion, 'Tis Enacted, That no Perſon ſhould thereafter be admitted to any Benefice with Cure, except he ſhould firſt have ſubſcribed the ſaid Articles in the Preſence of the Ordinary, and publickly read the ſame in the Pariſh Church of that Benefice, with Declaration of his unfeigned Aſſent to the ſame. And that by an Act made in the Fifth Year of her preſent Majeſty's Reign, Entituled, An Act for ſecuring the Church of England as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, It was Enacted, That the ſaid Act made in the ſaid Thirteenth Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, ſhould remain and be in full Force for ever; and be inſerted in expreſs Terms in any Act which ſhould be made for ratifying the Union of the Two Kingdoms of England and Scotland; and therein declared to be an eſſential and fundamental Part thereof. And the ſaid Act was accordingly inſerted in expreſs Terms, in an Act for the Union of the Two Kingdoms; and thereby ratify'd, and declar'd to be an eſſential and fundamental Part thereof.

And the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth further humbly inſiſt, and is adviſ'd, that the aforeſaid Aſſertion is agreeable to, and warranted by, the Common Law of England, and divers Acts of Parliament now remaining in full force.

The ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth with all Humility aver the Illegality of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever to be the Doctrine of the Church of England, and to have been the general Opinion of our moſt Orthodox and Able Divines, from the Time of the Reformation to this Day: This Doctrine hath in the moſt ſolemn Manner been Taught in that Univerſity, whereof he hath been for more than Twenty Years a Member; this hath been often, with Publick Approbation of each Houſe of Parliament, Preached and Printed; and in Terms of greater Force than any uſed by the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, hath by the Right Reverend Fathers of our Church, Dead and Living, been avow'd and maintain'd.

And the ſaid Henry Sacheverell was the rather induc'd to Preach againſt the Doctrine of Reſiſtance of the Supreme Power upon the Fifth Day of November, becauſe on that Day the Church commemorates our Deliverance from the Traiterous Attempts of Rebellious Papiſts, and becauſe the Lawfulneſs of Reſiſting the Supreme Power was originally a Popiſh Doctrine; for which Reaſons, as he humbly conceives, the Rubrick of the Office appointed for that Day by her late Majeſty Queen Mary (of Bleſſed Memory) directs, That after the Creed, if there be no Sermon, ſhall be read one of the Six Homilies againſt Rebellion.

Whilſt therefore the Church of England as by Law Eſtabliſh'd is in a ſafe and flouriſhing Condition under Her Majeſty's happy Adminiſtration; whilſt Popiſh Tenets are by all good Proteſtants condemn'd and abhorr'd; whilſt the Laws of this Realm continue in their full Force and Vigor, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell humbly hopes, that a Dutiful Son of that Church, a ſincere Proteſtant, and a faithful Subject of Her Majeſty, ſhall not ſuffer for Aſſerting the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance of the Supreme Powers. But if this Doctrine be declared Erroneous, and it ſhould pleaſe God that he ſhould ſuffer for Aſſerting it, he truſts that God will enable him to ſhew his ſteady Belief of this Doctrine, by a meek and patient Reſignation to whatever ſhall befall him on that Account.

Anſwer to the Second Article.

To that Part of the Second Article, which charges, That he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth ſuggeſt and maintain, That the Toleration granted by Law is Unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it Unwarrantable; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That, upon the moſt diligent Enquiry, he hath not been able to inform himſelf, that a Toleration hath been granted by Law; but admits, that an Act did paſs in the firſt Year of King William and Queen Mary, Entituled, An Act for Exempting their Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects Diſſenting from the Church of England from the Penalties of certain Laws. Which Exemption the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth not any where maintain or ſuggeſt to be unreaſonable, or that the Allowance of it is unwarrantable; but hop'd, that he had prevented any ſuch Miſapprehenſion, by declaring his ſincere Meaning in theſe Words, contain'd in his Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's;---- I would not be here miſunderſtood, as if I intended to caſt the leaſt Invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence which the Government hath condeſcended to give them, which I am ſure all thoſe who wiſh well to our Church, are ready to grant to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous; let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law has preſcribed them.

If there be any other Expreſſions concerning Toleration, which may ſeem to carry a dubious Senſe in any other Parts of his Sermon, he hopes that they will not be applied to the Exemption granted by Law, but will be interpreted agreeably to his avowed Approbation of that Law.

And to ſuch Part of the ſaid Second Article, as charges that he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell aſſerts, That he is a falſe Brother with relation to God, Religion, or the Church, who defends Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience; he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That he having ſo plainly declared himſelf in favour of the Exemption granted by Law, when he blames thoſe, who, upon all Occaſions, defend Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience, cannot be thought to reflect on the Defenders of that legal Exemption or Indulgence which he himſelf approves and defends: He doth indeed ſuggeſt it to be one Part of the Character of a falſe Brother, upon all occaſions to defend Toleration and Liberty

Liberty of Conſcience; and to excuſe the Separation, lay the Fault upon the true Sons of the Church, for carrying Matters too high. Which univerſal Defence of Toleration, and Excuſe of Separation, attended with the laying the Fault of ſuch Separation upon the true Sons of the Church, are by him jointly mentioned in one and the ſame Clauſe of the Sentence, and in one and the ſame Branch of the Character. So that his Reflection doth not extend to all who defend Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience, much leſs to thoſe who defend the Exemption granted by Law to Proteſtant Diſſenters; but to ſuch only, who at the ſame Time they defend univerſal Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience, do alſo excuſe the Separation, and lay the Fault thereof upon the true Sons of the Church, for carrying Matters too high. And theſe he did then, and ſtill doth, with all Humility, conceive to be juſtly blameable, and, if Members of this Church, to be falſe Brethren.

And as to that Part of the ſecond Article, whereby the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is charged with aſſerting, That Queen Elizabeth was deluded by Archbiſhop Grindall, to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline; he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, he humbly conceives he hath good Authority from the Hiſtories and Monuments of thoſe Times for ſuch Aſſertion; but whether he hath, or hath not, he humbly apprehends ſuch Aſſertion to be no Proof of his maintaining or ſuggeſting, That the Exemption of Proteſtant Subjects diſſenting from the Church of England from the Penalties of certain Laws, granted by an Act made in the firſt Year of the Reign of King William and Queen Mary, (which Exemption he ſuppoſes to be intended by the legal Indulgence or Toleration granted to Diſſenters, mentioned in the Preamble of the Articles, and by the Toleration granted by Law, mentioned in this ſecond Article) is unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable. For he is humbly of Opinion, that there is a wide and manifeſt Difference between a Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline, and an Exemption of Proteſtant Diſſenters from the Penalties of certain Laws; between a Toleration allowed meerly by the Regal Power, and an Exemption granted by Act of Parliament; which Exemption he is ſo far from thinking unreaſonable or unwarrantable, that from the bottom of his Heart he wiſheth it, under the ſame Reſtrictions and Limitations, extended to all Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects throughout the whole Kingdom of Great Britain.

And as to ſuch Part of the Second Article, whereby the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is charged with ſcurrilouſly calling the ſaid Archbiſhop Grindal a falſe Son of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell humbly hopes, that any harſh Expreſſions he hath uſed concerning that Prelate may be rather excuſed, becauſe the ſaid Archbiſhop having permitted Innovations to be obtruded on the Church, did thereby incur the high Diſpleaſure of ſo good and pious a Princeſs as Queen Elizabeth, by whoſe Order he was ſuſpended, and continued under ſuch Suſpenſion to the Day of his Death. However, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell preſumes, that no Words ſpoken of an Archbiſhop above one hundred and twenty Years ſince deceaſed, will, in Conſtruction of Law, amount to an high Crime and Miſdemeanor.

And as to ſuch Part of the Second Article, whereby the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is charged with maintaining, That it is the Duty of Superior Paſtors to thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons entituled to the Benefit of the ſaid Toleration; he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That he doth not maintain or ſuggeſt that it is the Duty of Superior Paſtors to thunder out Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons entituled to the Benefit of the Toleration; which Perſons, where he ſpeaks of ſuch Anathema's, are neither by him mentioned nor intended; but if the Expreſſions by him unapplied to any, muſt be determin'd to any one ſort of Perſons, he humbly conceives, that the Connection of his Diſcouſe will determine them to thoſe Schiſmatical and Factious Perſons, who take Permiſſion for Power, and advance Toleration immediately into an Eſtabliſhment; and ſuch Schiſmatical and Factious Perſons, he humbly apprehends, are not the Perſons entituled to the Benefit of the Act of Exemption, which was deſigned only to give ſome Eaſe to ſcrupulous Conſciences in the Exerciſe of their Religion.

And as to the laſt Part of the ſecond Article, whereby the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is charged with inſolently daring or defying any Power on Earth to reverſe ſuch Sentences; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That the Sentence which he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell dares any Power on Earth to reverſe, is ſuch, and ſuch only, as is ratified in Heaven; and ſuch Sentence he ſtill affirms to be by any earthly Power irreverſible; and hopes it will not be thought Inſolence in him to affirm, what he conceives would be Blaſphemy in any one to deny: And doth further acknowledge himſelf firmly to believe, that ſome Sentences pronounced by the Paſtors of the Church are ratify'd in Heaven; and that ſome Perſons exempted from Puniſhment by the particular Laws of the Land, may yet by the Laws of Chriſt be juſtly liable to ſuch Sentence; and that Schiſm, or a cauſeleſs Separation from a Church impoſing no ſinful Terms of Communion, is a Sin, which expoſes the Perſons guilty thereof to the Cenſures of the Church.

Anſwer to the Third Article.

As to ſo much of the Third Article, as charges the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, That he doth falſely and ſeditiouſly ſuggeſt and aſſert, that the Church of England is in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and that, in order to arraign and blacken the ſaid Vote and Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, approved by Her Majeſty, he, in oppoſition thereto, doth ſuggeſt the Church to be in Danger: The ſaid Henry Sacheverell denies that he hath either aſſerted or ſuggeſted the Church of England to be in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; but he doth freely acknowledge, that he hath in his Sermon ſuggeſted, That when National Sins are ripened up to a full Maturity, to call down Vengeance from Providence on a Church and Kingdom, debauched in Principles, and corrupted in Manners, and inſtead of the true Faith, Diſcipline and Worſhip, given over to all Licentiouſneſs both in Opinion and Practice, to all Senſuality, Hypocriſy, Lewdneſs and Atheiſm, then we (that is evidently) all the Members of ſuch a Church or Kingdom, are in Danger in ſuch deplorable Circumſtances. And this Suggeſtion of Danger ariſing to a Church and Kingdom from Vice and Infidelity, he humbly preſumes is not oppoſite to the Vote of the Two Houſes, or Seditious, but entirely agreeable to what is ſolemnly declared in an Act of Parliament made the ninth and tenth of his late Majeſty King William the Third, for the more effectual ſuppreſſing of Blaſphemy and Prophaneneſs; wherein it is affirmed, That many Perſons had of late Years openly avowed and publiſhed many Blaſphemous and Impious Opinions, contrary to the Doctrines and Principles of the Chriſtian Religion; greatly tending to the Diſhonour of Almighty God, which might prove deſtructive to the Peace and Welfare of this Kingdom: And he conceives, that ſince the paſſing that Act, the deteſtable Crimes for the effectual ſuppreſſing of which that Act was intended, have greatly increaſed. And the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, the Suggeſtions by him made of Dangers ariſing to us from Vice and Infidelity, he apprehends to be in no wiſe more ſeditious or repugnant to the Vote of the Two Houſes approved by Her Majeſty, than the like Suggeſtions occurring in the ſolemn Prayers of the Church Authorized by Her Majeſty, and frequently uſed before each Houſe of Parliament; wherein we beſeech God, that no Sedition may diſturb this State, nor Schiſm diſtract this Church; and that he would give us Grace ſeriouſly to lay to Heart the great Dangers we are in by our unhappy Diviſions.

And as to ſo much of the ſaid Third Article, whereby 'tis charged, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, as a Parallel, mentions a Vote, That the Perſon of King Charles the Firſt was voted to be out of Danger, at the ſame Time that his Murderers were conſpiring his Death; thereby wickedly and maliciouſly inſinuating, that the Members of both Houſes who paſſed the ſaid Vote, were then conſpiring the Ruin of the Church; he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth ſay, That he doth not draw any Parallel between the Vote concerning the King's Perſon, and the late Vote of the Two Houſes, which he neither there, nor elſewhere in his Sermon, mentions: But had he ſuggeſted one Vote to be Parallel to the other, which he hath not, yet would not he thereby have wickedly and maliciouſly inſinuated, that the Members of both Houſes, who paſſed the late Vote, were then conſpiring the Ruin of the Church; but would only have intimated, that as ſome Perſons were conſpiring the Murder of the King, whilſt others, no way privy to their wicked Intentions, voted his Perſon to be out of Danger; ſo when the Two Houſes voted the Church of England to be in no Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, there might be ſome others who were conſpiring the Ruin of the Church; and many others, who, by their Vice and Infidelity, were drawing down God's Vengeance both on Church and Kingdom.

As the Vote of both Houſes, made four Years ago, did concern thoſe only who did then inſinuate the Church of England to be in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; ſo it cannot, he preſumes, affect thoſe who do now ſuggeſt the Chriſtian Faith, which is the Foundation upon which every Chriſtian Church ſtands, to be endangered by thoſe Atheiſtical and Irreligious Principles which are daily from the Preſs propagated amongſt us, notwithſtanding the Proviſion made by the ſaid Act for ſuppreſſing Blaſphemy and Prophaneneſs: So that the ſaid Henry Sacheverell thinks, that he might with Truth affirm (as he did in his Sermon preach'd at Derby.) That there were never ſuch outragious Blaſphemies againſt God and all Religion, Natural as well as Revealed, vented publickly with Impunity, in any Chriſtian Church or Kingdom in the whole World, as at preſent in our own; of which Aſſertion the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is ready to produce undeniable and ample Proofs, if called thereto.

Anſwer to the Fourth Article.

As to the Fourth Article, it contains ſeveral Charges of a very high and Criminal Nature, of which the ſaid Henry Sacheverell knows his Heart to be entirely innocent; and he obſerves with Comfort, That whereas in the former three Articles he is ſaid to have maintained or aſſerted, as well as to have ſuggeſted, the Doctrines and Things therein laid to his Charge, in this fourth Article he is not accuſed of maintaining and aſſerting, but barely of ſuggeſting what is therein contained: And he humbly hopes, that bare Suggeſtions or Inſinuations, could they with any Colour or Probability be made out, as he is fully ſatisfied they cannot, will not, under the moſt mild and gracious Government, (at a Time when ſeveral new Laws have been made for ſecuring the Liberties of the Subject) by your Lordſhips, the great Guardians of our Laws and Liberties, be adjudged ſufficient to involve an Engliſh Subject in the Guilt and Puniſhment of high Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

To the ſeveral Parts of the ſaid fourth Article, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth in all Humility anſwer; As to ſuch Part thereof whereby it is charged, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in his ſaid Sermons and Books, doth falſly and maliciouſly ſuggeſt that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution; he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That he hath not made any mention, in either of his Books or Sermons, of Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration in Eccleſiaſtical or Civil Affairs, or of Her Miniſters: So far is he from ſuggeſting that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution, that amongſt the inеſtimable Bleſſings which are owing to our Deliverance annually commemorated on the fifth of November, he reckons this to be one, That Her Majeſty, the Good and Pious Relict of the Royal Family, ſits now happily upon the Throne of Her Anceſtors; and prays that God may long preſerve Her, for the Comfort and Support of the Church; and profeſſeth, that what he ſpoke proceeded from a tender Concern for Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government: And in the Dedication alſo of his ſaid Sermon Preached at St. Paul's, ſolemnly declares, as he did before in his Diſcourſe, That his only Aim and Intention was earneſtly to contend for the Safety, Rights and Eſtabliſhment of Her Majeſty, together with thoſe of the Church.

And as to ſuch Part of the ſaid fourth Article, whereby it is charged, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth ſuggeſt that there are Men of Characters and Stations in the Church who are falſe Brethren; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That the falſe Brethren, as deſcribed by him in his Sermon, are either thoſe who propagate Falſe Doctrines, or who give up the Diſcipline and Worſhip of the Church, or who are for a Neutrality in Religion, or who wiſh well to the Church of England, and are ready to Sacrifice their Perſons and Eſtates in her Vindication, but do not ſhew their Zeal in the Communion of the Church, as well as for it, in Obeying her Precepts, as well as defending her Rights. Theſe being the ſeveral ſorts of Falſe Brethren enumerated by the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, if he ſhould have ſuggeſted that there are Men of Characters and Stations in Church and State, (Words by no Means reſtrained to the higheſt Characters and Stations) to whom the Denomination of Falſe Brethren, in ſome or more Senſes of that Word, as by him interpreted, doth belong, he humbly hopes that ſuch Suggeſtion would not be deemed Falſe, Malicious, or highly Criminal.

And as to ſuch other Part of the ſaid fourth Article, whereby it is charged, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth ſuggeſt, That there are Men of Characters and Stations in the Church and State, who do themſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and do encourage and put it into the Power of others who are profeſſed Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell denieth that he ſuggeſteth any ſuch Things concerning Men of Characters and Stations in Church or State. Where he ſpeaks of thoſe who weaken, undermine and betray, and encourage and put it in the Power of our profeſſed Enemies to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment, there Men of Characters and Stations are not mention'd by him; and where he mentions Men of Characters and Stations, twelve Pages afterwards, the only Place wherein he mentions them, there he ſpeaks nothing of weakning, undermining and betraying, or of encouraging and putting it in the Power of our profeſſed Enemies to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment: And hopes therefore that he ſhall be no ways anſwerable for a ſuppos'd Reflection, which depends upon the Conjunction of Paſſages ſo widely diſtant from, and ſo little relating to each other. The Weakners, Underminers and Betrayers of our Conſtitution, and the Encouragers to whom the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth in any Part of his Sermon refer, will, he preſumes, upon a candid Examination of thoſe Paſſages, appear to be one of theſe three Sorts of Perſons; either, Firſt, ſuch as by their Writings endeavour to ſubvert the Foundations of our Church and State; or, Secondly, ſuch, whether Writers or others, who are for a Latitudinarian Heterogeneous Mixture of all Perſons of what different Faith ſoever, uniting only in Proteſtancy, which would let into her Bowels thoſe who neither believe her Faith, own her own Miſſion, ſubmit to her Diſcipline, or comply with her Liturgy; which he afterwards ſtiles the Model of an univerſal Coalition; Or, Thirdly, thoſe occaſional Conformiſts, who have ſo far eluded the Corporation and Teſt Acts by their abominable Hypocriſy, as to have undermined the Foundations, and endanger'd the Government, by filling it (as far as they could) with its profeſſed Enemies, that is, with themſelves. Of all theſe, and their Encouragers, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell confeſſes himſelf to have ſuggeſted that they do, in his Opinion, weaken, undermine, and betray the Conſtitution: But that either theſe, or their Encouragers, are Men of Characters or Stations in the Church or State, he hath not any where ſuggeſted.

And as to ſuch other Part of the ſaid Fourth Article, which chargeth the ſaid Henry Sacheverell with charging Her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under Her both in Church and State, with a general Male-Adminiſtration; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That he abhors the Thoughts of bringing any Charge againſt Her Sacred Majeſty, whom he never mentions but in Terms of the profoundeſt Duty and Reſpect. Nor doth he tax thoſe in Authority with a General, or with any Male-Adminiſtration; which is a Word he hath never us'd, nor (as far as he can find) any other Word or Words by which the Thing is imply'd. So far is the ſaid Henry Sacheverell from making any undutiful Reflections upon Her Majeſty or Her Adminiſtration, that in the ſeveral Writings that he has publiſh'd, ſince Her Happy Acceſſion to the Throne, particularly in one which is an avow'd Defence of Her Title to the Crown, and a Juſtification of Her entring into a War with France and Spain, he hath expreſſed himſelf with the moſt Hearty and Loyal Zeal for Her Majeſty's Perſon, Government and Adminiſtration.

And as to ſuch other Part of the ſaid Fourth Article, whereby it is charged, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, as a publick Incendiary, perſwades her Majeſty's Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Factions and Parties; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That he is ſo far from being guilty of this Charge, that in his ſaid Sermon he invites the Separatiſts to renounce their Schiſm, and come ſincerely into the Church; and complains of thoſe who have villainouſly divided us with the Knaviſh Diſtinctions of High and Low Church-Men, and wiſhes we may be one Fold under one Shepherd; and that all thoſe invidious Diſtinctions, that now diſtract and confound us, were loſt, ſo that we might be terrible like an Army with Banners to our Enemies, who could never break in upon ſuch an uniform and well-compacted Body.

And to ſuch other Part of the ſaid Fourth Article, as chargeth, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell inſtills groundleſs Jealouſies, and foments deſtructive Diviſions among her Majeſty's Subjects; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, That in his ſaid Sermon, he on the contrary Rebukes and Condemns thoſe, who, by falſe Inſinuations, and raiſing groundleſs Jealouſies and Fears, embroil the Publick, and bring it into Confuſion.

And as to ſuch other Part of the ſaid Fourth Article, whereby it is charged, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell excites and ſtirs up Her Majeſty's Subjects to Arms and Violence; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, God forbid that he ſhould be guilty of ſo heinous a Crime, who aſſerts the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power upon any Pretence whatſoever; which Aſſertion he conceives to be the chief, if not only Ground of the Charge exhibited againſt him in the firſt Article.

In Confutation of this Charge, he begs leave to recite one Paſſage out of his Sermon preached at Derby in the following Words; We may be Partakers of other Mens Sins, if we do not, to the utmoſt of our Power, endeavour to prevent or obſtruct their Commiſſion, when they manifeſtly endanger the Good of the Publick: As we are Members of any Government, or Society, we are all obliged in Point of Honour, Intereſt and Conſcience, to maintain its Security, promote its Welfare, and guard it againſt Factious Deſigns, or ſeditious Conſpiracies that may threaten its Conſtitution, diſcompoſe its Peace, or violate and ſubvert its Laws. God and Nature have inveſted every Subject from his Cradle, with a Commiſſion to engage, diſcover and diſappoint the Enemies of his Church and Country; and he that is either privy to, induſtriouſly conceals, or any way abets their Schiſmatical, Illegal or Rebellious Enterprizes, both in the Eyes of Human as well as Divine Laws, is an Accomplice and Partaker in the Guilt, a Traitor to God and his Prince, a Patron and Protector of Injuſtice, and a common Adverſary to himſelf as well as all Mankind. And the ſaid Henry Sacheverell hopes, what he hath ſaid in the Dedication of the ſame Sermon, That there are not wanting ſome to preach the Truth, and others to ſupport it, at the Expence of their Lives and Fortunes; will not be conſtrued as exciting Her Majeſty's Subjects to Sedition and Rebellion; ſince that Truth which he commends ſome for Preaching, and others for Supporting, is by him oppoſed to the Attempts of thoſe who betray and run down the Principles and Intereſts of our Church and Conſtitution; and ſince he there deſervedly commends the High Sheriff of that County, on the Account of his ſteady Loyalty and Zeal to ſerve Her Majeſty and the Government, for which he hath been ſo remarkably diſtinguiſhed.

In the Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, he doth indeed excite Chriſtians to put on the whole Armour of God, as wreſtling, not only againſt Fleſh and Blood, but againſt Principalities, againſt Powers, againſt the Rulers of the Darkneſs of this World; againſt Spiritual Wickedneſs in high Places. But he hath learned from the ſame St. Paul, That the Arms of Reſiſtance taken up by Subjects againſt the higher Powers, are no Part of that Spiritual Armour; and the Principalities and Powers by him mention'd, being plainly diſtinguiſhed from Fleſh and Blood, cannot, he thinks, be ſo far miſinterpreted, as to be underſtood of Earthly Potentates and Rulers.

And as to ſo much of the ſaid Fourth Article, whereby it is charged that he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell doth wickedly wreſt and pervert divers Texts and Paſſages of Holy Scripture, that his ſaid malicious and ſeditious Suggeſtions may make the ſtronger Impreſſion upon the Minds of her Majeſty's Subjects; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſays, That having no malicious or ſeditious Suggeſtions to Imprint, he could not intend to wreſt any Paſſages of the Holy Scripture to that wicked Purpoſe. Hard is the Lot of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, if when they Cite the Word of God in their General Exhortations to Piety and Virtue, or in their Reproofs of Mens Tranſgreſſions, or where they are Lamenting the Difficulties and Conflicts with which the Church of Chriſt, whilſt Militant here on Earth, muſt always ſtruggle, the ſeveral Texts and Paſſages by them Cited, ſhall be ſaid to have been by them meant of particular Perſons and Things, and ſhall be conſtrued in the moſt Criminal Senſe, and be made by ſuch Conſtruction one Ground of an Impeachment for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

And as to all other Matters and Things in the ſaid Articles contain'd, and not herein before particularly anſwered unto, the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith, he is not Guilty of them, or any of them, in Manner and Form as the ſame are charged upon him in and by the ſaid Articles; and humbly ſubmits himſelf to your Lordſhips Judgment.

HENRY SACHEVERELL.

The Commons Replication to the Anſwer of Doctor Henry Sacheverell.

THE Commons have conſidered the Anſwer of Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, to the Articles of Impeachment exhibited againſt him by the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled; and obſerve, that there are many things in it not warranted by the Courſe of Proceedings upon Impeachments, foreign to the Charge of the Commons, unbecoming a Perſon Impeached, and plainly deſigned to reflect upon the Honour of the Houſe of Commons in this Proceeding, for which they might demand your Lordſhips immediate Juſtice.

But the Commons being ſenſible that the Nature of the Crimes whereof he ſtands Impeached, and the Neceſſity of bringing him to a ſpeedy and exemplary Puniſhment, require that all Occaſions of Delay ſhould be avoided, and not doubting that your Lordſhips will in due time vindicate the Honour of the Commons, and the Juſtice of their Proceedings; the Commons do Aver their Charge againſt the ſaid Henry Sacheverell for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors to be true, and that the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is Guilty in ſuch manner as he ſtands Impeached, and that the Commons will be ready to prove their Charge againſt him at ſuch convenient Time as ſhall be appointed for that Purpoſe.

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, you may proceed with your Evidence.

Mr. Attorney Gen. MY Lords, by Command of the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes in Parliament Aſſembled, we appear in behalf of all the Commons of Great Britain, to make good the Impeachment againſt the Priſoner at the Bar, Doctor Henry Sacheverell.

The Miſdemeanors he ſtands accuſed of are ſpecified in the Articles which have been juſt now read to your Lordſhips, and the Facts there Charged, are Laid to have been done with a Wicked, Malicious, Seditious Intention, to Undermine and Subvert Her Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law Eſtabliſhed; to Defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; to Aſperſe the Memory of His late Majeſty King William; To Traduce and Condemn the late Happy Revolution; to Contradict and Arraign the Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament; to Create Jealouſies and Diviſions amongſt Her Majeſty's Subjects; and to Incite them to Sedition and Rebellion.

My Lords, If this Charge is made good (as I am apt to think it will) I may preſume to ſay, no Words can either aggravate or alleviate the Offence.

My Lords, our Proofs in this Caſe will ariſe from Evidence which cannot be liable to the Imputation of being over-aw'd by the Weight of the Proſecutors, or corrupted or perverted; for out of his own Mouth we ſhall Charge him, and by his own Words and Sermons we ſhall convict him.

My Lords, I can with Truth ſay, That it is no ſmall Trouble to the Commons of Great Britain, to have this Occaſion of coming in this manner before your Lordſhips: Could they have ſatisfy'd themſelves that Her Majeſty's Honour, the Safety of Her People, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law Eſtabliſhed, were not highly concerned to bring this Man to ſpeedy Juſtice, they could very willingly have ſpared Your Lordſhips this Trouble.

But when they conſider'd of what Import it was to the Nation, how much it concerned the very Being of our Conſtitution, to Diſcountenance and put an End to ſuch ſort of Seditious Proceedings as the Doctor and ſome others of his Brethren have been lately practiſing in divers Parts of the Kingdom, they could not think otherwiſe than that it was a Matter fit for the Grand Inqueſt of the Nation to take Notice of: And finding it to be a Cauſe of ſo great Moment to the Publick, they judg'd it fit to be taken under their own Management, and not truſt it to the Deciſion of any Inferior Tribunal. And, my Lords, it muſt be agreed that your Lordſhips are the only proper Judges, when the whole Commons of Great Britain find it neceſſary to be the Proſecutors; nor can Doctor Sacheverell have any juſt Cauſe to complain of this manner of Proceeding, when it gives him ſo publick an Opportunity of Defending himſelf (if his Innocence can clear him;) and what can he deſire more, when he lies under ſo heavy an Accuſation, than to have your Lordſhips for his Judges, who have already ſhewn your great Indulgence to him, by allowing him (as the Noble Lord from the Woolpack juſt now obſerv'd) all the Advantages a Man under his Circumſtances can ask, or deſire to have?

My Lords, This Proſecution took its Riſe from a Complaint that was made in the Houſe of Commons the Thirteenth of December laſt, of two Books which had been lately Printed and Publiſhed under the Name of Doctor Henry Sacheverell. The Books being delivered in, ſeveral Paragraphs were read; and by divers Paſſages, too many for me now to enumerate to your Lordſhips, it did plainly appear that both Books did contain very Scandalous and Seditious Matter, highly reflecting upon the Queen and Her Adminiſtration.

Hereupon the Doctor was order'd to attend; which he did accordingly the next Day, and at the Bar of the Commons Houſe own'd and avow'd both Books to be his; That they were Sermons he himſelf had preach'd; and that he had cauſed them to be printed and publiſhed.

After ſuch a Confeſſion, Your Lordſhips may imagine Her Majeſty's Dutiful Commons did expreſs their juſt Reſentments of the great Wrong and Injuries that were done to Her Majeſty, and all that were in Authority under Her; and immediately ordered this Impeachment.

Your Lordſhips will perceive, by Peruſal of the Sermons and Epiſtles Dedicatory, that the Deſign and Drift of the ſame is to poſſeſs the People with ſtrange Notions, and terrible Apprehenſions of the Danger they are in, by a General Male-Adminiſtration of the Publick Affairs both in Church and State.

That both theſe Sermons were preach'd upon Publick Occaſions; and had, ſince the Printing thereof, been handed about with more than ordinary Application.

One of theſe Books is entitled [The Communication of Sin,] being a Sermon preach'd at the Aſſizes held at Derby in Auguſt laſt: And becauſe the Doctor thought he had not ſaid enough againſt the Queen and Her Government in the Sermon, he affixes a Dedication to it, wherein he affirms, That the Principles of our Church and Conſtitution are ſhamefully betray'd and run down: That both are perſecuted, on the one Side by rude and preſumptuous Inſults, and baſe undermining Treachery on the other; and that this Perſecution is carry'd on by aſſociated Malignants.

The other Sermon was preach'd at St. Paul's, London, on the Fifth of November, which is a Day ſet apart for a General Day of Thankſgiving, for Two very great Deliverances vouchſafed to this Nation, by the Diſcovery of the Gunpowder Plot, and the Arrival of His Late Majeſty King William, to redeem us from Popiſh Tyranny and Arbitrary Power.

My Lords, When ye come to hear this Sermon read, I am confident that it muſt appear very ſtrange to find, that when there were Two ſuch Memorable Occaſions for the Doctor to have ſet forth his Eloquence in a Thankſgiving-Sermon, he ſhould in great meaſure paſs by both the Buſineſſes of the Day, and entertain his Audience with a long Harangue of the deplorable Condition the Church was in; not ſo much from Papiſts, (the avow'd Enemies of the Church) as from her pretended Friends, as he calls them, the Falſe Sons of the Church, who were crept into her Bowels, and ſhewn themſelves to be perfidious Brethren, by defending Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience, and favouring the Diſſenters.

And to ſhew his little Liking of the Great Work which was begun to be wrought on that Day by the Arrival of His Late Majeſty, the chief Turn of his Diſcourſe is to cry up Non-Reſiſtance and Paſſive Obedience.

And to make it moſt evident, that what he ſaid of Non-Reſiſtance was to caſt black and odious Colours upon the Revolution; he lays down a General Poſition, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to make Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power; which Supreme Power, by other Paſſages, he explains to be the Regal Power.

And being apprehenſive that every one that heard him talking in that manner againſt Reſiſtance, would ſee plainly he was Cenſuring and Condemning the Means that brought about the Revolution, and being deſirous to caſt as heavy Reflections as he could upon the Memory of King William, he aſſerts, That the Prince of Orange, in his Declaration, utterly diſclaim'd all manner of Reſiſtance.

My Lords, Every body knows, that knows any thing of the Revolution, That the Prince of Orange came over hither with an Armed Force; and that in ſeveral Paragraphs of his Declaration, (the Doctor ſpeaks of) His Late Majeſty invites and requires all Peers of the Realm, both Spiritual and Temporal Lords, all Gentlemen, Citizens, and other Commoners, to come in and aſſiſt him, in order to the executing that Deſign he had then undertook, againſt all that ſhould endeavour to oppoſe him.

Therefore it muſt be accounted very ridiculous for the Doctor to advance ſuch a Poſition, if he had no further Meaning in it, than to give an Account of the Prince of Orange's Deſign in coming over here into England.

And this will make it neceſſary for your Lordſhips to conſider what is the true Meaning of this Aſſertion: Is it not plainly to make the Prince of Orange ſay one Thing, and at the ſame time do directly another? And can this be done with any other Deſign, than to aſperſe the Memory of the late King William?

Then as to his Diſcourſe concerning Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance, in ſuch Latitude as is there mention'd; what could it tend to, but to caſt Reflections upon that Reſiſtance, which was the Means which brought about the Revolution?

For was there any Occaſion at that Time to be ſo earneſt to cry down Reſiſtance, and preach up Paſſive Obedience?

Can any one pretend to ſay, there were any Symptoms of Diſcontent throughout the Nation, in any Parts thereof?

No: To our Comfort be it ſpoken, no Reign, no Age, no Hiſtory can give a better Account of the good Diſpoſitions of the People to their Sovereign. Therefore ſince the Preaching theſe Doctrines was needleſs, it does ſavour of ſome wicked Deſign, to be talking ſo unſeaſonably of this Subject.

If what the Doctor very frequently aſſerts in this Sermon be true, That all are Falſe Sons of the Church, who aſſiſted in bringing about the Revolution, or that join'd in the Oppoſition that was made to the Encroachments which were begun by evil Miniſters in the Reign of King James the IId. againſt our Religion and Liberties; let the Doctor a little conſider, how far his Character of a Falſe Brother may be carry'd!

Every body knows, that liv'd in thoſe Days, that the Body of the Clergy of the Church of England made a Noble Stand againſt the Encroachments which were then making, and appear'd as active as any of the Laity.

And was it not by their Writings, Preaching, and Example, that the Nobility and Gentry were animated to maintain and defend their Rights, Religion and Liberties? And as an undoubted Monument that this was the Senſe of the whole Kingdom at the Time of the Revolution, it is enter'd in the Journal of the Houſe of Commons, on the Firſt of February, 1688;

That the Unanimous Thanks of the Houſe was given, Nemine Contradicente, to the Clergy of the Church of England, for the great Services they had done their Religion and Country, by the Oppoſition they had made to the Execution of the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, and their refuſing to read the King's Declaration for a Toleration, which was then founded upon the Diſpenſing Power.

And how did the Archbiſhops receive the Meſſage that was ſent them upon this Occaſion, that they might communicate that Reſolution to the Clergy in their reſpective Dioceſes?

Our Journals tell us, That Mr. Leviſon Gower the next Day acquainted the Houſe of Commons, that he had attended the Two Archbiſhops, according to Order, with the Thanks of the Houſe; and that Archbiſhop Sancroft, and the then Archbiſhop of York, return'd their Thanks to the Commons for themſelves, and in Behalf of all their Clergy, for their favourable Vote.

Your Lordſhips ſee, the Commons were then happy enough to be thought favourable to the Clergy of the Church of England; and yet thoſe very Commons were the Men who paſſed the Toleration-Act, for exempting Proteſtant Diſſenters from the Penalties of certain Laws, as one of the moſt neceſſary Acts for the Good of the Kingdom.

And were they not encouraged to go about that Charitable Work, by the Petition of the Seven Biſhops, preſented to King James; wherein they acquainted him, That it was not for want of a due Tenderneſs to Diſſenters, which made them refuſe reading his Declaration for Toleration to Diſſenters; in relation to whom, they were willing to come to ſuch a Temper as ſhould be thought fit, when the ſame came to be conſider'd in Parliament.

But now the ſame hath been conſider'd in Parliament, and the Toleration hath been ſettled and eſtabliſh'd by the Legiſlative Authority of the Kingdom, and hath been ratify'd and approv'd of in this Reign, by Her Majeſty and both Houſes of Parliament; Doctor Sacheverell belike diſapproves of it, and is pleaſed to tell us in a moſt extraordinary manner, That a Man muſt be very weak, or ſomething worſe, that thinks or pretends the Diſſenters are to be gained by any other Grants and Indulgences, than giving up our whole Conſtitution: And he that recedes the leaſt Tittle from it, to ſatisfy and ingratiate with theſe Clamorous, Inſatiable, Church-devouring Malignants, knows not what Spirit they are of.

After ſuch an ample Declaration of his Opinion, what fatal Conſequences will attend the granting Indulgences to Diſſenters, Can the Doctor imagine, that his ſaying, in his Anſwer to the Articles, That he intends not to caſt the leaſt invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence the Government has condeſcended to give them, will take off the hard Cenſures he hath paſs'd upon Diſſenters?

And, my Lords, if an Archbiſhop, who hath been dead almoſt a Hundred and twenty Years, cannot be permitted to reſt quiet in his Grave, but muſt have foul Aſperſions caſt upon his Memory, as being a falſe Son, and a perfidious Prelate of the Church, for interceding (as Doctor Sacheverell ſays) with Queen Elizabeth for the Diſſenters in thoſe Days: What muſt the preſent Archbiſhops and Biſhops of our Church expect from Doctor Henry Sacheverell, if they do not Thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Diſſenters as often as the Doctor ſhall think there is occaſion for them?

My Lords, I perceive the Doctor hopes to ſalve all he hath ſaid againſt Toleration to Diſſenters, by a nice Diſtinction he hath hit upon between an Indulgence and a Toleration.

Therefore he tells your Lordſhips, That upon the moſt diligent Enquiry, he hath not been able to inform himſelf that a Toleration hath been granted by Law.

Can the Doctor pretend to ſay, that this Word Toleration has never been made uſe of to expreſs the Religious Liberty and Indulgence that is granted and allowed to Diſſenters? If we wanted Authorities to juſtify the Uſe of the Word, after the Doctor has made uſe of it in the ſame Senſe over and over, in many Paſſages in his Sermon, as will be taken Notice of by the Gentlemen that are to make good the Second Article, the Doctor might be put in Mind, that Her Majeſty in Her Speech from the Throne, on the 17th of December, 1705, hath been pleaſed to Declare, That ſhe will inviolably Maintain the Toleration.

My Lords, As the Time was moſt Unſeaſonable for the Preaching ſuch Doctrines as theſe, ſo the Place was very improper for a Lecture of Politicks: For your Lordſhips do perceive this latter Sermon, which was Preach'd on the Fifth of November laſt, was Preach'd in the Great Metropolis of this Kingdom, before the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, and Citizens of London; from whoſe ſteady Loyalty to Her Majeſty, and firm Affections to the Revolution, ſuch vaſt Sums have been contributed for carrying on this long War againſt France, which hath proved ſo fatal to the French King, and other Enemies of this Kingdom.

And what more likely to give a fatal Wound to the Publick Credit at this Time, than ſuch Doctrine, which tends to the Overthrow of all the Acts of Parliament which have been made in Support of this Conſtitution.

And how ſtrange an Attempt was it for the Doctor to Preach againſt the Revolution and this Government, before thoſe Citizens who owe the Reſtoration of their Charters, and all their Franchiſes and Immunities to it.

But, to do Juſtice to the Doctor, he in his Anſwer denies he hath ſaid any thing of the Means which brought about the Revolution.

And,

And, if your Lordſhips can believe him, he ſays, he has endeavour'd to Vindicate the Revolution from the black and odious Colours the Enemies of the Revolution would throw both upon that and his late Majeſty.

To what End and Purpoſe then are theſe Doctrines Preach'd with ſo much Vehemence at this Time, unleſs it be to reflect backwards upon what was done at the Time of the Revolution?

There is certainly no Occaſion to Preach Non-Reſiſtance to Her Majeſty's Loyal and Dutiful Subjects, who have never ſhewn the leaſt Inclination to give Diſturbances to this preſent Government.

Was there ever known a Time, in which there was ſo univerſal an Agreement in all Ranks and Degrees amongſt us? Does not every one almoſt ſtrive to ſhew their Zeal and Affection for Her Majeſty and Her Government? If there be any that are leſs quiet than their Neighbours, we ſhall find them amongſt the Friends of Doctor Sacheverell, who are profeſſedly no Friends to the Revolution. Nothing is more certain, than that all that are not ſatisfied with what was done at the Time of the Revolution, muſt be Enemies to the preſent Eſtabliſhment: And 'tis from this Source, all theſe Declamations againſt Men of Character and Station, both in Church and State, do proceed.

But I would have the Doctor conſider, that we have Laws to puniſh Spreaders of falſe News, and horrible Stories, of the Great Men and Great Officers of the Kingdom; and 'tis to put a ſtop to theſe malicious Practices now on Foot, that this Delinquent is now brought to this Bar.'

When we ſhall have read our ſeveral Proofs, which will juſtify every Particular charged on the Doctor in the Articles of Impeachment, the Commons will not doubt of your Lordſhips Judgment againſt this Defendant.

Mr. Lechmere. MY Lords, I am commanded to aſſiſt in ſtating to your Lordſhips the Grounds of the Charge of the Commons, and the Nature and Tendency of the Crimes now before you, in Judgment.

Your Lordſhips have had open'd to you an Impeachment of the Commons of Great-Britain: The Subjects of both Nations had an equal Concern in that which is the Ground of it: They are happily united in this Proſecution; and the common Intereſt of your Lordſhips, and us all, is inſeparable in its Event.

I need ſay no more to your Lordſhips of the Greatneſs of this Cauſe; not for the Perſon of the Offender, but for the High Importance of thoſe Matters which he has preſumed to draw in Queſtion.

The Commons, on their Part, have been exceeding careful, in every Step of this Proceeding, that it ſhould receive a Deliberation ſuitable to the Weight of the Cauſe, and the Dignity of the Commons; and they obſerve it to your Lordſhips, with great Satisfaction, That by your ready Concurrence, no Difficulties have ariſen to delay or diſcourage their Impeachment. They aſcribe this to a Deſire in your Lordſhips, equally with themſelves, to cultivate a good Correſpondence on ſo important an Occaſion, and to that due Regard your Lordſhips ſhew to the Courſe of Impeachments, the Ancient Right, and Great Security of the Commons.

In framing their Charge, the Commons have thought fit, by a Preamble to their Articles, to lay before you the Grounds of their Accuſation, in Terms the moſt cogent and expreſſive; to the end, your Lordſhips might have early and perfect Notice of the Points on which the Commons intended to proceed; that your Lordſhips, and the whole Kingdom, might know the unanimous and hearty Zeal of the Commons, to aſſert the Juſtice of the late Happy Revolution, and the Foundations of Her Majeſty's Government and Adminiſtration; And that the Judgment of the Commons, on this weighty Occaſion, might ſtand fully on the Records of Parliament, and be tranſmitted to all Poſterity.

Your Lordſhips will obſerve, in reading their Evidence, many Things excepted to by the Commons, precedent to the Ground of their firſt Article; but you will ſoon perceive, that all Parts of the Deſign of the Priſoner center in that. They could not therefore have acquitted themſelves, if they had not made that their Foundation: Being firmly convinc'd, they never can have the Honour and Juſtice of that Glorious Work too much at Heart; nor be too jealous of thoſe, who under any Pretences, tho' never ſo ſpecious, ſhall attempt to leſſen it. And when they conſider the certain Dependance that the Juſtice of the late Revolution it ſelf muſt have upon the Steps that led to it, they can have no doubt but your Lordſhips will think him equally Criminal, who condemns the Means by which it was effected.

My Lords, The Neceſſary Means, (which is the Phraſe us'd by the Commons in their firſt Article) are Words made choice of by them with the greateſt Caution. Thoſe Means are deſcribed (in the Preamble to their Charge) to be, That Glorious Enterprize, which his late Majeſty undertook with an armed Force, to deliver this Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power; the Concurrence of many Subjects of the Realm, who came over with him in that Enterprize, and of many others of all Ranks and Orders, who appear'd in Arms in many Parts of the Kingdom, in Aid of that Enterprize.

Theſe were the Means that brought about the Revolution, and which the Act that paſſed ſoon after, declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown, intends, when His Late Majeſty is therein called the Glorious Inſtrument of delivering the Kingdom; and which the Commons, in the laſt Part of their firſt Article, expreſs by the Word Reſiſtance.

But the Commons, who will never be unmindful of the Allegiance of the Subjects to the Crown of this Realm, judg'd it highly incumbent upon them, out of regard to the Safety of Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and the Ancient and Legal Conſtitution of this Kingdom, to call that Reſiſtance the Neceſſary Means; thereby plainly founding that Power, and Right of Reſiſtance, which was exerciſed by the People at the Time of the Happy Revolution, and which the Duties of Self-Preſervation and Religion call'd them to, upon the Neceſſity of the Caſe; and at the ſame time, effectually ſecuring Her Majeſty's Government, and the due Allegiance of all Her Subjects.

Your Lordſhips will find, That the Priſoner, in his Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's, has aſſerted a Doctrine in direct Defiance and Contradiction of that Reſiſtance us'd to bring about the Revolution; when he affirms the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, on any Pretence whatſoever, to be a Fundamental of our Conſtitution: And, as your Lordſhips will hear it fully made out from the Proofs, by thoſe

Gentlemen to whom that Part is aſſigned, he has alſo plainly declared himſelf, that even that Reſiſtance uſed at the Time of the late Happy Revolution, is not to be excepted out of his Fundamental Rule.

My Lords, When a Preacher of the Goſpel, and a Miniſter of the Church of England, even under this Happy Eſtabliſhment, ſhall thus publickly condemn the Foundations on which it ſtands, in Defiance of Her Majeſty and the Great Council of the Nation then ſitting in Parliament; it becomes an indiſpenſible Duty upon us, who appear in the Name and on the Behalf of all the Commons of Great-Britain, not only to demand your Lordſhips Juſtice on ſuch a Criminal, but clearly and openly to aſſert our Foundations.

I crave Leave to remind your Lordſhips of the Condition of Things in both Kingdoms, immediately preceding the late Revolution: The Caſe is ſtated and recorded, between the late King James and the Subjects of both Kingdoms, in the ſeveral Declarations of the Rights of both Nations made by them at that Time.

I ſhall forbear to aggravate the Miſcarriages of that unhappy Prince, further than by ſaying, That it is declared in the Preamble to the Bill paſſed in England, That by the Aſſiſtance of Evil Counſellors, Judges and Miniſters, employ'd by him, he did endeavour to ſubvert and extirpate the Proteſtant Religion, the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom, in the ſeveral Inſtances there enumerated. And in that paſſed in the Kingdom of Scotland, it ſtands declared, That, by the Advice of Evil Counſellors, he did invade the Fundamental Conſtitution of that Kingdom, and alter'd it from a Legal Limited Monarchy, to an Arbitrary Deſpotick Power.

Your Lordſhips, on this Occaſion, will again conſider the Ancient Legal Conſtitution of the Government of this Kingdom; from which it will evidently appear to your Lordſhips, That the Subjects of this Realm had not only a Power and Right in themſelves to make that Reſiſtance, but lay under an indiſpenſible Obligation to do it.

The Nature of our Conſtitution is that of a Limited Monarchy, wherein the Supreme Power is communicated and divided between Queen, Lords and Commons, tho' the Executive Power and Adminiſtration be wholly in the Crown. The Terms of ſuch a Conſtitution do not only ſuppoſe, but expreſs an Original Contract, between the Crown and the People; by which that Supreme Power was [by mutual Conſent, and not by Accident] limited and lodg'd in more Hands than one: And the uniform Preſervation of ſuch a Conſtitution for ſo many Ages, without any fundamental Change, demonſtrates to your Lordſhips the Continuance of the ſame Contract.

The Conſequences of ſuch a Frame of Government are obvious: That the Laws are the Rule to both, the common Meaſure of the Power of the Crown, and of the Obedience of the Subject; and if the Executive Part endeavours the Subverſion, and total Deſtruction of the Government, the Original Contract is thereby broke, and the Right of Allegiance ceaſes: That Part of the Government, thus fundamentally injur'd, hath a Right to Save or Recover that Conſtitution, in which it had an Original Intereſt.

Nay, the Nature of ſuch an Original Contract of Government proves, That there is not only a Power in the People, who have inherited its Freedom, to aſſert their own Title to it, but they are bound in Duty to tranſmit the ſame Conſtitution to their Poſterity alſo.

'Tis miſ-ſpending your Lordſhips Time to illuſtrate this: 'Tis an Eternal Truth, eſſential to the Government it ſelf, and not to be defaced, or deſtroy'd, by any Force or Device.

That the Rights of the Crown of England are Legal Rights, and its Power ſtated and bounded by the Laws of the Kingdom; That the Executive Power and Adminiſtration it ſelf is under the ſtricteſt Guard, for the Security of the People; And that the Subjects have an Inheritance in their Ancient Fundamental Conſtitutions, and the Laws of the Land; appears from every Branch of this Government. 'Tis the Tenor of all Antiquity; Our Hiſtories and Records afford innumerable Proofs of it: And when your Lordſhips look back on the Hiſtory of Magna Charta alone, you can't doubt of the Senſe of our Anceſtors, that they were Maſters of Franchiſes that were truly their own, and which no Earthly Power had Right to extort from them. Many others, of inconteſtible Authority, are thoſe Valuable Relicts, which our Popiſh Anceſtors have left us, as Proofs of the Freedom of our Conſtitution, of the conſtant Claims they made, both in and out of Parliament, to their Inheritance in their Laws, againſt the Encroachment of Arbitrary Power; and when the Laſt Extremity call'd them to it, they never fail'd to vindicate them by the Arms of Reſiſtance.

" Such was the Genius of a People, whoſe Go" vernment was built on that Noble Foundation,
" Not to be bound by Laws, to which they did not
" conſent; that, muffled up in Darkneſs and Su-
" perſtition, as our Anceſtors were, yet that Noti-
" on ſeem'd engraven on their Minds, and the Im-
" preſſions ſo ſtrong, that nothing could impair
" them.

Upon the Reformation of Religion, when all Foreign Power was aboliſh'd, and the Supremacy of the Crown was reſtor'd to its Height by many Acts of Parliament, your Lordſhips will always find Declarations at the ſame Time made of the Rights of the People; particularly that of the 25th of H. VIII. where 'tis ſaid, That the Realm of England is free from any Man's Laws, but ſuch as have been deviſed, made and ordained within the ſame, for the Wealth of it; or ſuch other, as the People of the Realm have taken at their free Will and Conſent, and by long Uſe have bound themſelves to, as the Ancient Eſtabliſh'd Laws of the Realm, and none otherwiſe.

Your Lordſhips will, I doubt not, conſider thoſe Laws made at that Time, to be freſh and remarkable Declarations, and Ratifications of the Original Contract.

This Excellent Conſtitution of our Government has been, thro' many Struggles, preſerv'd from that Time to this, and the true Spirit of the Engliſh Nation ſtill kept alive, down to the Times of the late Happy Revolution; at which Time the Danger being imminent, not only to the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom, but to the Proteſtant Religion, THE ANCIENT VIRTUE OF THE ENGLISH NATION EXERTED IT SELF, AND SHONE OUT IN ITS FULL LUSTRE, IN THAT GLORIOUS WORK.

The many Laws paſs'd ſince, more particularly thoſe for the Settlement of the Crown and Succeſſion, are ſo many repeated Declarations of their Late Majeſties, and Her Majeſty now on the Throne, together with the Repreſentative Body of the Nation, in Confirmation of their Ancient Conſtitution. Nay, my Lords, we have higher Teſtimonies to appeal to; the many Glorious Succeſſes with which God Almighty has bleſſed the Arms of Her moſt Sacred Majeſty, employ'd in Defence of the Arms of Reſiſtance, are ſo many Teſtimonies from Heaven in our Vindication.

Your Lordſhips take notice on what Grounds the Doctor continues to aſſert the ſame Poſition in his Anſwer. But is it not moſt evident, that the General Exhortations to be met with in the Homilies of the Church of England, and ſuch like Declarations in the Statutes of the Kingdom, are meant only as Rules for the Civil Obedience of the Subject, to the Legal Adminiſtration of the Supreme Power in ordinary Caſes? And it's equally abſurd, to conſtrue any Words in a Poſitive Law to authorize the Deſtruction of the whole; as to expect that King, Lords and Commons ſhould, in expreſs Terms of Law, declare ſuch an ultimate Reſort as the Right of Reſiſtance, at a Time when the Caſe ſuppoſes that the Force of all Law is ceaſed.

But the Commons think he hath, by his Anſwer, highly aggravated his Crime, by charging ſo pernicious a Tenet, as that of abſolute unlimited Non-Reſiſtance, to be a fundamental Part of our Government, and by aſſerting this as the Doctrine of the Church of England.

It is a great Reproach to the Excellency of our Conſtitution, to impute ſuch Principles to it as inevitably infer its Deſtruction; and an equal Diſhonour to the Crown of this Realm, the great Glory of which is to be ſet over and govern a Nation of Free-born Subjects, the meaneſt of which has an Inheritance in the Government and the Laws equal with the greateſt.

They likewiſe eſteem it an high Reflection on Religion it ſelf, and the Church of England, to charge its pureſt Doctrines with ſuch Conſtructions, by which all Irreligion and Oppreſſion would be Authoriz'd.

The Commons muſt for ever conſider themſelves under the ſtrongeſt Obligations of Gratitude to our great Deliverer, to aſſert the Honour and Juſtice of that Reſiſtance by which he reſcued an oppreſſed People from inevitable Deſtruction; and think they ſhould not deſerve the Name of Subjects of Great Britain, or the leaſt Bleſſing of ſo good a Government, if at this Time before your Lordſhips, and for ever hereafter, they did not aſſert, in the moſt ſtrenuous Manner, the Honour and Juſtice of that Reſiſtance which brought about the late Happy Revolution. And upon this Foundation it is, that they doubt not but your Lordſhips will, in a Parliamentary way, faſten a Brand of indelible Infamy on that enſlaving Tenet by which it's condemn'd.

I ſhall take up leſs of your Lordſhips Time on the following Articles.

The Commons eſteem the Toleration of Proteſtant Diſſenters to be one of the earlieſt and happieſt Effects of the late Revolution, wiſely calculated for the Support and ſtrengthning the Proteſtant Intereſt, the great End of the Revolution it ſelf.

They remember, with the higheſt Gratitude to Her Majeſty, Her Royal Reſolution declared from the Throne, to preſerve it inviolably; and they obſerve to your Lordſhips, that it appears to them, from a Report on their own Journals of a Conference between both Houſes, on the Bill againſt Occaſional Conformity, (not meant to enlarge the Liberties of Proteſtant Diſſenters) That the Perſecution of Proteſtants is, in the Preamble to that Bill, declared to be contrary to the Chriſtian Religion, and the Doctrine of the Church of England, and that the Act of Toleration ought to be kept inviolably; and the Commons find no Exception then taken by your Lordſhips to that Declaration; but on the contrary, many Expreſſions from both Houſes, highly extolling the Policy and good Effects of that Law.

Your Lordſhips will perceive, from the Evidence of the Commons, many plain Declarations of the Priſoner in Maintenance of this Article; but we offer it to your Lordſhips, as a further Evidence, that he moſt ſhamefully arraigns the Memory of a Prelate, Eminent for his Zeal to the Proteſtant Religion; for his compaſſionate Interceſſions with Queen Elizabeth, in favour of Diſſenting Proteſtants; a Reflection plainly meant by him to caſt an Odium on the Act of Toleration, and on the preſent Fathers of the Church, ſo Eminent for their Charity and Moderation; and from the Applauſes he gives to the Severities ſhown by that Queen, he illuſtrates the Calumny thrown by him on Her preſent Majeſty, and Her Approbation of the Toleration: Your Lordſhips will duly conſider the Malignity of Expreſſions meant to condemn ſo good a Law, now ſtanding in its full Force, and to encourage the Unchriſtian Principles of Perſecution.

The latter Part of the Second Article is founded on the Legal Supremacy of the Government in Matters Eccleſiaſtical, by which all Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, by the Ancient undoubted Laws of the Kingdom, is made ſubject to the Civil Power.

The Priſoner, in Terms very unbecoming, has ſtruck at this Eſſential Part of our Conſtitution, in thoſe Words; wherein, after having perſuaded the ſuperior Paſtors of the Church to Thunder out their Anathema's againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters, He defies any Earthly Power to reverſe ſuch Sentences.

My Lords, The reſtoring the Legal Supremacy of the Crown, was the Effect of the Reformation of Religion in this Kingdom; and the Abuſe of that Power, to the apparent Danger and Deſtruction of the Church of England, in the Inſtance of the late illegal Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſion, remains condemn'd by the Bill of Rights.

But the Commons crave Leave to obſerve, that the Independent Power, or Juriſdiction of the Church, or of Eccleſiaſtical Judges, which is the Doctrine advanc'd by the Priſoner, is not leſs dangerous. It ſtands in utter Defiance and Contradiction of Magna Charta, and the Laws of the Land; 'tis deſtructive of the Legal Supremacy of the Crown and Legiſlature; a Violation of the Oath of Supremacy; contrary to the Principles of the Reformation, and the Doctrine and Intereſt of the Church of England, of which he is a Member.

The Commons are ſtrengthned in their Concern for the Legal Supremacy, when they call to Mind Her Majeſty's Letter to his Grace of Canterbury, of the 25th of February 1705, for Proroguing the Convocation; wherein Her Majeſty is pleaſed to declare Her conſtant Care and Endeavours to preſerve the Conſtitution of the Church of England as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, and Her Reſolution to preſerve the Supremacy, as being a Fundamental Part of it: And upon theſe Conſiderations, they have an Abſolute Aſſurance of an equal Regard on your Lordſhips Part, to a Matter of ſo great Importance.

Your Lordſhips will obſerve the Third Article to be included within the general Charge of the Fourth: But, the Commons being ſenſible, with how diſtinguiſh'd a Malice the Subſtance of this Charge is levell'd, by the Priſoner, againſt the Honour of Her Majeſty and the Two Houſes of Parliament, they thought it their Duty to Her Majeſty to lay this before your Lordſhips in a diſtinct Article for your particular Conſideration and Judgment.

When your Lordſhips reflect on the late heavy Cenſure, which the Queen and both Houſes ſo juſtly laid on the Authors of the like groundleſs Slander, you will think that the Priſoner has reviv'd and avow'd the ſame, from an inveterate Pride to ſignalize his Enmity to Her Majeſty and both Houſes, and in the moſt publick Manner to inſult the Honour of the Queen and Legiſlature at the ſame time that he was endeavouring to ſubvert their Foundations.

The Commons will ever ſhew the utmoſt Jealouſy for the Safety and Honour of Her Majeſty's Perſon, and muſt always eſteem it their peculiar Concern to vindicate every Attempt that ſhall be made againſt it; and aſſure your Lordſhips, they can't be forgetful of that ſignal Regard Her Sacred Majeſty ſhewed to the Church of England, at the time of the late Revolution; of that conſtant Uniform Zeal She has expreſs'd for it from that Day to this; that perpetual Monument of Her Royal Bounty to the Clergy of the Church of England, to the Diminution of Her own Revenue; nor of Her Royal Care for the perpetual Eſtabliſhment of its Diſcipline and Worſhip, in making it a fundamental and eſſential Part of the Union of the Two Kingdoms: Theſe Things they eſteem an Abſolute Security, that Her Royal Protection and Affection for the Church of England can never fail.

The Commons doubt not of your Lordſhips particular Notice of the Parallel mention'd in this Article, by which your Lordſhips will collect the Inveteracy of the Deſign, from the Odiouſneſs of the Compariſon.

In their Fourth Article the Commons have laid before your Lordſhips many Charges; which, tho' of different Conſiderations, yet all conduce to the main Charge of the Commons; as tending to undermine Her Majeſty's Government, and to raiſe Sedition and Rebellion.

Your Lordſhips will find, from many and pregnant Proofs ſupporting this Article, That Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, whereby ſhe has juſtly gain'd the Affections of all Her true Subjects, is repreſented by the Priſoner as deſerving the utmoſt Odium and Contempt of Her People.

That the Civil and Religious Rights of Her Subjects, which Her Majeſty has protected with the Tenderneſs of a moſt indulgent Mother, are betray'd by thoſe to whom She has committed the Care of them, and that they are now in a Condition more Calamitous, than at that time, when Superſtition and Tyranny were ready to have ſwallow'd them up.

Your Lordſhips will find him labouring to perſuade the People, that the Condition of Peace and Proſperity, which the good Government of Her Majeſty has ſecured to Her Kingdom, is a State of utter Diſtraction and Confuſion, wherein all Irreligion and Diſorder is not only unpuniſh'd, but encourag'd.

Nor will your Lordſhips wonder to find a Perſon, who has thus ſet himſelf to weaken the Title of Her Majeſty to the Throne, repreſenting Her Adminiſtration like that of one who has no Title at all.

And from this ruinous and almoſt irretrievable Poſture of Affairs, your Lordſhips will find him conſidering himſelf as a peculiar Meſſenger, appointed and called out to open the Eyes of the deluded People, and to undeceive a Nation thus abuſed. And this, my Lords, he has done, not in the Words of Meekneſs and Peace; not by exhorting them to the Exerciſe of the ſubmiſſive Doctrines of Paſſive-Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance; but he aſſures them, that he does not come to Preach Peace, but to ſound a Trumpet; he endeavours to excite ſuch true Sons of the Church as are of his Perſuaſion, to recover, defend, and maintain, with their Lives and Fortunes, their invaded Rights, and ſuch Doctrines as he has thought fit to deliver to them.

My Lords, I take Liberty to acquaint your Lordſhips, that the Commons conceive, that the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, and the Order and Peace of Government, neceſſarily enjoin it as a Duty upon all private Subjects, to repreſent their Senſe of the Nation's Grievances in a Courſe of Law and Juſtice, and not otherwiſe; and whenever the Oppreſſions become National and Publick, They claim it as the peculiar Right of their own Body, to purſue the evil Inſtruments of them, 'till Publick Vengeance be done; and at the ſame time, the Commons aſſure your Lordſhips, that they will account it their Indiſpenſible Duty to Her Majeſty and their Country, to aſſert the Juſtice and Wiſdom of Her Adminiſtration, againſt the Enemies of both.

I have thus ſtated to your Lordſhips the Nature of this Cauſe; wherein, I perſuade my ſelf, you perceive many Points of the higheſt Moment to the Peace and Welfare of the Kingdom.

The Tendency of the Crimes of which the Priſoner ſtands Accuſed, lies Open and Apparent: But I yet beg your Patience, to draw the Scene a little cloſer.

Your Lordſhips will conſider the Neceſſary Conſequence of a Poſition, meant and expounded ſo as to perſuade the World, that the Glorious Work of the Revolution was the Fruit of Rebellion, and the Work of Traitors. Does it not declare the late Reign to be one continued Uſurpation? And under what better Circumſtances does it bring the preſent?

Is the Act of Toleration condemn'd with any other Tendency than to weaken ſo great a Support of the Revolution it ſelf? And I intreat your Lordſhips, to conſider the certain Fatal Effects of an Univerſal Diſſatisfaction of the People, in Things that concern them neareſt, the Safety of the Church of England, and the Proteſtant Intereſt, and the Security of themſelves and their Poſterity.

It's true, my Lords, That, conſidered at a Diſtance, there ſeems a Repugnancy in this Gentleman's Syſtem. How comes it to paſs, that abſolute Non-Reſiſtance and the Spirit of Rebellion ſtand ſo well together, and are made ſo ſuitable, in the ſame Diſcourſe?

But, if your Lordſhips ſhould diſcern, in any Part of his Sermon, any dark Hints, or diſguiſed Opinions, of a Sole Hereditary Right of Succeſſion to the Crown, that will ſhew your Lordſhips the true Conſiſtency of the whole; your Lordſhips will find, that in his Opinion, the Duty of the Abſolute Non-Reſiſtance is owing to him only that has the Divine Commiſſion to Govern; and from thence, your Lordſhips can't fail of knowing againſt what Queen, what Government, what Eſtabliſhment, he Encourages the taking up the Arms of Reſiſtance.

I have

I have thus endeavoured to discharge the Trust reposed in me by the Commons, and am not unsensible how far short I have fallen; but, my Lords, I assure my self that the Cause can't suffer by it, its own Strength and Vigor will support it at this time, and so long, I hope, as the Nation endures.

Your Lordships see plainly, that the Duty of the Commons, which they will always discharge, called upon them very loudly, to make Inquisition on so remarkable an Offender as the Prisoner at the Bar.

Your Lordships see, they had not acquitted themselves aright, if they had intrusted the Prosecution of this great Cause in any other Hands but their own, or suffered these Points to have been handled in any Place, but in full Parliament; or before any other Judicature, but that of yonr Lordships: And it is with the greatest Chearfulness and Security, that they submit the Cause of the Queen, of the whole Nation, of the Protestant Religion, and Protestant Succession, to the Weight and Wisdom of your Lordships Judgment.

Mr. Attorney General. I did acquaint your Lordships that there were Two Sermons deliver'd into the House of Commons, which I desire may be now delivered in, and read to your Lordships. We must desire Mr. Jodrell to give an Account where he had those Books in his Hands.

Then Mr. Jodrell was Sworn.

Mr. Jodrell. These two Books were deliver'd in at the Table of the House of Commons, by one of the Members.

Mr. At. Gen. Were they shown to Dr. Sacheverell, when he attended the House?

Mr. Jodrell. They were shown to him at the Bar of the House.

Mr. At. Gen. Did he own them to be his Books, or what did he own about them?

Mr. Jodrell. That which is the Sermon Preach'd the Fifth of November, he owned to be his, and that he directed to be Printed.

Then that Book was deliver'd in.

Mr. At. Gen. There is another Sermon which was Preach'd at the Assizes at Derby, that was also shown him at the Bar, and he own'd it.

Lord Chancellor. What say you as to the Preface of the other Sermon?

Mr. Jodrell. He owned the Dedication of it to be agreeable with the Dedication of that Impression which he ordered to be Printed.

Mr. At. Gen. We pray that Dedication may be shown to him; if he denies it, we are ready to prove it by the Printer.

Sir Simon Harcourt. My Lords, The Doctor did own the Sermon, and the Dedication of both the Sermons, before the House of Commons; and he will not give your Lordships the Trouble of hearing any Proof of them. He doth own them.

Mr. At. Gen. Then we desire they may be read.

Clerk reads the Dedication of the Derby Sermon; and the Dedication and Sermon at St. Paul's.

The DEDICATION of a SERMON Preach'd at the Assizes held at Derby, August 15, 1709. By Henry Sacheverell, D. D. Fellow of Magdalen-College, Oxon, and Chaplain of St. Saviour's, Southwark.

To the Right Worshipful

GEORGE SACHEVERELL, Esq;

High Sheriff of the County of Derby;

AND TO

The Honourable Gentlemen of the GRAND-JURY,

Gilbert Thacker, Esq;
Robert Wilmot, Esq;
John Fitz-Herbert, Esq;
John Beresford, Esq;
Henry Vernon, Esq;
William Cook, Esq;
William Cavendish, Esq;
Francis Pole, Esq;

Paul Balledon, Esq;
James Chetham, Esq;
William Wolley, Esq;
George Turner, Gent.

Gentlemen,

THE Peculiar Honour You were pleas'd to confer upon me after the Delivery of this plain Discourse, was so Signal, that nothing less than this Publick Acknowledgment can acquit Me of Ingratitude.

Now, when the Principles, and Interests, of our Church, and Constitution, are so shamefully Betray'd, and Run down, it can be no little Comfort to all those who wish their Welfare and Security, to see, that notwithstanding the Secret Malice, and Open Violence they are Persecuted with, there are still to be found such Worthy Patrons of both, who dare Own and Defend them as well against the Rude and Presumptuous Insults of the One Side, as the Base, Undermining Treachery of the Other; and who Scorn to Sit silently by, and partake in the Sins of these Associated Malignants.

Tho' the Truth seems to be so much Forsaken at present, yet, God be thank'd, they shall yet find, to our Honour, that We have still amongst Us those who have Courage to Speak it, as well as those who have Lives and Fortunes to Maintain it: And tho the Age is sunk into the Lowest Dregs of Corruption that it cannot endure Sound Doctrine, there are not wanting Some to Preach it, and Others to Support it, at the Expence of Both. May the Influence of your Good Examples, which as much Animates our Friends, as it Terrifies our Enemies, be as diffusively Prevailing, as 'tis nobly Conspicuous, and the Blessing of that Church attend you, which you so Eminently adorn and sustain!

And, as I am oblig'd by the Relation I have the Honour to bear to your Family, may a double Portion of the Divine Favour rest on You (Mr. High-Sheriff) whose Commands I was very ready to execute in this Office, since you thought neither the Advancement of your Years, so generously expended for the Good

Good of your Country, nor the great Trouble attending this Poſt, ſufficient to exempt you from ſhewing that ſteady Loyalty and Zeal to ſerve Her Majeſty and the Government, for which you have been ſo remarkably Diſtinguiſh'd.

I am, with all Regard,

GENTLEMEN,

Your very Humble Servant,

Henry Sacheverell.

The PERILS of FALSE BRETHREN, both in Church and State:

Set forth in a

SERMON Preach'd before the Right Honourable the LORD-MAYOR, Aldermen, and Citizens of London, at the Cathedral-Church of St. Paul, on the Fifth of November, 1709. By Henry Sacheverell, D. D. Fellow of Magdalen-College, Oxon, and Chaplain of St. Saviour's Southwark.

To the Right Honourable

Sir SAMUEL GARRARD, Bart

Lord-Mayor of the City of London.

My LORD,

BY Your Lordſhip's Command this Diſcourſe ventures to appear in Publick, in Contempt of all thoſe Scandalous Miſrepreſentations the Malicious Adverſaries of our Church have traduc'd it with, and that Impartial Sentence it had the Honour to receive from ſome of thoſe Acute, and Wiſe Judges, who Condemn'd it without Sight, or Hearing. But 'tis no New Thing with ſome Men to Cenſure at random what lies out of their Sphere; Examining a Cauſe may prove Dangerous, for fear of their own Conviction of its Merits. When Men are reſolv'd to leap into a Gulph, the beſt way is to ſhut their Eyes, for fear they ſhould ſee their Danger, and Repent of their Folly. When they are thus abandon'd, and given up to Ruin, the Charitable Hand, that would hold out an unwelcome Light to prevent it, muſt expect to be treated with that ungrateful Inſolence, and Reproach, which uſually attends the Generous Freedom of thoſe who Dare ſpeak Seaſonable, and Neceſſary Truths. That Patient's Caſe doubtleſs is very Deſperate, that ſets himſelf againſt his Cure; and when Men are ſo ſtupidly harden'd in their Errors as to reſiſt the moſt glaring Evidence, there's no room for Argument, or Goſpel. Moſes, and the Prophets, may with Chriſt, and his Apoſtles, be Baniſh'd our Synagogues, when Truth muſt be Oppreſs'd by Number, and Noiſe, and Rebellious Appeals to the People, as the only Judges of Right, and Wrong, and the dernier Reſort of Juſtice, and Dominion. Are not theſe the Faſhionable Methods now made uſe of to Overbear, and Silence our Church, to Affront and Revile our Legiſlature, in order to Break in upon the Prerogative of the Crown? By Threatning them with Imaginary Legions, and a popular Tribunal, where their Authority, and Eſtabliſhment are to be Try'd and Determin'd? To put a ſtop to which Dangerous and Encroaching Miſchief, that now with Impunity walks up and down thro' this Diſtracted Kingdom, I thought it my Duty (being Summon'd to this Office by your Lordſhip) to Diſcharge it in the BEST METHOD I could, to Preſerve Us from theſe Malicious Deſigns, by endeavouring, if poſſible, to Open the Eyes of the Deluded People in this Our Great Metropolis; being Conſcious of what Prodigious Importance it is to the Welfare of the whole Nation, to have its Rich, and Powerful Inhabitants ſet right in their Notions of Government, both in Church, and State; that they may not be Flatter'd into their Ruin, but ſeeing the Fatal Conſequences of theſe Damnable Falſe Doctrines, which ſome Seditious Impoſtors have labour'd to Poyſon 'em with, may Forſake, and Deteſt them. I am confident, My Lord, that this Glorious, and Renown'd City can Boaſt of ſo many Excellent Examples of Unſhaken Steadineſs, Diſintereſted Probity and True Zeal, and Loyalty for Our Church, and Sovereign, that if they would act with the ſame Open, and Undaunted Reſolution Your Lordſhip does, theſe Affrighting Fantoms muſt Vaniſh. But if Honeſt Gentlemen will ſit ſtill, and give up their Cauſe through want of Courage, or a Juſt Senſe of the Dangerous Attempts of Our Enemies, without the Spirit of Prophecy, We may foretel what will become of Our Conſtitution, when 'tis ſo Vigorouſly Attack'd from Without, and ſo Lazily Defended from Within.

We are told by theſe Men, who would fain ſhut both our Eyes, and our Mouths, in order the more effectually to Undermine, and Deſtroy Us, that the Pulpit is not a Place for Politicks; and that 'tis the Buſineſs of a Clergyman to Preach Peace, and not ſound a Trumpet in Sion; ſo expreſly contrary to the Command of God, to Cry aloud, and Spare not. My Lord, I was humbly of Opinion, that the Fifth Commandment was Genuine; the Fanaticks would do well to ſtrike that Dangerous Precept out of the Decalogue, as the Papiſts have the Second, that neither might Riſe in Judgment againſt theſe United Friends, and Brethren. Now as This ſtands the Firſt in the Second Table, is it not of the utmoſt Importance, to be rightly Underſtood, as containing the Principal Duty that we owe to God's Vice-Gerents, which has been ſo Scandalouſly, and Villanouſly Miſinterpreted of late, to the Great Diſhonour of Both? Certainly Our Church thought ſo Formerly, when it took ſuch Care to Guard Our Obedience, with more Homilies concerning the Peril of Rebellion, than of any other Sin. And when was more Reaſon for Enforcing their Doctrines than now, when We ſee theſe admirable Diſſuaſives againſt Faction, and Sedition, maliciouſly Wreſted to Countenance, and Support it? If our Excellent Conſtitution apprehends no Hazard from theſe Licentious Proceedings, I am ſure Thoſe who would defend it from them, have reaſon to do ſo, with regard to their Own Perſons: Our Paſtors can't do their Duty, without being Menac'd for it, and Slander'd by the Vile Amanuenſes of the Mob, to expoſe us to their Fury, as Papiſts, and Men Diſaffected to Her Majeſty's Government, whoſe Safety, Rights and Eſtabliſhment together with Thoſe of the Church, We ſo earneſtly contend for; which I ſolemnly here Declare clare (as I did before in this Diſcourſe*) to be my only* Aim and Intention; and in an humble way to follow the Footſteps of Your Lordſhip, who is ſo Bright an Ornament, and Support of them. That This Great City may Flouriſh under Your Auſpicious Conduct, and never want a Magiſtrate of Your ſteady Principles to Guide and Govern it, is the hearty Prayer of,

My LORD,

Your LORDSHIP's

moſt Humble Servant,

HENRY SACHEVERELL.

2 COR. xi. 26.

In Perils among Falſe Brethren.

'AMONG All the moſt Dreadful Plots 'that ever Threaten'd this Church, and 'Kingdom, the Diſmal Tragedy contriv'd 'as this Day to be Executed on Both, may juſtly 'claim the Horrible Precedence, and conſequently 'the Higheſt Expreſſions of Our Gratitude for ſo 'Aſtoniſhing and Miraculous a Deliverance from it. 'For whether we conſider the Black Depth of 'its ſubtle Contrivance, the Deſtructive Extent, 'and Sanguinary Conſequences of it, or its Sur-'prizing, and Unaccountable Diſcovery, We muſt 'confeſs, that nothing but the All-Powerful, and 'Gracious Hand of God, interpoſing againſt the ut-'ter Subverſion of Our Nation, and Religion, could 'have prevented ſuch a Fatal Conſpiracy. A Con-'ſpiracy! ſo full of the moſt Unheard-of Malice, 'moſt Inſatiable Cruelty, moſt Diabolical Revenge, 'as only could be hatch'd in the Cabinet-Council of 'Hell, and brought forth in a Conclave of Romiſh 'Jeſuits! Now tho' the Hiſtory of this Unparal-'lel'd Myſtery of Iniquity was Deſign'd againſt Us 'at ſuch a Diſtance of Time, and the Fact ſo evi-'dently Acknowledg'd, that the Papiſts themſelves 'are ſo far from Denying, that they Extol it with 'the Higheſt Panegyrics; ſo that there needs nei-'ther Proof of the one, nor Repetition of the other: 'Yet doubtleſs 'tis as much our Duty, as Intereſt, 'to keep up the Annual Celebration of this Never-'to-be-forgotten Feſtival. For that the very Face, 'and Shadow of our Church, and Conſtitution, is 'yet Surviving; That this Good, and Pious Relict 'of the Royal Family Sits now Happily upon the 'Throne of Her Great Anceſtors; That our Hierar-'chy, and Nobility was not finally Extirpated and 'cut off; That our Country was not made an Acel-'dama, a Field of Blood, and a Receptacle of U-'ſurping Robbers; That We yet, without Slave-'ry, Superſtition, or Idolatry, enjoy the Benefit of 'our Excellent Laws, and moſt Holy Profeſſion Un-'defil'd: In a word, That God has yet vouch-'ſaf'd us this Opportunity of coming into his Pre-'ſence, to Acknowledge theſe Ineſtimable Bleſſings, 'is owing to his Mercy ſo ſignally ſhewn to Us, in 'Diſappointing the Barbarous Maſſacre intended 'This Day. A Day! which ought to ſtand for 'Ever in the Engliſh Kalender, as an Eternal Æra, 'at the One End, as the Thirtieth Day of January 'at the Other, for Indelible Monuments of the Irre-'concilable Rage, and Blood-Thirſtineſs of both the 'Popiſh, and Fanatick Enemies of Our Church, and 'Government! For theſe are equally ſuch Treache-'rous FALSE BRETHREN, from whom we 'muſt always expect the utmoſt Perils, and againſt 'whom we can never ſufficiently Arm Our ſelves 'with the greateſt Caution, and Security. Theſe 'TWO DAYS indeed, are but One United Proof, 'and Viſible Teſtimonial of the ſame Dangerous, and 'Rebellious Principles, theſe Confederates in Iniquity 'maintain: And as the One is but a Thankſgiving 'for our Deliverance from what the Firſt Projected; 'ſo is the Other an Humiliation, for what God per-'mitted the Latter, by Their Help and Direction, to 'put in Execution. I think therefore the Beſt way 'of Acknowledging theſe Great Mercies, and Judg-'ments of God, and Acquitting Both Solemnities 'in a Proper way, is by ſo juſtly Conſidering Our 'Circumſtances with reſpect to Each Side, as to 'Guard againſt Their Malicious, and Factious De-'ſigns for the future; that we may never Truſt 'Either, to need a Second Deliverance from thoſe 'Villainous Enterprizes, they will never ceaſe to 'put in Practice, whenever they ſee an Opportunity 'of Doing it with Security.

'Now as Perſecution, and Affliction, were the 'diſtinguiſhing Badges of the Meſſiah, who was a 'Man of Sorrows, and Acquainted with Griefs; ſo 'to convince his Diſciples, that his Kingdom was 'not of this World, He Bequeath'd the ſame Sad 'Legacy to Them, to ſhare the Character, as well 'as imitate the Example, of their dying Lord, and 'Maſter. With unſhaken Courage, and Reſolution, 'to take up His Bloody Croſs, and follow the Great 'Leader of Their Salvation: To March with a 'Chearful Magnanimity through all the Powers of 'Darkneſs, looking unto Jeſus the Author and Fi-'niſher of their Faith, who for the Joy that was 'ſet before Him, Endur'd the Croſs, deſpiſing the 'Shame, and is ſet down at the Right-hand of the 'Throne of God. Thus was His Church to expect 'no Better Treatment than Her Great Founder, 'and Original, to paſs through the ſame Fiery Try-'al, to be made Perfect through Sufferings, to be 'Militant here, in order to be Triumphant here-'after; and like Him, to be Crown'd with Thorns 'in this World, to Obtain a Crown of Glory in the 'Next. Not only to Encounter the Open Fury 'and Violence of Her Profeſs'd, and Inveterate Ene-'mies; but (which was the Bittereſt Part of Her 'Sufferings) like Her Saviour, to be Betray'd, and 'perfidiouſly Given up by Her Own Falſe-hearted, 'and Inſidious Apoſtles.

'As the Hiſtories of the Church in All Ages, 'are as 'twere but One Continu'd Ratification of 'this Melancholly Truth, made up of ſo many 'Mournful Narratives, of the Unhappy Lives, and 'Diſaſtrous Deaths of Saints, Martyrs, and Confeſ-'ſors, who Bravely ſeal'd the Faith with their Blood; 'ſo it is Exemplified in no One Inſtance more 'than in that Primitive, and Heroick Champion of 'Chriſtianity, the Author of this Epiſtle. Where-'in, for the Wonder, and Emulation of Poſterity, 'He has Recorded a Long and Frightful Catalogue 'of thoſe Aſtoniſhing Calamities He had underwent 'in the Propagation of the Goſpel. Such Ample 'Satisfaction, did the Pious Labours of the Con-'vert, make for the wicked Perſecution of the 'Jew; when by a Miraculous Turn of Providence,

'Greateſt Sinner was changed into the Devouteſt 'Saint, and the moſt Zealous Bigot againſt, into 'the moſt Reſolute Sufferer for, Religion. Yet 'however this Great Apoſtle might have Attain'd 'ſo extraordinary a Degree of Merit, as to Out- 'ſhine all that Noble Army of Martyrs, which Adorn 'the Bloody Kalendar of the Church; nay, as He 'expreſſes it, to come never a whit ſhort of the 'Greateſt Apoſtles, and as 'twere to Vye Characters 'with the very Choſen of the Son of God; Does it 'not ſeem a little to carry the Air of Oſtentation, 'and Vain-glory, thus to claim the Pre-eminence, 'and Supremacy, and to Boaſt himſelf in that Pom- 'pous Shew of Services that He hath done for God, 'and the Church? But We ſhall eaſily Reconcile 'the Apoſtle, and the Orator, and find no Imputa- 'tion upon his Modeſty, if we conſider the Occa- 'ſion of it. He had (as He informs Us) with 'much Pains, and Expence, Planted Chriſtianity 'in Corinth, where he had no ſooner by a Mira- 'culous Miniſtry Eſtabliſh'd it, but ſeveral Falſe 'Apoſtles, and Seducers, were in his Abſence Crept 'into the Church, to Vitiate, and Corrupt his 'New Proſelytes, under the Pretence of More Pu- 'rity and Holineſs, (like Our Modern Sectariſts) to 'raiſe a Schiſm amongſt 'em, and to Draw them off 'from the Opinion they had of St. Paul; by Ri- 'diculing Him for his Perſon, and Addreſs, as a 'Little Unedifying, Ungifted Preacher, of a weak 'Bodily Preſence, and Contemptible Speech; thus 'Wounding the Miniſtry, thro' the Sides of the 'Miniſter. Such Slights and Provocations, certain- 'ly were a ſufficient Ground for the Apoſtle to in- 'ſiſt upon his Character, leſt the Goſpel ſhould 'Suffer by it: And with Authority to Rebuke the 'Ingratitude of the Corinthians, and Vindicate his 'Dignity, and Tranſcendent Exellencies, againſt the 'baſe Lies, and Calumnies caſt upon Him by ſuch 'falſe Apoſtles, deceitful Workers, transforming 'themſelves into the Apoſtles of Chriſt, like their 'True Father the Devil, transforming himſelf into 'an Angel of Light. With what Juſtice then 'might He here ſtand upon the Compariſon, when 'thus vilely Run down, by ſuch Wretched, Emp- 'ty, Hypocritical Sophiſters? To Appeal to his 'Spiritual Gifts, and Revelations, and Sufferings, 'in Competition with ſuch Impudent, Boaſting, 'Self conceited Pretenders, was the Loweſt Act of 'Humility, and Good-Nature; to Condeſcend to 'Diſpute with ſuch as ought to be Anſwer'd, not 'with Arguments, but Anathema's! Yet behold the 'Singular Modeſty of this Great Apoſtle! He can- 'not enter upon his own Juſtification, without 'much Reluctance, and a long Apology to intro- 'duce it. I am become a Fool in Glorying (ſays 'He) but you have Compell'd Me to it. I ſpeak 'as concerning Reproach, as tho' we had been Weak: 'Howbeit, wherein any is Bold, I ſpeak fooliſhly, I 'am bold alſo. Are they Hebrews? ſo am I! Are 'they Iſraelites? ſo am I! Are they the Seed of 'Abraham? ſo am I! Are they Miniſters of Chriſt? 'I ſpeak as a Fool, I am more. In Labours more 'Abundant, in Stripes above Meaſure, in Priſons 'more Frequent, in Deaths often; of the Jews five 'Times received I forty Stripes, ſave One. Thrice 'was I beaten with Rods, Once was I ſton'd, Thrice 'I ſuffer'd Shipwreck, a Night and a Day have I 'been in the Deep. In Journeyings often, in Perils 'of Waters, in Perils of Robbers, in Perils by my 'own Countrymen, in Perils by the Heathen, in Pe- 'rils in the City, in Perils in the Wilderneſs, in Pe- 'rils in the Sea, in Perils amongſt FALSE 'BRETHREN. In this Rhetorical Abridgment 'of the Sufferings, and Dangers of his Life, there 'a very Obſervable Gradation; the Apoſtle ſtill Ri- 'ſes in his Calamities, and puts this Laſt as the 'Higheſt Perfection of his Miſery, as that which 'made the deepeſt Impreſſion upon his Paſſions, and 'what He bore with the greateſt Reſentment and 'Difficulty. The many ſevere Pains, and Tortures 'inflicted on his Body, were nothing to This; nay, 'the Good-Nature, and Mercy of Highway-men, and 'Pagans, and even the Devouring Boſom of the 'Deep, were to be Preferr'd before, and ſooner '(it ſeems) to be Truſted to, than the more cer- 'tainly Deſtructive, and Fallacious Boſom of a Trea- 'cherous, FALSE BROTHER.

'I ſhall take the Expreſſion in its full Latitude, 'without confining it to the expreſs Deſign of the 'Place; tho' it were very Obvious to draw a Parallel 'here, betwixt the ſad Circumſtances of the Church of 'Corinth formerly, and of the Church of England at 'preſent; wherein Her Holy Communion has been 'Rent, and Divided by Factious, and Schiſmatical 'Impoſtors; Her pure Doctrine has been Corrupted, 'and Defil'd; Her Primitive Worſhip, and Diſcipline 'Prophan'd, and Abus'd; Her Sacred Orders Deny'd 'and Villify'd; Her Prieſts, and Profeſſors (like 'St. Paul) Calumniated, Miſrepreſented, and Ridi- 'cul'd; Her Altars, and Sacraments Proſtituted to 'Hypocrites, Deiſts, Socinians, and Atheiſts; and 'this done, I wiſh I could not ſay, without Diſcou- 'ragement, I am ſure with Impunity, not only by our 'profeſs'd Enemies, but which is worſe, by our pre- 'tended Friends, and FALSE BRETHREN. But 'to proceed to the Matter before us: In my Diſcourſe 'upon theſe Words I ſhall endeavour,

'I. Firſt, To ſhew in what Senſe, and upon what 'Accounts Men may be Denominated FALSE 'BRETHREN.

'II. Secondly, I will lay before you the Great PERIL, 'and Miſchief of ſuch, both in Church and 'State.

'III. Thirdly, I will ſet forth the Heinous Malignity, 'Enormous Guilt, and Folly of this Prodigious 'Sin.

'IV. Laſtly, As a Conſequence from the Whole, I 'will undertake to Evince what mighty Reaſon 'we have at all Times, and more eſpecially at 'preſent, to ſtick firmly to the Principles both 'of our Church and Conſtitution; and how much 'it concerns Us to Beware of all thoſe FALSE 'BRETHREN, that Deſert, or Betray them.

'I. And Firſt, I will ſhew you in what Senſe, and 'upon what Accounts Men may be Denominated 'FALSE Brethren. In order to which it will be 'Neceſſary to State the full Extent of the Nature 'of FALSE BROTHERHOOD.

'This Term Ψευδαδελφία being of a Relative Sig- 'nification, muſt reſpect Men as conſidered under 'all Social Caſes, or as they are plac'd under ſuch 'Regards, and Circumſtances, as in Duty oblige 'them both to Think, Speak, and Act, with Truth, 'and Integrity, correſpondent to their inward Prin- 'ciples, and outward Profeſſions. And wherein they 'are found deviating wilfully from either, by an un- 'reaſonable Alteration of Judgment, by any tacit 'Mental Reſerve, or Equivocation, upon any indi- 'rect Ends, or Deſigns, or guiding their Expreſſions 'and Actions contrary to theſe ſtated Rules, they 'are guilty of Falſhood, both in Conſcience and 'Practice, of a Breach of that Veracity, Juſtice,

'and Truſt that they owe to God, themſelves, and 'the World, and are properly what are ſtil'd in the 'Text FALSE BRETHREN. For whereas every 'Man that either believes, ſpeaks, or acts Rationally, 'muſt be ſuppos'd to have ſome Standing-Ground, 'and Meaſure of Judgment, ſettled upon ſome 'Grand, Primitive Maxims of Truth, both Speculative and Practical, whether founded upon Revelation, Reaſon, or Honour, which are what we call 'any Man's Principles either in Religion, Society, or 'Friendſhip: If theſe Fundamental Axioms have 'with true Deliberation been ſifted, and weighed, 'not only as to their intrinſic Nature, and Goodneſs, 'but as to their outward Tendency, and Conſequences, 'they muſt appear, tho' not perhaps as infallible 'in themſelves, yet with Reſpect to the Perſon ſo 'conſidering them, as demonſtrative Truths, as the 'Light, and Oracles of God, and Reaſon, ſet up 'in his Breaſt; by which He is always oblig'd to 'Direct, and Govern his Thoughts, Reſolutions, and 'Actions; and which if He ſwerves from, diſowns, 'or betrays upon any ſiniſter Motive whatſoever '(tho' after this nice Search they ſhould prove 'Erroneous) involve the Man in a very heinous Sin, 'treacherouſly acting againſt his Judgment, and 'giving the Lye both to his Faith, his Reaſon and 'his Knowledge. This Matter being thus briefly 'Premis'd, it is Evident, that with regard to the 'ſeveral Objects it is Converſant about, Men may 'in three Reſpects be term'd Guilty of FALSE 'BROTHERHOOD.

'1. Firſt, With Relation to God, the Church, 'or Religion, in which they hold Faith, or Communion.

'2. Secondly, With Relation to the State, Government, or Society, of which they are Members.

'3. Thirdly, With Relation to thoſe Private 'Perſons, with whom they have either Friendſhip, 'Correſpondence, or Dealing.

'1. And Firſt, He is a FALSE BROTHER 'with Relation to God, Religion, or the Church in 'which he holds Communion, that Believes, Maintains, or Propagates any Falſe, or Heterodox Tenet, or Doctrine, repugnant to the Expreſs Declarations of Scripture, and the Decrees, or Senſe of 'the Church, and Antiquity thereupon. For as in 'the firſt alone are contain'd the Eſſential Points, 'and Articles of our moſt Holy Faith; ſo the 'Primitive Expoſitions, Deciſions, and Practice of 'the ancient Writers of the Pure, and uncorrupted 'Ages of Chriſtianity, muſt certainly be acknowledg'd 'the beſt, and moſt Authentic Comments upon their 'Meaning. In Oppoſition to which, if any upſtart 'Noveliſt, or ſelf-conceited Enthuſiaſt, out of Pride, 'as ſetting Himſelf above theſe Genuine Oracles of 'Truth; or out of Ignorance, as being unacquainted 'with the Learning, and Records of Antiquity; or 'out of Perverſeneſs, ſcorning to ſubmit his Underſtanding to the Dictates, or better Reaſon of 'others; or out of Ambition, and Vain-glory, as affecting to be the Head, and Leader of ſome New 'Sect, or Party; (all, or either of which have, 'and will be found for ever the Parents of Hereſy) 'and ſhould break in upon this Sacred Depoſitum 'of the Church; and ſhould attempt Blaſphemouſly to Corrupt that inviolable Fountain of 'Truth, with Erroneous Conjectures, and Vain Philoſophical Syſtems; to Prophane and Degrade the Holy Myſteries of Religion, by abſurd Interpretations, and impudent Reaſonings; ſhould we ſtick 'to call ſuch a Rebel to God, and Traytor to his 'Church, a FALSE BROTHER? If a Man ſhould 'Dare not only to Revive, but to Juſtify any Execrable, Exploded Hereſies, as thoſe of Arrius, 'and Neſtorius, denying the Hypoſtatical Union, or 'the Eternity of the Son of God; or ſhould affirm 'that He was God in Man, or that the Godhead was only Locally in his Manhood, as God was in the Cloud; or that ſhould Preſume to Evacuate the 'great Sanction of the Goſpel, the Eternity of Hell-Torments; or Expound any of the Articles of 'Our Faith, in ſuch a Looſe and Vagrant way, as 'may ſuit 'em as well to a Mahometan's as a Chriſtian's Creed; and to lay open all thoſe Sacred 'Boundaries of the Church, to let in all Sectariſts, 'and Schiſmaticks, of whatſoever Wild, Romantic, or Enthuſiaſtick Notions, ſo as to make the Houſe 'of God, not only a Den of Thieves, but a Receptacle of Legions of Devils: Should we cover ſuch 'a Falſe Apoſtle under the Sacred Umbrage of a 'True Church-man? In ſhort, whoſoever preſumes 'to Recede the leaſt Tittle from the expreſs Word 'of God, or to explain the great Credenda of our 'Faith in New-fangl'd Terms of Modern Philoſophy, 'muſt publiſh a New-Goſpel, Un-god his Saviour, 'and Deſtroy his Revelation; and by unſettling the 'Univerſal, Receiv'd Doctrine of the Church, give 'up Chriſtianity into Scepticiſm, and Atheiſm; and 'to ſpeak the beſt of his Character, is FALSE both 'to his God, and his Religion, and ſhall be called hereafter, The Leaſt in the Kingdom of Heaven, 'how Great ſoever he may be in the Kingdoms 'here below. And as a Man may thus Betray the 'Doctrine of his Church, ſo is he no leſs FALSE to 'its Intereſt, that gives up any Point, of her Diſcipline, and Worſhip. Theſe are the Exterior 'Fences to Guard the Internals of Religion, without 'which they are left Naked, without Beauty, Order, or Defence. Should any Man, out of Ignorance, or Prejudice, to the Ancient Rights, and 'Eſſential Conſtitution, of the Catholick Church, 'Affirm, That the Divine Apoſtolical Inſtitution of Epiſcopacy, is a Novel Doctrine, not ſufficiently Warranted by Scripture, and that 'tis indifferent whether the Church is Govern'd by Biſhops, or Preſbyters; Is not ſuch an one an Apoſtate from his 'own Orders? Let the Chriſtian World be Judge, 'who beſt deſerve the Name of Church-Men, thoſe 'that ſtrictly Defend, and Maintain the Catholick 'Doctrines, upon which the Church, as a Society, 'is Founded, or thoſe who would Barter them for 'a Mungril-Union of all Sects? Thoſe who Zealouſly ſupport her Miſſion, which only can ſupport her, or thoſe who would deſtroy it, to take in 'Schiſmatical Presbyters without Epiſcopal Ordination, which would Un-Church the very Church, 'and Annihilate her Conſtitution? Is this the Spirit, and Doctrine of our Holy Mother? To aſſert 'Separation from Her Communion, to be no Schiſm; 'or if it was, that Schiſm is no Damnable Sin; 'that Occaſional Conformity is no Hypocriſy, but rather for the Benefit of the Church; that any one may be an Occaſional Conformiſt with Schiſmaticks, 'and yet not Guilty of Schiſm; that a Chriſtian may 'ſerve God in any Way or Congregation of Worſhip, 'as well by Extemporary Prayers, as by a Preſcrib'd Form, and Liturgy; that Conformity to the Church, 'and Eccleſiaſtical Authority, are no Parts of Morality, and a Good Life, which are only neceſſary to 'Salvation: That the Orders and Ceremonies of the 'Church, are only Carnal, Arbitrary Ordinances,

'to be Dispens'd with as Men please, both by Clergy 'and Laity; that the Censures and Excommunica- 'tions of the Church, are meer Bruta Fulmina; 'Canonical Obedience, and Absolution, Spiritual Ty- 'ranny, and Usurpation; and in a Word, that the 'whole Body of the Worship, and Discipline of the 'Church of England, is nothing else but Priestcraft, 'and Popery in Masquerade. If upon all Occasions 'to comply with the Dissenters both in Publick, 'and Private Affairs, as Persons of Tender Con- 'science, and Piety, to promote their Interests in 'Elections, to sneak to 'em for Places, and Prefer- 'ment, to Defend Toleration, and Liberty of Con- 'science, and under the Pretence of Moderation, 'to excuse Their Separation, and lay the Fault upon 'the True Sons of the Church, for carrying Matters 'too high; if to Court the Fanaticks in Private, 'and to hear 'em with Patience, if not Approbation, 'Rail at and Blaspheme the Church, and upon occa- 'sion to Justify the King's Murder; If to Flatter 'both the Dead and the Living in their Vices, and 'to tell the World, that if they have Wit, and 'Money enough, they need no Repentance, and 'that only Fools and Beggars can be Damn'd; If 'these, I say, are the Modish, and Fashionable 'Criterions of a True Church-Man, God deliver Us 'all from Such FALSE BRETHREN.

'There is another sort of them who are for a 'Neutrality in Religion, who really are of none, but 'are a secret sort of Reserv'd Atheists, who always 'pretend to be of the Church, join in the Herd, and 'will sometimes frequent our Publick Communion, 'as long as the Government appears on our side; 'but if any thing is to be got by it, can with as 'safe a Conscience slide privately into a Conventicle, 'and look as demure as the slyest Saint amongst 'em. 'They are equally of all, and of no Communion, they 'are the Gallio's that care for none of these Things; 'They tell us they are for the Religion Established by 'Law, but no longer than 'tis so; they can see nei- 'ther Sin nor Danger in that Ecclesiastical Bugbear, 'as they call Schism, yet talk very loud about Union, 'Comprehension, and Moderation; by all which cant- 'ing Expressions, they mean nothing but getting Mo- 'ney, and Preferment, by holding in with Persons 'of all Parties, and Characters, halting betwixt the 'Diversity of Opinions, and Reconciling God, and 'Belial for Gain. To these we may add those who 'either out of Fear, or Complaisance, can tamely 'and without Vindication, hear their God and Reli- 'gion Blasphem'd and Abus'd. But there is another 'sort of FALSE BRETHREN, who set up for 'a greater Perfection of Piety than their Neighbours, 'who like their Originals, the Pharisees in the Gos- 'pel, are always pleading their Merits before God, 'and the World, with an Ostentation of Sanctity, in 'comparison with their Profane Brethren, with a 'Stand off, for I am Holier than Thou! These are 'the Saints, that under the pretence of Conscience, 'shall commit the most abominable Impieties, and 'justify Murder, Sacrilege, and Rebellion, by Texts 'of Scripture. There are yet another sort of FALSE 'BRETHREN, of a quite opposite Character to 'these, who wish well to the Church of England, 'and really believe her Constitution in Doctrine, 'Discipline, and Worship, the best and purest in the 'Christian World; and when either their Tongues, 'Hands, or Purses are wanting in her Defence, are 'ready to Sacrifice their Persons, and Estates in 'her Vindication. These indeed are noble Qualifica- 'tions, and 'tis pity so good a Character should 'want any thing to Compleat it. And to turn the 'Words of our Blessed Saviour to the rich Man, 'yet one thing thou lackest, thy Zeal is to be shewn 'in, as well as for, the Communion of the Church, 'in obeying Her Precepts, as well as defending Her 'Rights. In all these Cases there is a Serious and 'Deliberate Act of Treachery against Conscience and 'Conviction, a base Forfeiture of that Spiritual Al- 'legiance we owe to God, and our Church, as a 'sacred Body, and Fraternity, that ought to preserve 'inviolable Unity, professing one Faith, one Bap- 'tism, one God, and Saviour of us all.

'2. But Secondly, Men may be Denominated 'FALSE BRETHREN, with Relation to the 'State, Government, or Society of which they are 'Members. The Constitutions of most Govern- 'ments differing according to their several Frames, 'and Laws, upon which they are Built, and Found- 'ed, it is impossible to lay down any one Universal 'Rule, as the Scheme and Measure of Obedience, 'that may square to every one of them. Only this 'Maxim in general, I presume, may be Establish'd 'for the Safety, Tranquility, and Support of all 'Governments, that no Innovation whatsoever should 'be allow'd in the Fundamental Constitution of any 'State, without a very pressing, nay, unavoidable 'Necessity for it; and whosoever singly or in a pri- 'vate Capacity should attempt it, is Guilty of the 'Highest Misdemeanour, and is an Enemy to that 'Politick Body of which he is a Member. To ap- 'ply this Maxim to our Government, in which the 'Truth of it will very evidently appear. Our 'Constitution both in Church and State, has been 'so admirably contriv'd, with that Wisdom, Weight, 'and Sagacity, and the Temper, and Genius of each 'so exactly Suited, and Modell'd to the mutual 'Support, and Assistance of one another, that 'tis 'hard to say, whether the Doctrines of the Church 'of England contribute more to Authorize, and En- 'force our Civil Laws, or our Laws to Maintain 'and Defend the Doctrines of our Church. The 'Natures of both are so nicely Correspondent, and 'so happily Intermixt, that 'tis almost impossi- 'ble to offer a Violation to the one, without Break- 'ing in upon the Body of the other. So that in all 'those Cases before mention'd, whosoever presumes 'to Innovate, Alter, or Misrepresent any Point in 'the Articles of the Faith of our Church, ought to 'be Arraign'd as a Traytor to our State; Hetero- 'doxy in the Doctrines of the one, naturally pro- 'ducing, and almost necessarily inferring Rebellion, 'and High Treason, in the other; and consequently 'a Crime that concerns the Civil Magistrate, as 'much to Punish, and Restrain, as the Ecclesiasti- 'cal. However this Assertion at first View may 'look like an High-flown Paradox, the Proof of it 'will fully appear in a few Instances. The Grand 'Security of our Government, and the very Pillar 'upon which it stands, is founded upon the steady 'Belief of the Subject's Obligation to an Absolute, 'and Unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Pow- 'er, in all Things lawful, and the utter Illegality of 'Resistance upon any Pretence whatsoever. But 'this Fundamental Doctrine, notwithstanding its Di- 'vine Sanction in the Express Command of God in 'Scripture, and without which, it is impossible any 'Government of any Kind, or Denomination in the 'World should subsist with Safety, and which has 'been so long the Honourable and Distinguishing 'Characteristick of Our Church, is now, it seems, 'quite Exploded, and Ridicul'd out of Counte- 'nance, as an Unfashionable, Superannuated, nay '(which is more wonderful) as a Dangerous Te- net,

'net, utterly Inconſiſtent with the Right, Liberty 'and Property, of the PEOPLE; who, as our 'New Preachers, and New Politicians teach us, (I 'ſuppoſe by a New and Unheard-of Goſpel, as well 'as Laws) have in Contradiction to Both, the Pow- 'er Inveſted in Them, the Fountain and Original of 'it, to Cancel their Allegiance at pleaſure, and call 'their Sovereign to account for High Treaſon againſt 'his Supreme Subjects forſooth; nay to Dethrone 'and Murder Him for a Criminal, as they did the 'Royal Martyr by a Judiciary Sentence. And, 'what is almoſt incredible, preſume to make their 'Court to their Prince, by maintaining ſuch Anti- 'monarchical Schemes. But, God be Thanked! 'neither the Conſtitution of our Church or State, 'is ſo far Alter'd, but that by the Laws of Both, '(ſtill in Force, and which I hope for ever will be) 'theſe Damnable Poſitions, let 'em come either from 'Rome, or Geneva, from the Pulpit, or the Preſs, 'are condemn'd for Rebellion, and High Treaſon. 'Our Adverſaries think they effectually ſtop our 'Mouths, and have Us Sure and Unanſwerable on 'this Point, when they urge the Revolution of this 'Day in their Defence. But certainly They are the 'Greateſt Enemies of That, and His Late Majeſty, 'and the moſt Ungrateful for the Deliverance, 'who endeavour to caſt ſuch Black and Odious 'Colours upon Both. How often muſt they be 'told, that the * King Himſelf ſolemnly Diſclaim'd 'the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance in His Declara- 'tion; and that the Parliament declar'd, That they 'ſet the Crown on His Head, upon no other Title, 'but that of the Vacancy of the Throne? And did 'they not Unanimouſly condemn to the Flames '(as it juſtly Deſerv'd) that Infamous Libel, that 'would have Pleaded the Title of Conqueſt, by 'which Reſiſtance was ſuppos'd? So Tender were 'they of the Regal Rights, and ſo averſe to in-'fringe the leaſt Tittle of our Conſtitution! We ſee 'how ready theſe Incendiaries are to take the leaſt 'Umbrage, to charge their own Curſed Tenets on 'the Church of England, to Derive their Guilt up-'on it, and Quit Scores with it for Their Iniquity! 'Thus do they endeavour to draw Compariſons, 'and to Juſtify the Horrid Actions and Princi- 'ples of Forty One, which have been of late Years, 'to the Scandal of Our Church, and Nation, ſo 'Publickly Defended, not only by the Agents and 'Writers of the Republican Faction, but by ſome 'that have the Confidence to Style themſelves Sons, 'and Presbyters of the Church of England; who, 'in open Defiance of the moſt peremptory Declara- 'tions of God in Scripture, (never to be evaded 'by any Shifts or Miſinterpretations) and the U- 'niverſal Doctrine, and Expoſitions of the Catholick 'Church upon it in all Ages, with the Expreſs Te- 'ſtimony, and Concurrence of Our Church, from its 'Reformation down to the Preſent Times, Corrobo- 'rated with the Senſe of Our Legiſlature, ſo un- 'exceptionably Confirm'd in Our Laws, Dare, in 'Deſpite and Contempt of all this Evidence, mani-'feſtly Defend the Reſiſtance of the Supreme Pow- 'er, under a New-fangl'd Notion of Self-Defence; 'the only Inſtance they ſhew of Shame, that they 'dare not YET maintain Rebellion by its Pro- 'per Name. Yet, if thoſe ſilly Pretences, and 'weak Excuſes for it alledg'd, carry any Strength, 'or Reaſon in them at all, they will equally ſerve 'to Juſtify All the Rebellions that ever were or can 'be committed in the World. Now as the Repub- 'licans Copy after the Papiſts in moſt of their Do- 'ctrines and Practices, I would fain know in this 'where the Difference lies, betwixt the Power 'Granted to, (as 'tis ſuppos'd Originally Inveſted, 'but from what Commiſſion God knows, in) the 'People, to Judge and Dethrone their Sovereigns, 'for any Cauſe they think fit; or a no leſs Uſurped 'Power of the Pope, to ſolve the People from 'their Allegiance, and diſpoſe of Sceptres, and Dia- 'dems to his Favourites, whenever he thinks it his 'Intereſt to pluck them from his Enemies Heads. 'Compariſons are generally Odious; but a Learned 'Biſhop of our Kingdom, whoſe Averſion to Po- 'pery, I hope, is not doubted, I mean the * Right 'Reverend the Lord Biſhop of Sarum, has been 'bold Judiciouſly to Determine, even on the Papiſts 'Side in this Caſe, That if ſuch a Depoſing Power 'is to be intruſted in Mortals Hands, leſs Inconve- 'niencies will enſue in placing it in One, than in 'Many; tho' God forbid it ever ſhould be Lodg'd 'in any other than that of God himſelf, the Origi- 'nal of all Power, from whom it proceeds, and to 'whom it muſt Return; the King of Kings, Lord 'of Lords, and ONLY Ruler of Princes. So that 'theſe Romantick wild Notions will carry Us into 'ſomething worſe (if 'tis poſſible) than Popery it 'ſelf; more Fatal to the Rights and Intereſts of 'the Crown, and the Welfare and Tranquility of 'Our Conſtitution, which can never be Safe under 'ſuch Precarious Dependencies, and Deſpotick Ima- 'ginations. A Prince indeed in another Senſe, will 'be the Breath of his Subjects Noſtrils, to be blown 'in, or out, at their Caprice, and Pleaſure, and a 'worſe Vaſſal than even the meaneſt of his Guards. 'Such Villanous and Seditious Principles as theſe, 'Demand a Confutation from that Government they 'ſo inſolently Threaten and Arraign, and which are 'only Proper to be Anſwer'd by that Sword they 'would make our Princes bear in Vain, by the So- 'long-call'd-for Cenſure of an Eccleſiaſtical Synod, 'and the Correction of a Provok'd and Affronted 'Legiſlature; to whoſe Strict Juſtice, and un-'deſerv'd Mercy, I commit both them and Their 'Authors. Only give me leave to diſmiſs 'em with 'a Remark of the Pious and Learned Biſhop An- 'drews, upon ſome of their FALSE BRE-'THREN in his Time. † "What (ſays that "Good Prelate) is now become of thoſe Words of "God, Touch not mine Anointed? Are we not "fallen into Strange Times, that Men dare thus "Print and Publiſh, yea, even Preach and Pro-

* His Highneſs Declares, in Oppoſition to thoſe who give out, That we do intend to CONQUER and ENSLAVE theſe NATIONS, that we have thought fit to add a few Words to our Declaration; "It is not to be imagin'd, that either thoſe who "have invited Us, or thoſe who are already come to Aſſiſt Us, "can join in a WICKED ATTEMPT OF CONQUEST, to "make void their own Lawful Titles to their Honours, Eſtates, "and Intereſts." See the Prince of Orange's Declaration. Dr. Kennet's Hiſtory of the Four Laſt Reigns, p. 493.

* Leſs Diſorder may be apprehended from the Pretenſions of the Roman Biſhops, than from theſe Maxims, that put the Power of Judging and Controlling the Magiſtrate in the PEOPLE's Hands, which opens a Door to Endleſs Confuſions, and indeed, ſets every Private Perſon upon the Throne, and introduceth an Anarchy, which will never admit of Order and Remedy; whereas, Thoſe who have but One PRETENDER over Them, could more eaſily deal with Him, and more Vigorouſly RESIST Him. ' Certainly the Toleration was never intended to In- ' dulge, and Cherish such Monsters, and Vipers in ' our Bosom, that scatter Their Pestilence at Noon- ' day, and will Rend, Distract, and Confound, the ' firmest and Best-settl'd Constitution in the World. ' In short, as the English Government can never be ' Secure on any other Principles, but strictly Those ' of the Church of England, so I will be bold to ' say, where any Part of it is Trusted in Persons of ' any Other Notions, They must be False to Them- ' selves, if They are True to Their Trusts; or if ' They are True to Their Opinions, and Interests, ' must Betray That Government They are Enemies ' to upon Principle. Indeed, We must do 'em that ' Justice, to confess, That since the Sectarists have ' found out a Way (which their Forefathers, God ' knows, as Wicked as they were, would have Ab- ' horr'd) to swallow not only Oaths, but Sacra- ' ments, to Qualify themselves to get into Places, ' and Preferments; these Sanctify'd Hypocrites can ' put on a Shew of Loyalty, and seem tolerably Easy ' in the Government, if they can Engross the Ho- ' nours and Profits of it: But let Her Majesty ' reach out Her little Finger to touch their Loins, ' and these Sworn Adversaries to Passive Obedience, ' and the Royal Family, shall fret themselves, and ' Curse their Queen, and their God, and shall look ' upwards. And so much for Our Political FALSE ' BRETHREN, till I come to speak with 'em again ' by and by. I proceed, ' 3. In the Third Place, to a more Inferior Spe- ' cies of Them, that Act in a lower Sphere, name- ' ly, Those who in their Private Capacities, are ' FALSE either in their Friendship, Correspon- ' dence, or Dealing: But these Sins of Unfaithful- ' ness, as the Psalmist calls them, being of so Copi- ' ous, and Extensive a Nature, and respecting the ' Private Concerns of Human Life, I shall only ' trouble You with enumerating some of the Gene- ' ral Instances of them: Such as are, Betraying ' Our Friend in his Secrets, Deserting him in his ' Misfortunes, in not Defending his Reputation, ' when falsly Accus'd, in an Obsequious Compliance ' with Him in any Indirect, or Dishonourable Mea- ' sures, in a Nauseous Flattery of his Follies, or ' Vices, in Permitting him in any Error, without ' Admonition, and in giving him wrong Advice, and ' not leading him out of it. Such are also with ' regard to Our Neighbour, the Concealing, or ' Misrepresenting any Truth that he is Concern'd to ' know, Playing upon his Faith with doubtful and ' ambiguous Insinuations, with Double Equivocati- ' ons, and Dissimulatory Expressions, an Actual ' Breach of Word, Promise, or Profession, Clande- ' stine Undermining, by Circumvention, Fraud, or ' Craft, Back-biting, and secretly Slandering, Pro- ' pagating Scandal, and Bearing False Witness, and ' Partaking several ways in his Sins; which are all ' the Characteristicks of an Insidious, Treacherous, ' and False-hearted Knave. But these Vices being ' of a Private Consideration, I hasten to the next ' General Head propos'd, Namely,

' II. Secondly, To lay before You the Great Peril, ' and Mischiefs of these FALSE BRETHREN ' in Church and State; which I shall endeavour to ' do, by Proving that They Weaken, Undermine, ' and Betray in themselves, and Encourage, and ' put it in the Power of Our Profess'd Enemies, to ' Overturn, and Destroy the Constitution and Esta- ' blishment of Both.

' 1. And First, as to the Church. But here it is ' very Necessary to Premise, That by the Church ' of England, We are to understand the True Ge- ' nuine Notion of it, as it stands Contra-distin- ' guish'd in its Establish'd Doctrine, Discipline, and ' Worship, from all Other Churches, and Schisma- ' ticks, who would Obtrude upon Us a Wild, Ne- ' gative Idea of a NATIONAL CHURCH, ' so as to Incorporate Themselves into the Body, as ' True Members of it; Whereas 'tis evident that ' this Latitudinarian, Heterogeneous Mixture of ' all Persons of what Different Faith soever, Uni- ' ting in Protestancy, (which is but One Single ' Note of the Church of England) would render it ' the most Absurd, Contradictory, and Self-Inconsi- ' stent Body in the World. This Spurious, and ' Villanous Notion, which will take in Jews, Qua- ' kers, Mahometans, and any thing as well as Chri- ' stians, as ridiculously incongruous as 'tis, may be ' first Observ'd, as One of those Prime, Popular ' Engines, Our FALSE BRETHREN have ' made Use of to Undermine the very Essential ' Constitution of Our Church; which as it stands ' Guarded with its Own Sacred Fences, with Her ' only True Sons in Her Bosom, may Defy all the ' Malice of the Devil, and Her Enemies, to Pre- ' vail against Her. But such is Her hard For- ' tune, Her Worst Adversaries must be let into ' Her Bowels, under the holy Umbrage of Sons, ' who neither Believe Her Faith, Own Her Mis- ' sion, submit to Her Discipline, or Comply ' with Her Liturgy. And to admit this Reli- ' gious Trojan Horse, big with Arms and Ru- ' in, into Our Holy City, the Strait Gate must be ' laid quite Open, Her Walls, and Inclosures pull'd ' down, and an High Road made in upon Her ' Communion, and this Pure Spouse of Christ Pro- ' stituted to more Adulterers than the Scarlet ' Whore in the Revelations. Her Articles must be ' Taught the Confusion of all Senses, Nations, and ' Languages, to render Her a Babel, and Desolation. ' This was indeed the Ready way to Fill the House ' of God, but with what? With Pagan Beasts, in- ' stead of Christian Sacrifices, with such Unhallow'd, ' Loathsome, and Detestable Guests, as would have ' Driven out the Holy Spirit of God with Indig-

' nation.

'nation. This Pious Design of making Our 'House of Prayer a Den of Thieves, of re-'forming Our Church into a Chaos, is well known, 'to have been Attempted several Times in This 'Kingdom, and lately within our Memory, When 'all Things seem'd to Favour it, but that Good 'Providence, which so happily interpos'd, against 'the Ruin Our Church, and Blasted the Long-pro-'jected Scheme of these Ecclesiastical Achitophels. 'A Scheme so Monstrous, so Romantic, and Absurd, 'that 'tis hard to say, whether it had more of 'Villany, or Folly in it, and which even the Secta-'rists of all Sorts (who will not be satisfied with 'any thing less than Sovereignty) Exploded, and 'Laugh'd at, as Ridiculous, and Impracticable. It 'was doubtless a Wise way to Exemplify Our Bro-'therly Love, and Charity for the Souls of Men, 'to put both Them, and Our selves into a Gulph 'of Perdition, by throwing up the Essentials of Our 'Faith, and the Uniformity of Our Worship. But 'since this Model of an Universal Liberty, and Co-'alition fail'd, and these FALSE BRETHREN 'could not carry the Conventicle into the Church, 'they are now Resolv'd to bring the Church into 'the Conventicle, which will more Plausibly, and 'Slily Effect Her Ruin. What could not be gain'd 'by Comprehension, and Toleration, must be brought 'about by Moderation, and Occasional Conformity; 'that is, what they could not do by Open Violence, 'they will not fail by Secret Treachery, to Accom-'plish. If the Church can't be Pull'd down, it may 'be blown up; and no Matter with these Men How 'tis Destroy'd, so that it is Destroy'd. Now let 'Us, I beseech You in the Name of God, fairly 'consider what must be the Consequence of this 'Scandalous Fluctuation, and Trimming betwixt the 'Church, and Dissenters, both in Conscience, and 'Prudence. Does not this Innovating in, Giving 'up, or Receding from, any One Point, or Article 'in our Faith, Violate, and Affect the Whole Frame, 'and Body of it? Can we either Add to, or Di-'minish from, the Least Jot of our Religion? Are 'we to take it's Constitution as our Saviour, and 'his Apostles Deliver'd it down to Us; or have we 'Authority to Curtail, Mangle, or Alter it, to Suit 'it to the Pride, Humours, Caprice, and Qualm-'sick Stomachs, of Obstinate, Moody, Wayward, 'and Self-conceited Hypocrites, and Enthusiasts? 'Will not such a Base, and Time-serving Compli-'ance give the Enemies of Our Church an Occasion 'of Blaspheming Her as Weak, and Inconstant? Will 'it not Argue the Illegality of Her Ordinances, and 'Laws, or that they were too Rigid, and wanted 'an Abatement? Will not this Harden, Encourage, 'nay Justify the Dissenters in their Opinion of 'their Separation, when they see such large Allow-'ances, and Concessions made in it's Favour? What 'Dishonourable, and Unworthy Opinions must they 'entertain of the Priests of that Church, who can 'Sacrifice their most Solemn Declarations, and 'Oaths to Complaisance, and Preferment? What 'would be the End of All this, but to Establish 'Heresy, and Erastianism upon the Ruins of our 'Faith, and Discipline? Would not this Spiritual 'Legerdemain, this Fallacious Tricking, and Double-'dealing, eradicate all the Principles of Truth, 'and Honesty, or Piety out of Men's Minds, make 'em Unconcerned, whether there is Any, or No 'Religion, Run 'em into an Universal Scepticism, 'and Infidelity, and make 'em All Atheists, or Pa-'pists? For when they had Turn'd about, and 'about, and were grown Giddy with Change, they 'would either Give up Themselves to the Dishe-'lief of all Things, or Rest their Weary'd Judg-'ments in the Authority of that Church alone, that 'can Delude 'em with the Specious Pretences of 'an Infallible Guide. Thus our FALSE BRETHREN 'as the Jews did our Blessed Saviour, crucify his 'Church Betwixt Thieves; and as they commit-'ted that Execrable Villany under a Pretended Fear 'lest the ROMANS should come and take away 'their Place, and Nation, which by that very Fact 'They brought upon Themselves: So these Men, 'out of a Fictitious Fear lest the Modern ROMANS 'should come, and Destroy Our Church, are Work-'ing that Ruin they pretend to Avoid, and under 'a False Zeal of Keeping out Popery, are Them-'selves infallibly Bringing in That very POPERY 'into Our Kingdom, with which they so Falsly 'and ungratefully endeavour to Attaint the Church 'of England, the Greatest Bulwark, and only Safe-'Guard against Popery in the whole World! Tho' 'it were highly to be wish'd that those Excellent 'Laws made for Her Defence and Security, were 'at present put strictly into Execution; for the 'Roman-Catholic Agents, and Missionaries that 'swarm about this Great City, as it were in De-'fiance and Contempt of them, were never more 'Busy in making Proselytes to their Superstition, 'and Idolatry, and Perverting and Debauching 'Her Majesty's Subjects in every Corner of our 'Streets.

'2. Thus we see how Dangerous these FALSE 'BRETHREN are to Our Church, which is so 'Great, and Considerable a Branch of our Civil Con-'stitution, that the Support of Our Government 'depends upon it's Welfare, and what Affects 'That, must strike at the Foundation of Our State; 'Innovations in Either tending to the Subversion 'of their Laws, and the Unsettling the Establish-'ment, and consequently to Anarchy, and Confu-'sion. But to draw this Argument more home to 'the Point; I will endeavour to prove, that our 'FALSE BRETHREN are as Destructive of our 'Civil, as Ecclesiastical Rights. For first, it can-'not be deny'd, that though They do submit to 'the Government, their Obedience is Forc'd, and 'Constrain'd, and therefore so Treacherous, and Un-'certain, as never to be Trusted, because proceed-'ing upon no Principle, but meer Interest and Am-'bition; and whenever That changes, their Alle-'giance must follow it; and therefore (to use 'their Own Expression) are as much Occasional 'Loyalists to the State, as They are Occasional Con-'formists to the Church; that is, They will Betray 'either, whenever it is in their Power, and They 'think it for their Advantage. FALSHOOD 'always implies Treachery; and whether That is 'a Qualification for any One to be Trusted, espe-'cially with the Guardianship of our Church, or 'Crown, let our Governors consider. And certain-'ly nothing but the most Sottish Infatuation, can so 'far Blind both our Eyes, and our Judgments, as 'to make us Believe, that the same Causes should 'not produce the same Effects, and that the same La-'titudinarian, and Republican Notions should not 'bring forth the same Rebellious and Pernicious 'Consequences. They are pleas'd now to Soften 'their Lewd Principles, and cover their Dangerous 'Tenets with the Name of Speculative Opinions; 'but what Fatal Practices they have created, and 'whether these Seditious Thoughts will not again 'Exemplify themselves in the same Bloody Actions, 'We shall be Convinc'd, to our Sorrow, if We don't

'Appre-

'Apprehend. That the Old Leaven of their Fore-Fathers is ſtill Working in their Preſent Generaion, and that this Traditional Poyſon ſtill remains in this Brood of Vipers, to Sting Us to Death, is ſufficiently Viſible, from the Dangerous Encroachments They now make upon our Government, and the Treaſonable Reflections They have Publiſh'd on Her Majeſty, God bleſs Her! Whoſe Hereditary Right to the Throne, They have had the Impudence to Deny, and Cancel, to make Her a Creature of their own Power; and that by the ſame Principles They plac'd a Crown upon Her, They tell Us, They, (that is, the Mob) may re-aſſume it at their Pleaſure. Nay, now They have Advanc'd themſelves from the Religious Liberty Our Gracious Sovereign has Indulg'd them, to Claim a Civil Right, as they Term it, and to Juſtle the Church out of Her Eſtabliſhment, by Hoiſting their Toleration into it's Place; and to convince Us what alone will ſatisfy 'em, inſolently Demand the Repeal of the Corporation and Teſt Acts, as an Eccleſiaſtical Uſurpation, which indeed under Her Majeſty (whom God long preſerve for it's Comfort and Support!) is the only Security the Church has to Depend upon. And which they have ſo far Eluded by their Abominable Hypocriſy, as to have Undermin'd Her Foundation, and Indanger the Government, by filling it with it's Profeſs'd Enemies. Theſe Charges are ſo Flagrant, and Undeniable, that a Man muſt be very Weak, or ſomething worſe, that thinks, or pretends, that Diſſenters are to be Gain'd, or won over by any other Grants, and Indulgences, than giving up our Whole Conſtitution: And He that recedes the leaſt Tittle from it, to ſatisfy, or Ingratiate with theſe Clamorous, Inſatiable and Church Devouring Malignants, knows not what Spirit They are of, or He ought to ſhew who is a True Member of Our Church. Have They not ever ſince their firſt Unhappy Plantation in this Kingdom, by the Interceſſion of That Falſe Son of the Church, Biſhop Grindall, always Improv'd, and Riſe upon their Demands in the Permiſſion of the Government? Inſomuch the Queen Elizabeth, that was Deluded by that Perfidious Prelate to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline, found it ſuch an Headſtrong, and Encroaching Monſter, that in Eight Years, She foreſaw it would Endanger the Monarchy, as well as the Hierarchy: And like a Queen of True Reſolution, and Pious Zeal for Both, pronounc'd, That "ſuch were the Reſtleſs "Spirits of that FACTIOUS People, that no Quiet "was to be Expected from them, till they were "utterly Suppreſs'd: Which like a Prudent Princeſs, She did by Wholſome Severities, that the Crown for many Years ſat Eaſy, and Flouriſhing on Her Head. And had Her Succeſſor, King James, but follow'd Her Wiſe Politicks, his Son had never fall'n a Martyr to their Fury, nor any of his Unhappy Offspring ſuffer'd thoſe Diſaſtrous Calamities, which made the Royal Family one continu'd Sacrifice to their Malice. And what better could have been expected from Miſcreants, Begot in Rebellion, Born in Sedition, and Nurs'd up in Faction? I would not here be Miſunderſtood, as if I intended to caſt the leaſt Invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence the Government has condeſcended to give 'em, which I am ſure all thoſe that wiſh well to our Church are very ready to Grant to Conſciences truly Scrupulous; let Them Enjoy it in the full Limits the Law has Preſcrib'd. But let them alſo move within their Proper Sphere, and not grow Eccentrick, and like Comets that Burſt their Orb, Threaten the Ruin and Downfal of Our Church, and State. Indeed they tell us they have Relinquiſh'd the Principles, as well as the Sins of their Fore-fathers: If ſo, why do they not Renounce their Schiſm, and come Sincerely into Our Church? Why do they Pelt Her with more Blaſphemous Libels, and Scurrilous Lampoons, than were ever Publiſh'd in Oliver's Uſurpation? Have they not lately Villanouſly Divided us with Knaviſh Diſtinctions of High and Low-Church Men; Are not the Beſt Characters they can give Us, thoſe of Papiſts, Jacobites, and Conſpirators? And what do they mean by all this Inſidious Cant, but by Falſe Inſinuations, and raiſing Groundleſs Jealouſies, and Fears, to Imbroil the Publick, and to bring it into that Confuſion, they are Suggeſting upon Us? Whether theſe Men are not Contriving, and Plotting our utter Ruin, and whether all thoſe FALSE BRETHREN, that fall in with theſe Meaſures, and Deſigns, do not contribute baſely to it, I leave every Impartial Man that wiſhes the Welfare of Our Conſtitution to Determine; And if we find this true in Fact, What Reaſon have we to think, but that the National Sins are Ripen'd up to a full Maturity, to call down Vengeance from Providence on a Church and Kingdom, thus Debauch'd in its Principles, and Corrupted in its Manners, and inſtead of the True Faith, Diſcipline, and Worſhip, given over to all Licentiouſneſs, both in Opinion, and Practice, to all Senſuality, Hypocriſy, Lewdneſs, and Atheiſm? And now are we under no Danger in theſe Deplorable Circumſtances? Muſt we Lull Ourſelves under this ſad Repoſe, and in ſuch a Stupid, Lethargick Security, Embrace our Ruin? When Eliſha the Great Prophet of God, was Surrounded with an Hoſt of Enemies, that ſought for his Life, his Blind Servant beheld not the Peril his Maſter was in, till his Eyes were Open'd by Miracle, and he found himſelf in the midſt of Horſes and Chariots of Fire. I pray God We may be out of Danger! but we may remember the King's Perſon was Voted to be ſo, at the ſame Time that his Murtherers were Conſpiring his Death. What I have thus freely ſpoken, I hope is as much without Offence, as it proceeds from a Good Intention, and a Tender Concern for Her Majeſty's Perſon, and Government, and an hearty Zeal for the Honour and Safety of our Excellent Church, and Conſtitution. I intreat Your Patience,

'III. Briefly to ſet forth the Heinous Malignity, Enormous Guilt, and Folly of this Prodigious Sin of FALSE BROTHERHOOD.

'1. And Firſt, With Regard to God and Religion. It is a moſt Perfidious Apoſtacy from, and Reproach upon Both. It is no Leſs than Renouncing Our Allegiance to our Almighty Sovereign, an Open Denial, and Proſtitution of Our moſt Holy Faith, and Church, upon which Crime God has Entail'd ſo many Dreadful Threats, and Anathema's. It is Betraying Our moſt Solemn Oaths, proving Falſe to Our Sacred Truſt, and Commiſſion, Adminiſtring to, and Indulging Men in the moſt Mortal Sins, Endangering both our Own, and the Salvation of that Dear Flock, for which Chriſt Dy'd, by Expoſing it to the Corruptions of Hereſy and Schiſm, the Impoſtures of Falſe Apoſtles, and the Deceit, and Malice of Wolves in Sheep's Cloathing. It is Deriving the higheſt Blaſphemy, and Diſhonour upon the Holy Spirit of God, thus to

'Prevari-

'Prevaricate with his Immutable Oracles of Truth, 'in Wresting 'em to maintain the most Diabolical 'Falshoods, and Errors, and making Veracity itself 'the Author and Patronizer of Lyes. It is For- 'saking Our Baptismal Covenant, Basely Deserting 'the Glorious Colours we are Listed under, turning 'Refugees from our Saviour, and Adherents to his 'most Abjur'd Enemies. In a Word, to accomplish 'any wretched Secular Design, to Gratify their 'Pride, or Ambition, to Feed their Lust, or Avarice, 'to wreak their Spleen, or Revenge, out of Envy, 'or Disappointment, for a Little, Paultry Honour, 'Money, or Preferment: These FALSE BRE- 'THREN will Renounce their Creed, and Read the 'Decalogue backward, be the very Reverse of Our 'Blessed Saviour (whom like their Primitive Pat- 'tern, they first sell, and then betray) Fall down 'and Worship the very Devil himself for the Riches 'and Honours of this World.

'2. Secondly, In Regard to the World. What a 'vast Scandal, and Offence must it give to all Per- 'sons of Piety, and Integrity, to see Men of Cha- 'racter, and Stations, thus Shift and Prevaricate 'with their Principles, and Starting from their Re- 'ligion upon any Occasion of Difficulty, or Trial, 'and like the Disciples, flying from, and forsaking 'our Saviour, when his Life lay at Stake? To see 'Men's Opinions sit as loose about 'em as their Gar- 'ments, to be put on, or off, for Convenience? 'What can Unwary Persons conclude from such 'Tergiversation, and Hypocrisy, but that all Reli- 'gion is State-Craft, and Imposture? That All God- 'liness is Gain; and that the Doctrines of the 'Church lie not so much in Her Articles, as Her 'Honours, and Revenues? Without doubt, this 'Modern Latitude, and Infamous Double-Dealing, 'as it can proceed from nothing but the rankest 'Atheism, so it must Propagate it wheresoever it 'goes; and 'tis not to be Question'd, but that the 'Wonderful Increase, and Impudent Appearance of 'all Sects and Heresies in this Kingdom at present, 'beyond what was ever known in Former Ages, is 'chiefly to be attributed to it. But this Crime is as 'Pernicious to Human Society, as Religion; for it 'Destroys all Common Honesty, Faith, and Credit 'in the World, and in the place of it sets up an 'Universal Trade of Cousenage, Sharping, Dissimu- 'lation, and downright Knavery. For, what De- 'pendance can there be upon a Man of no Principles? 'What Trust in Equivocations, Evasions, and Lyes? 'Nor indeed could any one be suppos'd so Sottish, 'as to place the least Confidence in these Men, 'did they not Bait their Hook, and Cover their 'Treachery with the Sacred and Plausible Pretences 'of FRIENDSHIP, whereby they are capable of 'doing much more Mischief, than a bare-fac'd and 'profess'd Enemy. In what moving and Lively 'Colours does the Holy Psalmist paint out the 'Crafty Insidiousness of such wilely Volpones? 'Wickedness, (says he) is therein, Deceit and Guile 'go not out of their Streets. For it is not an Open 'Enemy that has done me this Dishonour, for then 'I could have born it: Neither was it mine Adver- 'sary, that did Magnify himself against me, for 'then peradventure I would have hid my self from 'him. But, it was even Thou! my Companion, my 'Guide, and mine own Familiar Friend. We took 'sweet Counsel together, and walked in the House of 'God as Friends. There is no Faithfulness in their 'Mouths, their inward Parts are very Wickedness; 'Their Throats are Open Sepulchres, and their Words 'are smoother than Oil, yet be they very Swords. 'Like* Joab, they pretend to speak Peaceably, and 'smite us Mortally under the fifth Rib.

'3. Thirdly, With Regard to a Man's Self, it is 'hard to distinguish whether our FALSE BRE- 'THREN prove themselves Guilty of more excessive 'Knavery, or Folly. For whatever these Cunning, 'Temporizing Politicians may think, they will find, 'after all their Shuffling, and Compliance, that the 'Plain Road of Truth, Honesty, and Integrity, is 'both the most Prudent, as well as the Safest Way 'they can follow, and that the Wisdom of this 'World is as much Foolishness with Men, as 'tis 'with God. For certainly there is no Sin that so 'much Disappoints its Own Ends as This does. Per- 'haps the Man may Obtain the Present Advantage, 'He has in Prospect, by relinquishing his Old 'Friends, and Principles; but is ever such a Merce- 'nary Convert received heartily into the Bosom of 'his Former Enemies? Or are They ever found so 'Credulous, and Good-natur'd, as to Forgive, and 'Believe such an Apostate Cordial and Sincere, and 'fit to be Trusted in any Matter of Weight, or Im- 'portance, who has Betray'd his Own Party for the 'Little, Sordid Lucre of a Place, or Preferment? 'And is again ready to be Retrograde, whenever the 'Wind shall Change, and Veer about? Such a FALSE 'BROTHER may serve the Present Turn of his 'Adversaries, who may seem whilst they want the 'TOOL, to Flatter, and Caress him; but let such 'a Turn-Coat rest assur'd, He shall meet with Hypo- 'crisy, for Hypocrisy; and since he is got upon the 'Stage, shall Act his Part, and be Hiss'd off when 'He has done? Such a Wise Game do our Pro- 'jectors Play, they Barter, and Betray their Friends, 'only to sell themselves Slaves into the Hands of 'their Enemies, who shall Treat them with more 'Insolence, Disdain, and Tyranny, than Honest Men 'do with Scorn, and Contempt, if they don't go the 'whole Lengths of their Party, stick at Nothing, 'tho' never so Impious, and Absurd, and run from 'one Extream to a quite Contrary. Thus Little, 'thus Base, thus Odious, thus Contemptible, thus 'Servile, nay thus Execrable is the Traytor, and 'Double-Dealer, in the Sight, not only of all 'Honest Men, but the most Profess'd Knaves, and 'Hypocrites! Who cannot but have a Tacit Regard, 'and Veneration for a Man of Steadiness, and Pro- 'bity, that upon All Occasions is True to Himself, 'and his Cause, is above the Threats, as well as 'Flatteries of this World, still Trusting in his God, 'and his own Integrity, and Justice, Despising his 'Interest, or Success, and is under all Circumstances 'like that God, and Religion He Believes and Serves, 'without Variableness, or Shadow of Change, but is 'the same, to day, to morrow, and for ever? Far- 'ther, these FALSE BRETHREN cannot be more 'Odious to God, and Man, than they are to Them- 'selves, who are always a Self-Contradiction, full 'of Confusion, and Perplexity, perpetually Haunt- 'ing themselves, the Worst of Dæmons, maintaining 'an Irreconcileable War betwixt the Outward and 'Inward Man, Conformists in Profession, Half-Con- 'formists in Practice, and Non-Conformists in Judg- 'ment. Such a Mixture of Inconsistency and Non- 'sense, that any one that has the least Spark of Con- 'science, or Reason, must Renounce, and Detest. 'But this Dismal Effect has such a State of Habitual 'Hypocrisy, that it quite Damps, and Extinguishes 'Both, Quenches the Holy Spirit of God, and Cru- 'cifies his Son afresh; and as it finds a Man void of 'Shame, generally without a Miraculous Conversion 'leaves him incapable of Repentance, and both

'Damns

'Damns him here, and hereafter; and as He Chose 'it in This World, Appoints him in the Next, his 'Portion with Hypocrites, and Unbelievers, with all 'Lyars, that have their Part in the Lake which 'Burns with Fire and Brimstone, with the Grand-'Father of Falshood, the Devil and his Angels. 'And so here We leave our FALSE BRETHREN, 'in the Company they always keep Correspondence 'with.

''IV. Now what should be the Result of this 'Long Discourse, but that if We bear any True 'Concern for the Interest, Honour, and Safety of 'Our Church, and Government, We ought stedfast-'ly to Adhere to those Fundamental Principles, up-'on which Both are Founded, and upon which 'their Security, under God alone, depends; and 'consequently that it highly Behoves Us, Cautiously 'to Watch against, to Mark, and Avoid All those 'that thus Treacherously Desert them. And in-'deed it would be both for Our Advantage, as 'well as Their Credit, if such Men would throw 'off the Mask, entirely Quit Our Church, of which 'they are no True Members, and not fraudulently 'Eat Her Bread, and lay wait for Her Ruin, Pur-'loin Her Revenues, and ungratefully Lift up their 'Heels against Her. For then We should be One 'Fold under One Shepherd, all those Invidious Di-'stinctions that now Distract, and Confound Us Lost, 'and We should be Terrible like an Army of 'Banners to our Enemies, who could never Break 'in upon such an Uniform, and Well-compacted Bo-'dy. This indeed would be a True Peace, and 'Solid Union, when we should All with One Mind, 'and One Mouth, Glorify God, and not with a Con-'fus'd Diversity of Contradictious Opinions, and in-'consistent Jargon of Worship, which the God of 'Peace, Purity, and Order cannot but Abhor. As 'it is a Maxim in Politicks, that All Governments 'are best supported by the same Methods, and Coun-'sels upon which they were Founded; so it will 'appear undeniably True in its Application to our 'Constitution, which can be Maintain'd by no Other 'Principles, but Those on which it is Built, and 'like their Basis, the Gospel, if there's any Viola-'tion, or Breach made in any Branch of it, it shakes 'and endangers the whole Frame, and Body. These 'Things, however Little they may be Represented 'by Our Adversaries, will be found of the most 'Considerable Consequence. Let Us therefore, as 'We are unhappily Sharers of St. Paul's Misfor-'tune, to have our Church in Perils among FALSE 'BRETHREN, follow his Example, and Conduct 'in a Parallel Case. He tells us in his Epistle to 'the Galatians, c. 2. That he was Obstructed, and 'Pester'd in his Preaching the Gospel, by FALSE 'BRETHREN, unawares brought in, who came 'privily to spy out his Liberty, which he had in 'Christ Jesus, that they might bring him into Bon-'dage. To whom he gave place by Subjection, no 'not for an Hour, that the Truth of the Gospel 'might continue with the Church. Doubtless this 'Brave, and Bold Resolution did the Apostle take 'by the peculiar Command, and Inspiration of the 'Holy Ghost; and yet if our Dissenters had Lived 'in those Times, they would have Branded him 'as an Intemperate, Hot, Furious Zealot, that 'wanted to be Sweeten'd, by the Gentle Spirit of 'Charity, and Moderation, forsooth! Schism, and 'Faction, are Things of Impudent and Incroaching 'Natures; they Thrive upon Concessions, take Per-'mission for Power, and Advance a Toleration im-'mediately into an Establishment; and are there-'fore to be treated like Growing Mischiefs, or 'Infectious Plagues, kept at a Distance, lest their 'Deadly Contagion spread. Let Us therefore have 'no Fellowship with these Works of Darkness, but 'rather reprove them. Let our Superior Pastors 'do their Duty in Thundering out their Ecclesiasti-'cal Anathema's, and let any Power on Earth 'Dare Reverse a Sentence Ratify'd in Heaven. Let 'them Discountenance all these Seditious, Luke-'warm, Almost-Christians, and Promote Men of 'Probity, Conscience, and Courage. I say Consci-'ence, and Courage, for the One without the Other 'is like Faith without Works, Dead, and Insignifi-'cant. A Christian, and a Coward, are such Con-'tradictions, as were never found in the Church 'Militant; Men of Timorous and Dastardly Spirits, 'who are Asham'd to Own, or Afraid to defend 'their Principles, lest they should lose, or suffer 'by it, will prove very Poor Disciples of the Cross! 'Such Men (as an Ingenious Prelate Wittily ex-'presses it) are only Honest by Chance. Let us 'Despise the Sneaking, Shuffling Compliances of 'such as Consult their Safety, and not their In-'nocence, and dare to be True in the Worst of 'Times, with this All-sustaining Cordial Comfort, 'that whatever Enemies We gain, or Friends We 'lose, We carry One within Us, that can Confront, 'Vanquish, and Counter-Ballance All. Woe unto 'them that have a Fearful Heart, and to the Faint 'Hands, and to the Sinner that goeth two manner 'of ways! says the Wise Man, Ecclus. 2. 12. After which the Lords Adjourned to the House of LORDS.

Tuesday, Feb. 28. The Second Day.

THE Lords coming down into Westminster-Hall, and being seated in the manner beforementioned, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth strictly Charge and Command all manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, save thee and thy Bail, else thou forfeitest thy Recognizance.

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, you may proceed in your Evidence.

Sir Joseph Jekyll. MY Lords, Yesterday your Lordships heard the Articles against Doctor Sacheverell, his Answer, and the Commons Replication, read; and the Charge being open'd, your Lordships likewise heard the Doctor's Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's, and the Dedication of his Derby Sermon; so that the Case is now fully before your Lordships.

That Part which is assigned to me, and some other Gentlemen, is to maintain the First Article of the Commons Charge. The Method I shall take will be, first, to show the Importance of this Article; Secondly, To clear up and vindicate the Justice of the Revolution; and, Thirdly, To state the Evidence or Proof of this Article, which charges the Doctor with traducing and condemning the Revolution.

My Lords, I must premise, that the Commons cannot but think it hard, that in this Assembly of the British Nation, they should now after more than Twenty Years Enjoyment of the Benefits arising by the Revolution, they can't but think it hard, I say, that in this Place, and at this Time, they should be forced to plead in Vindication of the Justice of that Revolution. But since we must give up our Right to the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom, or (which is all one) be precarious in the Enjoyment of them, and hold them only during Pleasure, if this Doctrine of unlimited Non-Resistance prevails, the Commons have been content to undertake this Prosecution; and they who share in the Legislature with your Lordships, have put themselves into the Condition of Suiters for Justice against this Offender, in whom your Lordships will find the Reverse of a true British Subject: For such an one is dutiful and submissive to his Prince, and true to the Liberty of his Country; but in this Criminal your Lordships will find virulent Faction, and slavish Submission.

As to the Importance of this Article, your Lordships were rightly told Yesterday, that the whole Charge centers in this Article. If the Justice of the Revolution be establish'd, the Toleration will be rejoic'd in by some, and be acquiesc'd in by all; the Resolutions of the Two Houses of Parliament will have a just Regard shown to them; Her Majesty's Administration will be no longer defamed, nor will that unhappy Distinction of Parties be capable of being heightned amongst us. But if the Justice of the Revolution (which is our Foundation) be question'd, every Thing that is built on it is in some Degree shaken, and Occasion is given for Disputes and Factions, never to be ended but by a total Subversion of our Constitution.

My Lords, As it is self-evident that the Honour of Her Majesty's Government stands upon the Justice of the Revolution, so doth the Peace and Tranquility of it depend upon that also. The Commons may appeal to your Lordships, and the whole Nation, in this Matter: From what Quarter is it, that all that Opposition and Obstruction to the Administration of the late King, and Her present Majesty have come? Has it not been from those who have question'd the Lawfulness of the Resistance made use of in the Revolution? Whose Pursuit after Power is indefatigable, and to obtain which they would make a willing Sacrifice of the Common Liberty; whilst others who have a contrary Principle, and are convinced of the Justice of that Proceeding, have acted a quite contrary Part. Have they not contributed every thing in their Power to strengthen the Government in Her present Majesty's Hands, as well as the late King's; and that with a Zeal and Constancy thro' several Changes, which nothing but a Principle could inspire? How much is owing to this Zeal in promoting the Settlement of the Protestant Succession, and how little to the contrary Principle, every one that remembers the State of Things at the End of the late King's Reign can tell. Upon the present Question therefore, my Lords, depend our present Happiness, and future Hopes. Hath not this Principle of unlimited Non-Resistance been revived by the professed and undisguized Friends of the Pretender? Hath it not been prosecuted, with an unusual Warmth, since his Attempt upon Her Majesty's Crown? Can the Pretender have any Hopes, but from the keeping alive such Notions? Or can the Queen's Title receive any Advantage from them?

Or can it be ſeaſonable to preach this Doctrine in the Reign of the Beſt of Princes, which can be of no Uſe to any but the worſt?

In clearing up and vindicating the Juſtice of the Revolution, which was the Second Thing propoſed, it is far from the Intent of the Commons to ſtate the Limits and Bounds of the Subject's Submiſſion to the Sovereign. That which the Law hath been wiſely ſilent in, the Commons deſire to be ſilent in too; nor will they put any Caſe of a juſtifiable Reſiſtance, but that of the Revolution only; and they perſwade themſelves that the doing Right to that Reſiſtance, will be ſo far from promoting Popular Licence or Confuſion, that it will have a contrary Effect, and be a Means of ſettling Mens Minds in the Love of, and Veneration for the Laws; to reſcue and ſecure which, was the only Aim and Intention of thoſe concerned in that Reſiſtance.

To make out the Juſtice of the Revolution, it may be laid down, That as the Law is the only Meaſure of the Prince's Authority, and the Peoples Subjection, ſo the Law derives its Being and Efficacy from common Conſent: And to place it on any other Foundation than common Conſent, is to take away the Obligation this Notion of common Conſent puts both Prince and People under to obſerve the Laws. And upon this ſolid and rational Foundation, the Lawyers, in all Ages, have placed that Obligation, as appears by all our Law-Books. But inſtead of this, of later Times, Patriarchical and other Fantaſtical Schemes have been framed, to reſt the Authority of the Law upon; and ſo Queſtions of Divinity have been blended with Queſtions of Law; when it is plain, that Religion hath nothing to do to extend the Authority of the Prince, or the Submiſſion of the Subject, but only to ſecure the Legal Authority of the one, and enforce the due Submiſſion of the other, from the Conſideration of higher Rewards, and heavier Puniſhments. And if this Diſtinction were attended to, it might ſerve to bury the uſeleſs Labours (to ſay no worſe of them) of ſeveral Divines, and others, on theſe Subjects, in utter Oblivion.

My Lords, Nothing is plainer than that the People have a Right to the Laws and the Conſtitution. This Right the Nation hath aſſerted, and recover'd out of the Hands of thoſe who had diſpoſſeſſed them of it at ſeveral Times. There are of this Two Famous Inſtances in the Knowledge of the preſent Age; I mean that of the Reſtoration, and that of the Revolution; in both theſe great Events were the Regal Power, and the Rights of the People recover'd. And it is hard to ſay, in which the People have the greateſt Intereſt; for the Commons are ſenſible, that there is not one Legal Power belonging to the Crown, but they have an Intereſt in it; and I doubt not, but they will always be as careful to ſupport the Rights of the Crown, as their own Privileges.

My Lords, That the Conſtitution was wholly loſt before, and recovered by the Reſtoration, is known to all; and before the Revolution, it is known how Popery and abſolute Power had invaded the Conſtitution. The Regal Supremacy, of ſuch Abſolute Neceſſity to preſerve the Peace of the Kingdom, was diſclaimed, and the Papal Supremacy, by a ſolemn Embaſſy to Rome, owned and acknowledged, and no Footſteps left of the Regal Supremacy but that which was worſe than nought, an Illegal High-Commiſſion Court: And at that Time the Popular Rights, in almoſt all the Species of them, were invaded. That great Privilege of the People, on which all others depend, that of giving their Conſent to the making new, or repealing old Laws, was invaded; and a diſpenſing Power, ſuch as rendred all our Laws precarious, and at the Will of the Prince, was exerciſed. Theſe, and a great many other Acts of abſolute Power, are mentioned in that Act of Parliament, called The Bill of Rights. It would be to miſpend your Lordſhips Time, to mention all the Inſtances there given: For, my Lords, the whole Tenor of the Adminiſtration then in being, was agreed by all to be a total Departure from the Conſtitution; the Nation was at that Time united in that Opinion, all but the Criminal Part of it. And as the Nation joined in the Judgment of their Diſeaſe, ſo they did in the Remedy. They ſaw there was no Remedy left, but the laſt; and when that Remedy took Place, the whole Frame of the Government was reſtor'd entire and unhurt. This ſhewed the Excellent Temper the Nation was in at that Time, that after ſuch Provocations from an Abuſe of the Regal Power, and ſuch a Convulſion, no one Part of the Conſtitution was alter'd, or ſuffer'd the leaſt Damage; but on the contrary, the whole received new Life and Vigor.

My Lords, As that Doctrine of unlimited Non-Reſiſtance was implicitly renounced by the whole Nation in the Revolution, ſo divers Acts of Parliament afterwards paſs'd, expreſſing that Renunciation. I beg leave to read a few Paſſages out of the Laws that were then made. In the Firſt of King William and Queen Mary, was the Act for Abrogating the Oaths of Supremacy and Allegiance, and appointing other Oaths. By that Act, the Declaration enjoin'd to be taken by ſeveral Acts in the Time of King Charles II. to this Purpoſe, That it is not lawful, on any Pretence whatſoever, to take up Arms againſt the King, was taken away. Then in the Second Seſſion of that Parliament, was the Act for declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject: In that Act Notice is taken, that the Late King James did endeavour to ſubvert and extirpate the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom; and the particular Inſtances of Male-Adminiſtration are ſet forth: Then it declares, that that unhappy Prince had abdicated the Government, and the Throne was thereby vacant; and that it had pleaſed Almighty God to make the Prince of Orange the Glorious Inſtrument of delivering the Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power. And if the Inſtrument, who brought about that Deliverance, be ſtiled Glorious, ſurely the Means uſed by him is (in Conſequence) approved and applauded; and His Late Majeſty is mentioned as the ſame Glorious Inſtrument, in the Act for paying the States-General the Charges of his Expedition. And ſurely this is an Approbation of the Means uſed by him, when that Act charges the People with Six Hundred Thouſand Pounds for thoſe Means, viz. the Force he brought along with him. But if it ſhould be thought theſe Words are too general, and do not particularly approve the Reſiſtance at the Revolution; there came a Memorable Occaſion, when the Parliament had that Particular under their Conſideration; and that was, when they were conſidering whether they ſhould meddle with ſo tender a Thing, as the taking away the Benefit of the Law from a great many of the Subjects of the Kingdom; which was done by an Act in the ſame Second Seſſion of that Parliament, entituled, An Act for preventing vexatious Suits, againſt ſuch as acted in order to the bringing in their Majeſties, or for their Service. There they take notice, that at the Time of His Majeſty's Glorious Enterprize, for delivering this Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power, and in Aid and Purſuance of the ſame, divers Lords, Gentlemen, and other good People well affected to their Country, did act as Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, Juſtices of the Peace, or other Officers, Civil or Military, tho' not ſufficiently authorized thereunto; and did apprehend and put in Cuſtody ſeveral criminous and ſuſpected Perſons; and did ſeize and uſe divers Horſes, Arms, and other Things; and did enter into the Houſes and Poſſeſſions of ſeveral Perſons, and did Quarter, and cauſe to be Quartered, Soldiers and others there; which Proceedings, in Times of Peace and common Safety, would not have been warrantable: Yet that Act declares they were neceſſary, in regard of the Exigence of Publick Affairs, and ought to be juſtified; and provides an Indemnity for thoſe who acted in that Reſiſtance, from the Actions that might be brought by their Fellow-Subjects.

My Lords, I ſhall conclude this Head with taking notice of the Form of Prayer, appointed by Royal Authority, for the Fifth of November, now doubly memorable: There is in that Form not only Thanks offer'd to Almighty God for the Revolution, but for the Succeſs given to thoſe Means that were uſed to bring about that wonderful Deliverance: What elſe is the Meaning of thanking God, for giving his late Majeſty a ſafe Arrival here, and making all Oppoſition fall before him, till he became our King and Governor?

But, my Lords, notwithſtanding the Juſtice of thoſe Steps that were taken to bring about the Revolution, notwithſtanding the Temper and Prudence that was ſhewn in the Settlement of it, and the Sanction ſince given to it, not only by the Royal, but the whole Legiſlative Authority, Dr. Sacheverell hath condemned the Reſiſtance, (which was the principal, if not the only Means) by which that Deliverance was wrought; which was the laſt Thing I propoſed to ſhew to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, This Article is divided into Three Branches: Firſt, The General Charge, that he ſuggeſts and maintains, that the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution, were odious and unjuſtifiable. The Second and Third Branches are Particulars of that General; viz. That his late Majeſty diſclaimed the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the ſaid Revolution.

To maintain this Article, I will not repeat the particular Words of the Sermon, in order to the Application of them; that is a Province which is aſſigned to another Gentleman, who will ſpeak after me: But I ſhall offer to your Lordſhips what I apprehend to be the clear Senſe and Meaning of thoſe Paſſages in the Sermon, which maintain this Article. In the Eleventh Page of the Quarto Edition, he lays down a General Poſition, of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, upon any Pretence whatſoever. He ſays, there are ſome who deny this Poſition, who are New Preachers, and New Politicians, who teach divers Antimonarchical and pernicious Doctrines. He goes on, and ſays, They do not only deny this Poſition, but urge the Revolution in Defence of their Denial; that is, by producing that as an Inſtance of a juſtifiable Reſiſtance. Then he exclaims againſt theſe Men, as endeavouring to caſt black and odious Colours on the late King and the Revolution; whereas he ſays, the King diſclaimed the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance by his Declaration; and the Parliament diſowned it, becauſe they declare they only fill'd a vacant Throne, without taking notice how it became ſo; and they burnt a Book which alledg'd Conqueſt, becauſe it had that Ingredient of Reſiſtance in it.

This Extract out of the Sermon makes out the Firſt Article, which is, his condemning the Reſiſtance, which the Commons call the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution. For firſt, that general Poſition of his condemns Reſiſtance in any Caſe whatſoever. Secondly, he introduces ſome as denying this Poſition, and faſtens a vile and odious Character upon them. Thirdly, he makes thoſe that deny this Doctrine object to it an Authority or Preſident of a lawful Reſiſtance, viz. that at the Revolution; but, my Lords, this he does only to give up the Lawfulneſs of that Reſiſtance, and condemn that as well as any other. For, Fourthly, he anſwers this Objection, by denying there was any Reſiſtance in that Caſe, a Fact as clear as the Sun at Noon-day, and which all the Nation ſaw and rejoiced at. He brings the late King and the Parliament to witneſs againſt any Reſiſtance in the Revolution; and yet he has ſhewn by two Quotations out of the Prince of Orange's Declaration, one in his Anſwer, and the other in the Printed Sermon, that his late Majeſty was ſo far from diſclaiming Reſiſtance, that he avowed it, and invited the Subjects of this Kingdom to join in that Reſiſtance; for in his Anſwer, he cites that Paſſage in his Declaration; wherein his Majeſty takes notice, that he carried a Force with him, ſufficient, by the Bleſſing of God, to defend him from the Violence of Evil Counſellors; and that he deſigned that Expedition to oblige King James to call a Free Parliament: And by his Quotation of another Paſſage in the Prince of Orange's Declaration, it appears his late Majeſty was, by divers Subjects of King James's, Invited to and Aſſiſted in that Expedition; which being an Expedition by Force, to oblige that King to call a Free Parliament, doth it not carry in it a plain and manifeſt avowing of Reſiſtance? My Lords, as to what he ſays in relation to the Parliament's diſowning any Reſiſtance at the Revolution, by aſſerting, that they ſet the Crown on the King's Head on no other Title than that of the Vacancy of the Throne, that appears to be directly otherwiſe from the ſeveral Paſſages in divers Acts of Parliament which I have before-mention'd: To which I only add, that in the Conference between the Two Houſes, previous to the ſettling the Crown on the King's Head, the Word Abdicated was inſiſted upon and carried; for that it included in it the Male-Adminiſtration of King James, which the Word Deſerted (deſired to be uſed inſtead of it) did not: And this appears by the Journal. He therefore knowing that there was Reſiſtance at the Revolution, and that the late King and the Parliament avowed that Reſiſtance; and he pretending to defend it only by denying thoſe Facts, hath (by a neceſſary Implication) aſſerted, That that Reſiſtance was not an Exception to his General Rule, but ſtands condemned by it.

My Lords, I ſhall not enter upon the Conſideration of the Doctor's Anſwer to this Article, becauſe I don't know whether his Council will think fit to abide by it; nor would I meddle with any Thing that is proper for the Reply.

The Sum of the whole Proof is this: The Doctor lays down a Doctrine, condemning Reſiſtance in all Caſes whatſoever: He makes thoſe who deny this Doctrine, Aſſerters of Antimonarchical Principles: He takes notice of the Revolution, only to give it up: He admits, that if there were Reſiſtance in that Caſe, that it was as unlawful as any other Reſiſtance. He aſſerts that to be true, which every one knows to be falſe: He ſays, the late King diſclaimed the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; the Parliament diſown'd it; and they who ſay there was any Reſiſtance in it, caſt black and odious Colours on the late King and the Revolution; and conſequently, he condemns the Reſiſtance uſed to bring about the Revolution, which is the Matter of the Firſt Article.

This, my Lords, is what the Commons rely upon, to maintain and make out the Firſt Article of their Charge againſt the Criminal at the Bar; and they refer the Conſideration of it to your Lordſhips Wiſdom and Juſtice.

Mr. Sollicitor General. MY Lords, It falls to my Share, to ſtate to your Lordſhips the ſeveral Paſſages in the Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's, which the Commons rely upon as a Proof of the Firſt Article; and to ſhew the particular Weakneſs and Inſufficiency of the Anſwer given to this Charge.

The Charge is, That the Gentleman at the Bar doth ſuggeſt and maintain, That the neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the late Happy Revolution, were Odious and Unjuſtifiable; That his late Majeſty, in his Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the ſaid Revolution.

The Paſſages upon which the Firſt Article is founded, are in the Eleventh and Twelfth Pages of this Sermon; where Dr. Sacheverell having firſt aſſerted, "That the grand Security of our Govern-" ment, and the very Pillar upon which it ſtands, " is founded upon the ſteady Belief of the Sub-" jects Obligation to an Abſolute and Unconditional " Obedience to the Supreme Power in all Things " Lawful, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance up-" on any Pretence whatſoever; which, He ſays, has " been lately exploded and ridiculed, goes on in theſe Words:

" Our Adverſaries think they effectually ſtop our " Mouths, and have us ſure and unanſwerable on " this Point, when they urge the Revolution of this " Day in their Defence; but certainly they are the " greateſt Enemies of that, and his late Majeſty, " and the moſt ungrateful for the Deliverance, who " endeavour to caſt ſuch Black and Odious Colours " upon both. How often muſt they be told, that " the King himſelf ſolemnly diſclaim'd the leaſt " Imputation of Reſiſtance, in his Declaration? " And that the Parliament declar'd, that they ſet " the Crown on his Head upon no other Title but " that of the Vacancy of the Throne? And did " they not unanimouſly condemn to the Flames " that infamous Libel, that would have pleaded the " Title of Conqueſt, by which Reſiſtance was ſup-" pos'd?

Theſe Words the Commons apprehend to be a full Proof of the Aſſertions charg'd in the Firſt Article, for Reſiſtance was the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution.

And the Doctor expreſly affirms in this Place, that the King diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; he aſſerts it as a thing notorious, which no Body could be a Stranger to: He ſays, the King diſclaim'd it ſolemnly; he diſclaim'd it in his Declaration.

And he as plainly affirms, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution; for he firſt lays down the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever, as a Fundamental Doctrine; and then acquaints his Auditory, that his Adverſaries thought they could effectually ſtop his Mouth, and had him ſure and unanſwerable On this Point, when they urg'd the Revolution in their Defence; but that they were the greateſt Enemies to the King and to the Revolution, who endeavour'd to caſt ſuch Black and Odious Colours upon Both.

Now this Point, which he ſays his Adverſaries thought they had him ſure and unanſwerably upon, is plainly the Point of Reſiſtance, which he had aſſerted to be Illegal upon any Pretence whatſoever; and others, he ſays, had denied, and had urg'd the Revolution in their Defence.

And the urging of the Revolution in that Caſe, as an Inſtance of the Legality of Reſiſtance, in Oppoſition to his general Doctrine, is what he calls caſting Black and Odious Colours upon the King and the Revolution; for his Argument runs thus. All Reſiſtance is utterly Illegal; the King diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; the Parliament ſet the Crown upon his Head upon no other Title than that of the Vacancy of the Throne; and burnt a Book becauſe it aſſerted a Title by which Reſiſtance was ſuppoſed; and therefore to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution.

This, my Lords, is the Force of his Reaſoning, and the plain and obvious Senſe of this Part of the Paragraph; and therefore fully makes out the Charge of his aſſerting and maintaining, that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the ſaid Revolution.

I come now to conſider the Anſwer he makes to this Article, which he divides into Three Parts.

" And firſt, he denies that he doth Suggeſt and " Maintain, that the neceſſary Means uſed to bring " about the happy Revolution were Odious and Un-" juſtifiable; and ſays, that he doth not affirm in " any Part of that Sermon any thing concerning " the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the hap-" py Revolution; the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is ſo " far from reflecting on his late Majeſty or the happy " Revolution, that he endeavours in that Sermon " to clear the Revolution, and his late Majeſty, " from the Black and Odious Colours which their " greateſt Enemies had caſt upon Both.

Now the material Part of the Anſwer to this Branch of the Article is, " That he denies his " maintaining that the neceſſary Means uſed to bring " about the Revolution were Odious and Unjuſti-" fiable, and his affirming any thing concerning " thoſe neceſſary Means. But this is no more than ſaying that he has affirmed nothing by the Words Neceſſary Means; and 'tis very true, that the Words Neceſſary Means are not uſed in any Part of the Sermon.

But no Body will ſay, that 'tis requiſite to charge the Aſſertion in the very Words.

And

And therefore if Reſiſtance was neceſſary, and the Means uſed, in that extraordinary Caſe of the Revolution, he has aſſerted the Means to be Odious and Unjuſtifiable, tho' he has done it in other Terms, and by Words more particular and expreſs.

" And as to that Part of the Article whereby he " is charged with Suggeſting and Maintaining, That " his late Majeſty in his Declaration diſclaimed the " leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance:

" He acknowledges himſelf to have made this " Suggeſtion; but ſays, that he made it not in " Diſhonour, but in Vindication of his Majeſty; " the Reſiſtance he repreſents the King to have Diſ- " claimed, being ſuch a Reſiſtance as tended to the " Conqueſt of this Realm; for which he refers to " that Part of the Declaration which is Printed at " the Bottom of the Eleventh Page in the Sermon; " and upon this Ground he obſerves, that there " are theſe other Paſſages in the Declaration----- " We have thought fit to go over to England, and " to carry over with us a Force ſufficient, by the " Bleſſing of God, to defend our ſelves from the " Violence of evil Counſellors. ----- We think fit to " declare, that this our Expedition is intended for " no other Deſign than to have a free and lawful " Parliament Aſſembled.

Now in this part of his Anſwer Doctor Sacheverell admits, that he made the Suggeſtion charged upon him, in the ſame Words that are uſed in the Article; but defends himſelf by alledging, that the Commons have miſtaken his Meaning.---- He meant only, that the King diſclaim'd a Reſiſtance which tended to Conqueſt.

But 'tis clear and plain, that the Words have no ſuch limited or reſtrain'd Senſe, and that the Meaning he would now put upon them is a meer Shift and Evaſion; for the Propoſition is General, The King Diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance: And the uſe he makes of it ſhews, that his Meaning was as General as his Words; for he is Replying upon thoſe who urge the Revolution in Anſwer to his general Poſition, That Reſiſtance is utterly illegal upon any Pretence whatſoever; and how does he anſwer the Caſe of the Revolution, or is it poſible to be anſwer'd, but by ſaying, that there was no Reſiſtance at all in the Revolution; the King, who was principally concern'd in it, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance?

The Queſtion is ſtated upon Reſiſtance in general; Whether Reſiſtance in any Caſe, or upon any Occaſion, be lawful?

And therefore, if the Lawfulneſs of Reſiſtance in any Caſe be allow'd, 'tis impoſſible that his general Aſſertion ſhould ſtand; and 'tis equally impoſſible to get clear of the Objection, without denying the Reſiſtance.

Doctor Sacheverell was aware of this, and therefore denies that there was any Reſiſtance at all in the Revolution, and ſays, That the leaſt Imputation of it was ſolemnly diſclaim'd and diſavow'd.

For had he ſaid, in expreſs Terms, that the King diſclaim'd all Imputation of Reſiſtance that tended to Conqueſt, this wou'd have been no Anſwer to the Objection: For if there was any Reſiſtance, tho' not the particular Reſiſtance which the King diſclaim'd; and if that Reſiſtance which was us'd be agreed to be lawful, his fundamental Doctrine muſt certainly be ſhaken. And therefore if your Lordſhips ſuppoſe him to make any uſe at all of this Aſſertion, his Words plainly ſpoke his Meaning, and repreſent the King to have diſclaim'd all Reſiſtance whatſoever.

But he excuſes the making of this Suggeſtion, by declaring, " That he made it not in Diſhonour, " but in Vindication of His Majeſty; and therefore " whether he was miſtaken or not in expreſſing " himſelf, as if the late King had diſclaim'd all " Imputation of Reſiſtance, when he meant there- " by, that the late King diſclaim'd the Imputation " of a Deſign of Conqueſt, he humbly conceives " ſuch a Suggeſtion, plainly deſign'd for the Honour " of the late King, cannot in any reaſonable Con- " ſtruction be thought a Reflection upon his ſaid " late Majeſty, or deem'd any high Crime or Miſ- " demeanor.

My Lords, had theſe Words been ſpoken in Vindication of his late Majeſty, our great and glorious Deliverer, the Commons, who have ſo much at Heart the Honour of the late King, and the Juſtice of the Revolution, had never charg'd them upon this Gentleman as a Crime.

But they carry with them the higheſt Reflection upon the Honour and Juſtice of his Majeſty; for they ſuppoſe that he denied the Lawfulneſs of Reſiſtance when he was actually engag'd in it, and diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance when he brought over an Army on purpoſe to maintain that Reſiſtance, to which all the People of England were invited and encourag'd by his Declaration.

And this Aſſertion, of the King's diſclaiming all Reſiſtance, could never be meant in Vindication of his Majeſty from any Imputation of a Deſign of Conqueſt; for there was no Occaſion for vindicating the King upon this Point, the Subject-Matter of the Diſcourſe did not lead him to it; for the Buſineſs of the Sermon, or of this particular Paragraph, is not to vindicate the Honour of the King from any ſuch Aſperſion, or to maintain the Liberties of England, by aſſerting, That the Conſtitution of Government ſtill remains, and was not broken and diſſolved by Conqueſt at the Revolution: Had that been his Ground, his Miſtake had been more excuſable; for then it had been proper to have urg'd that there was no Step taken towards the Revolution, which look'd like a Deſign of Conqueſt; and that the armed Force which was uſed in it, and had the Appearance of ſuch a Deſign, was not intended to conquer; for the King, who commanded it, diſclaim'd all Imputation of Reſiſtance that tended to Conqueſt. Upon ſuch a Queſtion theſe things had been very properly urg'd, and there might have been ſome Indulgence to a general Expreſſion, that in any Propriety of Speech could have received ſuch a Meaning.

But when the Queſtion is not, Whether the Revolution was brought about by Conqueſt, or what would be the Conſequence of ſuch an Aſſertion, either in regard to the Honour of the King, or the Condition of the People, there can be no Colour for ſaying that he meant by this general Expreſſion, which carries no ſuch Meaning in it ſelf, that the King diſclaim'd Conqueſt, or a Reſiſtance which tended to Conqueſt only.

Eſpecially, my Lords, when the Subject-Matter of his Diſcourſe naturally led him to aſſert this Propoſition in the common and ordinary Senſe which the Words import: For he is aſſerting the Doctrine of abſolute Non-Reſiſtance; and ſhewing, that the Lawfulneſs of the Revolution was no Argument againſt it; and why? Becauſe the King diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; there was no ſuch wicked Ingredient as Reſiſtance in it; no other other Anſwer would have ſerv'd him; and therefore it can never be ſuppos'd that he meant to clear the King from any Deſign of Conqueſt, or intended to ſay any thing in Vindication of his Majeſty upon that Head.

And in Truth, it is an apparent Scandal upon the Memory of the late King, to ſay there was any Occaſion to clear him from this Imputation; his Actions ſpoke the Juſtice and Sincerity of his Intentions; his Buſineſs was not to conquer and enſlave us, but to deliver us from Popery and Slavery, the moſt dreadful Calamities that could befal us, and to reſettle and eſtabliſh our Conſtitution both in Church and State. This was the Ground of the Glorious Enterprize he undertook, and the general Aim and Deſign of all his Labours through the whole Courſe of his Reign.

'Tis therefore plain, that what Doctor Sacheverell ſays in his Anſwer, in Excuſe of his Aſſertion, relating to the King's diſclaiming all Imputation of Reſiſtance, was rather made to the Diſhonour, than in Vindication of his Majeſty; for there was no Colour to ſuggeſt that he needed any ſuch Vindication or Defence.

And that the King did not diſclaim all Imputation of Reſiſtance, is evident, even from that Part of his Declaration which is cited in the Anſwer, whereby "He declares to the People (to encourage "them to join with him) that he had brought over "a ſufficient Force to defend himſelf from the Vio-"lence of evil Counſellors----And that his Expedition "was deſign'd to have a free and lawful Parliament "aſſembled, which was a plain Force upon the "Executive Power that was directed by thoſe evil "Counſellors, who, by ſubverting the Liberties of "Corporations, and practiſing upon the Freedom "of Elections, never intended that any ſuch free "or lawful Parliament ſhould be aſſembled.

This is plain Reſiſtance in the Senſe that Doctor Sacheverell takes the Word; and is ſo far from a Juſtification, that there is no Colour to ſay, that his Majeſty diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance.

As to the laſt Branch of the Article, whereby he is charg'd that he ſuggeſts and maintains, "That "to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt "black and odious Colours upon his late Majeſty "and the ſaid Revolution; he denies that he ſuggeſts "or maintains any ſuch Poſition.

But this Negative is fully anſwer'd by what has been offer'd to your Lordſhips upon the firſt Head of this Article, his aſſerting, That the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution were odious and unjuſtifiable; for if Reſiſtance be utterly illegal upon any Pretence whatſoever, and there was Reſiſtance in the Revolution, it neceſſarily follows, that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours upon it. And this is expreſly aſſerted by his ſtating the Caſe of the Revolution, in which there was Reſiſtance, as an Objection to his general Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever; and then anſwering this Objection, by ſaying, That the urging of the Revolution, as an Inſtance of the Legality of Reſiſtance, was caſting black and odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the late Revolution: For there could be no black or odious Colours caſt, but from the ſhaking that fundamental Doctrine of Abſolute Non-Reſiſtance, the Belief of which he aſſerts to be the Pillar upon which the Government of England ſtands.

And therefore the imputing of Reſiſtance to the Revolution muſt, according to the Principle he lays down, caſt black and odious Colours upon the Revolution, and upon the great and glorious Inſtrument of it, his late Majeſty, by whom it was happily brought about.

And Doctor Sacheverell himſelf, by the ſubſequent Part of his Anſwer, ſeems to think that this Aſſertion is fairly and plainly inferr'd from the Tenor of his Diſcourſe.

For he is pleaſed to excuſe it, by ſaying, "That "he intended to apply it not to ſuch Perſons who "impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, of whom he "affirms nothing; but to thoſe new Preachers, and "new Politicians, who teach in Contradiction both "to the Goſpel and the Laws, that the People "have the Power inveſted in them, the Fountain "and Original of it, to cancel their Allegiance at "their Pleaſure, and call their Sovereign to Account "for High-Treaſon againſt his Subjects, and who "urge the Revolution in Defence of ſuch Princi-"ples; and that, unleſs thoſe who impute Re-"ſiſtance to the Revolution be the ſame with thoſe "new Preachers and new Politicians, he affirms "nothing concerning them.

But, my Lords, this Part of his Anſwer is far from excuſing or extenuating his Crime; for if a Propoſition be true, it will loſe nothing of its Weight and Force, though the vileſt Man upon Earth ſhould make uſe of it; and it can be no Argument againſt a true Principle, that it has been made uſe of to ill Purpoſes, and to maintain Poſitions which are not warranted by it. 'Tis rather an Aggravation of his Crime, and a high Reflection upon the Commons, and the Juſtice of this Proceeding, to ſuppoſe that any ſuch wicked Conſequences as he mentions, can poſſibly be inferr'd from defending the Reſiſtance at the Revolution: And the Queſtion is, Whether Doctor Sacheverell himſelf aſſerts, that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, be to caſt black and odious Colours upon it; and not, OF WHOM he affirms the caſting ſuch black and odious Colours?

I go on to the laſt Part of his Anſwer to this Article, where he ſays, "That upon the ſtricteſt Search into "his ſaid Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's, he doth not "find that he hath given the leaſt colourable Pretence "for the Accuſation exhibited againſt him in this firſt "Article, but barely by his aſſerting the utter Ille-"gality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power upon "any Pretence whatſoever; for which he conceives "he has the Authority of the Church of England, "which has taught and inculcated this Doctrine in "her Homilies------And he doth further inſiſt, That "this Aſſertion is agreeable to and warranted by "the Common Law of England, and divers Acts "of Parliament now remaining in full Force.

Now it muſt be agreed, that there is no colourable Pretence to charge him with Suggeſting and Maintaining that the Reſiſtance us'd at the Revolution was Odious and Unjuſtifiable, if the Doctrine of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever be true; for upon this Principle his Cenſure is juſt, and it muſt neceſſarily follow, that the Reſiſtance us'd in bringing about the Revolution is not to be maintained.

And therefore the Commons ſhould think themſelves ungrateful for the Deliverance, if they did not vindicate the Honour of the late King, and of thoſe Illuſtrious Perſons, who, upon his Invitation, defended the Conſtitution at that time by Reſiſtance, and declare that this Reſiſtance was Lawful, Honourable and Juſt.

and

They had Reaſon to hope, that after ſo many Years had paſs'd in a happy Enjoyment of all the Advantages of a Free-born People, and at a Time when the Subjects of this Kingdom are in the full Poſſeſſion of their Rights and Liberties under Her Majeſty's Gracious Protection, and the wiſeſt and happieſt Adminiſtration that England ever ſaw, that no Body could have been ſo wicked as to caſt an Odium upon the neceſſary Means whereby theſe Bleſſings were obtain'd, and are continued to us. But ſince, notwithſtanding our bleſſed Deliverance from Popery and Arbitrary Power, and the Benefits we enjoy by reſtoring the Conſtitution both in Church and State; and above all, by Her Majeſty's happy Adminiſtration, which has improv'd the Luſtre of the Crown to the Honour of the Nation, and the common Benefit of every particular Subject; yet there are Men of reſtleſs and turbulent Spirits, Enemies to the Revolution, who are continually urging the Reſiſtance then uſed as a Fundamental Error, fatal to every thing that has been built upon it: This, my Lords, ſtrikes ſo directly at the preſent Eſtabliſhment, that the Commons think it their indiſpenſible Duty to demand your Lordſhips Judgment upon this important Subject.

And they think it the more neceſſary at this time, becauſe 'tis plain and obvious to every one's Obſervation, that ſince the late Attempt made by the Pretender, this Principle of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever, has been eſpous'd and maintain'd with more than ordinary Warmth and Zeal; and the Commons apprehend, that it can have no other Aim or Tendency than to blacken the Revolution, and thereby to ſhake the Foundation of our preſent happy Settlement.

Your Lordſhips will therefore, in your great Wiſdom, conſider the Conſequences of this Aſſertion, in regard to her Majeſty, the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and the future Happineſs of this Kingdom.

The Commons muſt always reſent, with the utmoſt Deteſtation and Abhorrence, every Poſition that may ſhake the Authority of that Act of Parliament, whereby the Crown is ſettled upon her Majeſty, and whereby the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, do, in the Name of all the People of England, moſt Humbly and Faithfully ſubmit themſelves, their Heirs and Poſterities, to Her Majeſty, which this general Principle of Abſolute Non-Reſiſtance muſt certainly ſhake.

For if the Reſiſtance at the Revolution was illegal, the Revolution ſettled in Uſurpation, and this Act can have no greater Force and Authority than an Act paſs'd under a Uſurper.

And the Commons take Leave to obſerve, that the Authority of this Parliamentary Settlement is a Matter of the greateſt Conſequence to maintain, in a Caſe where the Hereditary Right to the Crown is conteſted; for her Majeſty's moſt bitter and implacable Enemies, the Friends of the Pretender, (who all aſſert the utter Illegality of the Reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution) can advance his Title to the Crown, and call him King, upon no other Ground than the Pretence of an Hereditary Right.

The Commons therefore, out of the moſt profound Duty and Allegiance which they owe, and ſhall ever pay to her Majeſty, and to maintain the Security of her Government, and guard her Throne againſt every Inſinuation that may promote or favour the Intereſt of the Pretender, think themſelves obliged to take Notice of this Aſſertion, as tending to weaken the Authority of this Act of Parliament, whereby her Majeſty's Title is declared.

Your Lordſhips will likewiſe conſider of what Conſequence the Diſhonouring of the Revolution may be to Poſterity, and the future Happineſs of this Kingdom in a Proteſtant Succeſſion to the Crown. For by the ſame Act, all Perſons who ſhall hold Communion with the See of Rome, or ſhall Marry Papiſts, are declared uncapable to Inherit, Poſſeſs or Enjoy the Crown. And 'tis Enacted, That the Crown and Government ſhall from time to time deſcend to, and be enjoyed by, ſuch Perſons being Proteſtants, that ſhould have Inherited and Enjoyed the ſame, in caſe ſuch Popiſh Prince were naturally Dead.

And the immediate Proteſtant Succeſſion in the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, is likewiſe ſettled by an Act of the ſame Reign.

This ſhews of what Importance it is, to the preſent and future Happineſs of this Kingdom, to clear his late Majeſty and the Revolution from thoſe Black and Odious Colours which this Gentleman has caſt upon Both.

But, my Lords, he makes it part of his Defence, that his Aſſertion is agreeable to the Common Law of England, and divers Acts of Parliament now remaining in Force.

The Gentleman that ſpoke before me, has ſhewn how far that Aſſertion is a direct Contradiction to ſeveral Acts of Parliament; and therefore I ſhall only ſay, that it can never be ſuppos'd that the Laws were made to ſet up a Deſpotick Power to deſtroy themſelves, and to warrant the Subverſion of a Conſtitution of Government which they were deſign'd to Eſtabliſh and Defend.

This would be a ſtrange, abſurd and contradictory Imagination, and was thought ſo at the Revolution by the wiſeſt Men of that Time, by the beſt Friends to the Monarchy, and Men the moſt Eminent for their Sufferings in the Cauſe of the Church.

And it appears, by the ſeveral Inſtances mention'd in the Act declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown, that at the Time of the Revolution there was a total Subverſion of the Conſtitution of Government both in Church and State, which is a Caſe that the Laws of England could never ſuppoſe, provide for, or have in view.

And the ſame Anſwer may with equal Reaſon be applied to the general Doctrine of the Church, expreſs'd in her Homilies.

This, my Lords, is what I have to offer to your Lordſhips in Maintenance of the firſt Article; I am ſenſible how defective I have been, but what I have failed in, will be abundantly ſupplied by the Gentlemen who are appointed to aſſiſt in maintaining this Article.

Sir John Holland. MY Lords, The preſent Conſideration is of the greateſt Importance; no leſs, than whether ſo many of your Lordſhips, and the Commons of Great Britain, who took up Arms at the Revolution, and were then thought Patriots of your Country, were really Rebels; whether our late Deliverer was an Uſurper; and whether the Proteſtant Succeſſion is Legal and Valid.

All theſe Conſiderations depend upon the Lawfulneſs of the Reſiſtance at the Revolution. That there was a Reſiſtance, is moſt plain, if taking up Arms in Yorkſhire, Nottinghamſhire, Cheſhire, and almoſt all the Counties of England; if the Deſer-

tion of a Prince's own Troops to an Invading Prince, and turning their Arms againſt their Sovereign, be Reſiſtance. But if Subjects be obliged to Abſolute and Conditional Obedience, the Convention of the States, the Settlement and Entail of the Crown by them, and the further Settlement in the Proteſtant Succeſſion under that Settlement, muſt, from that Reſiſtance, be unlawful and void.

The Criminal was aware of this juſt Objection to his general Doctrine, when apply'd to the Revolution; as appears from his Endeavouring, upon ſecond Thoughts, to conceal it by his Marginal Note, to hint, that by Reſiſtance he meant Conqueſt. And no wonder he endeavour'd to colour ſo bold a Stroke, which he could not but expect to hear of with the utmoſt Reſentment from the Government.

But it ſo falls out, my Lords, that what he truſted to for a Screen, aggravates the Heinouſneſs of his Crime; for it ſhows, that he inſtils into his Auditors thoſe Notions from the Pulpit, which he dares not own in Print. Nothing can be more manifeſt, than that he could not by Reſiſtance mean Conqueſt, even from his own Expreſſions: For in the very next Period, he ſays, And did they not, i. e. the Parliament, unanimouſly condemn to the Flames (as it juſtly deſerved) that infamous Libel, that would have pleaded the Title of Conqueſt, by which Reſiſtance was ſuppoſed? So that he knew 'em to be diſtinct Notions; and indeed ſo they muſt be, becauſe one may be without the other.

It is an unaccountable Preſumption, that he could ſuppoſe ſo weak a Pretence could paſs upon the World; but much more ſurprizing it is, that he could apprehend ſo mean a Subterfuge could prevent your Lordſhips Juſtice. But from hence the Commons obſerve, that he is a Concealed Man, and of a Dangerous Spirit: And as ſuch we have brought him hither to reform him, and to be an Example to others.

My Lords, The Commons would not be underſtood, as if they were Pleading for a Licentious Reſiſtance; as if Subjects were left to their Good-will and Pleaſure, when they are to Obey, and when to Reſiſt. No, my Lords, they know they are obliged by all the Ties of Social Creatures, and Chriſtians, for Wrath and Conſcience-ſake to ſubmit to their Sovereign. The Commons do not Abet Humourſome Factious Arms: They aver 'em to be Rebellions. But yet they maintain, that that Reſiſtance at the Revolution, which was ſo Neceſſary, was Lawful and Juſt from that Neceſſity.

We do agree that the Laws concerning Obedience, both Human and Divine, are very Expreſs and Poſitive; and no wonder that the Homilies and Fathers dead and living, follow the ſame way of expreſſing our Duty in general Terms. We readily grant this, but it does not follow that there can be no Exceptions from theſe General Rules in Conſcience.

There is no Law more Poſitive and Expreſs than that which enjoins the Obſervation of the Sabbath, for therein we are commanded to do no manner of work. But yet we know, that Neceſſity makes an Allow'd Exception to that General Law. And the Reaſon why that Neceſſity is allow'd as a juſt Exception to that poſitive Law, will guide us to know, what Laws will admit of Exceptions from Neceſſity, and what Not. The Reaſon our Divine Lawgiver aſſigns is, becauſe the Sabbath was made for Man, and not Man for the Sabbath; from whence plainly follows this Corollary; That where there is a Poſitive Law, and that Law reſpects not ſome Principal End for which Man was made, there Neceſſity may make a juſtifiable Exception, how expreſs ſoever that Law is.

Now, my Lords, whether Government was made for Man, or Man for Government, will eaſily appear from this ſhort Obſervation, That Man was made in a State of Perfection; and the Rectitude of that State ſuppoſes the Abſence of all thoſe Crimes, which are the Objects of Government, and which Government is to Reform. And therefore Government could not be one End of Man's Creation; and theſe general Rules of Obedience may, upon a Real Neceſſity, admit a Lawful Exception; and ſuch a Neceſſary Exception we aſſert the Revolution to be.

'Tis with this View of Neceſſity, only Abſolute Neceſſity of Preſerving our Laws, Liberties and Religion; 'tis with this Limitation that We deſire to be underſtood, when Any of us ſpeak of Reſiſtance in general. The Neceſſity of the Reſiſtance at the Revolution was at that Time obvious to every Man. Every one, who either was not, or did not find his eaſy Mind, prepar'd to be a Tool to Popery and Slavery, dreaded the Inſtances of that Neceſſity. The Cancelling all the Security from Laws by a Diſpenſing Power; the Erecting Commiſſions to Deprive Subjects of their Property, not according to Law, but Humour; the making the whole Government Depend upon the Arbitrary Pleaſure of the then Prince, cannot but be a Juſtification of that Neceſſity before God and Man.

And thus, my Lords, it was thought, at the Time this Reſiſtance was on Foot. For then, when the Time was moſt proper for Admonitions of this Nature, the Clergy were ſo far from averring the Unlawfulneſs of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever, that the true diſtinguiſhing Characteriſtick of a Church of-England-Man then was, wiſhing that Reſiſtance Good Luck, and rejoicing at its Succeſs. And yet the Gentleman at the Bar makes this Exception the Inſtance of an unjuſt Reſiſtance, by an Ironical Aſſertion of the late King's ſolemnly diſclaiming the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance in his Declaration; for Ironical it muſt be, when every Body muſt believe that he himſelf knew the contrary; a Figure of Speech very well underſtood, and known to be the moſt Biting Sarcaſm.

My Lords, So much Depends upon the Revolution, that the Commons are highly Jealous of the Honour of it. It is, indeed, Twenty Years ſince the Revolution was ſettled; but it is within much leſs than Twenty Years that a Pretender has attempted to invade our Country, to ſet this Revolution aſide. That Perſon, even with his own good Opinion of his Right, knows, he can have no Pretence to the Crown, unleſs the Priſoner's Political Divinity be true, which We Aver it is Not. But leſt this Pretender ſhould apprehend that his Friends are much increas'd, when he hears that the Revolution is publickly branded in Sermons as Black and Odious; the Commons have Impeached this Preacher, that he might not be Guilty of this High Crime and Miſdemeanor without Diſcouragement, and have brought him to your Lordſhips Bar for Juſtice, that he may not do it with Impunity.

Mr. Walpole. MY Lords, The Commons are now making good their Charge againſt Doctor Henry Sacheverell contain'd in the firſt Article, wherein he is accus'd for Suggeſting and Maintaining, that the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the happy Revolution, were Odious and Unjuſtifiable, and that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours on his late Majeſty and the Revolution.

By what has been already offer'd to your Lordſhips, I make no doubt but you are fully convinc'd, how injurious theſe Poſitions muſt be to the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom, and how highly they deſerve, and loudly call for your Lordſhips ſpeedy and exemplary Juſtice.

The great Licentiouſneſs of the Preſs, in cenſuring and reflecting upon all Parts of the Government, has of late given too juſt Cauſe of Offence; but when only Pamphlets and common Libels are Matters of Complaint; when none but Mercenary-Scriblers, and the Hackney-Pens of a diſcontented Party, are employ'd to vent their Malice, 'tis fit to leave them to the common Courſe of the Law, and to the ordinary Proceedings of the Courts below. But, my Lords, when the Trumpet is ſounded in Sion; when the Pulpit takes up the Cudgels; when the Cauſe of the Enemies of our Government is call'd the Cauſe of God, and of the Church; when this bitter and poiſonous Pill is gilded over with the ſpecious Name of Loyalty, and the People are Taught for their Souls and Conſciences ſake to ſwallow theſe pernicious Doctrines; when inſtead of ſound Religion, Divinity, and Morality, Factious and Seditious Diſcourſes are become the conſtant Entertainments of ſome Congregations; the Commons cannot but think it high time to put a Stop to this growing Evil, and for the Authority of a Parliament to interpoſe, and exert it ſelf, in Defence of the Revolution, the preſent Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion. All which the Commons think ſo materially concern'd in this Queſtion, that if the Doctrines advanc'd by Doctor Sacheverell, are not Criminal in the higheſt degree, it will follow, that the Neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the Revolution were Illegal, and conſequently, that the preſent Eſtabliſhment, and Proteſtant Succeſſion, founded upon that Revolution, are Void and of no Effect.

The Commons cannot but apprehend that the juſt Reſentment and Indignation they have ſhewn upon this occaſion, will meet with the general Applauſe of all that are heartily and ſincerely well affected to Her Majeſty, and Her Government; but for all thoſe, whoſe Principles and Practices render them moſt juſtly ſuſpected to have other Views, they are not at all ſurprized to find them alarm'd, and under the greateſt Concern, at this Tryal.

I am very ſenſible, my Lords, of the Difficulty and Nicety that attends the ſpeaking to this Point, and that whilſt a Loyal Subject and Faithful Servant of the beſt of Queens, is ſpeaking in Defence of the Neceſſary and Commendable Reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution, his Arguments may be miſconſtrued, and miſrepreſented, as maintaining Antimonarchical Schemes.

But ſurely, my Lords, to plead for Reſiſtance, that Reſiſtance, I mean, which alone can be concern'd in this Debate, is to aſſert and maintain the very Being of our preſent Government and Conſtitution; and to Aſſert Non-Reſiſtance in that boundleſs and unlimited Senſe in which Doctor Sacheverell preſumes to Aſſert it, is to Sap and Undermine the very Foundations of our Government, to remove the natural Baſis and Fundamental Strength of our Conſtitution, and to leave it underſet with imaginary Props and Buttreſſes, which do, at beſt, but ill ſupport a ſhaken Foundation: And 'tis a moſt ſurprizing Aſſurance in the Enemies of our Government, that whilſt they are ſtriking at the Root, and digging up the Foundations, upon which our preſent and future Settlement is built, that they ſhould hope to paſs upon the World as Friends to either. But ſo irreconcileable are the Profeſſions and Practices of ſome Men, ſo awkardly do they ſpeak well of what they do not in their Hearts approve, that in Vindication of his late Majeſty (for that's a Part that ſometimes they think uſeful to Act) they declare his moſt glorious Enterprize to ſave a ſinking Nation, utterly Illegal: To recommend themſelves to the Queen, they condemn that Revolution, without which She never had been Queen, and we a moſt unhappy People: To teſtify their Zeal and Affection for the Proteſtant Succeſſion, they invalidate all the Laws that have been made for ſecuring that Bleſſing to Poſterity: And laſtly, to manifeſt their Averſion, and for ever to blaſt all Hopes of the Pretender, they advance and maintain the Hereditary Right, as the only true Right, to the Crown. But what Intereſt theſe Opinions may at one time or other be produced to ſupport, and in favour of whoſe Pretenſions theſe Inſinuations are eaſily underſtood to be, and in favour of what Settlement they can hardly be conſtru'd, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips Conſideration.

The utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, upon any Pretence whatſoever, is the General Poſition laid down in the Sermon, which, if it be ſtrictly, and in the moſt extenſive manner true, The aſſuming and exerciſing a Power of diſpenſing with, and ſuſpending the Laws; The Commitment and Proſecution of the Biſhops; The Erecting a Court of Commiſſioners for Eccleſiaſtical Cauſes; The Levying Money by Pretence of Prerogative; The raiſing and keeping a ſtanding Army without Conſent of Parliament, The Violating the Freedom of Elections of Members to ſerve in Parliament; and all the Grievances enumerated in the Bill of Rights, were all meer Pretences, and not ſufficient to Warrant and Juſtify what was then done, in Defence of the true, ancient, and indubitable Rights and Liberties of the People of this Kingdom; which are now again Enacted, Ratified and Confirm'd, and Enjoin'd to be firmly and ſtrictly holden and obſerv'd. By what Evaſions, or Diſtinctions, the Doctor will explain himſelf off upon this Head, I cannot eaſily foreſee; unleſs he will be ſo ingenuous as now to confeſs, what there is too much Reaſon to believe will be his Opinion, if ever a proper Time ſhall ſerve for declaring, That the Acts of Parliament made upon, and ſince the Revolution, are only the Effects of a happy Uſurpation, and no part of the true Law of the Land.

Reſiſtance is no where Enacted to be Legal, but ſubjected, by all the Laws now in Being, to the greateſt Penalties; 'tis what is not, cannot, nor ought ever to be deſcrib'd, or affirm'd, in any poſitive Law, to be excuſable: When, and upon what never-to-be-expected Occaſions, it may be exerciſed, no Man can foreſee; and ought never to be thought of, but when an utter Subverſion of the Laws of the Realm threaten the whole Frame of a Conſtitution, and no Redreſs can otherwiſe be hoped for: It therefore does, and ought for ever to ſtand, in the Eye and Letter of the Law, as the higheſt Offence. But becauſe any Man, or Party of Men, may not out of Folly or Wantonneſs commit Treaſon, or make their own Diſcontents, ill Principles, or diſguiſed Affections to another Intereſt, a Pretence to reſiſt the Supreme Power, will it follow from thence, that the utmoſt Neceſſity ought not to engage a Nation in its own Defence, for the Preſervation of the whole? Or on the other ſide, Becauſe the greateſt and moſt inexpreſſible Emergencies did ſufficiently juſtify and warrant the Reſiſtance of the Revolution, will it be a Conſequence, that therefore, upon ev'ry ſlight Pretext or common Occaſion, the Laws that fence againſt Treaſon will be of no Effect? No, my Lords, I hope your juſt Judgment in this Caſe will convince the World, that every Seditious, Diſcontented, Hot-headed, Ungifted, Unedifying Preacher (the Doctor will pardon me for borrowing one String of Epithets from him, and for once uſing a little of his own Language) who had no Hopes of diſtinguiſhing himſelf in the World, but by a matchleſs Indiſcretion, may not advance, with Impunity, Doctrines deſtructive of the Peace and Quiet of Her Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, and prepare the Minds of the People for an Alteration, by giving them ill Impreſſions of the preſent Eſtabliſhment and its Adminiſtration.

The Doctrine of unlimited, unconditional Paſſive Obedience, was firſt invented to ſupport Arbitrary and Deſpotick Power, and was never promoted or countenanc'd by any Government that had not Deſigns ſome time or other of making uſe of it: What then can be the Deſign of Preaching this Doctrine now, unask'd, unſought for, in Her Majeſty's Reign, where the Law is the only Rule and Meaſure of the Power of the Crown, and of the Obedience of the People? If then this Doctrine can neither be an Advantage or Security to Her Majeſty, who neither wants, nor deſires it, to what End and Purpoſe muſt every thinking Man conclude 'tis now ſet on Foot, but to unhinge the preſent Government, by ſetting aſide all that has been done in Oppoſition to that Doctrine; and when, by theſe Means, the Way is made clear to Another's Title, the People are ready inſtructed to ſubmit to whatever ſhall be impoſed upon them.

It may be expected, after I have ſaid thus much in general, that I ſhou'd proceed to ſhew in what Parts of the Sermon theſe Aſperſions are contain'd: But, my Lords, that Part has been ſo fully and diſtinctly ſpoke to, by thoſe Learned Gentlemen who are more proper, and a great deal more able, to manage that Province, that I will not miſpend your Lordſhips Time, by repeating what has been already ſo fully and juſtly made out; but ſo much I will venture to ſay, That if we remove the Rubbage, with which the Doctor has an excellent Talent at puzzling Common Senſe, and bring together the ſeveral Sentences, that can only be Relative to one another, 'tis impoſſible for the Art of Man to make any Inferences or Conſtructions, ſo cloſe and ſtrong, as the plain and genuine Senſe of the whole Scope of his Sermon, muſt, at firſt View, ſuggeſt to every Man's Underſtanding. And all that the Doctor alledges in his Defence, is, That in the Revolution there was no Reſiſtance at all; and that the King did utterly diſclaim any ſuch Imputation. But ſurely, my Lords, it cannot be now neceſſary to prove Reſiſtance in the Revolution; I ſhould as well expect that your Lordſhips would deſire me, for Form's ſake, to prove the Sun ſhines at Noon-day. If then, there was moſt undoubtedly Reſiſtance uſed to bring about the Revolution, it will follow that all the Cenſures, which are ſo freely beſtowed upon Reſiſtance in general, muſt attend, and will be imputed to the Revolution: And if Reſiſtance be utterly Illegal, upon any Pretence whatſoever; if it is a Sin, which unrepented of, by the Doctrine of the Church of England, carries ſure and certain Damnation; if, upon Repentance, there is no Remiſſion of Sins without a ſtedfaſt Purpoſe to amend the Evil we have done, and to make all poſſible Reſtitution, or at leaſt to do our utmoſt Endeavours for that Purpoſe; I beg your Lordſhips to conſider what a Duty is here preſſed, upon the Peril of Damnation, upon every Man's Conſcience, that knows, or believes, that there was Reſiſtance in the Revolution, and is conſcious to himſelf, of being any ways aſſiſting, or even conſenting, to this Damnable Sin; and what muſt be the Conſequence, if theſe Doctrines, without any Reſerve or Exception, are with Impunity preach'd throughout the Kingdom. All which, my Lords, I hope is ſufficient to ſatisfy your Lordſhips, that Doctor Sacheverell is guilty of the Charge exhibited againſt him in the firſt Article; and that he is an Offender of that Nature and Malignity, that this Court only could be the proper Judges of ſuch High Crimes; and from your Lordſhips Juſtice, the Commons hope, That his Puniſhment will be adequate to the Heinouſneſs of his Offence.

Sir John Hawles. MY Lords, I am commanded by the Commons of Great Britain to be aſſiſting to the Gentlemen that ſpoke before me, for the proving the Priſoner at the Bar guilty of the Crime charged in the firſt Article of his Impeachment; which is, That he did Suggeſt and Maintain, in his Sermon preached at St. Paul's, That the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the happy Revolution were odious and unjuſtifiable; and that his late Majeſty in his Declaration diſclaimed the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and that to impute Reſiſtance to the ſaid Revolution is to caſt black and odious Colours on his late Majeſty. In making good which Article againſt the Doctor, I hope the Gentlemen that have ſpoke before me will Excuſe me, if I make uſe of another Method than what they have done; which I ſhall do, not miſliking the Courſe they have taken, nor that I think the Method I ſhall take is better than theirs, but only becauſe I would not repeat what's ſaid by them, which I am ſure would come with a worſe Grace from me, than it did from them; and becauſe I am ſure what was ſaid is very well remembred by your Lordſhips. What I ſhall offer is, I think, ſomewhat to the Purpoſe, and was not mentioned by the Gentlemen before. As to the Paſſages taken out of the Sermon to prove the Doctor Guilty of the Fact of this Firſt Article, they have been ſo fully open'd, and ſo very well apply'd, that I have very little to add to what has been ſaid; I ſhall therefore only ſay, that the Clauſe of his Sermon, wherein he Aſſerts that "The grand Security of "our Government, and the very Pillar on which it "ſtands, is founded upon the ſteady Belief of the "Subjects Obligation to an abſolute and unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power in all "things Lawful, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever", he lays down not as a Doctrine he would teach his Congregation; but in order to draw an Argument from thence for ſome other Purpoſe; and what that is, appears plainly afterwards. For having alledged ſome Things not proper for the Occaſion for which the Day upon which he preach'd was Solemniz'd, he adds, "Our "Adverſaries think they effectually ſtop our "Mouths, and have us ſure and unanſwerable on "this Point, when they urge the Revolution of "this Day in their Defence; but certainly they are " the greateſt Enemies of that, and his late Maje-

" ſty, and the moſt ungrateful for their Deliverance,
" who endeavour to caſt ſuch black and odious
" Colours upon both. How often muſt they be " told, that the late King himſelf ſolemnly diſ-
" claim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance"? By which 'tis plain, that the Poſition of the Subjects Obligation to an abſolute and unconditional Obedience to the Supream Power laid down, was only to ſhock and lay odious Colours upon the Revolution, or the Means whereby it was brought about; he knowing that the Means whereby the Revolution was brought about was by Force, and he knew it was ſo declared by the Act of Parliament made in the firſt Year of King William and Queen Mary, for preventing vexatious Suits againſt ſuch as acted in Order to the bringing in the late King and Queen. And tho' he would inſinuate that the ſame was not done by Force, I muſt own he does not aſſert that either it was or was not done by Force; but he ſtrongly inſinuates it was not done by Force, when he aſſerts, tho' untruly, that the late King diſclaim'd any Reſiſtance upon his coming. I'll ſay nothing more as to that Matter; and nothing as to that other, that has been largely open'd, relating to the Subjects Obligation to an abſolute and unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power; the rather, becauſe, if it was doubtful, the Acts of Parliament mention'd in the Preface to the Articles, whereby the Revolution has been declar'd to be a glorious Enterprize, and the Means whereby it was brought about juſtified, have determin'd that Matter; and becauſe your Lordſhips, as I think, will not ſuffer the Doctor or his Council to ſay any thing againſt the Revolution, or the Means whereby it was brought about.

The Commons of Great Britain own your Lordſhips to be the Supreme Court of Judicature in this Goverment, but yet they think that Acts of Parliament, whereof your Lordſhips are in part the Makers, are as binding upon your Lordſhips, as a Court of Judicature, as they are upon any Court of Weſtminſter-Hall, where Matters determin'd by Act of Parliament are never ſuffer'd to be diſputed afterwards; but I own, what is practis'd in Weſtminſter-Hall is not a Rule whereby your Lordſhips ought to be govern'd, and therefore I rely only upon the Reaſon of what I aſſerted; for altho' your Lordſhips are the Supreme Court, and from whom no Appeal lyes to any other Court of Judicature, yet your Lordſhips, as you are Part of the Legiſlature, are greater than you are in your Judicial Capacity, in which you are ſubject to the Law; tho' in your Legiſlative Capacity, in Concurrence with two other Powers, you are above the Law. It is therefore incongruous, that a Court of Perſons of leſs Power ſhould judge otherwiſe than the Court of greater Power had determin'd; but this I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, and am ſure the Gentlemen of Council with the Doctor know their Duty ſo well in this Matter, that they will not give your Lordſhips the Trouble of an Admonition upon this Occaſion. I won't add more upon this Subject, but proceed, with your Lordſhip's Permiſſion, to prove the Doctor Guilty of what he is charg'd with in this Firſt Article, by the Doctrine by himſelf laid down in his Sermon, and admit for Argument-ſake the ſame to be true; tho' this I muſt aſſert, that he carries the Doctrine ſomewhat farther than the Apoſtles did in ſome Reſpect, but in other Reſpects ſeems to reſtrain it more than they did. In the reſtraining Part he ſeems to confine the abſolute and unconditional Obedience to Things lawful; which Reſtraint looks like ſomething, but in Truth, upon Examination, is nothing; for ſuppoſe the Supreme Power Commands the Subject to do ſomething which it thinks is Lawful, but the Subject not willing to Obey, pretending the thing to be Unlawful, the true Reaſons being that they are chargeable, troubleſome, hazardous, or the like; in this Caſe who is to be Judge, the Supreme Power, or the Subject? In the Reaſon of the thing, neither of them are proper Judges; for the Supreme Power will be byaſs'd, by reaſon of the Command given by them at firſt, and will be aſham'd to own what they commanded was Unlawful, and therefore will give Judgment on their own ſide, to juſtify themſelves in what they have commanded; and the Subject will be as much byaſs'd for the ſame Reaſon that he was at firſt diſſatisfied with the Command. And there being no higher Power of Authority to Appeal to than the Supreme Power, that muſt needs be the Judge, from whom there can be no Appeal. But perhaps the Doctor and I differ in the Perſons in whom the Supreme Power is lodg'd; for the Doctor has not mention'd that Matter, either in his Sermon, or in his Anſwer to the Articles; but I hope, in the Anſwer he is to give to what's now objected againſt him, he will tell us in whom that Power is lodg'd. I'll tell him in whom I think it is lodg'd, I think it is lodg'd in the Queen's Majeſty, the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in Parliament aſſembled: And I think when the Acts mentioned in the Impeachment did paſs (except the Act for declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject) the Supreme Power was lodg'd in the late King William and Queen Mary, and the Lords Spiritual and Temporal and Commons in Parliament aſſembled. But as the Doctor ſeems to have reſtrain'd his Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, he has as much enlarged his Doctrine of Abſolute Obedience; for, as I think, what hitherto written or aſſerted, upon the Occaſion of that Matter, went no further than Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance; but the Priſoner's Doctrine extends to Active Obedience as well as Paſſive; becauſe, as I think, the Words of the Apoſtles, from whom this Doctrine is taken, ſeems to reſtrain it only to Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance; and the Reaſons why the Apoſtles inculcated no other Obedience, as I believe, was, becauſe that was ſufficient to ſecure the Government under which the Apoſtles liv'd, which was the Roman Government, and which ſtood in Fear of no Foreign Force, and which Government was ſaid and believ'd could not be ruin'd but by its own Subjects, which afterwards prov'd to be true. That that their Doctrine was the Doctrine of Chriſtianity, and truly ſo call'd, I'll readily agree to the Priſoner; but I do not think that Chriſtianity introduc'd that Doctrine into the World; for I think, as the Doctor does, that it was as ancient as Government, becauſe it was impoſſible that Government could ſubſiſt, unleſs ſupported by its Subjects; but how ancient that Doctrine was, can't be aſſerted, without knowing how Government came to be introduc'd into the World. If it was Patriarchal, as ſome have aſſerted, it was as ancient as Adam; if it was introduc'd by Conqueſt, then its Date was no higher than Nimrod; if it was by Compact, then I can't ſay when it began; but this is certain, that it was as ancient as the Roman People, which was above ſeven Hundred Years before the Coming of our Saviour; but how long before the Roman

Name was known, I can't take upon me to ſay. But tho' this Doctrine was not introduc'd by Chriſtianity, yet I think it may well and properly be call'd the Chriſtian Doctrine; for tho' amongſt the Heathens it was a Political Law, and oblig'd (as other Laws did) for fear of Puniſhment; yet Chriſtianity firſt preſs'd this Doctrine upon the Conſcience of the Subject, which no other Religion did, and that was ſufficient to entitle it to the Name of Chriſtian. But the Doctor, as I ſaid, has carry'd it farther than the Words of the Apoſtles did, extending it to an Active Obedience, which the Words of the Apoſtles do not warrant, in the Strictneſs of the Expreſſions. But yet I won't conteſt with the Doctor in that Matter; for if the Doctrine, as preach'd by the Apoſtles, was ſufficient to ſecure the Government they liv'd under, as it was, and that Doctrine is not ſufficient to ſecure the Government we now live under, as it is not; the Doctor might very well think, that what he now aſſerts, by the Equity, as we call it (that is) the Reaſon of the Doctrine preach'd by the Apoſtles, was well warranted.

Having thus ſtated the Matter of the Subjects Obedience to the Supreme Powers, in which I have agreed with the Doctrine ſet forth in the Sermon, I can't imagine how the Doctor can juſtify himſelf in declaring againſt the Revolution, as he has done; when he knows, as well as any, that the Revolution has been juſtify'd by the Supreme Power, in the Acts of Parliament mention'd: For certainly it muſt be granted, that the Doctrine that commands Obedience to the Supreme Power, tho' in Things contrary to Nature, even to ſuffer Death, which is the higheſt Injuſtice that can be done a Man, rather than make an Oppoſition to the Supreme Power; becauſe the Death of one, or ſome few private Perſons, is a leſs Evil than diſturbing the whole Government; that Law muſt needs be underſtood to forbid the doing, or ſaying any Thing to diſturb the Government, the rather, becauſe the obeying that Law cannot be pretended to be againſt Nature: And the Doctor's refuſing to obey that implicit Law, is the Reaſon for which he is now proſecuted; tho' he would have it believ'd, that the Reaſon he is now proſecuted, was for the Doctrine he aſſerted of Obedience to the Supreme Power; which he might have preach'd as long as he had pleas'd, and the Commons would have taken no Offence at it, if he had ſtopt there, and not have taken upon him, on that Pretence or Occaſion, to have caſt odious Colours upon the Revolution. If he is of the Opinion he pretends, I can't imagine how it comes to paſs, that he that pays that Deference to the Supreme Power, has preach'd ſo directly contrary to the Determinations of the Supreme Power in this Government; he very well knowing that the Lawfulneſs of the Revolution, and of the Means whereby it was brought about, has already been determin'd by the aforeſaid Acts of Parliament; and do it in the worſt manner that he could invent. For queſtioning the Right to the Crown here in England, has procur'd the ſhedding of more Blood, and caus'd more Slaughter, than all the other Matters tending to Diſturbances in the Government put together. If therefore the Doctrine which the Apoſtles have laid down, was only to continue the Peace of the World, as thinking the Death of ſome few particular Perſons better to be born with than a Civil War; ſure it is the higheſt Breach of that Law, to queſtion the firſt Principles of this Government.

It is not forgotten how much Blood was ſpilt upon the Account of the Title between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter, in which the Learned in the Law did differ; and the ſetting on Foot that Queſtion of the Title of the preſent Government, which was above Twenty Years ago determin'd, and that Determination acquieſc'd in from that Time till now, in all Probability, if not ſuppreſs'd, would tend to as great Miſchief as that War entail'd on the Nation. But yet the Doctor, who preaches up the Subjects Submiſſion to the Supreme Power, even to Death it ſelf, thinks he hath not only a Licenſe, but a Command from God, to enquire into the late King and Queen's Right to the Crown; and to blow a Trumpet, to ſet his Fellow-Subjects to cut one another's Throats upon that Account. This ſurely is the abſurdeſt Conſtruction of a Text that ever was made; and yet this I'll ſay is the Caſe, if you'll compare the Priſoner's Practice with his Doctrine.

Methinks the Doctor ought to have conſider'd what our Saviour and his Apoſtles did in their Time: We don't find that any of them ever queſtion'd the Title of the Emperors under whoſe Government they liv'd; or ever ſaid any thing relating to their Titles, or that Power they exercis'd; and yet if they had thought it lawful or expedient, they had juſt Occaſions to have done it. St. John, the Survivor of the Apoſtles, liv'd (as 'tis ſaid) to the Time of Trajan; ſo that by that Account he liv'd under Thirteen Emperors, including Auguſtus and Trajan; and yet neither of them had ſo much as a Pretence of Right to the Empire, according to the Opinion we have of that Right now. The firſt and laſt of thoſe Emperors were the very beſt the Romans had, except perhaps Titus Veſpaſian; and yet Auguſtus came to the Empire by the worſt Means of any of them, for he waded thro' a Sea of Blood, and was guilty of a great many Acts of Treachery and Cruelty: But after the World had reap'd ſo many Benefits by his Excellent Government, it forgot the Iniquity of the Means whereby the Empire was obtain'd. And the beſt Means of obtaining the Empire, by the following Emperors, till the Time of Titus Veſpaſian, were by Force, and moſt of them by Treacherous Murders; and yet we don't find, that either our Saviour, or his Apoſtles, reproach'd any of thoſe Emperors with the Injuſtice of the Means whereby they became ſo. And methinks it would have become the Doctor to have follow'd thoſe good Examples. But the Doctor is of another Opinion, and thinks the aforeſaid Words of Iſaiah, to Cry aloud, &c. do well warrant that his Opinion; not conſidering that that Prophet had that Expreſs Command from God, for reproving the Hypocriſy of the Jews: And if the Doctor had the like Command for Preaching as he has done, I think he has quoted a good Authority for ſo doing; but he muſt give us a better Proof of ſuch Command than hitherto he hath done.

If he thinks the Command given to Iſaiah extends to him; how came it to paſs that the Apoſtles did not think that the ſame Command extended to them? Did not they live nearer the Time of Iſaiah? Were not they acquainted with the Writings of Iſaiah, as well or better than the Doctor, and ſo might have known the Authority given to that Prophet better than the Doctor? but yet forbore to do as the Doctor has done: And their having forborn ſo to do, cannot proceed from any other Reaſon, than that they thought thoſe Words did not extend to the Apoſtles; or that they thought thought it was not Lawful or Expedient for them to queſtion the Title of thoſe Princes, or the Juſtice or Means whereby they obtained it.

I'll only add to this Matter, That if the Doctor had been contented with the Liberty he took of Preaching up the Duty of Paſſive Obedience in the moſt extenſive manner he had thought fit, and would have ſtopp'd there, your Lordſhips would not have had the Trouble in relation to him that you now have; but it is plain, that he preached up his Abſolute and Unconditional Obedience, not to continue the Peace and Tranquility of this Nation, but to ſet the Subjects at ſtrife, and to raiſe a War in the Bowels of this Nation; and it is for this that he is now proſecuted; tho' he would fain have it believed, that the Proſecution was for Preaching the peaceable Doctrine of Abſolute Obedience.

I can't but take notice of the Scandal the Doctor charges upon the late King, as if when he landed here, he had diſclaimed all manner of Imputation of Reſiſtance; than which nothing is more untrue, even by his own Confeſſion in his Anſwer, and the Words of the Declaration mention'd in the Print of the Sermon, tho' no Part of the Sermon; whereby he pretends to explain himſelf, by ſaying, He intended a Diſclaimer of Reſiſtance in order to a Conqueſt; than which nothing could be more abſurd: For never was a Conqueſt made, or ever will be made, by bare Reſiſtance; nor ever was there a weaker Thing charged upon a Prince, than to make him diſclaim all Reſiſtance, at a Time when he was actually making War: For his bringing an armed Force of that Number he did into this Kingdom, with a great Train of Artillery with him, was making War by the Law of Nations, and then and now by the Law of Great Britain: And he hath charged the Prince of Orange with an Act of the higheſt Treachery, in pretending Peace, when he actually made War.

The laſt Matter I ſhall take notice of, are the Words in the Nineteenth Page of the Doctor's Sermon; viz. That old Leaven of their Forefathers is ſtill working in the preſent Generation; that this traditional Poyſon ſtill remains in this Brood of Vipers, to ſting us to Death, is ſufficiently viſible, as to the dangerous Encroachment they now make upon our Government, and the treaſonable Reflection they have publiſhed upon Her Majeſty, God bleſs Her! whoſe Hereditary Right to the Throne they have had the Impudence to Deny and Cancel, to make Her a Creature of their own Power; and that by the ſame Principles they placed a Crown upon Her, they tell us, they (that is, the Mob) may Reaſſume it at their Pleaſure. Now I think it cannot be doubted who it is the Doctor means by the Word Mob, which is the People of England: For tho' the Word Mob is a Cant Word amongſt a Sort of People called Gypſies, and with them ſignifies the Meaneſt, or the Scum or Dregs of the People, yet as the Doctor has uſed it in this Place, it can ſignify nothing elſe than the Body of the People of England; of whom, I think, your Lordſhips do not think it beneath you to be thought a Part, and the Chiefeſt Part: For he aſſerts, They ſay, that they placed a Crown upon Her Majeſty; and from thence makes an Inference, that they may reaſſume it at their Pleaſure; which can be intended nothing elſe than what was done in reſpect of Her Majeſty by the Bill of Rights; wherein 'tis ſaid, "That the "Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in "Parliament aſſembled, did declare Her Majeſty, "after the Death of the late King and late Queen, "without Heirs of her Body, was Lawful and "Rightful Queen of this Realm. Now, tho' Her Majeſty hath an Hereditary Right and Title to the Crown, and ſo She is not ſo much concerned in the Declaration by the ſaid Act, as the laſt King and Queen, in what that Act conferred upon them, which was done only by the People of England, under the Denomination of Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons in Parliament aſſembled: And if that did not confer a Title to the Crown on the late King and Queen, they, who were in their Lives Time thought to be lawful and rightful King and Queen of theſe Realms, by the Doctor's Reaſoning, were no better than the Uſurpers of another's Right. And tho' that Bill of Rights was afterwards confirmed by an Act in the Second Year of their Reign, yet that will not at all mend the Matter; for if they did not obtain a Right, by the Bill of Rights, to the Crown of theſe Realms, they were no more King and Queen of theſe Realms, than they were before the ſaid Bill of Rights. But the Truth is, that when a Government is brought out of Frame, by the extraordinary Steps of a Prince, 'tis a vain Thing to hope that it ever can be ſet right by regular Steps; this never was done, nor ever will be done: But thoſe Methods which were neceſſary to ſet the Government in a right Frame again, have been always taken to be Legal, tho' by the Nicety of Law it could not be well juſtified. Upon the Change of Government from Richard the Second to Henry the Fourth, the Parliament called in the Time of Richard the Second, and by his Authority, continued to ſit in the Time of Henry the Fourth, and paſſed ſeveral Acts in the Time of Henry the Fourth; which was never practiſed before, nor warranted by any Laws that we know of; yet what was done, was allowed to be Legal. To the ſame Purpoſe was that which was done in the Time of Henry the Seventh: For he and thoſe of his Friends being attainted of High Treaſon, which, according to the Rules of Law at that Time, prevented the Deſcent of the Crown on him; and his Friends being moſtly attainted, were uncapable of Sitting in Parliament till thoſe Attainders were reverſed, which could not be done but by Act of Parliament, or the Court of King's-Bench; and he did not care to have a Parliament, till his Friends were capable of ſitting there; nor could he make Judges, till he was King; which Difficulty ſeemed to be inſuperable: But the Judges made a Reſolution according to the Exigence of the Thing, and declared that Sir William Stanley's placing the Crown upon the Earl of Richmond's Head, purged his Attainder, and he thereby became from thenceforwards King of England, and the King thereby enabled to Conſtitute Judges, and the Judges to reverſe the Attainder of all the King's Friends. 'Tis true, Henry the Seventh married the Heireſs of the Houſe of York, and was thereby (as we now think) King in Right of his Queen; but he never would own her Title to the Crown, nor ever ſuffered her to join with him in any Act of Government, nor ever declared by what Title he poſſeſs'd the Crown; but yet none of the Acts paſs'd in his Time, nor any Thing then tranſacted, was afterwards queſtion'd upon the Account of his Title to the Crown. 'Tis true, there was an Act paſs'd in his Time, that indemnified ſuch as ſhould Obey, or Aſſiſt the King that was in Being, whether he had Right to the Crown or no: But if he had not been allowed to be King before the paſſing of that Act, the Acts of Parliament that paſſed in his Time would have been of no more Validity, lidity, than the Acts paſſed in the Time of Cromwell, or any other Uſurper. Whereby 'tis plain, that the Doctor now, and the Perſons who had the beſt Knowledge of Matters of this kind in thoſe Days, diſagreed in Opinion. And I can't but take notice, that the Doctor, notwithſtanding his little Knowledge in the Matters he diſcourſes of, makes the Declaration by Parliament of the Queen's Title to the Crown, to be the Cancelling of Her Title by Deſcent; and therefore he ſeems to adviſe Her Majeſty, to quit that Title She claims from Her People, and to rely upon Her Title by Inheritance. Whereas, if the Doctor had but known what our Law allows, or if he had read any thing of this Matter, he would have known that thoſe Titles did by no means diſagree, but were conſiſtent with one another; and that Princes that ſometimes have claimed by ſeveral Titles, would not make their Choice of which they relied on. Henry the Eighth, who was Heir of the Houſe of York and Lancaſter, never declared on which Title he relied. Queen Elizabeth, after the Death of her Brother and Siſter, claimed as Heir to Henry the Eighth, and was likewiſe Deviſee of the Government of England by the Will of her Father, who was (by Act of Parliament) enabled to give it by his Will to whom he pleaſed: But notwithſtanding that, ſhe deſired to have an Act of Parliament, which ſhe had, declaring her to be Queen of England, &c. Which Act of Parliament was to the ſame Purpoſe, as was the Bill of Rights in reſpect of Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown. I'll trouble your Lordſhips with no more, to prove the Priſoner guilty of the Crimes charged upon him by the Firſt Arricle of the Impeachment; but I cannot but obſerve ſome aggravating Circumſtances of the Priſoner's Crime. As firſt, That the Doctrine in the Impeachment was preach'd by a Divine of the Church of England as by Law Eſtabliſhed: For a Divine of the Church of England is a Perſon of that Credit, that the People are ready to aſſent to what he ſays, without conſidering what the ſame is, or how made out. In the next place, 'Twas preach'd in the Cathedral-Church of the Metropolis of this Kingdom: Had it been preach'd in ſome obſcure Country Town, 'twould have hardly been taken notice of. In the Third place, 'Twas preach'd before the Lord-Mayor and Court of Aldermen of the City of London, and ſo far approv'd of by them, or ſome of them, as to be Commanded to be printed; for which Reaſon, what he preach'd hath done more Miſchief than otherwiſe 'twould have done; there having been about Forty Thouſand printed, to vilify the Revolution, on which depends the Security of the Proteſtant Religion both at Home and Abroad, and the Succeſſion of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line, the Union of the Two Kingdoms, the Queen's Bounty to the poor Clergy, and ſeveral other Benefits we enjoy by the Revolution, and amongſt others, that Her Majeſty was and is ſo peaceably poſſeſs'd of the Crown. For if the Force before the Revolution, which ſuppreſs'd Her Majeſty's Hereditary Right to the Crown, had not been removed by the Revolution, as 'twas, that Her Majeſty's Title would never have been able to have exerted it ſelf: And if ever the Doctor, or any of his Accomplices, ſhould ever be able ſo to ſhock the Revolution, as to remove what is built upon it, I doubt that Force which the Revolution removed, will return again, and oppreſs the Queen's Title to the Crown, as it did before.

I can't paſs by the Doctor's Anſwer to the Articles, without taking Notice of one Paſſage in the ſame, viz. Hard is the Lot of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, if when they Cite the Word of God in their general Exhortations to Piety and Virtue, the ſeveral Texts by them Cited ſhould be ſaid to be by them meant of particular Perſons and Things. Now I muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips Judgment the Unreaſonableneſs of this Complaint; and whether the ſeveral Texts and Paſſages cited by him in his Sermon, can bear any other Conſtruction than what has been made; and whether it be not the Duty of the Preacher to deliver himſelf ſo in the Pulpit, that his Meaning ſhould not be doubtful to his Congregation. The Commons of Great-Britain don't go about to make him Aſſent or Swear to what the Supreme Power hath determin'd, tho' the Doctor in his Sermon has thought fit to impoſe Matters of that kind upon other Perſons, ſo as to make them Swear to them: No, the Commons of Great-Britain would only have him reſtrained from publiſhing any thing, and eſpecially in the Pulpit, which reflects upon the Supreme Power; or what they have or ſhall determine, which even the niceſt Conſcience never yet boggled at. I can add more Aggravations of the Doctor's Crimes, but will forbear to do it, rather following the Example of the Commons of Great-Britain; who have, indeed, demanded Judgment againſt this Perſon of your Lordſhips, but they have done it in Mercy; for they might have charged theſe Matters againſt the Doctor as High-Treaſon, and ſo it has been done in Indictments againſt ſome Divines, in a Reign known to your Lordſhips, for Matters in their Sermons leſs Heinous than thoſe for which he is Impeached; yet the Commons have called the Matters of this Impeachment only High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; and it is a Rule in our Law, that the Court in which a Proſecution is had, cannot call the Crimes greater than what the Proſecutor thought fit to charge them, and cannot adjudge a greater Puniſhment to the Crimes than uſual; but in ſome Caſes may leſſen the Puniſhment for ſuch Crimes; and whatſoever Cenſure your Lordſhips ſhall paſs upon this Criminal, the Commons of England will acquieſce, and be well ſatisfy'd with the ſame.

Major-General Stanhope. MY Lords, The Gentlemen who ſpoke before me to this Article, have ſaid ſo much to it, that they have left little to me, who am laſt in it. I ſhall therefore particularly apply my ſelf to make out to your Lordſhips, that as the Priſoner at the Bar is guilty of the Matter charg'd in this Firſt Article, ſo he has done it (as the Preamble of the Article ſets forth) with a Wicked and Malicious Intention to Undermine and Subvert Her Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law Eſtabliſhed; to Defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; to Aſperſe the Memory of His late Majeſty, and to Traduce and Condemn the late happy Revolution; as in the ſame Preamble to the Articles it is charged againſt him.

My Lords, if it be Truth, (as your Lordſhips have been told by moſt of the Gentlemen who went before me) that Non-Reſiſtance, aſſerted in general Terms, does deſtroy the Foundation of the Revolution, the preſent Eſtabliſhment, and Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown, and the Settlement of the Proteſtant Succeſſion; If that be true, it is as true, that the Doctor, who has advanced that Doctrine in general Terms, is guilty of that Charge of intending to ſubvert the Government: And then your your Lordſhips ought to proceed againſt him, as an Enemy to the Government.

What has been ſaid by the Gentlemen that ſpoke before me, concerning the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, has been ſaid with ſo much Regard to Truth, to Her Majeſty and Her Government, that I am perſuaded, nothing that has been ſaid on that Subject can juſtly be miſconſtrued. But on the contrary, to aſſert in general Terms the abſolute Illegality of Reſiſtance, on any Pretence whatſoever, (as this Doctor, and all the profeſs'd Enemies of the Government avowedly do) muſt be underſtood, by all impartial and thinking People, to overthrow Her Majeſty's Title and Government; ſince at the ſame Time that they ſkreen themſelves under the ſpecious Notion of profeſſing Abſolute and Paſſive Obedience to the Supreme Powers, they cannot conceal their true Meaning; That the true and real Object of their darling Doctrines, ſuch as Jus Divinum, Non-Reſiſtance, the Undefeaſible, Unalienable, Hereditary Right, that (I ſay) the true Object of theſe Doctrines, is a Prince on the other ſide the Water. They could not otherways be conſiſtent with themſelves. For in the ſame Breath, in the ſame Diſcourſe, to preach Paſſive Unlimited Obedience to Magiſtrates, and to revile and defame the Magiſtrates; to preach Non-Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever, and to encourage Sedition, by inveighing in the ſtrongeſt manner againſt the Adminiſtration; theſe are ſuch Contradictions, as can no otherways be reconcil'd, no otherways, than by concluding, what is very plain from their Conduct, that however they are pleaſed to colour and diſguize their Diſcourſes, their true End is only to diſengage and alienate the People's Affections from their preſent Governors; to inſinuate to them, that the Foundation of the Revolution was wrong; that the Revolution it ſelf was an Uſurpation; that whatever has been built upon that Foundation, can have no Weight; and to miſrepreſent thoſe who had a Hand in it, as Rebels and Traytors.

As to the Doctrine it ſelf of abſolute Non-Reſiſtance, it ſhould ſeem needleſs to prove by Arguments, that it is inconſiſtent with the Law of Reaſon, with the Law of Nature, and with the Practice of all Ages and Countries. Nor is it very material, what the Opinions of ſome particular Divines, or even the Doctrine generally preach'd in ſome particular Reigns, may have been concerning it. It is ſufficient for us to know what the Practice of the Church of England has been, when it found it ſelf oppreſſed. And indeed, one may appeal to the Practice of all Churches, of all States, and of all Nations in the World, how they behaved themſelves when they found their Civil and Religious Conſtitutions invaded and oppreſſed by Tyranny: I believe one may further venture to ſay, that there is not, at this Day, ſubſiſting any Nation or Government in the World, whoſe firſt Original did not receive its Foundation either from Reſiſtance, or Compact: And as to our purpoſe, it is equal, if the latter be admitted. For where-ever Compact is admitted, there muſt be admitted likewiſe a Right to defend the Rights accruing by ſuch Compact. To argue the Municipal Laws of a Country in this Caſe, is idle. Thoſe Laws were only made for the common Courſe of Things; and can never be underſtood to have been deſigned to defeat the End of all Laws whatſoever; which would be the Conſequence of a Nation's tamely ſubmitting to a Violation of all their Divine and Human Rights.

That there is a Latitude left to the Subjects in ſuch a Caſe, is allowed by the moſt ſtrenuous Advocates of Paſſive-Obedience: And I ſhall on this Occaſion quote to your Lordſhips, the Sermon of a Reverend Divine, who, I am ſure, is not thought to be a Favourer of Antimonarchical Principles; nor to deſerve any of thoſe pretty Epithets, which the Doctor ſo liberally beſtows on thoſe who differ from him in Opinion. 'Tis the Latin Sermon of Doctor Atterbury, preached to the Convocation. The Scope and Drift of that Diſcourſe, my Lords, was to preach up Abſolute Obedience; yet ſuch is the invincible Force of Truth, and ſuch the Nature of this Argument, that the Doctor, not to betray his own Conſcience, after having well thought upon it, is obliged to expreſs himſelf in the following Words, which your Lordſhips will give me Leave to read to you out of his Sermon, which I have here in my Hand. Quando autem, quibuſq; de cauſis Magiſtratuum imperia detrectare, Noſpetipſos in libertatem vindicare liceat, ne verbulo quidem indicant: niſi cum aliquid ab hominibus fortè imperatum fuerit, latis à Deo legibus contrarium. Id ubi acciderit, quid agendum ſit, Petri vox illa declarat, Obedire oportet Deo magis quam Hominibus.

The Senſe of this Paſſage, my Lords, if I miſtake not, is this: "But when, and upon what "Cauſes it may be lawful to oppoſe the Power "of the Prince, and aſſert our Liberties, the Scrip- "tures do not ſay; unleſs in Caſes when Men ſhall "command Things contrary to the Laws of God. "When that ſhall happen, St. Peter tells us what "we muſt do, We muſt Obey God before Men.

To apply this, my Lords, to our preſent Argument; I appeal to the Memory of your Lordſhips, whether King James did not command Things contrary to the Laws of God; whether his Commands to the Reverend Fathers of our Church were conſonant to the Law of God; whether his Commands to execute a Diſpenſing Power; whether his Commands to all ſuch of both Houſes, as he could influence to vote for a Diſpenſing Power, contrary to their own Conſciences, were agreeable to the Law of God; or, in ſhort, whether the whole Courſe of his Reign was not a Series of illegal Commands, calculated to deſtroy our Holy Religion, and to violate all our Religious and Civil Rights. Your Lordſhips thought ſo (my Lords;) the Commons thought ſo; and the Nation thought ſo; and in Conſequence of this Doctrine, preach'd by St. Peter, they choſe to obey God before Men.

But to return to Dr. Atterbury's Sermon, he goes on thus, my Lords. Petenda ſunt iſta (ſi quidem peti neceſſe ſit) à Juriſconſultis, à Theſium Politicarum tractatoribus; è legibus, è Rerumpublicarum Formis, cuiq; Genti propriis, tanquam è fonte ſuo, ſunt haurienda.

In Engliſh thus.

"But in ſuch Caſes, you muſt adviſe with the "Lawyers, and thoſe learned in Politicks; and "have Recourſe to the Laws and Conſtitutions pecu- "liar to each ſeveral Country, as to the Springs "and Fountains of this Knowledge.

My Lords, in Compliance to what is recommended by this Reverend Dean, I have endeavoured to follow his Advice, to conſult with thoſe learned in the Laws of Nations, and Politicks. I have heard that Grotius is of as good Authority on thoſe Subjects as any that have wrote about them; that he has ever been reckon'd a Favourer of Monarchy, and held in great Repute amongſt the Divines of our Church.

Church. I ſhall beg Leave, out of the many Paſſages to be found in his excellent Treatiſe de Jure Belli & Pacis, which ſupport this Argument, to quote only one, for the ſaving of your Lordſhips Time. 'Tis in his Firſt Book, the 4th Chapter, and 13th Section. Si Rex partem habeat ſummi Imperii, partem alteram Populus, aut Senatus, Regi in partem non ſuam involanti vis juſta opponi poterit, quia eatenus imperium non habet: quod locum habere cenſeo, etiamſi dictum ſit, Belli poteſtatem penes Regem fore; id enim de bello externo intelligendum eſt, cùm alioquin quiſquis Imperii ſummi partem habeat, non poſſit non jus habere eam partem tuendi.

The Senſe of this Paſſage I conceive to be this, "If the King hath one Part of the Supreme Power, "and that the other Part is in the Senate, or Peo- "ple, when ſuch a King ſhall invade that Part that "doth not belong to him, it ſhall be lawful to op- "poſe a juſt Force to him, becauſe his Power doth "not extend ſo far. Which Poſition I hold to be "true, even tho' the Power of making War ſhould "be veſted only in the King; which muſt be un- "derſtood to relate only to Foreign War: For as for "Home, it is impoſſible for any to have a Share of "the Supreme Power, and not to have likewiſe a "Right to defend that Share.

This Paſſage, my Lords, is exactly adapted to the Conſtitution of England; and the latter Part of it is perfectly agreeable to what I have always heard quoted as a Maxim of our Law, That where-ever there is a Right, there is a Remedy. That your Lordſhips have Rights, no Body will preſume to deny; that the Commons have Rights, no Body will deny; that every Subject of Britain has Rights, no Body will deny. Now to ſay that, when a Prince ſhall invade all theſe Rights at once; to ſay that the whole Collective Body of the Nation has no way to vindicate thoſe Rights, is ſo inconſiſtent, ſo contrary to Reaſon, that 'tis to be wonder'd it could ever enter into the Mind of Man.

If I did not fear to tire your Lordſhips, I might, from many Paſſages out of Forteſcue *, and Mr. Hooker †, evince beyond Contradiction, that the Conſtitution of England is founded upon Compact; and that the Subjects of this Kingdom have, in their ſeveral publick and private Capacities, as legal a Title to what are their Rights by Law, as a Prince to the Poſſeſſion of his Crown.

Your Lordſhips, and moſt that hear me, are Witneſſes, and muſt remember the Neceſſities of thoſe Times which brought about the Revolution: That no other Remedy was left to preſerve our Religion and Liberties; that Reſiſtance was Neceſſary, and conſequently Juſt. It was then by no good Man thought a black and odious Crime to take up Arms for the Defence of his Country. Many of your Lordſhips were Actors in that Reſiſtance. The greateſt Part of the Nation did either actually reſiſt, or countenance, abett, and ſupport thoſe who ſet them the glorious Example. I hope we have all ſo much Gratitude to the beſt and greateſt of Queens, as to retain for ever a grateful Memory, how great a Share Her Majeſty had in promoting that Revolution. When theſe Facts are ſo freſh in our Memories; What muſt we ſay to thoſe who give the injurious Names and Epithets of Republicans, of Enemies and Traytors to Church and State, to thoſe who were concerned in that Reſiſtance which brought about the Revolution? Sure it might have become them to conſider who were concerned, and who had a Share in it. It is not only traducing the late King and Queen, our Glorious Deliverers; it goes yet further: But I ſhall out of Reſpect forbear to mention what they not only think, but have frequently the Inſolence to own.

My Lords, If it be true that this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, aſſerted in ſo unlimited a Senſe, as not to except the Revolution, does certainly ſap the Foundation of the ſaid Revolution, and the preſent Eſtabliſhment which is built upon it; If it be true that to arraign as guilty of black and odious Crimes, all ſuch as were concerned in the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, doth involve the greateſt Part of this Nation in the Guilt of Rebellion, and Treaſon; If it neceſſarily follows, from the ſame Poſitions, that our Allegiance is not due to the preſent Government; I think we may as neceſſarily conclude, that this Sermon of the Doctor's, before your Lordſhips, does tend, as is ſet forth in the Preamble of the Impeachment, to undermine and ſubvert Her Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, which ſtands on the ſame Foundation.

My Lords, If the Doctor had in this Sermon only preached up Obedience to the Supreme Power, as a Chriſtian Duty, without meddling with Politicks, he might have been allow'd perhaps to plead for Excuſe, that he was ignorant of the Conſequences that might be deduced from ſuch general Propoſitions; that his only Aim was Charity, Peace, and Submiſſion to the Magiſtrates in Being. We muſt therefore pray your Lordſhips to compare one Part of his Sermon with the other; and your Lordſhips will then, I am perſuaded, be of Opinion with us, not only that the Concluſion we have drawn from his Poſitions, does neceſſarily flow from them, but that the Doctor himſelf muſt have been conſcious of it; and conſequently that what he has done, muſt have been, as we ſet forth in our Charge, with a wicked and malicious Intention.

Had the Doctor, my Lords, in the remaining Part of his Sermon, preach'd up Peace, Quietneſs, and the like; and ſhewn how happy we are under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and exhorted Obedience to it, he had never been called to anſwer a Charge at your Lordſhips Bar. But the Tenor of all his ſubſequent Diſcourſe, is one continued Invective againſt the Government. Paſſive Obedience is ſet down as an indiſpenſible Duty: But 'tis evident, by the whole Sermon, that it is not due to Queen ANNE, or Her Adminiſtration. Now what can that be, but to uſher in a Rightful Title (I think they call it) of one on the other ſide the Water?

There is ſuch an Affinity, my Lords, between this Sermon, and the Doctrines which are preached and propagated by a certain Set of Men, that I cannot but obſerve to your Lordſhips on this Occaſion, how induſtrious they have been ever ſince the Revolution, to prepare a Way for another. They are the Pure and Undefiled Church of England! The only Men of Loyal and Steady Principles! They never took the Oaths to the Government; never bent their Knee to Baal! They have their own Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Paſtors, and conſtitute the only true and pure Church of England! We are all Schiſmaticks, that is, all the reſt of England are Schiſmaticks, Hereticks, and Rebels! Now pray, my Lords, What are the peculiar and diſtinguiſhing Characteriſticks, the Favourite and Darling Tenets of theſe Men? What elſe but Paſſive-Obedience, Jus Divinum,

* Forteſcue de laudibus legis Angliæ, Cap. 10, 11, 12, 13.
† Eccl. Polity, Pag. 86, 444, 446, 470.

Divinum, an Hereditary, Indefeaſible Right of Succeſſion, which no Neceſſity, no Act of Parliament, no Preſcription of Time, no natural or legal Incapacity, can ever invalidate or ſet aſide? If they are in the right, my Lords, What are the Conſequences? The Queen is not Queen; Your Lordſhips are not a Houſe of Lords, for you are not duly ſummoned by a Legal Writ; We are no Houſe of Commons, for the ſame Reaſon; all the Taxes which have been rais'd for this Twenty Years have been Arbitrary and Illegal Extortions; all the Blood of ſo many brave Men, who have died (as they thought) in the Service of their Country, has been ſpilt in Defence of an Uſurpation; and they were only ſo many Rebels and Traitors.

My Lords, If theſe Puritans, (I think I may call them) theſe undefiled pure Church-Men, would confine themſelves to their own Conventicles, to get Money from a few deluded Women; it may, perhaps, be conſiſtent with the Indulgence of the mildeſt of Governments, to ſuffer them to enjoy the Benefit of that Toleration which is allowed to Proteſtant Diſſenters, how pernicious and deſtructive ſoever to the Publick may be their Principles. But when they ſhall come and vent their Treaſons abroad; when they ſhall occaſionally conform, and take the Oaths to the Government, in order the better to deſtroy it; when they ſhall abjure the Pretended Prince of Wales, but not forget him; when they ſhall invade the Pulpits of the true Church of England; when the Pulpit of your Metropolis, inſtead of teaching the People to pay their Anniverſary Tribute of Praiſe and Thanks to Almighty God for the many wonderful Succeſſes with which he has bleſs'd thoſe Arms which were taken up in Defence of the Revolution; when (I ſay) that Pulpit ſhall be proſtituted and polluted by venting Sedition againſt the beſt of Queens; it is high Time for your Lordſhips to animadvert upon it, for the Honour of thoſe glorious Princes who are dead; for the Honour of Her Majeſty, who ſo happily rules over us; and for the Peace and Tranquility of all Her Subjects.

My Lords, If I was not afraid of being thought too tedious to your Lordſhips, I would offer to you a few Words, concerning that Adminiſtration which the Doctor has ſo maliciouſly defamed; for as fond as this Gentleman, and thoſe like him, are of meddling with Politicks in the Pulpit; and, as himſelf expreſſes it, of ſetting the People right in their Principles; I do not find they ever teach what the Ends of Government truly are.

Oratio pro Publio Sextio.

My Lords, Tully, who takes it from Ariſtotle, ſtates the ultimate End of Government, and the Mark which Rulers ought to aim at, to be Otium cum Dignitate, or Peace with Reputation. Towards attaining this End, he enumerates the ſeveral Particulars which it requires the greateſt Application and Vigilance of good Governors to promote and maintain. And the chief Branches, as he ſtates them, are, Religion; the juſt and legal Powers and Rights of the Legiſlative, and of the Magiſtrates ſubordinate to that; a due Adminiſtration of Juſtice; the Publick Treaſure and Credit; Military Virtue; and concludes with Laus Publica; which, indeed, is the Reſult of a good Adminiſtration of the ſeveral Branches mention'd. For Praiſe both at Home and Abroad will never fail to attend good Management.

Now, my Lords, if any Man will but reflect on every one of theſe Particulars, and inſtance when in any Age there has been in this Iſland, a more univerſally glorious Adminiſtration, I will allow what the Doctor ſays to be true.

To begin with Religion, my Lords, let any one look upon that Reverend Bench, and ſay when it was ever filled with greater Examples of Piety, Learning, and Chriſtian Charity. That truly Chriſtian Moderation, and extenſive Zeal, and Charity to the Proteſtant Religion, will, in all human Probability, my Lords, (if our ſelves, by little Animoſities, do not obſtruct it,) will, I ſay, raiſe the Luſtre and Reputation of our Church to ſuch a Degree, that, as the Glory of our Arms juſtly entitles our Nation at preſent to hold the firſt Rank, ſo ſhall our Church be looked upon as the Mother of all the Reformed Churches in Europe.

As to the juſt Rights and Powers of our Legiſlative, your Lordſhips, and all of us know, whether ever any Prince on our Throne, has had a more tender Concern for them than Her Majeſty; or whether at any time there has been a more due and impartial Adminiſtration of Juſtice.

For the Treaſure and Credit of the Nation, I appeal to all that hear me, whether ever ſuch large Sums were more chearfully given, or more juſtly adminiſtred. Never were there greater Demands than during this neceſſary War, nor ever Demands more freely complied with by the People. Such is the Confidence they have in the Publick Management, and ſo ineffectual this Doctor, and his Brethren's ſounding a Trumpet to Sedition.

As for our Arms, and Reputation; the many unparallel'd Succeſſes during Her Majeſty's Reign, by Sea and Land, ſpeak ſufficiently, and do ſufficiently proclaim, that Her Majeſty has far exceeded all Her Predeceſſors. Our Henrys and our Edwards have juſtly left behind them Immortal Fame, for having broke and ſubdued in their Times, the Power of France. Queen Elizabeth will be ever Glorious for having humbled the Pride of Spain. Thoſe Two great Monarchies have each in their Turn aimed at the Univerſal Monarchy of Europe; and each hath been near compaſſing it, notwithſtanding that the one always oppoſed the other. But it was never imagined, that if they once became united, any Force in Europe could have diſputed with them. Yet, my Lords, we have lived to ſee thoſe two formidable Powers united, and threatning Deſtruction to all the Liberties of Europe. It was a Task reſerv'd for Her Majeſty to encounter this united Force. She has attacked, and reduced them to ſue for Peace; and we are perhaps juſt now at that very deciſive Period of Time, when we are to reap the Fruits of a long, and expenſive War, by the Concluſion of a ſolid and laſting Peace.

Now, my Lords, at ſuch a critical Juncture, at a Time when it behoves us more than ever to preſerve that Union amongſt our ſelves, upon which the Union of the whole Alliance does ſo much depend; upon which the happy Concluſion of this War, and conſequently the Safety and Honour of our Church and State does depend; What does this Pious Son of the Church? What does this Loyal Subject, this Paſſive-Obedience Gentleman do? He is preaching to the City of London, from whence we are to receive the greateſt Part of the Supplies granted for carrying on the War: Does he ſay one Word to them to promote and carry on the Publick Good? No, my Lords: He does, to the utmoſt of his Ability, endeavour to create in them groundleſs Miſtruſts and Jealouſies of the Adminiſtration. And I will appeal to the Conſcience of every one that hears me, and deſire, that laying their Hand upon their Heart, they will truly determine within themſelves, whether, if thoſe Citizens who heard this Sermon had been byaſſed by it, we could have expected one Penny of Money from them, to ſupport a Government which was repreſented ſo odious. But thoſe honeſt Citizens, my Lords, heard this Trumpeter of Sedition with Indignation. Their Affection to the Government is not to be ſhaken. Her Majeſty is Abſolute in the Hearts of Her Subjects; which is the beſt way of being Abſolute: And all the artificial Suggeſtions of theſe Falſe Brethren (to uſe his own Language) will never leſſen their Affections to Her.

But, my Lords, how impotent and weak ſoever the Malice of theſe Men may prove; yet when ſuch Doctrines are broached, and publickly preached, as tend to inſlave a free Nation, to foment Diviſions and Parties, to ſeduce us from our Allegiance to the beſt of Princes; it becomes the Houſe of Commons, who are Guardians of the Conſtitution and Liberties of the People, to bring ſuch Delinquents to Juſtice; and it will become your Lordſhips, who are Guardians of the Conſtitution of the People, to prevent the growing of ſuch an Evil. This Man, my Lords, is an inconſiderable Tool of a Party; no ways worth the Trouble we have given your Lordſhips: But we look upon it that your Lordſhips Judgment in this Caſe, will be giving a Sanction which ſhall determine what Doctrines of this kind ſhall or ſhall not be preached. We are perſuaded therefore that your Lordſhips, in giving Judgment on this Caſe, will have a Regard to the Honour of the late King and Queen, ſo highly aſperſed; to the Security of Her Majeſty and Her Government; to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; to the Preſervation of the Peace at Home, and Reputation Abroad; where, if it ſhall be heard that you have Men amongſt you, inſolent enough to vent ſuch Notions, they may likewiſe hear that it has not been done with Impunity. For all theſe Reaſons, we do hope that your Lordſhips will inflict ſuch condign Puniſhment on this Offender, as may deter others from the like Inſolence for the future.

Sir Peter King. MY Lords, The Gentlemen who have gone before me, having finiſh'd the Firſt Article of the Impeachment, by Command of the Houſe of Commons, I proceed to make out the Second, which relates to the Toleration, one of the principal Conſequences of the Revolution. It is well known that great Severities had been formerly uſed againſt Proteſtant Diſſenters, which were fomented by Popiſh Practices, in order to divide us, and thereby weaken the common Proteſtant Intereſt, and particularly that of the Church of England: This the whole Church of England plainly ſaw in the Reign of the late King James, when Popery was coming in like a Flood, and threatned an univerſal Ruin; and then they did univerſally profeſs their Readineſs and Intention to ſhow all manner of Tenderneſs to other Proteſtants, when it ſhould be in their Power to do it.

The Seven Biſhops, who, to their everlaſting Honour, made ſo noble a Stand for the Liberties of the Church and Kingdom, did in their Petition to King James, declare, That their not reading the Declaration for Liberty of Conſcience, was not from any want of due Tenderneſs to the Diſſenters, in relation to whom they were willing to come to ſuch a Temper as ſhould be thought fit, when that Matter ſhould be conſidered and ſettled in Parliament and Convocation.

And to the Glory of the Church of England, it muſt be remembred, that when the Revolution was afterwards effected, they were as good as their Word, and an Act paſs'd, in the very Firſt Year of their late Majeſties King William and Queen Mary, Intituled, An Act for Exempting their Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects, diſſenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties of certain Laws. This is that Act that is commonly called The Act of Toleration, and was confirmed by another Act made in the ſucceeding Parliament. As this Act is agreeable in it ſelf to the Profeſſion of the Chriſtian Religion, and particularly to the Doctrine of the Church of England; ſo it hath been found by Experience ſo much for the Honour of the Kingdom, and for the Credit of the Church, that Her Majeſty has been pleaſed to declare from the Throne her Intention inviolably to maintain it; and both Houſes of Parliament have done the ſame in the moſt ſolemn Manner.

Here the Duke of Buckingham moved the Lords to adjourn to their own Houſe; which they did: And the Lords being returned to the Court, and Proclamation commanding Silence made:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, you that are the Managers for the Houſe of Commons may proceed in the Method you were in.

Sir Peter King. My Lords, The Act of Parliament that I was mentioning to your Lordſhips, is the Act relating to the Toleration, referr'd to in the Preamble to the Articles; your Lordſhips, and every one elſe, remember the Neceſſity there was for that Act; and having experienced the Benefit of it, Her Majeſty and both Houſes of Parliament have concurred in a Declaration, that that Act ſhall be inviolably obſerved: This being then not only a poſitive Law, but alſo a beneficial One, as well for the Benefit of the Church in particular, as the Welfare and Support of the Proteſtant Intereſt in general, it very ill became any private Perſon to endeavour to bring that Law, by any publick Diſcourſe, into Contempt or Diſrepute.

The Article the Doctor is charged with, in relation hereto, is, " That he ſuggeſts and maintains, " That that Toleration granted by Law is unreaſo- " nable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable; " and aſſerts, that he is a Falſe Brother, with rela- " tion to God, Religion, and the Church, who de- " fends Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience; that " Queen Elizabeth was deluded by Archbiſhop " Grindall, whom he ſcurrilouſly calls a Falſe Son " of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate, to the " Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline; and that " it is the Duty of the Superior Paſtors to Thunder " out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons " intituled to the Benefit of the ſaid Toleration, and " inſolently dares and defies any Power on Earth to " reverſe ſuch Sentences.

My Lords, The firſt Part of this Article, which is the principal Part, contains a general Charge againſt the Doctor, for affirming and maintaining, " That the Toleration granted by Law is unreaſona- " ble, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable" The reſt of the Article conſiſts of particular Paſſages, taken out of his Sermon, tending to make good and prove that general Charge.

As to the general Charge contain'd in the firſt Part of this Article, of his maintaining the Toleration granted by Law to be unreaſonable, and the Allowance lowance of it unwarrantable: His Answer is very observable, and is, That upon the most diligent Enquiry, he has not been able to inform himself that a Toleration hath been granted by Law; but admits, that an Act did pass in the first Year of King William and Queen Mary, intituled, An Act for Exempting their Majesties Protestant Subjects, dissenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties of certain Laws. Which Exemption, he saith, he doth not any where maintain to be unreasonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable; but hopes that he had prevented any such Misapprehension, by declaring in his Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's, that he intended not to cast the least invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence which the Government had given.

Indeed, it is almost difficult to be serious in giving a Reply to that part of his Answer, That he cannot inform himself that a Toleration hath been granted by Law. 'Tis true, the Word Toleration is not mention'd in that Act, neither is the Word Indulgence to be found in that Law; but every Body knows that the Exemption granted by that Act is commonly called The Toleration, and the Act it self, The Toleration Act: What is the Intent of that Act, but to tolerate and allow Persons, qualified by that Act, to exercise their Religion, notwithstanding Penal Laws to the contrary. Toleration is really a Word of less Import than Indulgence, it is a bare Permission, and Allowance; and this Word has gain'd such a known and fix'd Notion and Signification in every one's Mind, that whenever it is mention'd, there is not any Doubt what is meant by it: It is now become a Word of Art, that not only in common Conversation, but even in the most publick Acts of State, the Exemption granted by the Act made in the 1st of King William and Queen Mary, is called the Toleration. Did not her Majesty, in Her Speech to both Houses of Parliament from the Throne, in the Year 1705, declare that she would always inviolably maintain the Toleration? Did not both Houses of Parliament, in their several Addresses to Her Majesty for that most gracious Speech, express their deep Satisfaction of Her Majesty's Resolution to maintain the Toleration? In the free Conferences between the Lords and Commons about the Bill for preventing Occasional Conformity, in the Year 1702. Is not this Act of the 1st of William and Mary, called the Act of Toleration, and the Exemption granted by that Act called the Toleration? So that it seems strange the Doctor should not know that a Toleration had been granted by Law; and it is more strange yet, when he himself, in this very Sermon, called the Indulgence granted by that Act, the Toleration.

In the 14th Page of his Sermon, where he is complaining of False Brethren in the Kingdom, who are permitted and suffered to combine into Bodies and Seminaries, wherein Atheism, Deism, Tritheism and Socinianism, and a great many other wicked Principles are taught; he concludes thus, "Certainly, (says he) The Toleration was never intended to indulge and cherish such Monsters and "Vipers in our Bosom." What was it possible for the Doctor to mean in that Place, by the Toleration, but the Indulgence, as he calls it, granted to the Dissenters by the Act of 1 Gul. and Mar.

In the 19th Page of the Sermon, speaking of the Dissenters, he says, "Now they have advanced "themselves, from the Religious Liberty our gra-"cious Sovereign has indulged them, to claim a Civil "Right, as they term it, and to justle the Church "out of her Establishment, by hoisting their Tole-"ration into its Place:" What could he possibly mean here by these Words, but that Toleration, or that Indulgence, which was granted in the Time of the late King and Queen to the Dissenters? So that it is plain, that when he made, and preached, and published this Sermon, he knew very well, that that Indulgence that was granted by the Law made in the First Year of King William and Queen Mary, was commonly called the Toleration; and this Toleration, granted by that Law, is that which the Commons in their Impeachment say he maintains to be unreasonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable; and this is what I am now to make out and prove.

But I must do the Doctor Justice to own, that Page 20. of his Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's, he doth use these Words, referr'd to by him in his Answer, viz. "I would not here be misunderstood, "as if I intended to cast the least invidious Re-"flection upon that Indulgence the Government has "condescended to give them; which I am sure all "those that wish well to our Church, are very rea-"dy to grant to Consciences truly scrupulous; "let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law has "prescribed.

The Doctor, by putting in that Caution, seems himself to be apprehensive, his Words were otherwise in danger to be esteem'd a Reflection upon that Indulgence or Toleration that the Government had given. Having just before commended the Severities that were used in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth against the Dissenters; which could not be spoken in Commendation of the Toleration; but would reasonably be understood to be a Condemnation of it, because it removed and took away those Severities; he then subjoins the fore-mention'd Passage; which dry Caution will not excuse the Doctor, if in the other Parts of his Sermon he doth visibly and plainly condemn the Toleration, and censure it as unreasonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable; which that he doth, I shall endeavour to prove from other direct and formal Passages in his said Sermon.

The first Passage that I shall Cite to this Purpose is in the 10th Page of the Sermon, and is in these Words; "So that, in all those Cases before-"mentioned, whosoever presumes to innovote, al-"ter, or misrepresent any Point in the Articles of "the Faith of our Church, ought to be Arraign'd "as a Traytor to our State; Heterodoxy in the "Doctrines of the one, naturally producing, and "almost necessarily inferring Rebellion and High-"Treason in the other, and consequently a Crime that "concerns the Civil Magistrate, as much to punish, "and restrain, as the Ecclesiastical. The beginning of this Passage is tied up to the Cases before-mentioned, so that in all those Cases before-mentioned, which being a term of Relation, must be expounded in Reference to what went before.

This Passage is contained in his second Head of False Brethren, of those who are False Brethren with Relation to the State, Government or Society of which they are Members. And on Perusal thereof I do not find any one Article of the Faith of our Church before-mentioned under that Head, to which these relative Terms do refer; for all that he saith before under that Head is, "That the Constitutions of most Go-"vernments differing according to their several "Frames, and Laws, upon which they are built " and founded, it is impoſſible to lay down any " one univerſal Rule, as the Scheme and Meaſure " of Obedience, that may ſquare to every one of " them: Only this Maxim in general, he preſumes, " may be Eſtabliſh'd for the Safety, Tranquility " and Support of all Governments, That no Inno- " vation whatſoever ſhould be allowed in the Fun- " damental Conſtitution of any State, without a " very preſſing, nay, unavoidable Neceſſity for it; " and whoſoever ſingly or in a private Capacity ſhould " attempt it, is Guilty of the higheſt Miſdemea- " nour, and is an Enemy to that Politick Body of " which he is a Member.

Then the Doctor applies this Maxim to our Government: " Our Conſtitution, ſaith he, both in " Church and State, has been ſo admirably con- " trived, with that Wiſdom, Weight, and Sagaci- " ty, and the Temper and Genius of each, ſo " exactly ſuited, and modell'd to the mutual Sup- " port and Aſſiſtance of one another, that 'tis hard " to ſay, whether the Doctrines of the Church of " England contribute more to Authorize and En- " force our Civil Laws, or our Laws to Main- " tain and Defend the Doctrines of our Church. " The Natures of both are ſo nicely correſpon- " dent, and ſo happily intermixt, that 'tis almoſt " impoſſible to offer a Violation to the one, with- " out breaking in upon the Body of the other: " So that in all thoſe Caſes before-mentioned, " whoſoever preſumes to alter, innovate or miſ- " repreſent any Point in the Articles of the Faith " of our Church, ought to be Arraign'd as a Tray- " tor to our State, &c.

I read your Lordſhips this whole Paragraph, to ſhew, that the Caſes ſaid to be before-mentioned, are not contained in this Head of the Sermon, but they are plainly contained in a former Paragraph, viz. in his firſt Head of falſe Brethren, with relation to God, Religion, and the Church in which they hold Communion; under which Head the Doctor enters into a long Deſcription of ſuch kind of falſe Brethren, and enumerates ſeveral Articles and Rites of the Church, the Disbelievers or Deniers whereof are termed Falſe Brethren; and amongſt other of his Characters, in p. 8. he brands him for being falſe to the Intereſt of the Church, that gives up any Point of her Diſcipline and Worſhip; theſe are the exterior Fences to guard the Internals of Religion, without which they are left naked, without Beauty, Order, or Defence. Should any Man out of Ignorance, or Prejudice to the Ancient Rights and Eſſential Conſtitution of the Catholick Church, affirm, " That the Divine Apoſto- " lical Inſtitution of Epiſcopacy is a novel Doctrine, " not ſufficiently warranted by Scripture, and that " 'tis indifferent whether the Church be Governed " by Biſhops or Presbyters: Is not ſuch an one an Apoſtate from his own Orders? So that one of the before-mentioned Caſes of Falſe Brotherhood is, the affirming that the Divine Apoſtolical Inſtitution of Epiſcopacy is a novel Doctrine, not ſufficiently warranted by Scripture, and that it is indifferent whether the Church be Governed by Biſhops or Presbyters. This is affirmed and held by all the Diſſenters; and tho' they ſhould be miſtaken in their Opinion, yet ſtill it is their Opinion; and they are notwithſtanding tolerated, and are exempted by the Toleration Act from Subſcribing the 36th Article, that the Book of Conſecration of Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and of the Ordination of Prieſts and Deacons, ſet forth in the Times of King Edward the Sixth, contain in it all things neceſſary to their Conſecration and Ordination, and hath nothing in it either Superſtitious or Impious: Now notwithſtanding this Innovation or Alteration of this Article of the Church by the Diſſenters, the Law doth nevertheleſs Tolerate and Indulge them.

But the Doctor is of another Opinion, and he affirms, That whoever Innovates, Alters, or Miſrepreſents this Point in the Articles of the Faith of our Church, ought to be Arraign'd as a Traytor to the State, and ought to be puniſhed, as well by the Temporal, as the Eccleſiaſtical Magiſtrate. For he goes on, and carries it yet a great deal further, by the Reaſon he gives for his Aſſertion, which is, " Heterodoxy in the Doctrines of the one, natu- " rally producing, and almoſt neceſſarily inferring, " Rebellion and High Treaſon in the other; and " conſequently a Crime that concerns the Civil " Magiſtrate, as much to puniſh and reſtrain, as " the Eccleſiaſtical. Here's an Aſſertion to the Purpoſe; that Heterodoxy, that is, the holding a different Opinion from any Article of the Faith of our Church, naturally produces, and almoſt neceſſarily infers Rebellion and High-Treaſon in the State, and conſequently a Crime that concerns the Civil Magiſtrate to puniſh, as well as the Eccleſiaſtical. He himſelf, in the immediate ſubſequent Words, doth own, That this Aſſertion at firſt View may look like an High-flown Paradox; and I believe it will ſtill appear to be ſo upon a Review, That whoſoever is of a different, or other Opinion, in any of the Articles of the Faith of the Church, is Guilty of High-Treaſon; and the Temporal, as well as the Spiritual Magiſtrate, ought to puniſh him as a Traitor for it. The Articles of the Church are in number Thirty nine; ſome of the Diſſenters are by the Act of Toleration exempted from Subſcribing three and a half of them, viz. the 34th Article, which relates to the Traditions and Ceremonies of the Church, and the Power of the Church to Ordain, Change, and Aboliſh Ceremonies and Rites: The 35th Article, concerning the Book of Homilies, and reading of them in Churches: The 36th Article, concerning the Conſecration of Archbiſhops and Biſhops, and the Ordination of Prieſts and Deacons; and the former Part of the 20th Article, which Aſſerts the Power of the Church to Decree Rites and Ceremonies, and Authority in Controverſies of Faith. Other Diſſenters, who ſcruple the Baptizing of Infants, are alſo exempted from Subſcribing that Part of the 27th Article which relates to Infant Baptiſm; and the Quakers are exempted from Subſcribing any of the Articles, and are only required to Subſcribe a ſhort Declaration of the Trinity, and that the Scriptures are given by Divine Inſpiration. All theſe ſeveral ſorts of Diſſenters, notwithſtanding their Heterodoxy in theſe Points, are exempted by the Toleration Act from the Penalties of the former Laws, and are by this Act preſerved in the free Exerciſe of their Religion or Worſhip; and not only the Penalties inflicted on them by former Laws are taken away, but ſeveral Immunities and Privileges are given them, as an Exemption of their Teachers from Pariſh Offices, and a Penalty for diſturbing their Congregations. Now when this is Eſtabliſh'd by a Law, and that Act of Toleration is in full Force, for the Doctor to affirm, notwithſtanding all this, that Heterodoxy, or a different Opinion from any of the Articles of Faith of our Church, almoſt neceſſarily infers Rebellion and High-Treaſon in the State, and is a Crime that concerns the Civil Magiſtrate to puniſh, as well as the Eccleſiaſtical;

What

What can be a more direct breaking in upon, and disavowing of the Toleration than this? Is not this to maintain the Toleration granted by Law to be unreasonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable?

Another Passage that I shall Cite to prove the general Charge against the Doctor, is in the 16th and 17th Pages of the Sermon: What could not be gained by Comprehension and Toleration, must be brought about by Moderation and Occasional Conformity; that is, what they could not do by open Violence, they will not fail by secret Treachery to accomplish. If the Church can't be pulled down, it may be blown up; and no matter with these Men how 'tis destroyed, so that it is destroyed. In this Place the Doctor is speaking of the great Mischiefs and Perils of his false Brethren to the Church. And to prevent any mistaken Notions of the Church, he intimates, that we are to understand the true genuine Notion of it, as it stands contradistinguish'd in its Establish'd Doctrine, Discipline and Worship from all other Churches and Schismaticks, who would obtrude upon us a wild Negative Idea of a National Church, so as to incorporate themselves into the Body as true Members of it; whereas that Latitudinarian Heterogeneous Mixture would render it the most Absurd, Contradictory and Self-inconsistent Body in the World: And from thence he proceeds to shew that this Design of a Comprehension miscarried, and that that long projected Scheme of the Ecclesiastical Achitophel's was blasted; "But, says he, since this Model of universal "Liberty and Coalition failed, and these false "Brethren could not carry the Conventicle into the "Church, they are now resolved to bring the "Church into the Conventicle, which will plausi-"bly and slily effect her Ruin". And how is that to be done? Why, "What could not be gain'd by "Comprehension and Toleration must be brought "about by Moderation and Occasional Conformi-"ty; that is, what they could not do by open Vio-"lence, they will not fail by secret Treachery to "accomplish; if the Church can't be pulled down "by Comprehension and Toleration, it may be blown "up by Occasional Conformity and Moderation; and "no Matter with these Men how 'tis destroy'd, so "that 'tis destroy'd." Is not this calling the Toleration an open Violence to the Church? That it was an Attempt made to destroy the Church, tho' the Church it self came into, and settled this Toleration? I say, the Legislature in the Time of their late Majesties King William and Queen Mary, and particularly the Bishops, the Fathers of the Church, were very well satisfied that this Toleration granted to the Dissenters, was no way prejudicial to the Safety and Security of the Church. Now for the Doctor to come and say, the Toleration was intended to pull down the Church, and that it is an open Violence to the Church; is not this to maintain, that the Toleration is unreasonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable?

My Lords, These Passages which I have cited to your Lordships, do prove the general Charge of this Article: There are other Passages in the Sermon, particularly referr'd to in the Article, which likewise prove this general Charge, to which I shall next proceed. And,

The next part of the Charge in the second Article is, That he asserts, that he is a false Brother with relation to God, Religion or the Church, who defends Toleration and Liberty of Conscience.

These Words are contained in so many express Terms in the 8th Page of his Sermon, where after he hath copiously described his false Brethren, he comes and Sums up the whole in these Words; If upon all Occasions to comply with the Dissenters both in publick and private Affairs, as Persons of tender Conscience and Piety, to promote their Interests in Elections, to sneak to 'em for Places and Preferment, to defend Toleration, and Liberty of Conscience, and under the pretence of Moderation to excuse their Separation, and lay the Fault upon the True Sons of the Church for carrying Matters too high; If to Court the Fanaticks in private, and to bear them with Patience, if not Approbation, Rail at and Blaspheme the Church, and upon Occasion to justify the King's Murder; If to Flatter both the Dead and the Living in their Vices, and to tell the World, that if they have Wit and Money enough, they need no Repentance, and that only Fools and Beggars can be Damn'd; If these, I say, are the Modish and Fashionable Criterions of a true Church-Man, God deliver us from all such False Brethren!

So that one Mark of these False Brethren, in this part of his Sermon, is to defend Toleration and Liberty of Conscience. As to this, the Doctor gives two Answers, one by way of Inference or Presumption, and the other Direct; that by way of Inference is, "That he having so plainly declared "himself in Favour of the Exemption granted by "Law; when he blames those who upon all Occa-"sions defend Toleration and Liberty of Consci-"ence, he cannot be thought to reflect on the De-"fenders of that Legal Exemption or Indulgence, "which he himself approves and defends.

Now if he had not in other Parts of his Sermon condemn'd the Toleration expresly, it might have pass'd for an Answer. But now, if the Doctor has more than once in other Parts of his Sermon directly inveighed against this Toleration, then his Meaning is more naturally to be understood by so many several Passages, than by one single Sentence, and with what View thrown in, the reading of the Sermon will plainly shew. And therefore the true way to come at the true Meaning of his Words, is to take them as they stand in his Sermon, and that is what your Lordships will judge by. In the next Place he gives a direct Answer to this Part of the Charge, which is, that he does not mean by this Description of a False Brother, those who only defend Toleration and Liberty of Conscience, and do no more; but he only blames those who upon all Occasions defend Toleration and Liberty of Conscience, and to excuse their Separation, lay the Fault upon the true Sons of the Church for carrying Matters so high; so that I don't reckon him, says he, as a False Brother who barely defends Toleration and Liberty of Conscience; except that at the same time that he is defending Toleration, he lays the Fault of the Separation upon the true Sons of the Church for carrying Matters too high. Now I submit to your Lordships, upon reading of this Passage, whether it is capaple of such an Interpretation. If it be look'd into, it will be found that the several particular Characters there mention'd, are all of them so many particular Marks of a False Brother; it is not necessary that two, or three, or all of them meet together in one Person to make up the Character of a False Brother; but if any one of them be found in any Person, 'tis sufficient to Characterize him a False Brother: Whoever is guilty of any one of those Acts, of which defending Toleration is one, is a False Brother; ther; and his asserting the defending of Toleration to be a Mark of a False Brother, is an evident Declaration against the Justice and Expediency of the Toleration.

The next particular Charge upon him in this Article is for Asserting, "That Queen Elizabeth was "deluded by Archbishop Grindall, whom he scurrilously calls a False Son of the Church, and a "Perfidious Prelate, to the Toleration of the Genevian Discipline". This Charge upon him is founded on those Words of his Sermon, in the 19th Page; these are his Words: Have they not, ever since their first unhappy Plantation in this Kingdom, by the Intercession of that False Son of the Church, Bishop Grindall, always improv'd, and rise upon their Demands in the Permission of the Government? Insomuch that Queen Elizabeth, that was deluded by that perfidious Prelate to the Toleration of the Genevian Discipline, found it such an Headstrong and Encroaching Monster, that in Eight Years She foresaw it would endanger the Monarchy, as well as the Hierarchy; and like a Queen of true Resolution, and pious Zeal for both, pronounc'd, That such were the restless Spirits of that factious People, that no Quiet was to be expected from them, 'till they were utterly suppress'd: Which, like a prudent Princess, She did by Wholesome Severities, that the Crown for many Years sat Easy and Flourishing on her Head.

As to that Part of the Charge where he says, That Queen Elizabeth was deluded to the Toleration of the Genevian Discipline by Archbishop Grindall, the Doctor's Answer is, "That he hum"bly conceives he hath good Authority from the "Histories and Monuments of those Times for "such Assertion; but whether he hath, or hath "not, humbly apprehends such Assertion to be no "Proof of his Maintaining or Suggesting, That "the Exempting of Protestant Subjects dissenting "from the Church of England, from the Penalties "of certain Laws, granted by an Act made in the "First Year of the Reign of King William and "Queen Mary, (which Exemption he supposes to "be intended by the Legal Indulgence, or Toleration granted to Dissenters, mention'd in the Preamble of the Articles, and by the Toleration "granted by Law mention'd in this Second) is unreasonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable.

My Lords, It might not perhaps be difficult to shew that there are some Mistakes in this Fact; but whether there be or no, will not now be worth spending your Lordships Time; for I do agree with him, That the material Point is what he puts it upon, Whether this Assertion, as printed and delivered by him in his Sermon, be a Censure or Condemnation of the Toleration Act. Now whether it be so or no, will appear by taking the whole Clause together. This Passage is in the 19th and 20th Pages, and is in that Part of his Sermon where he is shewing the great Perils and Mischief of his False Brethen to the State, and that they are destructive to our Civil Rights and Liberties; and in the Pursuit of his Argument he plainly shews that the False Brethren there meant are the Dissenters, who are Tolerated by this Act of Parliament. "These False Brethren, says he, have now advan"ced themselves from the Religious Liberty our "Gracious Sovereign has indulged them, to claim "a Civil Right, and to justle the Church out of "her Establishment, by hoisting their Toleration "into its Place". So that 'tis plain, these false Brethren here spoken of are the Dissenters, those who have the Benefit of the Toleration Act. And then he goes on; "And to Convince us what alone "will satisfy them, insolently demand the Repeal "of the Corporation and Test Acts, as an Ecclesiastical Usurpation, which indeed under Her "Majesty (whom God long preserve for its Support and Comfort) is the only Security the "Church has to depend upon; and which they "have so far eluded by their abominable Hypocrisy, as to have undermined her Foundations, and "endanger the Government, by filling it with its "profess'd Enemies. These Charges are so flagrant and undeniable, that a Man must be very "weak, or something worse, that thinks or pretends the Dissenters are to be gain'd or won over by any other Grants and Indulgences, than "by giving up our whole Constitution: And he "that recedes the least Tittle from it, to Satisfy "or Ingratiate with these Clamorous, Insatiable "and Church-devouring Malignants, knows not "what Spirit they are of, or he ought to shew who "is a true Member of our Church.

These Passages I have read to your Lordships, to shew that these False Brethren here spoken of are the Dissenters, who are now Tolerated by the Law granted to them in the Time of their late Majesties King William and Queen Mary; and of these Dissenters follows this Passage: "Have they not, "ever since their first unhappy Plantation in this "Kingdom, by the Intercession of that False Son "of the Church, Bishop Grindall, always im"prov'd, and rise upon their Demands in the Per"mission of the Government? Insomuch, that "Queen Elizabeth, that was deluded by that perfi"dious Prelate to the Toleration of the Genevian "Discipline", id est, The Discipline and Polity of the Dissenters, so called because taken from Geneva, "found it such a Headstrong and Encroach"ing Monster, that in Eight Years she foresaw it "would endanger the Monarchy, as well as the "Hierarchy; and, like a Queen of true Resoluti"on and pious Zeal for both, pronounc'd, That "such were the restless Spirits of that Factious "People, that no Quiet was to be expected from "them, 'till they were utterly Suppress'd; which, "like a prudent Princess, she did by Wholesome "Severities, that the Crown for many Years sat "Easy and Flourishing on her Head.

In this memorable Passage he represents Archbishop Grindall as a False Son of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate, for deluding the Queen into a Toleration of the Genevian Discipline. Whether that Fact be true, or not, is not material to our Purpose; but this is, that he charges it for a Fault on the Archbishop, and for which he calls him a False Son of the Church, and a Perfidious Prelate, for inducing the Queen to give a Toleration to the Dissenters in those Days: The Fault is not, that it was a Regal Toleration only, but the Fault was in the Toleration itself, in consenting to a Liberty to the Dissenters. Now what is this in Effect, but to preach to the whole World, That the Parliament are in the Wrong to grant a Toleration to the Dissenters; That the Lords and Commons, who consented to the Toleration, are not true Sons of the Church; And that the Bishops, who are for Tolerating the Dissenters, are neither Fathers nor Sons of the Church, but corrupt and perfidious Prelates?

That this Character of Archbishop Grindall was design'd for a Censure of the present Toleration, will appear more fully by the contrary Character he gives gives of Queen Elizabeth; he commends her Reſolution and pious Zeal for "the Monarchy and Hie-"rarchy, in declaring that no Quiet was to be "expected from the reſtleſs Spirits of that Factiſ-"ous People, 'till they were utterly Suppreſs'd; "which, like a prudent Princeſs, ſhe did by Whole-"ſome Severities, that the Crown for many Years "ſat Eaſy and Flouriſhing on her Head". Now what can the Engliſh of all this be, but to inflame the Government againſt the Diſſenters? What could be ſaid more prevalent for this Purpoſe, than to recommend it as a noble Reſolution and pious Zeal in Queen Elizabeth, utterly to ſuppreſs the Diſſenters? And if that Reſolution be to be followed, the Legiſlature muſt Repeal the Toleration Act. And what could be ſaid more contrary to the Toleration Act, than to recommend the Severities uſed in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, becauſe they were Wholeſome in themſelves, and of happy Conſequence to the Perſon and Government of that Renowned Queen. If there were not a Neceſſity for it on this Occaſion, I would not mention what thoſe wholſome Severities were, but rather caſt a Veil over that Part of the Reign of that Great and Glorious Queen.

To give a ſhort View of theſe Wholeſome Severities; ſome Hereticks were burnt, other Perſons were hang'd, ſome had their Goods confiſcated, others had their Perſons impriſon'd; and to mention more particularly a publick Act in Writing that connot be falſified or miſrepreſented, and which is ſince relax'd by the Toleration Act, an Act paſs'd in the 35th Year of Queen Elizabeth, Intituled, An Act to retain the Queen's Majeſty's Subjects in their due Obedience; by which the Diſſenters are, among other Penalties, to Abjure the Realm in Forty Days, or ſuffer Death without Benefit of the Clergy.

This Penalty of Abjuration of the Realm was taken from the ancient Common Law of England in relation to Felony, by which if a Man committed any Felony, excepting Sacrilege, and fled to a Pariſh Church, he might within Forty Days before the Coroner confeſs the Felony, and take an Oath to Abjure the Kingdom for ever; and if he thus confeſs'd and took that Oath, he was thereby Attainted of the Felony, and then he had Forty Days from the Coming of the Coroner to provide and prepare for his Voyage; and the Coroner aſſign'd him ſuch a Port as he choſe for his Departure out of the Kingdom; and if he did not go ſtraitway out of the Kingdom, or being gone out, did return without Licenſe, he had Judgment to be Hang'd, except he was a Clerk, and then he had his Clergy.

This Practice was what the Law call'd Abjuration; and being by ſeveral Regulations (in the Time of Henry the Eighth) in effect taken away, the Reviſal of this Practice was thought to be a wholeſome Severity, fit to be inflicted on the Proteſtant Diſſenters of thoſe Times: And therefore the 35th of Queen Elizabeth doth enact, 'That if a-'ny Perſon, obſtinately refuſing to repair to ſome 'Church or Chapel, or uſual Place of Common-'Prayers, and forbearing by the Space of a Month 'to hear Divine Service, ſhould after Forty Days af-'ter the End of that Seſſion of Parliament, willing-'ly join or be preſent at any Conventicle or Meet-'ing, under Pretence of Religion, contrary to the 'Laws and Statutes of the Realm; that then ſuch 'Perſon ſhould be committed to Priſon, till he 'ſhould conform and come to Church: And if 'within Three Months after Conviction he ſhould 'not conform and come to Church, and make his 'publick Confeſſion and Submiſſion, being thereun-'to required according to the Form of the ſaid 'Act; that then ſuch Offender ſhould abjure the 'Realm; and if, being thereunto required, ſhould 'refuſe to make ſuch Abjuration, or after ſuch Ab-'juration made, ſhould not within the Time ap-'pointed him depart the Realm, or after ſuch De-'parture ſhould return without the Queen's Li-'cenſe; then, in every ſuch Caſe, every Perſon ſo 'offending, ſhould be a Felon without Benefit of 'Clergy." So that the Abjuration inflicted on Proteſtant Diſſenters by this Act, was worſe than Abjuration for Felony at the Common Law; in that they had the Benefit of the Clergy, in this they had not.

This is one of the Severities of Queen Elizabeth's Reign. Whether it be a wholeſome Severity or not, Human Nature will determine: However wholeſome it might have been eſteem'd in thoſe Days, by thoſe who had the Power and Will to puniſh others, yet the Legiſlature have in Terminis declar'd it unwholſome for theſe Times; and the Toleration-Act doth expreſly, and by Name, exempt the Proteſtant Diſſenters from the Penalties of this Act of the 35th of Queen Elizabeth.

Now when the Toleration-Act hath granted this Exemption, for the Doctor to come and publickly repreſent an Archbiſhop as a Falſe Son of the Church, and a Perfidious Prelate, for being for the Toleration of Diſſenters in his Time; and at the ſame Time recommend the Reſolution and pious Zeal of Queen Elizabeth, for declaring that ſhe would utterly ſuppreſs them, and her great Prudence in exerciſing wholeſome Severities againſt them, which were of happy Conſequence to her Perſon and Government; What could be ſaid more againſt the Toleration-Act, than this is? The Toleration-Act exempts the Diſſenters from the Penalties and Severities inflicted in Queen Elizabeth's Reign; the Doctor recommends them all again, as wholeſome and neceſſary. Let any Perſon judge, whether this is not an expreſs Declaration againſt the Toleration-Act?

There is yet one Thing more charged upon the Doctor in this Part of the Second Article; viz. That he ſcurrilouſly calls Archbiſhop Grindall a Falſe Son of the Church, and a Perfidious Prelate, for deluding Queen Elizabeth to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline. Whether this, conſider'd abſtractedly by it ſelf, be in Law a Crime, or not, is not neceſſary for me here to examine. The Doctor conceives, that no Words ſpoken of an Archbiſhop, above One Hundred and Twenty Years ſince deceaſed, will in Conſtruction of Law amount to an High Crime and Miſdemeanor: Whether it be ſo or not, in it ſelf, I ſhall ſay nothing of at preſent; becauſe I take it, that this is only taken notice of as an Aggravation of the Crime charged upon him, and to ſhew his Zeal againſt the Toleration; That he was not contented with Cenſuring the Toleration it ſelf, but rakes into the Aſhes of an Archbiſhop, that had been in his Grave One Hundred and Twenty Years, and blackens his Memory, becauſe he was for the Toleration of thoſe People who are now by Law tolerated.

My Lords, I would on this Occaſion ſay a Word or two to the Memory of that Archbiſhop. The Doctor ſays, He was under the Diſpleaſure of Queen Elizabeth; that is very true: And he pretends, the Occaſion of his being under her Diſpleaſure, was, for permitting Innovations to be obtruded upon the Church. Those Innovations were no other than what several other Bishops at the same Time likewise practis'd, and some Bishops since have done not much unlike: It was for encouraging the Meetings and Exercisings in those Days, call'd Prophesyings; which were Meetings of the Clergy, to improve one another in the Knowledge of the Scriptures, and tended to make a Learned and Industrious Clergy. This was misrepresented to the Queen, and was the visible Cause of his Disgrace. But the true Reason of his Disgrace, as Historians say, sprung from the Hatred of the Earl of Leicester, who was then in great Power and Credit with the Queen, and her great Favourite. This Earl of Leicester cast a Covetous Eye upon Lambeth-House, and would have had the Archbishop to have alien'd it, but he would not comply with him; which, as the Historian says, made the Leicestrian Party to malice him. The Earl was likewise provoked and incensed against him for another Reason, viz. for Prosecuting one Julio, a Physician of the Earl's, an Italian Physician, for having Two Wives, one of which was the Wife of another Man, with whom he lived in Adultery: For these Two Offences against the Earl of Leicester, who bore a mighty Power at Court with the Queen at that Time, was this Storm raised against him. But, my Lords, for his Life and Doctrine, the Archbishop was one of the most Pious, Learned and Considerable Prelates of that Time. 'Tis very true, that he was one of those Bishops that look'd upon the Exercises used in those Times by the Clergy, called Prophesyings, to be very necessary for their Improvement, and for the Benefit of the Church; and some of the best Bishops of those Times concurr'd with him in the same Opinion. He was a Man of a most Exemplary Life and Conversation, free from the Suspicion of a Crime. In his younger Days he was Chaplain, with Rogers and Bradford, to Ridley Bishop of London, who gave this Character of him, That he was known to be a Man of Virtue, Honesty, Discretion, Wisdom and Learning. In the Persecution under Queen Mary, when his Master and Fellow-Chaplains were burnt for Religion, he became an Exile on the same Account, and quitted his Ease, Preferments, and Hopes at Home, to enjoy the Liberty of his Conscience in a Foreign Country, and went to Strasburgh: And when the famous Troubles begun at Frankfort, about the Use of the English Service, where the Foundations were laid of the Divisions that have since divided and rent the Church, he was so far from disliking the English Method, that he went from Strasburgh to Frankfort, to encourage and persuade the Congregation there to submit to the English Establishment; and he himself stuck close to it all his Life-time. At his coming Home, in the Beginning of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, he had a great Hand, and was very instrumental, in preparing the Liturgy and Book of Common-Prayer: And the first Time that the English Service-Book was introduc'd at St. Paul's in London, the Privy Council, and Great Officers of State, for the greater Solemnity, came to St. Paul's; and Grindall was appointed to preach to that Great Audience, upon that Solemn Occasion. He was one of the first Five Bishops made by Queen Elizabeth; and was first Bishop of London, afterwards Archbishop of York, and last of all Archbishop of Canterbury. And when afterwards, by the Earl of Leicester's Artifice, he was out of Favour, and under the Queen's Displeasure; yet he had so great an Interest in the Clergy, and their Esteem of him was so extraordinary, that even whilst he was under Disgrace at Court, and the Displeasure of the Queen, a considerable Number of the Convocation, then met, presented an Elegant Petition in Latin to the Queen, to restore him; wherein they represent to Her Majesty, 'That the Archbishop had led 'a Life free, not only from all Crime, but even 'from the Suspicion of a Crime: That he had 'preserved his Religion from all, not only Corruption 'of Popery, but Schism; and had suffer'd Persecution for Righteousness sake, having wander'd 'abroad in other Countries for the Cause of the 'Gospel: And therefore they most humbly be-'sought Her Majesty, not only to lift up the Arch-'bishop broken with Grief, but to restore the 'Church to the Archbishop, and the Archbishop 'to the Church, to her Subjects, to his Brethren, 'to Foreign Nations, and, in a word, to all Pious 'People." These were the Thoughts of the Clergy of the Archbishop at that Time, even when he was under the Displeasure of the Queen; so that there was no Reason for the Doctor to asperse him as a False Son of the Church, or a Perfidious Prelate; for it appears on the contrary, that he was a Man universally esteem'd for his Virtue, Piety, and Learning.

The last Charge of this Article is, that he asserts, "That it is the Duty of Superior Pastors to thunder out their Ecclesiastical Anathema's against "Persons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration; and insolently dares or defies any Power on "Earth to reverse such Sentences.

To which the Doctor gives this Answer; "That "the Persons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration, are not by him mentioned or intended: "But if these Expressions in his Sermon must be "determin'd to any one Sort of Persons, he conceives that the Connection of his Discourse will "determine them to those Schismatical and Factious Persons, who take Permission for Power, "and advance Toleration immediately into an Establishment.

Now be it so, that he means those Schismatical and Factious Persons; the next Question, which will set this Matter in a clear Light, will be, Who those Schismatical and Factious Persons are, who take Permission for Power, and advance Toleration immediately into an Establishment? And it is plain from the Passage it self, which is in Page 25. of the Sermon, that he means the Dissenters, those who are entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration.

"If our Dissenters, saith he, had lived in the "Times of St. Paul, they would have branded him "as an intemperate, hot, furious Zealot, that "wanted to be sweeten'd by the gentle Spirit of "Charity and Moderation, forsooth. Schism and "Faction are Things of impudent and incroaching "Natures; they thrive upon Concessions, take Permission for Power, and advance a Toleration immediately into an Establishment; and are therefore to be treated like growing Mischiefs, or infectious Plagues, kept at a distance, lest their "deadly Contagion spread. Let us therefore have no "Fellowship with these Works of Darkness, but rather reprove them. Let our Superior Pastors do "their Duty, in thundering out their Ecclesiastical "Anathema's; and let any Power on Earth dare reverse a Sentence ratified in Heaven." And indeed the Doctor doth, in the following Part of his Answer, in effect own it: For, saith he,

" As to the laſt Part of the Second Article, where-
" by the ſaid Henry Sacheverell is charged with in-
" ſolently daring, or defying any Power on Earth
" to reverſe the Eccleſiaſtical Sentences there men-
" tion'd ; He the ſaid Henry Sacheverell ſaith,
" That the Sentence which he the ſaid Henry
" Sacheverell dares any Power on Earth to reverſe,
" is ſuch, and ſuch only, as is ratified in Heaven ;
" and ſuch Sentence he ſtill affirms to be by any " Earthly Power irreverſible : And hopes it will " not be thought Inſolence in him to affirm, what " he conceives would be Blaſphemy in any one
" to deny : And doth further acknowledge him-
" ſelf firmly to believe, that ſome Sentences pro" nounced by the Paſtors of the Church are rati-
" fied in Heaven ; and that ſome Perſons exempted " from Puniſhment by the particular Laws of the " Land, may yet by the Laws of Chriſt be juſt-
" ly liable to ſuch Sentence ; and that Schiſm, or
" a cauſeleſs Separation from a Church enjoining
" no ſinful Terms of Communion, is a Sin, which
" expoſes the Perſon guilty thereof to the Cenſures
" of the Church.

The Houſe of Commons charge the Doctor with Inſolence, in daring or defying any Power on Earth to reverſe the Eccleſiaſtical Sentences mentioned in his Sermon ; and he, by Inſinuation, retorts upon them the Charge of Blaſphemy. This the Houſe of Commons thought they had Reaſon to reſent, and to call upon your Lordſhips for immediate Puniſhment of him, for treating them in this manner ; but they leave it to your Lordſhips, in what manner you will think fit to do them Juſtice, in vindicating them againſt ſuch a Charge. But as to this Paſſage now before you, he affirms, " That " ſome Sentences pronounced by the Paſtors of the " Church, are ratified in Heaven ; That ſome Per- " ſons exempted from Puniſhment by the Laws of " the Land, may yet by the Laws of Chriſt be lia- " ble to ſuch Sentence : And that Schiſm, or a cauſe- " leſs Separation from a Church enjoining no ſinful " Terms of Communion, is a Sin, which expoſes " the Perſon guilty thereof to the Cenſures of the " Church." Now what is this but to ſay, The Diſſenters cauſeleſly Separate from the Church, which impoſes no ſinful Terms of Communion, and ſo are guilty of Schiſm ? Tho' the Law of the Land doth exempt them from Puniſhment for this Schiſm, yet for this Sin they are expos'd to the Cenſures of the Church ; thoſe Cenſures, when inflicted, are ratified in Heaven : Therefore, notwithſtanding the Law of the Land hath given them this Exemption, let the Eccleſiaſtical Superiors do their Duty, in thundering out their Anathema's againſt them, and let any Power upon Earth dare to reverſe their Sentences if they can. As to the Power of the Church in Cenſuring or Excommunicating, it is not neceſſary for me to ſay any Thing of it upon this Occaſion : But the Doctor is a Miniſter of the Church of England, who hath ſubmitted to the Queen's Supremacy, and by the Canon is bound to maintain and preach the Queen's Supremacy ; Her Majeſty is Supreme over all Cauſes, and over all Perſons, as well Eccleſiaſtical as Civil ; and by an Act of Parliament made ſince Her Majeſty's happy Acceſſion to the Crown, viz. the Act relating to Her Majeſty's Bounty for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the poor Clergy, ſhe is Owned and Recognized to be the only Supreme Head on Earth of the Church of England : Her Majeſty hath by Law a Supreme controling Power over all the Cenſures and Excommunications of the Church ; this Power ſhe Exerciſes according to the Rules of Law, by her ſeveral Officers and Miniſters of Juſtice. The exerciſe of the Church's Cenſures, Juriſdiction and Power, muſt be according to Law ; and if any Perſon be Excommunicated againſt Law, the Queen's Courts may and will command the Eccleſiaſtical Judge to abſoil ſuch Excommunicated Perſon, and reſtore him to the Communion of the Church again : This is the Supremacy of the Queen, which is the Doctrine of the Church of England ; and by Vertue of this Supremacy, if any Judge of the Spiritual Court ſhall pretend to excommunicate any of the Diſſenters for any Thing which by Law they are not obliged to do, or which by Law they are excuſed or exempted from, the Courts of Juſtice in Weſtminſter-Hall will in ſuch Caſe award a Prohibition, and compel the Eccleſiaſtical Judge to abſolve him. Suppoſe that notwithſtanding the Toleration Act, a Diſſenter ſhould for not coming to the Church, be ſentenced in the Spiritual Court by the Judge there, or be proceeded againſt there, in order to an Excommunication ; a Prohibition will lye to that Judge from the Queen's Courts upon the ſaid Act, and the Courts of Common Law will prevent him from ſuch Proceeding ; and if Sentence be paſs'd, will compel the Judge to annul the Excommunication, and receive the Party again. Now, for the Doctor to come and ſay, That though the Diſſenters are tolerated by this Act of Parliament, and though they are exempted by Law from Penalties, yet let the Law of the Land be what it will, let the Eccleſiaſtical Paſtors do their Duty, let them fulminate their Excommunications, and thunder out their Anathema's, and let the Civil Magiſtrate, the Earthly Powers, dare to reverſe them, if they can : I ſubmit this to your Lordſhips, whether this is not directly impugning the Queen's Supremacy, as well as weakning and cenſuring the Toleration, which is what he is charg'd with in this Article.

My Lords, I will not take up more of your Lordſhips Time ; there are other Gentlemen to come after me, who will abundantly ſupply my Defects, and offer to your Lordſhips ſome farther Conſiderations to make out the Charge contained in the Second Article.

Lord William Pawlet. MY Lords, The Charge againſt the Doctor in this Second Article is a Crime of a very heinous Nature : It has always been eſteemed one of the happy Conſequences of the late Revolution, that Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, by a Legal Indulgence granted to Diſſenters, were united in Intereſt and Affection, in the Defence of her Majeſty's Sacred Perſon and Government.

It is too well known, my Lords, how in former Times, when Popery had almoſt prevailed in the Ruin of our State and Church, the Proteſtants of the Kingdom were, by the Artifice of Papiſts, ſet againſt each other, that by ſuch Diviſions Popiſh Tyranny might be Eſtabliſhed among us.

The Act of Parliament, made in the firſt Year of the Reign of their late Majeſties King William and Queen Mary, to exempt Proteſtant Diſſenters from the Church of England from the Penalties of certain Laws, was made to defeat any ſuch future Attempts of the Papiſts ; The Preamble of the Act declares, that ſome Eaſe to ſcrupulous Conſciences, in the Exerciſe of Religion, may be an effectual Means to unite Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects in Intereſt and Affection.

We have ſeen, my Lords, the good Effects of the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature in making this Act; Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects are now all eaſy under Her Adminiſtration; and how many Diſſenters have we ſeen, who ſince the Toleration are become ſincere Converts to the Church. And I may ſay, that by this Toleration the Prejudices of the Diſſenters in general wear off, and their Number daily decreaſes.

And yet with what odious Colours, and Language unbecoming a Divine, does the Doctor paint out this Toleration, and how does he factiouſly endeavour to excite and ſtir up People againſt it?

'Tis, my Lords, a poor Shift which the Doctor makes in his Anſwer, that he knows of no Toleration granted by Law; and yet in the ſame Anſwer he owns there is an Indulgence which the Government hath condeſcended to give Diſſenters. My Lords, the word Indulgence is no more in the Act of Parliament than the word Toleration; and it is well known that the Act of Parliament he alludes to is every where, not only in Courts of Juſtice, but even in Parliament, called The Toleration Act; and is frequently ſo called by your Lordſhips in the Account of your Lordſhips Proceedings in Parliament, in Relation to the Bill againſt Occaſional Conformity, which Account was Publiſhed and Printed by your Lordſhips Order.

When the Doctor ſays, that he has not been able to inform himſelf that a Toleration hath been granted by Law, it plainly ſeems to import, as if the Doctor doubted of the Authority of the Parliament that made that Law; it looks like the common Sophiſtry of Papiſts and Jeſuits, who pretend to own the Church of England as by Law Eſtabliſhed; becauſe they diſown the Authority of all our Laws made ſince the Reformation.

My Lords, Her Majeſty hath always been pleaſed graciouſly to declare She will defend this Toleration, and this Her gracious Reſolution has, among the innumerable Bleſſings of Her Reign, united all Her Proteſtant Subjects in their Loyalty and Duty to Her.

The Commons reſt aſſured that your Lordſhips will always aſſiſt theſe gracious Purpoſes of Her Majeſty, and that as there can hardly be any Inſtance given of ſo Seditious and Barefaced an Attempt againſt the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom, as the Doctor hath been guilty of, ſo your Lordſhips will, by an Exemplary Puniſhment ſuitable to ſo high a Crime, vindicate the Authority of Parliaments, and give an effectual Diſcouragement for the future, to all ſuch Turbulent and Seditious Preachers.

Mr. Cowper. I Think, my Lords, it is unneceſſary at this Time to urge all the Arguments which might be made uſe of, to juſtify the Reaſonableneſs of the Toleration granted to Proteſtant Diſſenters, by exempting them from the Penalties of certain Laws. It may ſuffice to ſay, that this Indulgence is required from us as Chriſtians, and as we are Men profeſſing Humanity and good Will towards one another.

Whoever maintains, that the Toleration is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable, ſeems neceſſarily to aſſert, that the Exemption granted to Her Majeſty's Subjects from the Penalties of former Laws, ought to be reaſſumed; unleſs we are to ſuppoſe, that it can be reaſonable to allow what is unwarrantable.

This Aſſertion therefore evidently Arraigns the Act of Toleration, a Law now in being, a Law by which the People (throughout the whole Series of this dangerous War) have been more firmly United, in Intereſt and Affection, than formerly; I mean, in the Days when the Penalties of thoſe Laws were inflicted with intemperate Zeal.

My Lords, Before I proceed to make good the Charge contained in the ſecond Article of the Impeachment exhibited againſt the Priſoner by the Commons, I muſt beg leave to take notice of the Introduction to his Anſwer: It ſeems he cannot, upon the moſt diligent Enquiry, be able to inform himſelf, that a Toleration has been granted by Law. I take it, the Stat. 1. Will. and Mar. which exempts Diſſenters from the Penalties of former Laws, amounts to a Legal Indulgence, or Grant of Liberty of Conſcience; for by that Repeal a Liberty is given, which was before reſtrained, ſo that without Impropriety it may be ſaid, that Toleration is granted by Law. Doctor Sacheverell I find had rather it ſhould be called an Exemption, for no other Reaſon, that I ſee, but becauſe he has not ſaid much, if any Thing of the word Exemption in his Sermon, how free ſoever he has made with the Toleration.

Now taking it for granted (as I think with reaſon I may) that Indulgence, Toleration, or Exemption from Penalties, ſignifies one and the ſame Thing, (eſpecially as ordinarily made uſe of amongſt us,) Can any Thing be more plain, than that many Paſſages in this Infamous Libel caſt black and odious Reflections upon the Toleration? They have been all read, and for fear (after what has been already ſaid) of being too tedious, I will mention one only. The Words are theſe,

What could not be gained by Comprehenſion and Toleration, muſt be brought about by Moderation and Occaſional Conformity; that is, what they could not do by open Violence, they will not fail by ſecret Treachery to accompliſh. If the Church cannot be pulled down, it may be blown up; and no matter with theſe Men how it is deſtroy'd, ſo it is deſtroy'd, &c.

Pray, my Lords, Is it reaſonable to allow Toleration, or rather is not the Allowance of it unwarrantable, if it was the open and violent Means made uſe of to deſtroy the Church of England? And is not this a moſt uncharitable Cenſure, highly reflecting upon the Act of Toleration, and the Legiſlative Authority? Is not this maliciouſly and falſely Suggeſted, with a wicked and ſeditious Purpoſe, to create Jealouſies and Miſunderſtandings amongſt Her Majeſty's People?

Comprehenſion and Toleration are repreſented as open Violence; Moderation and Occaſional Conformity, as ſecret Treachery, by which the Church may be blown up, though it could not be pulled down by the violent Means of Comprehenſion and Toleration.

I ſhould waſte too much Time unneceſſarily, if I ſhould take particular Notice (after what has been already ſo well urged in Maintenance of the ſecond Article) of all the Paſſages which ſeem to be equally liable to Cenſure.

The Antiſtaſis throughout this Paragraph is ſo very plain, that I hope it is not one of thoſe mentioned in the Doctor's Anſwer to carry a dubious Senſe. The Priſoner ſeems to have taken care to explain himſelf, for fear his Meaning ſhould have been doubtful; and therefore after having ſaid,

What could not be gained by Comprehenſion and Toleration, muſt be brought about by Moderation and Occaſional Conformity; then he adds, that is, what they

they could not do by open Violence, they will not fail by Treachery to accompliſh.

Having thus inveighed againſt the Toleration, with much ill Nature and Bitterneſs of Spirit, he is pleaſed in the next Place to aſſert, That he is a Falſe Brother with relation to God, Religion, or the Church, who Defends it.

The Anſwer to this Branch of the Second Article is long, and, as I apprehend, ſeems to be Evaſive. Firſt, there is a Differerence again taken, between Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience, and an Exemption or Indulgence; and under this Diſtinction, which, for the Reaſons I have mentioned, is a Diſtinction without a Difference, the Doctor takes the Liberty to maintain and juſtify, that he is a Falſe Brother who Defends Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience.

I muſt own he endeavours to evade the Charge, by ſaying he means thoſe only, who at the ſame Time they defend Univerſal Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience, do alſo excuſe the Separation, and lay the Fault upon the true Sons of the Church, by carrying Matters too high.

Whatever he is pleaſed to ſay he meant, in Anſwer to this Part of the Article, ſurely no ſuch Meaning can be collected from his Sermon. Throughout the whole Libel, I preſume to ſay there is not one Word of Univerſal Toleration, or Univerſal Liberty of Conſcience; this is another Kind of Toleration, never heard of, 'till it was new Coined, in order to extenuate his vile and uncharitable Aſſertions.

Here he is pleaſed to ſum up the modiſh Criterions, as he terms them, of a true Church-Man, in a figurative and ironical Manner, and plainly Aſſerts they are the ſeveral Characteriſticks of a falſe Brother; amongſt the reſt, to defend Toleration is ſaid to be one; and under Pretence of Moderation to excuſe the Separation (i.e.) of the Diſſenters, of whom he had next before ſpoken, is another; and concludes the Paragraph with this pathetick Expreſſion, God deliver us all from ſuch Falſe Brethren.

Having thus treated thoſe who defend Toleration, his Superior Paſtors are in the next Place to be admoniſhed of their Duty, which is to thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt the Perſons entituled to legal Indulgence; which Anathema's are ſtiled Sentences ratified in Heaven, and ſuch as no Power on Earth dare reverſe.

Far be it from me to ſay, that Sentences ratified in Heaven can be reverſed by the Powers of this World. But if Doctor Sacheverell were a Superior Paſtor, and ſhould Anathematize, or, in plain Engliſh Curſe and Sentence all thoſe who enjoy the Benefit of Toleration, to Damnation, he muſt excuſe me, if I could not believe that ſuch a Sentence would be Ratified in Heaven.

And as to any Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure not ratified in Heaven, it is downright Inſolence to ſay, there is no Power upon Earth that can Reverſe it.

But ſince our Superior Paſtors will exerciſe a truly Chriſtian and noble Spirit of Charity and Moderation, and indulge ſcrupulous Conſciences, the Doctor is pleaſed however to bear his Teſtimony againſt it, and is not contented with delivering over to Satan thoſe only who enjoy the Indulgence, but they who defend Toleration muſt alſo bear them Company.

His indeed is a very comprehenſive Anathema, and is conceived in theſe Words; viz. And as he choſe it in this World, appoints him in the next his Portion with Hypocrites and Unbelievers, with all Liars, that have their Part in the Lake, which burns with Fire and Brimſtone, with the Grand Father of Falſhood, the Devil and his Angels. And ſo here we leave our Falſe Brethren, in the Company they always kept Correſpondence with.

This, my Lords, is a moſt dreadful unchriſtian Sentence, a Sentence ſo Barbarous, ſo Aſtoniſhing, that I am at a loſs to imagine, how it could enter into the Mind of Man to conceive it?

Perhaps, my Lords, it may be equally dangerous to defend the Aſhes of the Venerable Prelate Archbiſhop Grindall; he, it ſeems, was a falſe Son of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate, becauſe he deluded Queen Elizabeth to a Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline. Here we may obſerve the Doctor's great Averſion to all kind of Toleration.

Methinks, for the ſake of the Reformation, better Language ſhould have been given, and more decent Expreſſions ſhould have been beſtowed, upon a Man we all know bore ſo conſiderable a Part in the Eſtabliſhment of it.

Here likewiſe we may obſerve the Doctor's Inclination to wholeſome Severities, ſuch as Queen Elizabeth made uſe of, which were ſuch as I hope will never be ſeen more in this Kingdom. And by the Way, what a Spirit is this Man of, who can find nothing to commend in the Reign of that Glorious Queen, but the blackeſt and worſt Part of it.

I cannot agree, that theſe harſh Expreſſions, as the Anſwer owns they are, are the rather to be excuſed, becauſe the Remains of the Archbiſhop were ſo long ſince depoſited, eſpecially when we conſider that his Memory has been had in the higheſt Eſteem and Veneration by all the Reformed Churches in Chriſtendom, from that Time down to the Fifth Day of November laſt.

For my own Part, I think it very Immoral to caſt Reflections upon the Dead, how ill ſoever they may have deſerved from us; and the longer a Man has been ſo, in my Opinion, rather aggravates than leſſens the Immorality.

I am free to own, he whoſe Morals will permit him to reflect upon the Departed, is not therefore to be Impeached for it, as for an High Crime and Miſdemeanor; but that is not the preſent Caſe. Archbiſhop Grindall is thus ſeverely treated upon a Suppoſition he deluded the Queen to a Toleration; and all the hard Words which are falſely and unreaſonably beſtowed upon him, are evidently levelled at the preſent Toleration, and deſigned maliciouſly to Aſperſe and Traduce it, by repreſenting it as injurious to the Character of all concern'd in it, dangerous to Her Majeſty, and deſtructive to the Conſtitution both in Church and State.

By theſe Means, my Lords, and others (if poſſible worſe than theſe) one Part of the People, through groundleſs Fear and Jealouſy, unreaſonably and maliciouſly inſtilled, are to be ſtirred up to Arms and Violence; others, upon the Peril of Damnation, are not ſo much as to utter one Word in Defence of Toleration; whilſt the third and laſt Part are to have the Doctor's wholſome Severities executed upon them.

My Lords, 'Tis too notorious that this Incendiary, for ſo the Articles of the Commons of Great-Britain have called him, has already ſtirred up unaccountable Feuds and Quarrels throughout the Nation; the Commons are too ſenſible of it, and have therefore brought the Offender before your Lordſhips in Juſtice and in Judgment.

Many are the Seeds of Sedition which he has ſown; and the Fruit to be expected, is Civil Diſcord and Confuſion, unleſs ſome Remedy ſhall be applied to prevent it.

The Commons, for Her Majeſty's Safety, and for the Security of the Conſtitution, have thought it abſolutely neceſſary to bring him to anſwer for theſe High Crimes and Miſdemeanors before your Lordſhips Tribunal; conceiving his Offences to be of ſo Exorbitant a Nature, that they deſerve the Solemnity of this Proceeding.

And then the LORDS Adjourned to their Houſe Above.

Wedneſday, March 1. The Third Day.

THE Lords coming down into Weſtminſter-Hall, and being ſeated in the manner beforementioned, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth; ſave thee and thy Bail, elſe thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, you may proceed in your Evidence.

Mr. Thompſon. MY Lords, Your Lordſhips having heard what has been produced in Maintenance of the Two firſt Articles of this Impeachment, I ſhall take the Liberty to proceed, and endeavour to diſcharge the Truſt repoſed in me by the Commons, to ſupport the Third Article, and the Accuſations contained in it. I will not waſte your Lordſhips Time, by making any Apology for my Inabilities, and being unequal to this Undertaking; not doubting but that I ſhall find from your Lordſhips a candid Interpretation of whatever I ſhall offer upon this Occaſion.

This Article, my Lords, is founded on a Vote or Reſolution of your Lordſhips, and the Commons, in Parliament aſſembled, which is recited in the Preamble of theſe Articles, and the Occaſion of which it may be neceſſary to mention to your Lordſhips. It was ſome few Years ago that there were many ſcandalous and ſeditious Rumours ſpread abroad, of the Danger of the Church of England, as Eſtabliſhed by Law. There were ſeveral Libels diſperſed over the Kingdom, reviling Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration in Church and State; and among the reſt, one entitled, The Memorial of the Church of England. Her Majeſty was pleaſed to take notice of theſe ſeditious Reports from Her Throne to the Parliament; and thereupon your Lordſhips and the Commons, on the 17th of December, 1705. came to the Vote or Reſolution mentioned in the Preamble, and an Addreſs, which is recited to this effect; "That "your Lordſhips, and the Commons, in Parliament aſſembled, did addreſs and lay before "Her Majeſty a Vote or Reſolution, That the "Church of England, as Eſtabliſhed by Law, and "which was reſcued from the extremeſt Danger "by his Late Majeſty, of Glorious Memory, was, "by God's Bleſſing, under Her Majeſty in a ſafe "and flouriſhing Condition; and that whoever "ſhould go about to ſuggeſt and inſinuate that "the Church is in Danger under Her Majeſty's "Adminiſtration, is an Enemy to the Queen, the "Church, and the Kingdom.

"And that your Lordſhips, and the Commons, "by their ſaid Addreſs, did humbly beſeech Her "Majeſty to make the ſaid Vote or Reſolution "publick, and to take effectual Meaſures for the "puniſhing the Authors and Spreaders of ſuch "malicious and ſeditious Reports. And that on "the 20th of the ſame December, Her Majeſty "was pleaſed to iſſue Her Royal Proclamation accordingly.

Now, my Lords, this Article charges, "That "in Oppoſition to, and Defiance of, and in order "to arraign and blacken that Vote or Reſolution, "Doctor Sacheverell, in his Sermon preach'd at "St. Paul's, does ſuggeſt and aſſert the Church "of England to be in a Condition of great Peril "and Adverſity under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration." The Article further ſays, "That he wickedly and maliciouſly inſinuates, That the Members of Parliament, who paſſed that Reſolution, "were themſelves conſpiring the Ruin of the "Church, which they voted to be out of Danger: And this by way of Parallel, or Alluſion to "that Aſſembly, who voted the Perſon of King "Charles the Firſt to be out of Danger, at the "ſame Time when they were Conſpiring his Deſtruction.

My Lords, I will now do the Doctor the Juſtice to take notice of what he ſays in his Anſwer, and alledges as his Juſtification. He denies that he aſſerts the Church to be in Danger, under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; or otherwiſe than from Vice and Infidelity, Blaſphemy and Prophaneneſs. And as to the Parallel in the Vote, and the Inſinuation of the Members conſpiring the Ruin of the Church; He ſays, he never mentions that Vote, nor did he deſign the Parallel as laid to his Charge. He only meant, That while ſome Men were Conſpiring the Death of the King, others, not privy to this Deſign, voted him out of Danger: So, tho' the Members voted the Church to be out of Danger, yet others were conſpiring againſt the Church, and by their Vice and Infidelity were drawing down Vengeance on the Church and Kingdom. And as to that Vote made Four Years ago, He ſays, it concerns only thoſe who did then inſinuate the Church of England to be in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration.

Now, my Lords, having ſtated the Charge, and the Defence, I ſhall proceed to acquaint your Lordſhips with the ſeveral Paſſages of the Sermon, which the Commons apprehend will make out their Accuſation. And here, my Lords, I ſhall take Leave to ſay, That no ſtrained or forced Conſtructions can be deſired by the Commons, or expected from your Lordſhips, or any Inferences to be deduced, but what naturally ariſe from a fair, impartial, and candid Interpretation.

My Lords, The firſt Paſſage which the Commons apprehend is for their Purpoſe, is in the 5th Page; the Doctor, juſt before, enumerates St. Paul's Misfortunes that befel him, while he was propagating the Goſpel, and ſays, "There is a "very obſervable Gradation in his Sufferings,; but "that, of all his Calamities, the higheſt of them "proceeded from Falſe Brethren: And taking Notice of the Condition of the Church of Corinth, then follows these Words; " Tho' it were very obvious " to draw a Parallel here betwixt the ſad Circum- " ſtances of the Church of Corinth formerly, and of " the Church of England at preſent, wherein her " Holy Communion has been rent and divided by " factious and ſchiſmatical Impoſtors, her pure Do- " ctrine has been corrupted and defiled; her Primi- " tive Worſhip and Diſcipline prophaned and a- " buſed; her Sacred Orders denied and vilified; " her Prieſts and Profeſſors (like St. Paul) calum- " niated, miſrepreſented and ridicul'd; her Altars " and Sacraments proſtituted to Hypocrites, Deiſts, " Socinians and Atheiſts; and this done, I wiſh I " could not ſay, without Diſcouragement, I am " ſure with Impunity, not only by our profeſſed " Enemies; but, which is worſe, by our pretended " Friends, and Falſe Brethren.

It may be obſerved, that the Doctor is very free in his Parallels; and when either Church or State is to be repreſented by Compariſons, he is pleaſed to make uſe of the worſt he can find. He ſays, The Church of Corinth was in the utmoſt of Perils; and then it was to his Purpoſe to make the Alluſion, and bring the Church of England into the ſame Condition.

Here are many Particulars in this Paſſage, whereby the Church is ſaid to be in ſad Circumſtances, and I cannot tell how to apply them according to the Doctor's Way of Interpretation; for he ſays, all theſe Enormities are practiſed, not only without Diſcouragement, but with Impunity; not by profeſſed Enemies, but by Falſe Brethren: So he plainly ſhows who he aims at, as the Authors of theſe Calamities. He excludes vicious Infidels, Blaſphemers, and Hereticks, who are profeſſed Enemies, and lays it upon Falſe Brethren: And he explains what Sort of Falſe Brethren he means; For who can proſtitute Altars and Sacraments to Deiſts, Atheiſts, and Socinians, but ſome of his own Order? And who are to puniſh ſuch Offences among the Clergy, but their Spiritual Superiors? And whether they are not Part of Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

But, my Lords, ſuppoſing the Fact to be true, That there are Erroneous Doctrines publiſhed; to what End muſt the World be told in this manner that they are vented with Impunity, but to reflect on thoſe who ſhould puniſh them? And can that be done without a Proſecution? If the Doctor had produced any of his undeniable and ample Proofs of theſe Matters, (which he mentions in his Anſwer) before any Court that had a proper Connuſance of them, and been denied Juſtice, he might have had more Reaſon for Complaint: But to blame his Superiors for not puniſhing what they might be ignorant of, and which he ſays he was not, (and for which he might have promoted a Proſecution) ſeems to retort the Guilt upon himſelf, which he would lay upon them.

My Lords, The Second Paſſage is in Page the 16th. He is talking of a Comprehenſion which was deſigned, not long ſince, to unite the Church and Diſſenters; and complains of the Perſons who were concerned in that Heinous Intention; and then he aſſerts, " That ſince this Model of an U- " niverſal Liberty and Coalition failed, and theſe " Falſe Brethren could not carry the Conventicle " into the Church, they are now reſolved to bring " the Church into the Conventicle, which will " more plauſibly and ſlily effect her Ruin. What " could not be gained by Comprehenſion and Tole- " ration, muſt be brought about by Moderation " and Occaſional Conformity; that is, What they " could not do by open Violence, they will not " fail by ſecret Treachery to accompliſh. If the " Church can't be pull'd down, it may be blown " up; and no Matter, with theſe Men, how it be " deſtroyed, ſo that it is deſtroyed." Now, my Lords, who were theſe Falſe Brethren that were concerned in this Deſign of Comprehenſion, which failed, and who introduce worſe Miſchiefs? Do theſe Dangers proceed from Vice and Infidelity, from Blaſphemy and Erroneous Doctrines? No, my Lords, theſe Falſe Brethren are deſcribed in the Page before, under his Second General Head, to be in Church and State: Which muſt be Perſons in Power and Authority; the Expreſſion it ſelf imports it; nor could they otherwiſe be capable of accompliſhing that Deſign, of uniting the Diſſenters and the Church: To which Deſign, and the Authors who intended it, he is pleaſed to give the moſt vile and ſcurrilous Names imaginable; and afterwards he lays to their Charge an Intention to blow up the Church by Moderation. And this, I ſuppoſe, is one of the Vices which the Doctor mentions in his Anſwer, as one Means of Danger to the Church. If Moderation be a Vice, I will do the Doctor the Juſtice to acquit him from the leaſt Tincture of it, in any of his Works that I have ever met with.

My Lords, The Third Paſſage is in Page the 18th: He is continuing his Obſervations of the Danger from the ſame Falſe Brethren in Church and State; and then his Words are, " Falſhood always " implies Treachery; and whether that is a Quali- " fication for any one to be truſted, eſpecially with " the Guardianſhip of our Church or Crown, let " our Governors conſider." This, my Lords, muſt relate to Perſons, who (as he would inſinuate) are not fit to be truſted with the Guardianſhip of the Church or Crown: And whether this Reflection does not ſeem to aim higher than the Adminiſtration, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

The next Paſſage is in Page the 20th: The Words are theſe; " And now are we under no " Danger in theſe deplorable Circumſtances? Muſt " we lull our ſelves under this ſad Repoſe, and in " ſuch a ſtupid Lethargick Security embrace our " Ruin? When Eliſha, the Great Prophet of God, " was ſurrounded with an Hoſt of Enemies that " ſought for his Life, his blind Servant beheld not " the Peril his Maſter was in, till his Eyes were " open'd by a Miracle, and he found himſelf in " the midſt of Horſes and Chariots of Fire. I " pray God we be out of Danger; but we may re- " member, that the King's Perſon was voted to be " ſo, at the ſame Time that his Murtherers were " conſpiring his Death.

Now, my Lords, the Doctor, to excuſe this Paſſage, ſays, the deplorable Circumſtances we are in, proceeds from the Maturity of National Sins, &c. as in his Anſwer. But who are mention'd in his Sermon as the Occaſion of the Maturity of National Sins but the Diſſenters, who, he ſays, are plotting the Ruin of the Church, and Falſe Brethren join with them? So that here neither is the Danger aſſerted from Vice and Infidelity, but as it is occaſioned by the Diſſention from the Church, which the Law has thought fit to apprehend as no Danger to the Church; and therefore it did not become him to aſſert the contrary. Then as to the Parallel of the Aſſembly who Voted King Charles the Firſt out of Danger, and of the Members who made the Vote about the Danger of the Church Four Years ago, he ſays, he meant no Reflection on any of the Members who paſſed that Vote, becauſe he never mentioned that Vote; and as to the Vote about King Charles, others were conſpiring his Ruin than thoſe who voted him out of Danger; ſo while the Parliament voted the Church out of Danger, there were other Enemies conſpiring her Ruin. If the Doctor intended no Reflection upon that Vote, Why was Voting in any Caſe mention'd? Can any one imagine that the Doctor did not know of that Vote, ſince the Danger of the Church is ſo much his Topick? Nor can I preſume him ignorant of the Time when that Vote about King Charles was paſſed; which, as far as I can obſerve from the Hiſtory of that Time, was in November 1648, that he was voted out of Danger; and when he was Tried and Beheaded, I need not mention to your Lordſhips: And whatever Alteration might be made in that Aſſembly after the Vote, and before his Death, was done by thoſe Perſons who conſpired his Deſtruction, and who were Part of that Aſſembly who voted him out of Danger. So that it ſeems plain, that the Vote of Safety, and the Conſpiracy of Ruin, came from moſt of the ſame Perſons; and it does not ſeem very ſtrange to ſuppoſe the Doctor intended his Alluſion in the ſame manner.

And as to the Scripture he quotes to this Purpoſe, "That the blind Servant beheld not the Peril "his Maſter Eliſha was in, 'till his Eyes were "opened by Miracle, and he found himſelf in the "midſt of Horſes and Chariots of Fire." My Lords, theſe Horſes and Chariots of Fire were not the Prophet's Enemies, but his Friends; nor was there any Danger to be feared from them; on the contrary, they were a Security from his Enemies; ſo that he plainly perverts the Senſe of that Text, to make a ſtronger Impreſſion, and more effectually to delude the People.

My Lords, The laſt Paſſage is in the laſt Page: He is ſtill talking of the Danger of the Church, and quotes a Text as in the Lamentations, (viz.) "Tho' ſhe lies bleeding of the Wounds ſhe receiv'd "in the Houſe of her Friends." Indeed, my Lords, I can't find it there; therefore it ſeems to me to be a Lamentation of the Doctor's own making. Then he goes on, "Tho' the ways of Sion may mourn for a Time, "and her Gates be deſolate, her Prieſts ſigh, and "ſhe in Bitterneſs, becauſe her Adverſaries are Chief, "and her Enemies at preſent proſper; tho' among "all her Lovers ſhe has few to comfort her, and "many of her Friends have dealt treacherouſly with "her, and are become her Enemies." My Lords, I mention theſe Paſſages only to ſhew, that the Doctor, by the moſt Pathetick Expreſſions of his own, mixt with theſe Texts of Scripture, endeavours to repreſent the Church of England to be in the utmoſt Danger.

I ſhall trouble your Lordſhips no further with the Paſſages in this Sermon; but ſhould not omit to take Notice, that there is a Suggeſtion in the Doctor's Anſwer, that the Vote Four Years ago did not concern him; but that it related only to them that then did aſſert the Church to be in Danger: If he had minded the Words of the Vote, he would have found there was no Pretence for that Objection; for it is, "Whoever ſhall go about to inſinuate, "that the Church is in Danger under her Majeſty's "Adminiſtration;" which muſt relate to any Time during the Continuance of her Majeſty's Reign.

And now, my Lords, I beg Leave to obſerve ſome Circumſtances attending this Offence, which give it the higheſt Aggravation. That Memorial which was publiſhed ſome Years ago, and was the chief Occaſion of the Vote in Parliament, was a Libel that reviled her Majeſty and her Adminiſtration, as the Occaſion of the Danger of the Church. The Author was pleaſed to conceal himſelf, and durſt not avow his Doctrine; but the Book had the Fate it deſerved: And from the Aſhes of that Phœnix aroſe another Memorial, with many of the ſame virulent Expreſſions againſt Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, agreeing in the whole Scope of it, as to the ſame ſcandalous Purpoſe; but far exceeding it in Malice and Inveteracy.

And this new Memorialiſt has preſumed to publiſh his Seditious Reflections in the moſt open manner imaginable; firſt at the Aſſizes at Derby, and afterwards in the great Church of this Metropolis; and has thought fit to Print and Diſperſe about Forty Thouſand of them over the Kingdom. From whence could this extraordinary Zeal proceed? Was it to exhort Men to revere their Governors, and to ſubmit to thoſe in Authority over them? Was it intended to preſerve Peace and Good-will amongſt Men? To promote Charity, Brotherly Love and Affection? No, my Lords, there is plain Evidence to the contrary, Ex ore ſuo judicabitur. He tells you the Reaſon of his Topicks in that Place; he ſays, he intended "To open the Eyes of the "deluded People in that great Metropolis; to ſet "the Rich and Powerful Inhabitants right in their "Notions of Government in Church and State." They were obliged to him for his pious Deſign, and for inſtilling thoſe Doctrines, which, as your Lordſhips were told Yeſterday, would make their Religion, Liberty, Property, and all that is dear and valuable, Precarious: He tells you further, "That our Conſtitution of Church and State is "vigorouſly attack'd from without, and lazily de-"fended from within; that there are Attempts up-"on the Friends of the Church, to ſhut their Eyes "and Mouths, in order to Undermine and Deſtroy "them; that he thinks the Pulpit a proper Place "for Politicks; and that it is the Buſineſs of "a Clergyman to ſound a Trumpet in Sion, to cry "aloud and ſpare not." And in his Preface to the Derby Sermon he explains himſelf ſtill further upon this Topick, "That the Church is ſhamefully be-"trayed and run down; that there are ſome ſtill "who will defend it with their Lives and Fortunes." And ſtates the Caſe as if there was an immediate Neceſſity to take up Arms for a Holy War upon this Occaſion.

My Lords, This Crime is more heinous, for that there is the leaſt Reaſon for theſe Seditious Murmurs, that has been in any Reign whatever. Is there any Invaſion or Attempt upon the Liturgy, even the leaſt Ceremony of the Church, or any Part of the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution? Are her Revenues impaired, or any of her Temporal Rights violated? No, my Lords; but our Royal Sovereign has diſtinguiſhed Her Care for this Church in a more peculiar manner than any of her Predeceſſors; She has given from Her own Revenue to increaſe that of the Clergy, for their more creditable Support, and to enable them to Preach ſound Doctrine for the Welfare of Her Subjects; nor is Her Majeſty wanting to promote Religion, Piety and Virtue, by Her own Royal Example, the moſt effectual Encouragement. Theſe are the true Baſis of the Church, and the beſt Pillars to ſupport it. And what Occaſion was there for theſe Reflections on Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration? Has not that venerable

Bench

Bench given the World abundant Proof of their Care and Vigilance to preſerve that Church, of which they are the Guardians, by their Learning and unblameable Conduct; by their zealous and reſolute Defence of her in the worſt of Times, and againſt all her Enemies? It is very ſurprizing that a Gentleman, whoſe Education has been in the Fountain of Learning and Religion ſo many Years, (who cannot be preſumed to err through Ignorance) that he ſhould preſume in his private Capacity to contradict the Senſe of the whole Nation, and caſt ſuch Aſperſions on his Superiors. To what End could he ſo zealouſly diſperſe his Notions, if not to animate a deluded People to the Execution of Seditious Deſigns.

It were to be wiſhed, that a Government could be ſupported by Mildneſs and Clemency; but ſuch is the State of depraved Nature, even theſe moſt Paſſive-Obedience Natures, that they are not contented to be only ungrateful for the Benefits they enjoy from the Church and State, but they muſt Rebel againſt Principle, and fly in the Face of that Government from which they receive their Support and Protection.

The Doctor cries aloud, and there are many others that ſpare not: Some have preſumed to cenſure this very Proceeding before your Lordſhips, as a Perſecution of the Church. And what muſt be the Conſequence of Tolerating ſuch bold daring Spirits to go on in their Seditious Practices!

If your Lordſhips do not vindicate your own Reſolutions, and exert your Power and Authority to ſuppreſs that audacious and unparallel'd Inſolence, that daily flies abroad from the Pulpit and the Preſs, (which, as the Doctor ſays truly, are become the Mints of Faction and Sedition) I may take Leave to ſay, there will be too much Reaſon for his Aſſertions of Danger both to Church and State: But the Commons are ſo well ſatisfy'd of your Lordſhips true Concern for the Preſervation of our Conſtitution, that they cannot imagine you will ſuffer any Attempts that may be pernicious to the Welfare of the Government, to paſs without condign Puniſhment; and therefore they entirely rely on your Lordſhips Wiſdom and Juſtice.

Mr. Compton. MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhips, I am commanded by the Commons to aſſiſt in maintaining the Third Article of their Impeachment againſt Doctor Henry Sacheverell, which has been fully opened to your Lordſhips by the Learned Gentleman that ſpoke before me.

My Lords, The Commons think they have good Reaſon to aſſert, that Dr. Sacheverell, in his Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's, doth falſly and maliciouſly contradict and arraign a Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, approv'd of by Her Majeſty, and made publick by Her Royal Proclamation.

My Lords, Your Lordſhips cannot but have obſerv'd, that it has been one of the conſtant Artifices of the Enemies of the preſent happy Eſtabliſhment, who very well know the juſt Value the People of this Nation have for the Eſtabliſh'd Church, to ſuggeſt and inſinuate, that this Church is in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity, in order to foment Animoſities, and to cover Deſigns which they dare not publickly own. But how frequent ſoever this has been, I believe I may ſafely affirm, that this ſcandalous and ſeditious Aſſertion was never ſo boldly maintain'd, nor with ſuch invidious and aggravating Circumſtances, as by the Criminal at your Lordſhips Bar.

The Learned Society, of which he is a Member, reap'd ſuch ſignal, ſuch immediate Advantages from the Revolution, that he could not be unmindful, he could not be ignorant of the extreme Danger from which our Laws and Liberties, our Church and Conſtitution were reſcued by his late Majeſty. But ſuch is his Ingratitude to our Great Deliverer, ſuch is his Inveteracy to the Revolution, that he makes that very Revolution the Period of Time from whence the Enemies of our Church firſt had Hopes to deliver her up to her worſt Adverſaries. Nor does his Malignity ceaſe there, but he endeavours to perſuade the People, that from the Revolution to the preſent Time, there has been a continued Series of Contrivances to ruin and deſtroy the Church: At the Revolution, by open Violence; but Now, that is, under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, by ſecret Treachery; and ſince neither the late nor the preſent Reign can eſcape his Invectives, for what Perſon he reſerves his Panegyricks, is ſubmitted to your Lordſhips to determine.

My Lords, I would not take up any of your Lordſhips Time unneceſſarily; but I muſt not conclude, without expreſſing the Indignation the Commons have at his traducing and vilifying the laſt Parliament, by that odious Parallel in the 21ſt Page of his Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's.

My Lords, The Parliament he thus endeavours to blacken, was opened with ſo full an Appearance in both Houſes, that Her Majeſty obſerv'd it with Satisfaction from the Throne; and at the ſame time Her Majeſty with Grief obſerv'd the Malice of ſuch Perſons, who ſuggeſted the Church was in Danger; and deſired the Aſſiſtance of Her Parliament to diſcountenance and defeat ſuch Practices. And in Duty to Her Majeſty, to ſecure the Quiet and Peace of the Kingdom, and to diſappoint the Deſigns of the Enemies of our Church and Conſtitution, both Houſes of Parliament came to the Reſolution, ſet forth by the Commons in the Articles of the Impeachment which have been read to your Lordſhips. And the ſame Parliament proceeded in this and other Matters which were before them, with ſo much Vigor, as well as Prudence, that in leſs than ſix Weeks Her Majeſty graciouſly took Notice, that their Proceedings had had a good Effect all over Europe. And at the Concluſion of the Seſſion, Her Majeſty, with great Goodneſs, declares how much ſhe was pleaſed to obſerve their Unanimity and Zeal throughout the whole Seſſion, againſt every thing that tended to Sedition. It was this Parliament that ſo chearfully concurr'd with Her Majeſty in promoting and compleating the Union of the Two Kingdoms. And it was the Gentlemen that compoſed this Parliament, join'd by the Repreſentative of the other Part of the united Kingdom, who readily and unanimouſly aſſiſted Her Majeſty in diſappointing the Attempt of the Pretender to Her Crown, whoſe chief Dependance was in the reſtleſs and arbitrary Principles of ſome of Her Majeſty's Subjects, ill-affected to their Country.

And now, my Lords, is there any Ground to compare the dutiful Proceedings of ſuch a Parliament, with what was done in thoſe unhappy Times, with which he wou'd maliciouſly draw a Parallel? No, my Lords. And I may ſafely venture to ſay, that 'tis impoſſible to find the leaſt Reſemblance between Her Majeſty's Glorious Reign, and that unfortufortunate Adminiſtration, except that there were then, as there are now, Miniſters of the Church, who by their Function, being Meſſengers of Peace, ſet up to be the Trumpeters of Sedition, and Incendiaries to Rebellion, But, my Lords, the Commons hope, That the happy Period is now come, when even this Reſemblance ſhall have its Determination; for they entirely rely on your Lordſhips Juſtice to inflict ſuch an Exemplary Puniſhment on this Offender, as may deter others from endeavouring to diſtract the Kingdom with ſuch groundleſs Diſtruſts and Jealouſies for the future.

Clar. Hiſt. of the Rebel. Vol. 2. P. 18.

Lord Coningsby. MY Lords, I am commanded by the Commons of Great-Britain to aſſiſt, and endeavour to make good, the important Charge they have Exhibited againſt the Criminal at the Bar: And becauſe I am leaſt able, amongſt all the Gentlemen that have that Honour, out of Indulgence to me I am aſſigned to the Third Article, that wants leaſt to be ſupported.

The Sermon Preached by the Doctor at St. Paul's, and which has been read to your Lordſhips, from the firſt Word in the Title Page, to the laſt Line in the Concluſion, is one falſe, malicious, and ſeditious Aſſertion, That the Church of England was under the laſt Reign, and is under the preſent, in the utmoſt Peril and Danger.

The Proclamation which your Lordſhips have heard mentioned, and which was deſigned by our Glorious Queen, from whoſe Speech it took its Riſe, by your Lordſhips, and the Commons who concurr'd in it, to be a Warning to ſuch Incendiaries, as the Criminal, not to trumpet amongſt the People Suggeſtions ſo ſeditious, in order to cover Deſigns more dangerous, and which, God be praiſed, they are not yet ſtrong enough, nor never I hope will be, Publickly to own; ſhews this Malignant Offender committed this Offence in Defiance of Her Majeſty, your Lordſhips, and the Commons.

The Proofs, which almoſt every Gentleman has brought to the two preceding Articles; and thoſe particular Inſtances that have been ſo fully open'd by theſe Gentlemen who have ſpoke before me to the preſent, ſhews that it would be vain in me, and miſpending your Lordſhips Time, to pretend to enforce thoſe Points, already ſo fully made good.

I ſhall therefore very ſhortly, tho' I hope very plainly, lay before your Lordſhip what are thoſe pernicious Deſigns the Doctor intends to cover, and at laſt hopes to bring to paſs, by his Preaching, Printing, and Publiſhing, not only round this Kingdom, but amongſt his Friends on the other ſide of the Water, this ſeditious, I may ſay, rebellious Diſcourſe, for which he ſtands at preſent Impeached by the Commons.

And as it has been ſhewn your Lordſhips, by the Gentlemen that made good the firſt Article, that the Doctor, by reflecting on the Neceſſary Means to bring about the Revolution, the Foundation on which our preſent happy Eſtabliſhment is built; by aſſerting that Her Majeſty ought to depend upon no other Title to the Crown but Her Hereditary one; deſign'd, by ſuch deſtructive Poſitions, to bring back the Pretender, with Popery and French Tyranny attending him, to govern the State.

So it is as plain, from the whole Scope of his Sermon, that the Doctor, and all thoſe in Combination with him, having nothing more at Heart than to deſtroy the preſent Church, as Eſtabliſh'd by the wholſome Laws of this Land, and that becauſe it's moſt conſonant in its Doctrine and Diſcipline to that of the Primitive Chriſtians, of any ſince the Time of the Apoſtles; and conſequently leſs agreeable with the flaming Opinions of ſuch Firebrands, who know not of what Spirit they are of: And this in order to ſet up a Scheme of a Church, agreeable to the Tyrannical one they have projected for the State: A Church, the Doctor's I mean, though in Pretence Proteſtant, that would be ready ſoon to be turn'd into a Monſter, by adding to it ſelf a Popiſh Head.

A Church that will deſtroy all thoſe that brought about, and have ſince ſupported the Happy Revolution.

A Church, which upon Anti Chriſtian Principles profeſſes Burning for Conſcience-ſake; which the Doctor, like thoſe wicked Men whoſe Mercies are Cruel, calls wholſome Severities.

A Church that will turn all the Bleſſings we enjoy under the preſent Adminiſtration, into all thoſe Miſeries we got rid of by the late Glorious Revolution.

I cannot doubt therefore but your Lordſhips will out of Duty to the beſt of Queens, and in Juſtice to your Lordſhips and the Commons, deter others from ever being guilty of the like Heinous Offence.

Mr. Dolben. MY Lords, This Article of the Commons Impeachment contains one Criminal Poſition, That the Church of England is now in a Condition of great Peril and Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, aggravated by an odious Parallel that affords a pregnant Proof of the true Spirit and Deſigns of this bold Offender.

The Accuſation has already been fully made out by plain and poſitive Words in his Sermon; from which, as well as from many other Paſſages, I ſhall beg leave to ſubmit to your Lordſhips Judgment, whether that wicked Parallel may not juſtly be turn'd upon him, Whether there is not more than Suſpicion that he, and all his Abettors, are conſpiring the Ruin and Deſtruction of the Church, when under the Diſguize of a Falſe Zeal they proſtitute her Sacred Name, to carry on dark and deep Deſigns, fatal both to Church and State.

I ſhall only briefly take Notice to your Lordſhips, that the Guilt of this Offence ariſes from a plain Contempt of Her Majeſty's Proclamation, and of the Reſolutions of both Houſes of Parliament; moved by no Inducement, but an Eagerneſs and Induſtry not to let any Shadow or Colour eſcape, that may contribute to his Part in the grand Deſign, to be only effected by fomenting Diviſions and Diſtractions amongſt us.

But, my Lords, in order to unveil the Doctor's Pretences, and to take away his trivial Excuſes, I beg leave to repreſent to your Lordſhips, that if the whole Legiſlature had not, from a full Conviction of the Church's Security and Safety, laid a ſevere Injunction againſt the publiſhing ſuch a falſe and pernicious Suggeſtion, yet evident Truth ought to have taught him not to have tranſgreſs'd in ſo notorious a Manner.

My Lords, When it appears that the Church has the Sanction of ſo many and ſo good Laws to eſtabliſh and defend it; when the Veneration and Devotion to it, of ſo great a Majority of the People, is ſo viſibly fixt in their Hearts, that the bad Examples and provoking Behaviour of this Falſe Brother, and of ſeveral others of the ſame Stamp, have have not made the leaſt Abatement, or Impreſſion to its Diſadvantage; when the Parliament on all Occaſions appears ſo forward and unanimous in their Zeal and Affection for it; when 'tis recommended and illuſtrated by the Learning, Piety, Wiſdom, Charity and Chriſtian Moderation of ſo many of its chief Paſtors; but above all, when 'tis under the Protection and Government of a Supreme Head, a true and conſtant Defender of its Faith and Diſcipline, who having already expoſed Her Royal Perſon to Hardſhips and Dangers, to reſcue it in a Time of its utmoſt Peril, does continue daily to manifeſt the ſame Devotion, Piety and tender Concern for it: Under this powerful Alliance for its Support, can ought but Malice and Envy at its Proſperity, can any one but an Incendiary or diſguis'd Enemy inſinuate, that the Church of England is not fenced and fortified with an impregnable Barrier againſt all Danger, from open Attacks or Violations?

'Tis true indeed, my Lords, that no human Care or Policy can prevent the Attempts and ſecret Conſpiracies of inteſtine Traytors. Vipers in the Boſom may ſting, tho' the Body be covered with the ſtrongeſt Armour. All that can be done is, to be watchful to diſcover and expoſe the Hypocrite, to detect and puniſh his Crimes. The Commons, on this Occaſion, are here exerting their part of this Duty, fully aſſured of Succeſs from your Lordſhips equal Zeal and Juſtice.

My Lords, You have now brought to your Bar a Clergyman, bound, by the ſtrongeſt Tyes and Duty of his Function, to Inſtruct and Propagate the Neceſſary Means for the Peoples true Happineſs in this World, as well as the next; yet your Lordſhips will find him proved to be a Trumpeter Itinerant of Sedition and Rebellion, firſt at Derby, then in London; an Agent detached from that dark Cabal, whoſe Emiſſaries appear in all Shapes, and almoſt in all Places; an Aſſerter of ſuch peſtilential and unparallel'd Doctrines, as at once overthrow the whole Conſtitution both of Church and State. He may perhaps urge a Precedent, in which it has been pleaded, and from the Pulpit, that an urgent Neceſſity can juſtify the Breach of Laws; and from others, that in particular Caſes they may be diſpenſed with; but this Gentleman muſt be allowed the Infamy, to have ſtretch'd and improv'd thoſe pernicious Tenents to the exalted height of making all our Laws, Liberties, Religion, and Lives, held only at the precarious Pleaſure of any bold Invader; for nothing can be a plainer Expoſition or Conſequence, when 'tis taught, that no Oppreſſion, no Violation can juſtify an Oppoſition to it.

My Lords, The Commons have brought this Offender before you, with a View, not only to detect and puniſh his Offence, but to obtain an Occaſion in the moſt Publick and Authentick manner to avow the Principles, and juſtify the Means, upon which the preſent Government and the Proteſtant Succeſſion are founded and Eſtabliſhed; and this more out of a generous Concern for Poſterity, than for our own preſent Security. My Lords, we are ſo happy as to have a Sovereign on the Throne, whoſe Goodneſs, Juſtice and Piety leaves no room for the leaſt Fear or Jealouſy; but we hope the Record of this Proceeding will remain a laſting Monument, to deter a Succeſſor, that may inherit her Crowns, but not her Virtues, from attempting to invade the Laws, or the Peoples Rights; and if not, that it will be a noble Precedent to excite our Poſterity to wreſtle and tug for Liberty as we have done. My Lords, I doubt not but Her Majeſty will with the greateſt Satisfaction, ſee the Government thus put upon a right and equal Foot, ſince thereby thoſe Bleſſings will be ſecured to future Ages, which her happy Reign has Planted amongſt us, ſince thereby ſhe will entail a laſting Felicity on her People, and prevent thoſe real Dangers both to Church and State which at this Time are ſo falſly inſinuated. But my Lords, if this ſhould not now be effectually obtain'd, and by ſuch wholeſome Severities as the Doctor applauds and recommends, give me leave to conclude, with a juſter Complaint than that in his Anſwer, That hard is the Fate of that People who after having been twenty Years in War, in Conjunction with ſo many great Allies, with the Expence of ſo much Blood and Treaſure, contending only again Tyranny and Oppreſſion, and which we may juſtly hope is at laſt ſubdued, ſhall then ſee all Europe enjoy the Fruits and Benefits of our Labours; and at the ſame time, tho' Her Majeſty's well choſen General ſhall at laſt bring home Peace, as he has ſo often the Laurels of Victory, to lay with humble Duty at Her Royal Feet, yet we, only we, muſt be rendred uncapable of the common Bleſſing, betrayed at home to a perpetual Condition of Bondage, by ſuch falſe Brethren as are at your Lordſhips Bar.

Then the Lord Haverſham moved to Adjourn to their Houſe above; and being returned, and ſeated as before, Proclamation for Silence was made by the Serjeant at Arms.

Lord Chancellor. Mr. Dolben, the Lords have taken Notice that at the Concluſion of what you ſpoke, you us'd this Expreſſion, * as are at your Lordſhips Bar; which Words are ſo general, that their Lordſhips are of an Opinion that they want an Explanation.

Mr. Dolben. My Lords, thoſe Words had relation only to the Priſoner at the Bar.

Serjeant Parker. MY Lords, Your Lordſhips have heard the three firſt Articles of this Charge largely ſpoken to; it is my Duty, in Obedience to the Command I have been Honoured with by the Commons, to make good the Charges in the Fourth. I am ſenſible how unequal I am to ſuch a Work, both from my want of Capacity, and my preſent Indiſpoſition; but however, in ſuch Manner as I can, I ſhall endeavour it.

This Article ſets forth, That He the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in his ſaid Sermon and Books, does falſly and maliciouſly Suggeſt, that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution; and that there are Men of Characters and Stations both in Church and State, who are falſe Brethren, and do themſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and do encourage and put it in the Power of others, who are profeſſed Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment: And chargeth Her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under Her, with a general Male-Adminiſtration; and as a publick Incendiary, he perſwades Her Majeſty's Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Factions and Parties, inſtills

* Exception had been taken, that the Word are might carry the Reflection to the Council and Sollicitor aſſigned by the Lords to aſſiſt Dr. Sacheverell, who were alſo at the Bar.

groundleſs Jealouſies, and foments Deſtructive Diviſions among 'em, and excites and ſtirs 'em up to Arms and Violence: And, that his ſaid Malicious and Seditious Suggeſtions may make the ſtronger Impreſſions upon the Minds of Her Majeſty's Subjects, he the ſaid Henry Sacheverell does wickedly wreſt and pervert divers Texts and Paſſages of Holy Scripture.

This Article in general, is a Charge of Sedition under ſeveral Aggravations, and made good by almoſt every part of the Sermon and Dedications, read before your Lordſhips in Evidence.

The avow'd Deſign of the Sermon, is to repreſent the extreme Perils and Diſtreſſes of the Church and Conſtitution from Falſe Brethren, that are in the Adminiſtration, and countenanc'd by it.

He repreſents the Church in the utmoſt Extremity, thoſe Fences broken down, without which ſhe is naked and unguarded, her Altars and Sacraments proſtituted, her ſelf deſerted, betray'd, undermin'd, and perſecuted with open Violence, bleeding of her Wounds, her Enemies openly calling for her Deſtruction.

The Nation, ſunk into the loweſt degree of Corruption, ſwarming and over-run with Atheiſts, Deiſts, Socinians, Hypocrites, Villains, Rebels, Traytors, Correſpondents with the Devil, nay, with Men that are themſelves the worſt of Dæmons.

The Government, ſo far from applying a Remedy, that all this is done Openly, with Impunity, without Diſcouragement: Nay, the Perſons from whom the Miſchiefs ariſe, are ſuffer'd to form themſelves into Seminaries, to Propagate Atheiſm and other Helliſh Principles; are let into the Adminiſtration, they are in Places, Places are given 'em as the Reward of betraying their Parties, they engroſs all Places, they are Perſons of Characters and Stations, nay, they are Chief.

Nor is this done in any Repreſentation to thoſe, that by making new Laws, or putting in Execution the old, might regularly cure theſe Miſchiefs; but in a popular Harangue from the Pulpit: Not in terms of Lamentation, not as grounds of Humiliation, or in a Language that might become one that thought the only Arms of the Church to be Prayers and Tears; but with all Malice, Bitterneſs, Reviling, Inſolence, endeavouring to raiſe in his Auditors the Paſſions himſelf puts on, and pointing out (as far as he dares) to Arms and Violence for a Cure, and not ſo much as offering any other.

Theſe are the Colours in which he Paints our Condition, and thus he chuſes to ſhew the Zeal and Duty he profeſſes to the Beſt of Queens.

But ſince he pretends in great Meaſure to deny or evade the Charge, it may not be amiſs to look a little more particularly into his Sermon, and take a view of the Scheme of it, and of ſeveral Paſſages therein.

The Crime he profeſſes to ſhow the Miſchiefs of in this Sermon, is falſe Brotherhood: The Method he propoſes to Treat it in is,

1. To deſcribe the Crime, and to ſhow who are Falſe Brethren, and upon what Accounts; and he conſiders it both with reſpect to the Church and to the State.

2. To ſhow the Dangers: And

3. The Guilt and Folly of this Sin. And

4. (That it may appear that all the Crimes and all the Treacheries he mentions are not mere Suppoſitions, but Realities, at this time,) He undertakes, as a Conſequence of all, to ſhew what mighty Reaſon we have at all times, more eſpecially AT PRESENT, to ſtick to the Principles of our Church and Conſtitution, and to beware of and mark all thoſe falſe Brethren who deſert or betray 'em.

I believe the firſt Clauſe of this Article will ſo clearly be prov'd from the Paſſages that more directly concern the ſecond and the third, that I deſire, for ſaving your Lordſhips Time, to begin with thoſe two Clauſes, and then to return to the firſt afterwards.

I begin therefore with the ſecond Clauſe, That the ſaid Henry Sacheverell, in his Sermons and Books, doth falſly and maliciouſly Suggeſt, that there are Men of Characters and Stations in Church and State who are Falſe Brethren, and to themſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and do encourage and put it into the Power of others who are profeſſed Enemies, to overthrow and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment.

To make this out, I beg leave to obſerve, that in entring upon his ſecond Head, that is, to ſhow the great Peril and Miſchiefs of theſe Falſe Brethren both in Church and State, he aſſerts, pag. 15. That they weaken, undermine and betray in themſelves, and encourage and put it in the Power of our profeſs'd Enemies to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment of both. This therefore runs thro' his whole Diſcourſe; and, being affirm'd of Falſe Brethren in general, muſt be applicable to every ſort of falſe Brother. If then there be any Perſons of Characters and Stations whom he repreſents as Falſe Brothers, then he has, in the place mentioned, affirm'd of THEM, and undertaken to prove, that THEY weaken, undermine and betray, and put it into the Power of others to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment.

And as to that, he comes under his third Head, pag. 21. to ſhow the Malignity and Guilt of this Sin, in reſpect of the World, and begins it thus, (pag. 21, 22.) "What a vaſt Scandal and Offence "muſt it be, to all Perſons of Piety and Integrity, "to ſee Men of Characters and Stations thus ſhift "and prevaricate with their Principles, and ſtart- "ing from their Religion, upon any occaſion of "Difficulty or Tryal, and like the Diſciples flying "from and forſaking our Saviour, when his Life "lay at ſtake; to ſee Mens Opinions ſit as looſe "almoſt as their Garments, to be put on or off for "Convenience; what can unwary Perſons conclude "from this Tergiverſation and Hypocriſy, but that "all Religion is State-craft and Impoſture? That "all Godlineſs is Gain, and that the Doctrines of "the Church lie not ſo much in her Articles, as her "Honours and Revenues?

This is a full Charge of Falſe Brotherhood upon thoſe Perſons of Characters and Stations, and exemplifying in them the Malignity of that Crime, which is the Subject of his Diſcourſe: The Conſequence is plain, that he here charges 'em with Falſe Brotherhood, and having before aſſerted, that all ſuch Falſe Brothers weaken, undermine and betray, and put it into the Power of others to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment; he has not only ſuggeſted but maintain'd, that there are Perſons of Characters and Stations that weaken, undermine and betray, and put it into the Power of others to deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment.

In his Anſwer, put in before your Lordſhips to the Articles of Impeachment, he would divide the Charge in this Clauſe; and (1.) as to the ſuggeſting that there are ſuch Perſons who are Falſe Brethren, thren: he ſays, That if he had ſaid there are Perſons of Characters and Stations that are Falſe Brethren, not reſtraining it to the higheſt, it would not be either falſe, malicious, or highly Criminal.

(2.) As to the weakening, undermining, and betraying in themſelves, and putting it into the Power of profeſſed Enemies to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution, he ſays, he has not ſuggeſted that of Perſons of Characters and Stations; but the mention of thoſe Perſons, and the Expreſſion of weakening and betraying in themſelves, and enabling others to deſtroy the Conſtitution, are twelve Pages aſunder.

(3.) He mentions ſome, which he thinks do weaken and betray the Conſtitution, but has not ſaid any of them are Men of Characters and Stations.

In anſwer to theſe Gloſſes, I might ſay, that if this were meant, not of the higheſt Characters and Stations, nay though it were true too, the affirming this of them would be Criminal, and in the manner he does it, highly ſo. All ſubordinate Magiſtrates, of whatever Station, may be regularly complained of, and call'd to account; but the Meaneſt are not to be traduced and libell'd, nor the Government upon their Accounts.

But this I offer. The Words, if not reſtrained to thoſe of higheſt Characters and Stations, neither are they reſtrain'd to the loweſt; and, in Truth, ſtrike all, and ſo were intended, as other Parts ſhow.

It is no Excuſe, if he ſcandalizes Perſons of the higheſt Characters and Stations, that he does not ſcandalize them only.

It is no Excuſe, when he ſpeaks opprobriouſly, in general Terms, of Men of Characters and Stations, without diſtinguiſhing to his Auditory, to diſtinguiſh upon his Defence, and pretend he meant only ſome few of the meaner Sort; that is, that when he was ſpeaking of the Miſchief and Malignity of this Crime, and ſhowing how Great it was, his Aſſertion concerning Men of Characters and Stations in general, was meant only of thoſe, in whom the Miſchief and Malignity is leaſt.

No, it is a general Arraignment of the Government throughout, and as ſuch he muſt Anſwer for it. And to put this out of Doubt, he has told us, Page 26. in Scripture Words, That the Church's Adverſaries are chief.

For what he talks of ſeveral Senſes, in which he ſays he takes Falſe Brethen in the Sermon, 'tis not at all material in what Senſe he charges thoſe Perſons with Falſe Brotherhood, if in Conſequence thereof he charges them with betraying the Church, and empowering its Enemies to deſtroy it. The charging them with being Falſe Brethren, had been a Fault, as that is a Term of Reproach, which, with him, carries juſt as much Malignity as he pleaſes, even to ſomething analogous to the Sin againſt the Holy Ghoſt, and rendring them the worſt of Dæmons. But the Streſs of this Accuſation, is the Treachery they are charged with as Falſe Brethren.

2. In the next Place, therefore, he denies that Part of the Charge; and for this ſhrewd Reaſon, that the Two Expreſſions are Twelve Pages aſunder: An Anſwer I admire to ſee put in upon ſo ſolemn an Occaſion! As though the Falſe Brotherhood he ſhows the Danger of, and the Falſe Brotherhood he ſhows the Malignity of, had no Relation to one another, becauſe Twelve Pages aſunder.

3. He mentions ſome that he affirms to be Weakeners and Betrayers, &c. but ſays he does not ſuggeſt thoſe to be Men of Characters and Stations. All the Inference to be drawn from that, is, either that there are, beſides thoſe, ſome other Weakners and Betrayers, that are Men of Characters and Stations; or that ſome of thoſe are Men of Characters and Stations, though he have not ſaid ſo; which is no Excuſe for him. For though he have not deſcrib'd every Sort of Weakner or Betrayer; and though he have not told us which Sort of Weakner or Betrayer he ranks the Men of Characters and Stations under; yet he has in general charg'd Men of Characters and Stations with Falſe Brotherhood, and as Falſe Brethren to be Weakners and Betrayers, &c.

IN the next Place, I would lay before your Lordſhips the Proof of the Third Clauſe of this Article, which ſays, That Dr. Sacheverell charges Her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under Her, with a general Male-Adminiſtration. Every Part of the Sermon makes out this, repreſenting the whole Nation in the utmoſt Diſorder and Confuſion, and the Magiſtrates, inſtead of applying a Remedy, rather increaſing the Diſtemper.

Page the 14th is a very home and a direct Charge upon the Government. It comes under that Part of the Sermon, where he is deſcribing Falſe Brethren with Relation to the State, And when he has declared very largely what they do, and what they hold; he goes then to what they are ſuffer'd to do: He ſays, "Theſe Falſe Brethren in our Government "do not ſingly, in private, ſpread their Poiſon; but "(what is lamentable to be ſpoken) are ſuffer'd to "combine into Bodies and Seminaries, wherein A-"theiſm, Deiſm, Tritheiſm, Socinianiſm, with all "the Helliſh Principles of Fanaticiſm, Regicide "and Anarchy, are openly profeſs'd and taught, to "corrupt and debauch the Youth of the Nation in "all Parts of it, down to Poſterity, to the preſent "Reproach and future Extirpation of our Laws and "Religion.

The ſuffering theſe Things is a direct Charge upon the Adminiſtration; and he in Effect declares it ſo, when he concludes, that this is to the Reproach of our Laws and Religion; that is, of thoſe that do not mend, or do not execute the Law: And he brings it home to the firſt Clauſe, when he declares the Conſequence to be the Extirpation of our Laws and Religion.

The Paſſage I before read, Page 22. concerning Perſons of Characters and Stations, likewiſe proves this: For, what can be a greater Charge upon the Adminiſtration, than to accuſe the Miniſtry of putting into publick Stations Falſe Brethren, that betray the Church, and empower others to deſtroy it? That the Expreſſion there is ſo general, as to reach all in publick Stations, I have before obſerv'd; and that it is ſo meant, may be thus made plain. In the ſame Paſſage he is apprehenſive that thoſe Perſons Behaviour ſhould give Occaſion for believing Religion to be but State-Craft; that is, a Stratagem us'd by the State to ſerve its own Ends: "That the "Doctrines of the Church lie not ſo much in its Ar-"ticles, as its Honours and Revenues"; which Honours and moſt tempting Revenues are in the Hands of the Crown, and thoſe that are byaſs'd by them, muſt be byaſs'd by the Crown and the Adminiſtration.

" traying his own Party for the little ſordid Lucre of " Place or Preferment ". Here is a plain Repreſentation of a Villain, ſelling his Conſcience; the Price is Place or Preferment, the Buyer that pays him that Price, muſt have the Diſpoſal of thoſe Places and Preferments; ſo that, thoſe Falſe Brethren are not only ſuffer'd, but made ſuch by the Adminiſtration.

That the Falſe Brethren, which he mentions, as put into Places, are put in by our Governors, he plainly ſuggeſts, Page 18. when he bids the Governors conſider whether they are fit to be entruſted, eſpecially with the Guardianſhip of our Church and Crown: For to what Purpoſe is that qualified Admonition, if the Governors put ſuch Perſons into no Places at all? Admonitions to Temporal Governors, with reſpect to meer Matters of Government, tend only to affront 'em, if preſent, but can have no other Effect, when they are abſent.

Let the Preface to the Derby Sermon, without any Obſervation or Comment upon it, conclude this Head: " Now when the Principles and Intereſts of " our Church and Conſtitution are ſo ſhamefully " betray'd and run down, it can be no little Com- " fort to all thoſe, who wiſh their Welfare and " Security, to ſee, that notwithſtanding the ſecret " Malice and open Violence they are Perſecuted " with, there are ſtill to be found ſuch worthy " Patrons of both, who dare own and defend them " as well againſt the rude and preſumptuous In- " ſults of the one Side, as the baſe undermining " Treachery of the other ". For I omit to repeat what has been obſerv'd upon the Third Article, or upon the former Clauſe ſpoke to by my ſelf.

I RETURN now to the firſt Clauſe of this Article, which runs thus: " That he ſuggeſts that " Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Church and " State, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitu- " tion.

This is made out from what has been ſaid on the other Two; for, if Men of Characters and Stations in Church and State, that betray our Conſtitution, and encourage and enable others to deſtroy it, come into their Places through the Adminiſtration; if the general Male-Adminiſtration of Her Majeſty and thoſe in Authority under Her, conſiſt in Part, in Preferring and Encouraging, at leaſt not Diſcouraging thoſe Perſons that betray and deſtroy the Conſtitution; the neceſſary Conſequence is, that all thoſe fatal Miſchiefs complain'd of ariſe from the Adminiſtration, which therefore plainly tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution.

Beſides, having involv'd all thoſe, in this Deſcription of Falſe Brotherhood, who defend Toleration; and having declar'd the Church's Adverſaries Chief: Conſidering who is Chief, and what Promiſes have been made for Continuance of the Toleration; his Inſolence ought to be treated rather with Indignation and Contempt, and a juſt Puniſhment, than vouchſaf'd an Anſwer.

As to the next Clauſe; " And as a Publick Incen- " diary, he perſuades Her Majeſty's Subjects to " keep up a Diſtinction of Factions and Parties, in- " ſtills groundleſs Jealouſies, and foments deſtru- " ctive Diviſions among them, and excites and ſtirs " them up to Arms and Violence "; 'tis ſufficient in ſhort to ſay this:

What he advances againſt the Foundation of the preſent Eſtabliſhment, and againſt the Adminiſtration, is as an Incendiary.

That he perſuades Men to keep up Diſtinctions, and inſtills groundleſs Fears and Jealouſies among them, is plain, from the Drift of all he ſays; from his Language of Forſaking old Friends and Principles, Betraying their Party, which he makes to be the great Crime of thoſe in Places, and goes to ſhew the Folly of it, pag. 23.

And though he pretends, in his Anſwer, that he invites Schiſmaticks into the Church, it is only on thoſe Terms, that they comply with his Notions to a Tittle: He makes no Allowance for Human Frailty, for Prejudice or Ignorance, and in ſome Inſtances expreſly diſallows 'em; and thoſe who are ſo weak as to fancy the Church in any Particular not to be in the right, though in all others they would ſincerely and conſtantly conform to it, even they muſt continue Schiſmaticks ſtill: If, with theſe miſtaken Opinions, they Communicate with the Church, they are Falſe Brethren, and as ſuch to be abhorr'd: And yet if they do not, they are not to be Tolerated.

Nay, whoever has ſo much Compaſſion for ſuch a Caſe, as to think it might be Tolerated, is a falſe Brother too, as defending Toleration, which is giving up one Point of the Diſcipline of the Church, and encouraging Schiſm.

For, though he ſeems in Words to approve of an Indulgence to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous, yet in Reality he approves none; ſince he admits not any one to have a Conſcience truly ſcrupulous that differs from him, but all ſuch are Falſe Brethren, Villains, and to be ſtigmatiz'd with all the other Names of Reproach he is ſo liberal of.

As to Fears and Jealouſies, thoſe are naturally produc'd by theſe Repreſentations of the Dangers the Church and Conſtitution are in; and as thoſe Dangers are meerly imaginary, thoſe Fears and Jealouſies are groundleſs.

As to his inciting Her Majeſty's Subjects to Arms and Violence, that he does it, is moſt manifeſt.

The ſpreading among the People ſuch hideous Repreſentations of an evil Government, ſuch Outcries of the Church and true Religion being undermin'd, betray'd and expos'd by thoſe in the Adminiſtration, naturally tend to Rebellion. And therefore at Common-Law, as we find it expreſs'd in our Law-Books, to * bear the People in Hand (I give the very Words) that the King's Government was erroneous, heretical or unjuſt, whereby the manner of the Government was Arraign'd or Impeach'd, was High Treaſon.

The Paſſion, Heat and Violence in this Sermon preach'd in publick, could be intended for nothing elſe but to raiſe the Paſſions of thoſe that heard it.

The People are call'd upon to put on Reſolution and Courage; they are aſſur'd the Cauſe at preſent requires the braveſt Reſolutions; he exhorts them to contend earneſtly for the Faith; having elſewhere ſhewn againſt whom, againſt Falſe Brethren, againſt the Enemies he had deſcrib'd, ſuch as have Places and Preferments, are Men of Characters and Stations; ſuch as are Chief and at preſent proſper, and denounces Woe againſt the fearful Heart and faint Hands.

The Expreſſion of ſtanding by Her Majeſty with Lives and Fortunes, and of Sacrificing them in Her Service, being now become a familiar Phraſe, for aſſiſting Her in War, thoſe Expreſſions are affected.

* In William's Caſe in 2 Rolls Reports, pag. 89, 90.

In

In the Dedication of the Derby Sermon he extols thoſe, who are for maintaining what he calls forſaken Truth, with their Lives and Fortunes.

And in the Sermon at St. Paul's, pag. 9, 10. the Readineſs to Sacrifice Lives and Eſtates in Vindication of the Church, is repreſented as ſo Noble a Reſolution, that in Compariſon to that, Obedience to her Precepts, that is, a good Life, is but as the one thing neceſſary in the Goſpel, only an extraordinary pitch of Perfection, only as the ſelling all his Goods, and giving the Price to the Poor, was to an exact Obſervance of the whole Moral Law.

But in the Dedication of the St. Paul's Sermon he ſeems to avow this Deſign; he pretends not his Sermon to be Chriſtianity, but owns it to be Politicks, not preaching Peace, but ſounding a Trumpet. For he ſtates the Objection, that the Pulpit is not a Place for Politicks, and that 'tis the Buſineſs of a Clergyman to preach Peace, and not to ſound a Trumpet, What's his Anſwer? Does he deny the Objection to extend to himſelf? No, he admits it, and juſtifies it by Pretence of a Divine Command, and treats the Maxim laid down in the Objection with Scorn, as contrary to the expreſs Word of God.

In his Anſwer to this laſt Part of this Clauſe, he ſeems firſt to repreſent it as inconſiſtent with his Poſition of the utter Illegallity of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power on any Pretence whatſoever, and with his Profeſſions of Loyalty to Her Majeſty; and then attempts to confute it (as his Expreſſion is) by a Paſſage in the Derby Sermon.

As for the latter, I think it rather a Juſtification of the Charge; for the Paſſage aſſerts, That every Man has, by God and Nature, a Commiſſion to ENGAGE the Enemies of the Conſtitution; that is, (as he has painted 'em) the Queen and Her Miniſtry.

The other is founded on a Suppoſition that he is never inconſiſtent, a very civil Compliment to himſelf, but as it happens, very falſe.

But to conſider this Part of the Anſwer a little more particularly. As he has here manag'd the Matter, I own there is in this Particular no Inconſiſtency. We ſay, he has ſtirr'd up Her Majeſty's Subjects to Arms and Violence: He ſays, he has declar'd all Reſiſtance unlawful; yes —— all Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power; but he has never declar'd Reſiſtance to Her Majeſty unlawful. He maintains the utter Illegallity of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever to the Supreme Power, but no where ſays, that in the Supreme Power he includes Her Majeſty, or that it is illegal to Reſiſt Her. The utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power upon any Pretence whatſoever, Her Majeſty's profeſſed Enemies will come into, and labour for; meaning only to condemn the Reſiſtance that was made againſt King James the Second, which brought about the Revolution, and any Reſiſtance that ſhall be made againſt the Pretender, whenever he comes; and Dr. Sacheverell goes no further.

Thoſe Enemies of Her Majeſty, have ever ſince the Revolution, made it their Buſineſs, to blacken it, to raiſe Scruples in People's Minds about it, and to make the Adminiſtration odious: The ſame Methods are advanc'd by Dr. Sacheverell into the Pulpit; and if thoſe Methods are to appear in the greateſt Aſſemblies, on the moſt ſolemn Occaſions; if the Revolution muſt be attack'd on a Day when Her Majeſty has appointed it to be Commemorated; if Her Majeſty's Reign is to be arraign'd in Publick, and an Appeal made to the Paſſions of the People; let it be attended with what Profeſſions it will, it equally ſtrikes at Her Majeſty and the Eſtabliſhment; and the Commons could not but think themſelves oblig'd, in Duty and Gratitude to Her Majeſty, and in Juſtice to the whole Nation, to call him that us'd 'em thus, to a publick Account; And let this Gentleman commend his own Loyalty, as much as he pleaſes, 'tis plain that in this Sermon he is doing the very ſame Work, and in the very ſame Method, with thoſe that diſown Allegiance to Her Majeſty.

My Lords, Permit me to obſerve a little his Management of this Text: Suppoſing the Doctor to be right as to his Doctrine, and that he believes himſelf to be ſo; and that he is ſincere in his Profeſſions of Loyalty to the Queen. For I am not now going to diſpute or limit the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, which was the Buſineſs of thoſe Gentlemen that ſpoke to the firſt Article.

By Falſe Brethren in the Text of this Sermon were meant, thoſe who pretended to be Chriſtians, but really were not. Dr. Sacheverell ſeems ſo to underſtand it; and therefore to declare thoſe to be Falſe Brethren in the CHURCH, that pretend to be of the Communion of the Church of England, but are not; that live in its Communion, but own not its Doctrines and Authority. By like Analogy, Falſe Brethren in the STATE are ſuch, that perhaps ſwallow the Oaths to the Queen; or if they go not ſo far, yet take the Benefit of Her Laws, Her Courts, Her Protection, yet deny Her Allegiance, and are for another Prince. A juſt and well-managed Reproof of theſe had been a noble Topick for one that pretends all this Zeal for the Queen. But they are wholly paſs'd by, they are not to be blam'd, there's no Danger from them either to Church or State. Who then, according to the Doctor, are Falſe Brethren in the State? (He was hard put to it to ſubſtitute ſome others in their Place.) They muſt be only thoſe who one Way or other oppoſe the Doctrine of Non Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever, whom he deſcribes in ſeveral invidious Inſtances, and in all poſſible Terms of Reproach. This ſeems ſtrange.

1. This being, as he ſtates it, an Error in a Doctrine of the Church, the holding it is only one Branch, one Inſtance of Falſe Brotherhood in the CHURCH; and therefore not ſo proper to ſtand for a diſtinct Head of Falſe Brethren in the STATE.

2. The bare denying or not believing the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, ſuppoſing it true, does not denominate a Man a Falſe Brother in the STATE.

Suppoſe then a Man own the Queen's Title, be ſatisfied with Her Adminiſtration, in Love with Her Reign, convinc'd that ſhe has principally at Heart his Intereſt, and the true Intereſt of all Her Subjects; believes that upon the Continuance and Quiet of Her Government depends the Preſervation of our Liberties, and thoſe of all Europe, and accordingly obeys and ſerves Her with Sincerity and Zeal, and thinks all Reſiſtance to Her utterly unlawful; is this Man a Falſe Brother in State, a Rebel, a Traitor, becauſe he thinks Reſiſtance was lawful at the Revolution, and may be ſo whenever the ſame Breaches of the Conſtitution are repeated?

Is he a Rebel to THIS QUEEN, becauſe there poſſibly may happen a Caſe, wherein he may reſiſt another Prince, if that Prince ſhould do what he's ſure SHE never will?

At moſt, that Miſtake only expoſes ſuch a Perſon more eaſily to be miſ-led: He may be in more

Danger

Danger of becoming a Rebel to a Prince, he ſhall be diſſatisfied with, but is not therefore a Rebel to a Queen he loves.

How then comes this ſingle Inſtance of Falſe Brotherhood in State to be inſiſted on, which at moſt ſhows, not that the Perſon is, but only that perhaps he may become a Falſe Brother; and thoſe Inſtances paſs'd over, where Perſons plainly are Falſe Brethren in State?

Further, This Doctrine being, as the Doctor ſays, a fundamental Doctrine in State, urg'd with Warmth and Vehemence, one would expect ſome Inference to be drawn from it: One would expect that he, who had ſo great a Zeal as the Doctor profeſſes for Her Majeſty, and had ſo triumphantly eſtabliſh'd abſolute Non-Reſiſtance, would have fallen in ſo far with the Buſineſs of the Day, and have made ſo much uſe of his Favourite Doctrine, as to diſſuade from Rebellion; and when he had taken Notice of theſe falſe Steps in the Adminiſtration, that he ſhould have perſuaded the People to make proper Applications for Redreſs, but to be careful not to let the Faults of the Miniſtry cauſe 'em to forget their Duty to the Queen. But there's not the leaſt Exhortation to that purpoſe.

All this ſeems ſtrange, taking it for granted that the Doctor is ſincerely zealous for the Queen.

Give me leave therefore to make another Suppoſition: Suppoſe this Zeal is but pretended to the Queen, but really for another, and that he thinks the other his rightful Prince; your Lordſhips will find, all conſiſtent, every Expreſſion, and the whole Procedure, exactly juſt.

In Conſequence of that concealed Sentiment, tho' he dare not directly commend thoſe who own the Pretender, yet neither will he reprove them as Falſe Brethren in the State; they being, according to this Opinion, the only Perſons who perform their Duty in it. Therefore the true Notion of Falſe Brotherhood muſt be dropt; and inſtead of it, they that hold Reſiſtance lawful in Caſes of Extremity, and particularly in that of the Revolution, are to be fallen upon; for they are really Rebels and Traytors in his Senſe, becauſe they directly overthrow all the Title which the Diſaffected here would fancy for the Pretender.

As long as the Revolution ſtands unimpeach'd, that Perſon can have no Title, let his Pretence be as favourable as he pleaſes: If the Revolution ſtand, the Laws which are founded upon it ſtand too, and thoſe Laws concerning the Right and Succeſſion of the Crown, are abſolutely binding; and therefore whatever Right he could wiſh People to believe him to have, all that Right, all that Pretence of Right, is as effectually barr'd, as all the Right which thoſe who ſtand in the Courſe of Deſcent before the Princeſs Sophia of Hanover would have had but for the Act of Settlement, will be bound, whenever God, for our Sins, ſhall take from us Her Majeſty, without Iſſue.

This Principle therefore is fundamental to the Pretender; and, taking the Matter thus, accounts for all that Rage againſt thoſe that diſpute this Doctrine, as extended to the Caſe of the Revolution, for his ſo often repeating this to be the Baſis, the fundamental Principle of the Conſtitution.

This ſhows clearly, why neither in the Sermon, nor Defence, he has once maintain'd the Illegality of Reſiſtance to Her Majeſty.

This ſhows, why this fundamental Principle is totally forgot to be preſs'd by him upon the People; no Inference from it, that thoſe Miſmanagements ought not to make them forget their Duty to the Queen; not one Perſwaſive to Obedience to Her; not one Admonition againſt the Conſequence of Falſe Brotherhood in the State, that it was apt to make People rebel; no cooling the People, with telling 'em That Prayers and Tears were the only Arms of the Church; that they ought to do their own Duty, ſubmit wholly to the Queen, and thoſe in Authority under Her, and leave the reſt to God. Theſe were the natural Conſequences of this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, ſo violently contended for, but not one of them purſu'd or mention'd.

And perhaps this made him chuſe to deſcribe the Caſe of our Church, P. 26, in the Words of the Prophet in the Lamentations, which are in ch. 1. ver. 4, 5. (tho' not truly cited in his printed Sermons;) The Ways of Sion mourn for a time, and her Gates are deſolate, her Prieſts ſigh, and ſhe in Bitterneſs, becauſe her Adverſaries are chief, and her Enemies AT PRESENT proſper.

My Lords, That Book was wrote juſt after Nebuchadnezzar's taking Jeruſalem; and the Condition of the Jews then, which is thought proper by him to give an Image of ours now, was this:

They were inſlav'd, their King in a Foreign Country, ſtripp'd of his Crown, and the Prince then Reigning was an Oppreſſor, that had no other Title, but Poſſeſſion and Force.

Thus has the Doctor, out of his tender Concern for Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, thought fit to expreſs his Sentiments.

THE laſt Part of this Charge is that of Wreſting and Perverting divers Texts and Paſſages of Holy Scripture. This may not perhaps ſeem ſo proper for me to ſpeak to, but being part of my Province, I ſhall apply to it without any Apology.

My Lords, As wicked and corrupt as Doctor Sacheverell would repreſent this Nation, he very well knew, that the Holy Scriptures are had in that juſt Veneration and Regard, that whatever is cited thence has a particular Influence upon the Minds of the People; whatever Story can be brought thence as a Parallel, whatever Expreſſions taken thence are made uſe of, to paint the Beauty, the Deformity, the Dangers of the Preacher's Subject, give a ſtrong Impreſſion, fire the Zeal of the People, alarm their Paſſions, and make 'em fancy they hear the Voice of God, when they hear His Words repeated.

This the Doctor knew, and your Lordſhips will ſee what uſe he makes of it.

When he ſpeaks of the Perils of the Church, which Her Majeſty, your Lordſhips, and the Commons, could not ſee, the Scripture is to be ſearch'd for a Story, that may be brought to match the Caſe, and to give an opportunity, under other Names, to ſpeak a bold Falſhood concerning all theſe.

It happens, there is one remarkable Story in the Holy Scripture about a Miſtake of Danger, but unfortunately it ſuits not the Caſe, as told there, however it gives a Handle, and he can make from it a Story to his Purpoſe.

Accordingly he ſays, pag. 21. "When Eliſha the "great Prophet of God was ſurrounded with an "Hoſt of Enemies that fought for his Life, his "Blind Servant beheld not the Peril his Maſter "was in, 'till his Eyes were opened by a Miracle, "and he found himſelf in the midſt of Horſes and "Chariots of Fire.

This

This Story thus told is extremely happy for him; for hence the People are to underſtand him to be the Inſpired Prophet; and the Queen, Lords, and Commons, blind at leaſt, tho' not his Servants.

But the Story in Holy Writ is directly contrary; and it was only the blind Servant fancied they were in Danger, when really they were not.

The Story is in 2 Kings, Chap. vi. and, as told there, is thus: The King of Syria, at War with Iſrael, being inform'd, that what he ſaid in his Bed-Chamber was told to the King of Iſrael by Eliſha the Prophet, reſolved to ſeize Eliſha; and hearing he was at Dothan, Ver. 14. (I now give your Lordſhips the very Words) He ſent thither Horſes and Chariots, and a great Hoſt, and they came by Night, and compaſs'd the City about. Ver. 15. And when the Servant of the Man of God was riſen early, and gone forth, behold an Hoſt compaſs'd the City both with Horſes and Chariots: And his Servant ſaid unto him, Alas, my Maſter, how ſhall we do? [This is the blind Servant, that the Doctor ſays, ſaw no Danger.] Ver. 16. And he anſwer'd, Fear not, for they that be with us are more than they that be with them. Ver. 17. And Eliſha pray'd, and ſaid, Lord, I pray thee open his Eyes, that he may ſee. And the Lord open'd the Eyes of the young Man, and he ſaw; and behold the Mountain was full of Horſes and Chariots of Fire. The Doctor's Expoſition is, That this Heavenly Guard, theſe Horſes and Chariots of Fire, which were there only to defend the Prophet, were to deſtroy him; and from them ariſes the Danger, which the Doctor fancies the miraculous Opening the Servant's Eyes diſclos'd to him.

I think I may give the Doctor his Choice, what this proceeded from, whether from his not knowing this Paſſage, but taking it upon Hearſay, or his Reſolution knowingly to pervert it.

The next Paſſage is, Pag. 26. the Words of St. Paul, Eph. vi. with which, after a Diſcourſe where all the ſocial and good-natur'd Virtues are taught in the higheſt Perfection; where he had recommended, Chap. 4. Ver. 2. Lowlineſs, Meekneſs, Long-ſuffering, forbearing one another in Love; endeavouring to keep the Unity of the Spirit in the Bond of Peace: Where he had commanded, v. 31. that all Bitterneſs, and Wrath, and Anger, and Clamour, and Evil-ſpeaking be put away, with all Malice: And Ver. 32. that thoſe to whom he writes, ſhould be tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Chriſt's Sake had forgiven them: Ver. 37. That had forbidden giving place to the Devil, but not to any other. The Apoſtle concludes, that in this Spiritual Warfare, and that they might be able to withſtand the Wiles of the Devil, they ſhould put on the whole Armour of God; becauſe they wreſtled not againſt Fleſh and Blood; but againſt Principalities, againſt Powers, againſt the Rulers of the Darkneſs of this World, againſt Spiritual Wickedneſs in High Places.

This Gentleman, after a Diſcourſe full of Bitterneſs, Reviling, Wrath, Clamour and Evil-ſpeaking, forbearing no Man in Love, nor forgiving any that differs from him one Tittle; and having ſhown other Devils incarnate, (Pag. 23, 25.) the worſt of Dæmons, other Powers, others in Places and Stations, againſt whom his Auditors were to contend earneſtly; repeats thoſe Words, not in the Spiritual Senſe the Apoſtle us'd 'em, but (as the whole Subject and Drift of his Diſcourſe ſhows) as an odious Deſcription of the Government, in Scripture Words: And whether he meant the Armour in the Apoſtle's Spiritual Senſe, any more than any of the other Words there, or whether he intended it a Literal Earthly Armour, which the Cauſe would make the Armour of God, I leave to your Lordſhips to determine. However, 'tis no Defence for him, what he ſays, That the Arms of Reſiſtance to Princes, is no Part of the Spiritual Armour recommended by St. Paul; becauſe he has plainly departed from St. Paul's Spiritual Meaning.

And that this is his Meaning, to paint here our preſent Circumſtances in Scripture Language, is further plain from what follows; That the Church is bleeding of the Wounds which ſhe has received in the Houſe of her Friends; borrow'd from Zech. 13. Ver. 6. That the Ways of Sion may mourn for a Time, and her Gates be deſolate; tho' her Prieſts ſigh, and ſhe in Bitterneſs, becauſe her Adverſaries are Chief, and her Enemies AT PRESENT proſper. I have before obſerv'd, from what Circumſtance of the Jews this Image is borrow'd; and your Lordſhips will take notice, what Changes in the Expreſſions he has made, to render them more Emphatical.

My Lords, There can be no greater Perverting of Scripture, than to make uſe of the Language of the Holy Ghoſt, to revile our Neighbours, to ſcandalize the Government, and to raiſe Wrath, Sedition, and Rebellion in the People.

The laſt I ſhall mention, is that in the Dedication of the St. Paul's Sermon; where propoſing it as an Objection, that it is the Buſineſs of a Clergyman to preach Peace, and not to ſound a Trumpet in Sion; he affirms that to be expreſly contrary to the Command of God; and to prove that Command, cites thoſe Words, Cry aloud, and ſpare not, which are in Iſa. 58. 1.

My Lords, This I apprehend to be not only Perverting, but that to Men of Underſtanding it will ſeem Ridiculing Scripture. To infer, that becauſe they were to ſpeak loud, they were to ſound a Trumpet, ſeems ridiculous.

Or if he had cited the reſt of the Words, Cry aloud, and ſpare not; lift up thy Voice like a Trumpet, and ſhew my People their Tranſgreſſion, and the Houſe of Jacob their Sins; he had indeed found the Word Trumpet, but little to his Purpoſe: For becauſe the Prophet was to imitate a Trumpet in the Loudneſs, that the People might hear; was he to imitate it too, as it is an Inſtrument of War, that they might prepare themſelves for Battel? Becauſe he was loudly to tell 'em their own Sins, that they might repent; was he likewiſe to trumpet to 'em the Faults of the Government, that they might take up Arms, and redreſs 'em by Rebellion?

If he find any other Place in the Old Teſtament, to command the Prieſts to ſound a Trumpet, I ſhall refer him to the 10th of Exodus, where he'll find the Prieſts were literally to ſound the Silver Trumpets in the Army, in the Field; but he'll not find, they ever ſounded it from the Pulpit.

My Lords, I ſhall offer nothing further to your Lordſhips on this Head, tho' there is Room for it.

But there are Two Things in the Anſwer to this Article, I cannot omit taking Notice of.

The firſt is in his Anſwer to the firſt Part of this Article, that charges him with Suggeſting, That Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, in Church and State, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution; where he takes great Comfort, that in this Article he is charg'd not with Suggeſting and Maintaining, but Suggeſt-

Suggeſting only ; and hopes that bare Suggeſtions, or Inſinuations, ſhall not involve an Engliſh Subject in the Guilt and Puniſhment of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. I don't envy him his Comfort, nor ſhall labour to take it from him, tho' it ſeems ſtrangely founded : For tho' it is expreſly ſaid, that he charges Her Majeſty with a General Male-Adminiſtration ; tho' the Accuſation be poſitive, that as a Publick Incendiary, he perſuades the Subjects to keep up Parties, foments Diviſions amongſt them, and ſtirs them up to Arms and Violence, and perverts divers Texts of Scripture ; notwithſtanding all theſe poſitive Charges, yet the firſt Expreſſion happening to be only, Suggeſt, and not, Maintain, it ſeems, he is very happy in it.

But, my Lords, this is an extraordinary Step ; that let a Man caſt never ſo many Scandals and Reproaches on the Government, tho' in never ſo publick a Manner, yet if it be done by way of Suggeſtion and Inſinuation, and the Charges not expreſly maintain'd and avow'd, there is no Crime in it, or not any high one. That is, in ſhort, Sedition, and Expoſing the Government, is lawful ; only the Manner is to be taken care of. Don't do it directly and avowedly, for that would be dangerous ; but do it by Suggeſtions that every body will underſtand, and which will have their full Effect, and all's ſafe : For thoſe that come to judge you, are not to underſtand you, tho' every body elſe does.

My Lords, Here are Two Extraordinary Claims of Right before your Lordſhips, and of great Conſequence, if you allow 'em ; one, that the Clergy may ſound a Trumpet in Sion, in a Military Senſe, and are not to be reſtrain'd to the Preaching of Peace ; the other, that every Engliſhman is at Liberty to aſperſe the Government at Pleaſure, by whatever Suggeſtions and Inſinuations he pleaſes ; and theſe made by a warm Advocate for Paſſive Obedience, the moſt peaceful and ſubmiſſive Doctrine in the World.

My Lords, In the Caſe de Libellis Famoſis, in the Fifth Report, there was a Proſecution for a Libel, not indeed ſet forth at large in the printed Book, (as was not fit) but thus far particularly taken notice of, that it traduc'd and ſcandaliz'd one Perſon dead, and him an Archbiſhop too, by Deſcriptions and Circumlocutions, and not in Expreſs Terms ; and no body ever doubted but it was Criminal. But tho' there ſhould be a greater Strictneſs obſerved in reſpect of private Perſons, yet when the Queen and Government are concern'd, when All lies at Stake, a Man ought to guard himſelf, and his Expreſſions, not to touch in the leaſt there : And every Man that's truly Loyal, and deſires the Peace of his Country, will do it. And knaviſh Deſigners againſt the Publick Peace, are not to be ſuffer'd to go on in overthrowing it, becauſe they have contriv'd crafty Ways of doing it.

I mention this only to oppoſe the preſent Claim ; tho' in our Caſe, the Reflections are plain and full.

The other is his Lamentation at the Cloſe, which I cannot but take notice of, as an inſolent Reflection on the Honour and Juſtice of the Houſe of Commons. " Hard is the Lot of the Miniſters of the " Goſpel, if when they cite the Word of God in " their General Exhortations to Piety and Virtue, " or in the Reproofs of Mens Tranſgreſſions, or " when they are lamenting the Difficulties and " Conflicts, with which the Church of Chriſt, " while Militant here on Earth, muſt always ſtrug- " gle, the ſeveral Texts and Paſſages by them ci- " ted, ſhall be ſaid to have been by them meant of " particular Perſons and Things, and ſhall be con- " ſider'd in the moſt Criminal Senſe, and be made " (by ſuch Conſtruction) one Ground of an Im- " peachment for High Crimes and Miſdemea- " nors.

My Lords, This was put into the Anſwer, not by way of Defence, but to make that Uſe which has been made of it, to print it before it came to be conſider'd, and lay hold of that as an Handle, as has been done, to ſay Dr. Sacheverell has been proſecuted only for doing his Duty as a Clergyman, which is a ſcandalous Reflection.

Is the Story of Eliſha, as told by him, an Honeſt Citation of a Paſſage of Scripture ?

Are Enemies that are Chief, and the Adverſaries that at preſent proſper, no particular Perſons now in being ; tho' to the Scripture Expreſſion he has added the Words, At Preſent, for fear the Application ſhould not be cloſe enough ?

Is this Sermon an Exhortation to Piety and Virtue ? Or is it not manifeſtly a Trumpet to Rebellion ? Is it a ſhewing the Audience their own Faults, that they may cure 'em, and amend their Lives ? Or is it not plainly the Expoſing the Faults of others, the Faults of their Governors, that they may hate the Perſons ?

Even the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, is it here ſo warmly contended for, that People may be dutiful and ſubmiſſive ; or that they may be enraged againſt thoſe that deny it ? In ſhort, Is there one Chriſtian Virtue taught in it ? Except your Lordſhips will honour with that Name the ſticking, not to the Church and Chriſtianity, but (according to the Doctor's own Expreſſion in another Place) to a Party ; and Courage, not only a Paſſive, (which he no where recommends) but an Active againſt the Government, to which the whole Diſcourſe incites.

My Lords, The Commons have the greateſt and juſteſt Veneration for the Clergy of the Church of England, who are Glorious thro' the whole Chriſtian World for their Preaching and Writing, for their Steadineſs to the Proteſtant Religion, when it was in the utmoſt Danger. They look upon the Order as a Body of Men, that are the Great Inſtruments, thro' whoſe Aſſiſtance, the Divine Providence conveys ineſtimable Advantages to us. They look upon the Church Eſtabliſh'd here, as the beſt and ſureſt Bulwark againſt Popery ; and that therefore all Reſpect and Encouragement is due to the Clergy : And it is with Regret and Trouble, that they find themſelves oblig'd to bring before your Lordſhips in this manner one of that Order.

But when we conſider Dr. Sacheverell, ſtripping himſelf of all the becoming Qualities proper for his Order, nay, of all that peaceful and charitable Temper which the Chriſtian Religion requires of all its Profeſſors, deſerting the Example of our Lord and Maſter, and of his Holy Apoſtles, and with Rancour and Uncharitableneſs branding all that differ from him, (tho thro' Ignorance) with the Titles of Hypocrites, Rebels, Traytors, Devils ; reviling them, expoſing them, conducting 'em to Hell, and leaving em there ; treating every Man that falls in his way, worſe than Michael the Arch-Angel us'd the Devil ; coming himſelf more near the Character in St. Jude, (Part of which he wou'd apply to others) deſpiſing Dominion, ſpeaking evil of Dignities ; like raging Waves of the Sea, foaming out his own Shame ; forgetting (when his Text and his Doctrine led to it) to recommend the Peace of his Country, in a Time when all Europe is in War, and nothing can preſerve us from falling into the Hands of the Grand Enemy and Oppreſſor, but our Unanimity under Her Majeſty: Then labouring to ſap the Eſtabliſhment, and railing and declaiming againſt the Government; crying, To Arms, and blowing a Trumpet in Sion, to engage his Country in Seditions and Tumults, and overthrow the Beſt Conſtitution, and betray the Beſt Queen that ever made a People happy; and this with Scripture in his Mouth!

The Commons look'd upon him by this Behaviour, to have ſever'd himſelf from all the reſt of the Clergy, and thought it their Duty to bring to Juſtice ſuch a Criminal; and are in no Fear of being thought Diſcouragers of thoſe who preach Virtue and Piety, becauſe they, in the Supreme Court of Juſtice, proſecute him that preaches Sedition and Rebellion; or to have any Deſign to leſſen the Reſpect and Honour that's due to the Clergy, by bringing him to Puniſhment that Diſgraces the Order.

Mr. Secretary Boyle. MY Lords, I am commanded by the Houſe of Commons to have a Share in Maintaining the Articles of Impeachment againſt Doctor Sacheverell; and it falls to my Lot to ſpeak to this Fourth Article, which contains no leſs a Charge than Endeavouring to Excite and Stir up Her Majeſty's Subjects to Arms and Violence.

The Ground of this Accuſation, is the Dedication of a Sermon Preach'd at Derby at the laſt Aſſizes; and another Sermon Preach'd at St. Paul's the Fifth of November laſt, a Day ſet apart to commemorate the Preſervation of the King and Parliament from the Gunpowder-Treaſon; and to give Thanks to Almighty God for the Deliverance wrought by his late Majeſty, in reſcuing theſe Kingdoms from Popery and Arbitrary Power.

The whole Nation doth now enjoy the Benefit of that Happy Revolution, and all the good Subjects of Her Majeſty are thankful for it. One would have thought, that on ſuch a Day, that Matter ſhould not have been ſo handled as only to be expos'd; and I am perſuaded, that whoever goes about to aſperſe and vilify the late Revolution, would rejoice to ſee another.

I ſhall not treſpaſs upon your Lordſhip's Patience ſo far, as to repeat the many Paſſages in the Sermon that make good our Accuſation, they having been ſo fully laid before your Lordſhips already by a Gentleman that ſpoke before: And indeed there is the leſs Reaſon to deſcend into Particulars, ſince the whole Scope and Deſign of the Sermon is to inſtill groundleſs Jealouſies into the Minds of People, and to caſt the moſt virulent Reflections imaginable upon Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration.

One might ſuppoſe, from the Doctor's Diſcourſe, that the Church of England was now ſuffering under the moſt ſevere Perſecution; that the Laws were no longer in Force; and that the whole Government was unhinged. Aſperſions more violent could not be uſed, if we lived in the Reign of the worſt of Heathen Emperors, while we are Partakers of ſo many Bleſſings under the Government of the beſt of Queens.

The Priſoner at the Bar lays ſome Streſs upon the Word Suggeſt, as expreſſed in the Fourth Article, which has already receiv'd an Anſwer; and would inſinuate that there are no plain Words in the Sermon to ſupport the Charge. But if that Objection were true, which we are far from admitting, and the Conſequences drawn from it were allowed, I muſt ſay, Hard would be the Caſe of the Government, if Men might make the moſt odious Suggeſtions againſt it, and caſt Reflections with Impunity, under the Shelter of ſome doubtful Expreſſions, and equivocal Sentences, at the ſame time that the Senſe and Malice of the Reflections are plain to be underſtood, and can hardly be miſtaken.

He doth indeed affect in his Anſwer, and in one Part of his Sermon, to profeſs great Duty to Her Majeſty; but let thoſe Expreſſions be compared with the Calumnies that are heaped upon her Adminiſtration, and I conceive they will not mitigate his Crime, and will avail him no more than the Pretence that he makes to be for Liberty of Conſcience, when he condemns the Toleration. I believe theſe Excuſes will equally weigh with your Lordſhips, and his Sincerity in both will equally appear.

My Lords, It is no new Thing among thoſe who deſign to ſtir up Sedition, to beſtow great Encomiums on the Perſon of the Prince; it has been a common Practice, and the ſame Method was purſu'd in the late unhappy Times. The Incendiaries of thoſe Days pretended that the Proteſtant Religion was in Danger under that Government, as the Enemies of our Conſtitution cry the Church is in Danger under this.

But, my Lords, every thing is in Danger from ſuch ſeditious Diſcourſes. What a Scene of Diſtraction and Wickedneſs is here diſplay'd to the Underſtandings of the People, to excite and inflame them to Sedition and Rebellion? Who can ſit ſtill, if they are perſuaded that the Altars and Sacraments of our Church are proſtituted to Hypocrites, Deiſts, Socinians and Atheiſts; and this done with Impunity, and without Diſcouragement? What can be more provoking to all good Chriſtians and good Subjects, than to be told that People are ſuffer'd to combine into Bodies and Seminaries, wherein Atheiſm, Deiſm, Tritheiſm, Socinianiſm, with all the Helliſh Principles of Fanaticiſm, Regicide, and Anarchy, are openly profeſſed and taught.

No Man can think he is long to enjoy his Religion, Liberties or Property, if he can be made to believe that the Foundations of the Church are undermin'd, and the Government endanger'd, by filling it with its profeſs'd Enemies. What is the Meaning of all this, but only to make out, that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution? And what muſt be the Conſequence of ſuch an Opinion inſtill'd into the Minds of the People, but black and melancholy Thoughts, ſeditious Practices, and at laſt open Force and Violence?

The Prieſts muſt cry aloud and ſpare not, they muſt blow the Trumpet in Sion; and we are told there are thoſe that have Lives and Fortunes to maintain ſuch Truths as Doctor Sacheverell has laid down. What thoſe Truths are, may be ſeen thro' the whole Courſe of the Sermon; they are ſuch, my Lords, as we apprehend do not at all tend to the ſtrengthning the preſent Government, tho' they may be ſerviceable towards ſetting up another.

This is not the Spirit of the Goſpel, nor agreeable to the Principles of the Church of England; and we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Judgment, whether this Sermon is not Seditious, and whether the Priſoner at the Bar is not guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer. MY Lords, I am commanded by the Commons of Great-Britain to bear my Part in the Management of the Impeachment againſt Doctor Henry Sacheverell, and particularly on this Article. My Lords, I believe, after what you have heard already, you will think there is little Need for me to ſay any thing on this Head; yet I ſhall take the Liberty to mention a few Particulars.

I cannot but take Notice, that in a Sermon Preach'd on a Day appointed to commemorate the Bleſſings we enjoy by the late happy Revolution, there is not one particular Clauſe to ſhow forth thoſe Bleſſings, or the Miſchiefs that were then likely to come upon us. There is a little, indeed, upon the Gunpowder-Treaſon; but upon the Revolution there is nothing, nor doth he take Notice of the Dangers we were in before it, in order to raiſe the Devotion of the People, and their Thanks to God for their Deliverance. But all the Tenor of his Diſcourſe is to ſhow the Male-Adminiſtration of the Government, and the Dangers that have been coming upon the Church ever ſince the Revolution; ſo that it is plain, that he had no Thoughts of the Bleſſings of that Deliverance, nor any Diſlike to the Conduct of thoſe Times.

My Lords, This Sermon was Preach'd in a Place well choſen to attempt Miſchief in. He well knew that if he could raiſe an evil Spirit in this great City, it would do more Miſchief than in another Place where he had often attempted it: But, God be thanked, he was diſappointed; and he own'd himſelf in another Place, that he did not expect the Thanks of the Court of Aldermen for it.

I ſhall take Notice of his Dedication, where he carries on the ſame Deſign, and owns it on Second Thoughts. He's not only warm in Preaching the Sermon; but in his Dedication he ſhows with what Spirit he compoſed it: He ſays, That if honeſt Gentlemen will ſit ſtill, and give up their Cauſe for want of Courage, or a juſt Senſe of the dangerous Attempts of our Enemies, without the Spirit of Prophecy we may foretell what will become of our Conſtitution, when it is ſo vigorouſly attack'd from without, and ſo lazily defended from within.

My Lords, I ſhall not explain the Meaning of thoſe Words, Sitting ſtill, and Want of Courage; but I cannot but take Notice of theſe Words, The vigorous Attack from without, and the lazy Defence from within. I would deſire to know who the Doctor takes to be the Defender of the Faith; and who under that Defender is to protect the Church? It muſt neceſſarily be meant as a Reflection on Her Majeſty, and upon thoſe that under Her Authority are to take Care of the Church. The next Paſſage is a plain Confeſſion of his Seditious Intentions. He tells us his Buſineſs was not to preach Peace, but to ſound the Trumpet. If a Miniſter will declare it, not to be his Duty to preach Peace, your Lordſhips will eaſily judge what his Intentions were.

I know it is the Buſineſs of thoſe that are Proſelites to this Gentleman, to give out that we deſign to narrow our Obedience to Her Majeſty. But, my Lords, we are far from it; and own the greateſt Duty and Submiſſion to our Sovereign: But we cannot bear, that a Reflection ſhould be caſt upon the Reſiſtance that was us'd at the Revolution; and we hope your Lordſhips will never admit a Queſtion to be rais'd of the Legality of it.

My Lords, The Acts of Settlement of the Crown depend upon that Legality: If that be illegal, the others in Conſequence are void; and tho' Her Majeſty has an Hereditary Right to the Crown, yet I take thoſe Acts to be Her great Security; and I can make no Queſtion, but that if the Foundations of thoſe Acts were ſhaken, the Doctor would ſoon find another Hereditary Right to reſort to.

My Lords, The Toleration is certainly grounded upon the beſt Principles, upon a Principle of Religion and a Principle of Policy. I think every Body will allow, that nothing can eſtabliſh Peace in a Kingdom ſo well, as the granting Eaſe and Quiet to Mens Conſciences. If they pay due Submiſſion to the Government, they ought not to be perſecuted for their Religion: It is for Her Majeſty's Intereſt and Honour. For how can Her Majeſty be the Head of the Proteſtant Intereſt abroad, if Proteſtants are not protected at home?

It was the Obſervation of the Lord Clarendon, in his Hiſtory, that ſome Eminent Clergymen preſs'd King Charles the Firſt to make Diſtinctions among Perſons; and that by their Advice, his Ambaſſador in France was order'd not to go to the Hugonot Churches there, as he us'd to do. He lays it as an Imputation on thoſe that gave the Advice; and makes this Remark, That it was with a Deſign of an Union with the Church of Rome; which prov'd of very ill Conſequence to his Affairs at that Time.

My Lords, We take it, that it is contrary to the Duty of any private Man to find Fault with a Law in Being, or to declaim againſt the Reaſonableneſs of the ſame; it is raiſing in the People an ill Opinion of the Lawgivers, and the Adminiſtration.

My Lords, There are ſome People, and I wiſh their Numbers do not increaſe, who will not allow the Church to be out of Danger, whilſt the Civil Magiſtrate has the Government of the Church. Theſe appear publickly, and in Print; they cancel the Queen's Supremacy, deny the Authority of the Laws, and erect a Church Independent on the Civil Government. Of this Church I take the Doctor to be, and very properly for his Purpoſe; for here he may thunder out his Bulls and Anathema's without Controul: Here is a Field for him to open his Commiſſion in, where he may ſound his Trumpet, and not preach Peace.

But, my Lords, the Commons can never admit the Church, as Eſtabliſhed by Law, to be in any Danger during Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; it being guarded by Her Majeſty's Piety and Care of it; by the Reverend Biſhops, who are ſo diligent and watchful in their Functions; and which will always have the utmoſt Aſſiſtance of the Commons and your Lordſhips, to ſupport and maintain. As for their Independent Church, I hope it will ever be in Danger; and cannot but think that wholeſome Severities were very proper to be apply'd to the Broachers of ſuch Seditious Doctrines; they are Popiſh Principles, and if they ſhould obtain here, would certainly bring in Popery along with them.

My Lords, I cannot conclude, without taking Notice of a very unjuſt Reflection made upon the Commons in the Doctor's Anſwer, wherein he charges them with Deſigning to reſtrain the Miniſters of the Goſpel from doing their Duty, in recommending Piety and Vertue to their Auditors. Theſe are Doctrines ſo proper to come from the Pulpit, that thoſe that recommend them, will always meet with the Countenance and Encouragement of the Houſe of Commons. But when a Clergyman acts contrary to his Function, and inſtead of reproving Vice and Immorality, takes upon him to reproach the Government; when inſtead of Preaching Peace, and Charity, and other Moral Vertues, he takes upon him to raiſe Jealouſies, foment Diviſions, and ſtir up Sedition, 'tis high time for the Juſtice of the Nation to put a Stop to it: As ſuch a Perſon, we charge Doctor Sacheverell, and think we have made good our Charge, and cannot doubt your Lordſhips Juſtice upon the Offender.

And then the Lords Adjourned to their Houſe above.

Thurſday, March 2. The Fourth Day.

THE Lords coming down into Weſtminſter-Hall, and being ſeated in the manner beforemention'd, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, ſave thee and thy Bail, elſe thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, you may proceed in your Evidence.

Mr. Lechmere. MY Lords, Your Lordſhips adjourned Yeſterday, when the Commons were proceeding on their Fourth Article, a Share of which Service was appointed to me: The Proofs, we inſiſt on, in Maintenance of this Part of our Charge, have been laid before you with great Exactneſs; and all the Enforcements they can well receive, have been already offer'd to you, by thoſe Gentlemen, that have gone before me; ſo that I find my ſelf acquitted from giving your Lordſhips much Trouble upon it.

The Charges contain'd in the precedent Articles, are particular and diſtinct; Of ſo high a Nature in themſelves, and of ſuch eminent Conſequence to Her Majeſty and Her Government, that we have held our ſelves obliged, to treat each of them, with all imaginable Clearneſs and Solemnity; and this, my Lords, from that true Zeal and neceſſary Concern, with which the Commons, upon this great Occaſion, are ſo juſtly inſpired, for the Honour of Her Majeſty, and the Proſperity of Her Kingdoms.

The Subject of this Article is laid down in General Poſitions, ſome of which are the Reſult and Conſequence of the former Articles; and this will make it neceſſary to remind your Lordſhips of the Paſſages produced in ſupport of them: The Application of them, to the ſeveral Branches of this Charge, is eaſy and obvious: The further Paſſages, that were Yeſterday pointed out to you, are many in number, and the Aſſertions poſitive, ſcarce liable to any Conſtructions more innocent in themſelves, or more favourable for the Priſoner, than what hath been put upon them: But tho' the more flagrant Parts of the Priſoner's Diſcourſes have been diſtinguiſh'd to you, your Lordſhips can't fail of diſcerning that implacable Enmity that runs through the whole: How little will your Lordſhips find in it of the Spirit of the Goſpel, of the Temper of a Chriſtian, or a good Subject, much leſs of a Meſſenger of Peace? No, my Lords, when the Heart is poiſoned, the Corruption will be diffuſed throughout; when Principles are delivered from the Pulpit, that ſtrike at the Root of the preſent Government, and our future Eſtabliſhment, and are taught as Fundamental Rules both of Law and Conſcience; what kind of Proofs, what Exhortations are to be expected from ſuch a Preacher? Surely, ſuch only, as you have heard from this Man, ſuch only, as may create univerſal Diſſatisfaction, will diſquiet the Minds, and tend to pervert the Obedience of the Subjects; ſuch only, as ſhall be moſt likely to cheriſh and cultivate thoſe Seeds of Sedition, which, when ſufficiently Propagated, and brought up to their full Growth, can terminate in nothing leſs than a Total Deſtruction.

My Lords,

I am now to acquaint you, That the Commons have gone through their Charge, wherein they have been heard by you with great Candour and Patience: And that imperfect View, which was the beſt I was able to give you, in opening the Charge, has been amply ſupply'd by the great Sufficiency of what has followed: And from thence, I think, I have good Grounds to ſay to your Lordſhips, that this Impeachment of the Commons in every part of it, is ſubſtantially and effectually maintain'd.

And now, my Lords, craving leave of the Doctor to borrow a Phraſe which ſtands at the Head of the laſt Paragraph of his Sermon, What is the Reſult of this Proceeding hitherto? In opening the Charge, we conſidered him in the Condition of a Perſon accus'd; but the Proofs having been produced, and the Evidence being unqueſtionable, even from his own Mouth, and by the Endeavours of other Gentlemen, to whoſe Provinces the ſeveral Tasks have fallen, the falſe Colours of his Diſcourſe being taken off, and his Scheme reduced to its true Conſiſtency, give me leave to repreſent him to your Lordſhip in a true Light, and in his proper Colours.

Your Lordſhips now ſee this Gentleman, under the Reign of the greateſt and beſt of Princes, that ever wore a Crown, whoſe Title to the Throne ſtands upon a more ſolid and indiſputable Foundation than that of any Prince upon Earth, guarded and defended by the beſt Laws in the World, and the entire Affection of all Her true Subjects, and which none can draw in queſtion with any other Deſign than to weaken its Support:

You ſee him, under an Eſtabliſhment and Conſtitution, excellently contrived and adapted to anſwer all the good Ends of Government, and which has withſtood the open Aſſaults of Arbitrary Princes, and the more crafty Attempts of Papal Encroachments; and which, ſince the true Religion was Eſtabliſhed among us, has been preſerved in deſpight of the dangerous Endeavours of Papiſts, by dividing Proteſtants, to make way for its Deſtruction: A Conſtitution, which happily recovered its ſelf at the Reſtoration, from the Confuſions and Diſorders which the horrid and deteſtable Proceedings of Faction and Uſurpation had thrown it into, and which after many Convulſions and Struggles, was providentially ſaved at the late happy Revolution; and by the many good Laws paſs'd ſince that time, ſtands now upon a firmer Foundation; Together with the moſt comfortable proſpect of Security to all Poſterity, by the Settlement of the Crown in the Proteſtant Line:

Your Lordſhips have found this Perſon, at a Time when the Church of England as by Law Eſtabliſhed is in perfect Proſperity and Safety at Home, and in higher Reputation abroad, than in any Age that has gone before it; At a time when the Nation enjoys Peace and Tranquillity, and all the good Effects of a prudent and ſucceſsful Adminiſtration, demonſtrated by the Harmony and Unanimous Endeavours of all Her Majeſty's true Subjects to ſupport it,

In the moſt ſolemn and publick Manner, levelling the moſt virulent Diſcourſe againſt Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown, and againſt our preſent Eſtabliſhment, and calculated to favour the Pretenſion of another.

Your Lordſhips find in it the ſame Principles reviv'd and avow'd in the ſame dangerous Extent by him, as in a late Reign by the profeſs'd Inſtruments of Popery and Arbitrary Power, and apply'd in Condemnation of the Glorious Work of the late Happy Revolution, which delivered us from them.

Your Lordſhips have found him Arraigning the Honour of Her Majeſty and Her Parliament, aſperſing Her Adminiſtration both in Church and State, and with all imaginable Ardour and Vehemence ſtirring up Sedition, and exhorting to Rebellion; and that in the Name of Almighty God, as a Perſon commiſſioned from Heaven to that End, and in the moſt prophane and proſtitute Manner abuſing and wreſting Scripture to thoſe Impious Purpoſes.

'Tis on thoſe Grounds, that the Commons have charg'd the Crimes to have been committed by him with an Intent to undermine Her Majeſty's Government, and to ſtir up Arms and Violence: And do your Lordſhips want further Evidence of this? Let us remind you of the Rebellion that has been rais'd, and that High-Treaſon that was commited, the laſt Night, by thoſe Perſons who abet the Priſoner!

I can't aggravate the Offence; your Lordſhips will duly conſider the Heighth and Quality of it, you will think of a Satisfaction ſuitable to that, and to the juſt Expectation of the Commons.

My Lords,

The Nature and Length of this Proceeding having occaſion'd many Interruptions, we are yet aſſur'd, that no Miſconſtruction will be permitted by your Lordſhips, of what may have fall'n from any of us. We likewiſe take Notice to your Lordſhips, that the Commons have very readily acquieſc'd in your Appointment of Council to aſſiſt the Priſoner. Your Lordſhips informed us in the beginning of the Cauſe, that you did this in great Benignity to him, in aſſigning him thoſe Council which he himſelf had ask'd, and doubtleſs ſuch as are according to his own Heart's Deſire: And the Commons are aſſur'd, that thoſe Gentlemen will underſtand that Regard which is due to the Nature of this Cauſe, and to the Dignity of a Proceeding wherein the Commons of Great Britain appear as Proſecutors.

The Commons conceive, they have Reaſon to take great Satisfaction from this Proceeding, whereby they have the Opportunity, in the moſt ſolemn Manner, before the moſt Auguſt Judicature in the World, to aſſert the Freedom and Excellency of our Government, and the Juſtice of the preſent Eſtabliſhment: This ſingle Conſideration ſhews your Lordſhips of what Malignity the Priſoner is capable, who has thus ſet himſelf to diſorder and deſtroy ſo happy and ſo beautiful a Conſtitution.

We deſire to put your Lordſhips in mind of thoſe Felicities, which in our Opinions, accompany this Proſecution; when we ſee ſo many of your Lordſhips the Judges of this Great Cauſe, who had ſo great a Share in that Deliverance which we are now called upon to vindicate; ſo many others of your Lordſhips, the Sons of thoſe Fathers, who joined in it; and who have the ſame Blood ſtill running in your Lordſhips Veins. And when we conſider that firm and ſteady Zeal which every one of your Lordſhips have ſhewn in Support of the preſent Settlement, what Doubt can we entertain of your moſt impartial Juſtice?

We further obſerve it, as the great Security of our Impeachment, That no Endeavours can prevail to prevent your Judgment upon it, nor any Means ſucceed to defeat its Effects.

And on t'other Hand, we have before our Eyes the many good Conſequences, which that Part which the Commons have taken on themſelves, will certainly produce; that Strength and Vigor 'twill add to the great Affairs of the Kingdom, and of all Europe, at this Critical Juncture, when the World ſhall ſee that the Commons of Great Britain, who have been ſo unanimous in Defence and Support of the Common Cauſe of Peace and Liberty Abroad, are thus zealous to find out and extirpate that Malignant Humour, which alone can endanger it at Home; that whilſt the Common Oppreſſor feels the Effects of Her Majeſty's Arms, the inteſtine Enemies of the Nation, and of Her Government, (in the Inſtance of the Priſoner) may ſee and conſider the Force and Weight of the higheſt Reſentment of the Commons.

Thoſe good Effects will receive yet greater Enforcements from your Lordſhips Judgment; which, when it becomes Publick, will be an effectual Confutation, or an unanſwerable Treatiſe againſt the peſtilent Doctrines advanced by the Priſoner.

The Firmneſs of your Proceedings will give the ſame Steadineſs and Vigor to all other Parts of the Adminiſtration, which will henceforward ſtrive to imitate your Lordſhips in ſo great an Example; and 'twill ſtrike due Terror on thoſe Minds, in which the ſame deſtructive Errors have taken Root.

And, my Lords, What Comfort and Peace muſt it bring to all Her Majeſty's faithful Subjects, to ſee Her Majeſty's undoubted Title, the Wiſdom of Her Adminiſtration, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, ſo effectually ſupported by your Lordſhips Judgment?

My Lords, We have thought it neceſſary, in Diſcharge of the great Truſt repoſed in us by the Commons, to go thorough the whole Charge together, that your Lordſhips might have it entire. I am now only to add, That they do reſerve to themſelves the Liberty of replying to what ſhall be offered on behalf of the Priſoner, and of every other Legal Advantage that ſhall ariſe to them in the Progreſs of their Impeachment.

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, Have you gone through the Charge?

Mr. Lechmere. My Lord, we have.

Lord Chancellor. Then you that are appointed Council for Doctor Sacheverell, may proceed to his Defence.

Sir Simon Harcourt. My Lords, There having been already three whole Days ſpent by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons in Maintenance of their their Charge; and this Day being ſo far ſpent, I am bound in Duty humbly to repreſent to your Lordſhips, that it will be impoſſible for us to go through the very firſt Article, ſo as to finiſh in any reaſonable Time. My Lords, We humbly expect your Lordſhips Commands.

Lords. Go on, go on.

Sir Simon Harcourt. My Lords, We muſt receive your Lordſhips Commands. We think it of great Importance to go through the firſt Article at once, if your Lordſhips pleaſe to give us Leave.

Then the Lords Adjourned to their Houſe above.

Friday, March 3. The Fifth Day.

THE Lords coming down into Weſtminſter-Hall, and being ſeated in the manner beforemention'd, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, ſave Thee and thy Bail, elſe thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, you that are Council for the Priſoner, may proceed to his Defence.

Sir Simon Harcourt. MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhips, I am Council for Doctor Sacheverell, who ſtands Impeached in the Name of all the Commons of Great-Britain of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. The Crimes ſuppoſed to have been committed by him are contain'd in Four Articles. I beg Leave to poſtpone the Three laſt, without mentioning any thing of them, 'till we have all concluded what we have to offer and lay before your Lordſhips, as to the ſeveral Charges contain'd in the Firſt; and endeavour'd to ſatisfy your Lordſhips, That notwithſtanding what has been objected by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons againſt the Doctor, in Maintenance of that Article, he is an innocent Man. The Firſt Article contains Three diſtinct Charges; we ſhall proceed on them as they lie in Order. The Firſt of them is, "That he ſuggeſts and maintains, that "the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the late "Happy Revolution were odious and unjuſtifiable." Your Lordſhips have been inform'd, that by this Expreſſion of, The Neceſſary Means, mention'd in the Firſt Article, the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons intend his late Majeſty's Glorious Enterprize for Delivering this Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power, and the Subjects of this Realm well affected to their Country, joining with, and aſſiſting him in that Enterprize. In a ſhorter Deſcription, it has been explain'd, that theſe Neceſſary Means were the Subjects Reſiſtance to their Unfortunate Prince then upon the Throne. Of this Reſiſtance the Doctor has made no Mention in his Sermon. He has, indeed, affirm'd the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever to the Supreme Power; but it can't be pretended, there was any ſuch Reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution. The Supreme Power in this Kingdom is the Legiſlative Power; and the Revolution took effect by the Lords and Commons concurring and aſſiſting in it. Whatever therefore the Doctor has aſſerted of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, his Aſſertion being applied to the Supreme Power, can't relate to any Reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution; and conſequently can't be an Affirmance, that ſuch Reſiſtance, or ſuch Neceſſary Means, were Odious and Unjuſtifiable. One of the Learned Gentlemen who ſpoke the Third Day of this Trial, in Maintenance of the laſt Article, concurr'd with me in this; and objected it to the Doctor, That he had guarded himſelf, by confining his Aſſertion to the Supreme Power; and that he had not avert'd the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Queen: But had he in expreſs Terms affirm'd the Unlawfulneſs of ſuch Reſiſtance, yet by the ſame Arguments which have been uſed, the Doctor would have been told, he had been preaching a ſlaviſh Doctrine. My Lords, another Gentleman of the Houſe of Commons (I think there were but two of them who took Notice of this Expreſſion of the Doctor's of the Supreme Power) obſerv'd, that the Doctor had aſſerted the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power on any Pretence whatſoever; which Power he admitted was the Legiſlative; and declar'd, if the Doctor had really meant that Power, he ſhould not have differ'd from him; and without doubt, your Lordſhips and all Perſons will concur with him in this, that 'tis utterly unlawful to reſiſt the Supreme Power. But that Gentleman being ſatisfy'd, that tho' the Doctor expreſly mention'd the Supreme Power, which is the Legiſlative, yet he certainly intended the Supreme Executive Power, concluded he was guilty of this Charge in the Firſt Article; and mention'd it as an Inſtance of the great Mercy and Lenity of the Houſe of Commons, that they had not proceeded againſt him for High-Treaſon, as a Parſon in one of the late Reigns was proſecuted for Words which he thought leſs offenſive and dangerous than this Aſſertion preached by Dr. Sacheverell. And yet that Gentleman was pleas'd to ſay, That had a Diſſenter, whoſe Affection to the Government was unſuſpected, expreſs'd himſelf as the Doctor did, the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons would not have thought fit to have proſecuted him. That Caſe which was alluded to, I take to be the Caſe of Mr. Roſwell, a Nonconformiſt Miniſter. He was indicted in the 36 Car. II. for Words ſpoke by him in a Sermon preach'd at a Meeting-Houſe. 'Twas a Proſecution carried on through the Violence of thoſe Times, and generally deteſted. He was convicted; but on cooler Thoughts, and Conſideration of the Uncertainty in his Expreſſions, that they could not amount to ſuch a Crime as he ſtood charged with, Judgment was Arreſted, and Mr. Roſwell was diſcharg'd. Another Learned Gentleman who open'd the Charge, was of Opinion, that the Doctor, in his Aſſertion of the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power, does really neither mean the Legiſlative nor Executive Power, but that he had the Pretender in his View. This is diving into the Secrets of his Heart, and ſearching into his Thoughts, which God only knows. This was urg'd, to avoid the ſtrange Inconſiſtency, in concluding, that the Doctor was endeavouring to undermine the Government, by Preaching up the utter Illegality of Reſiſting it.

My Lords, If there be a double Senſe, in either of which thoſe Words are equally capable of being underſtood; if in one Senſe the Doctor's Aſſertion be undeniably clear, but in the other ſome Doubt might might ariſe, whether his Words be Criminal or not, the Law of England is more merciful than to make any Man a Criminal, by conſtruing his Words againſt the natural Import of them, in the worſt Senſe. This is the great Juſtice and Clemency of our Law, in every Man's Caſe. But ſome Perſons are intitled to have a more favourable Conſtruction put on all their Words and Actions, than others are; ſuch as Perſons acting in the Execution of their Offices, in Obedience to Authority, or by a Commiſſion from the Crown; ſuch Perſons are look'd upon as under the immediate Protection and Care of the Law: How much more reaſonable is it, that Miniſters of the Goſpel, who have their Commiſſion from God, and ſpeak in the Name of God, ſhould have the moſt candid Interpretation made of whatever they ſay? This, I am perſuaded, was one of the chiefeſt Reaſons which in the Caſe of Mr. Roſwell allay'd the Rage of that Reign; and at that Time obtained Mercy for him, tho' a Nonconformiſt Miniſter under a Conviction of High-Treaſon. 'Tis a hard Fate attends this unhappy Gentleman, if he muſt inevitably lie under the Imputation of being thought an Enemy to the Revolution, and to our preſent happy Eſtabliſhment on that Foundation. What Evidence will your Lordſhips expect he ſhould produce to clear himſelf? He has ſhown his Submiſſion to the Revolution, from the firſt Moment his Years made him capable of doing ſo. He has given all the publick Teſtimonies of his Fidelity and Affection to the laſt Reign, as well as the preſent, which the Government has at any time required from the moſt ſuſpected Perſons. He has taken the Oath of Allegiance, ſigned the Aſſociation, and took the Abjuration. 'Tis a miſerable Caſe any Man is in, if after he has taken the Abjuration, the utmoſt which is required, he ſhall ſtill be told, he has indeed abjur'd the Pretender, but hath not yet forgot him. If neither the Inoffenſiveneſs of the Doctor's Behaviour, neither his Words, nor Oaths can ſatisfy; if after all theſe Demonſtrations the Doctor has given of his Fidelity, he is ſtill liable to be cenſured, What Satisfaction is it poſſible for him to give?

My Lords, If the Manner of this ſolemn Proſecution has not alter'd the Nature of Things, I hope I may inſiſt, without putting in a Claim of Right in behalf of all the factious and ſeditious People in the Kingdom to revile the Government at Pleaſure, That by the happy Conſtitution under which we live, a Subject of England is not to be made Criminal by a labour'd Conſtruction of doubtful Words; or when that can't ſerve, by departing from his Words, and reſorting to his Meaning. Too many Inſtances there were of this Nature before the late happy Revolution; but that put an End to ſuch Arbitrary Conſtructions.

I might trouble your Lordſhips on this Head with Multitudes of Authorities; but I ſhall mention only one: 'Tis an Authority of your Lordſhips, upon a Writ of Error, immediately after the Revolution; Sir Samuel Barnardiſton's Caſe; and I beg Leave to refer to your Lordſhips Journal, May 14, 1689. 'Twas that Gentleman's Misfortune to be called in Queſtion in the Reign of King Charles the Second (Hill. Term, 1683.) for writing ſome Letters ſuppoſed to be Seditious, and highly reflecting on the Government, and the publick Juſtice of the Nation at that Time. Upon his Tryal he was repreſented as a Seditious Man, and one of a turbulent Spirit; and being ſo painted by the Chief Juſtice who try'd him, tho' his Actions were inoffenſive; notwithſtanding his Innocence, a Verdict was obtain'd againſt him; and when he came to receive Judgment, not being look'd upon as an inconſiderable Man, not as a Tool of his Party, but as one of the Heads of it, a Fine of Ten Thouſand Pounds was ſet on him. I beg Leave to lay before your Lordſhips what you did in that Caſe. Your Lordſhips reverſed that Judgment; and as a Glorious Inſtance of your Juſtice, not contenting your ſelves with the Right you had done in the Caſe then before you, at the ſame time provided, as far as was poſſible, that no innocent Perſon, in After-Ages, might ſuffer Wrong. Your Lordſhips therefore, in an extraordinary Manner, order'd the Reaſons of your Judgment to be enter'd in your Journal, and they are enter'd in the following Words: "Firſt, "The Information in this Caſe being grounded up- "on Letters, which in themſelves were not Crimi- "nal, but made ſo by Innuendo's, your Lordſhips "declar'd, that Innuendo's, or ſuppos'd or forc'd "Conſtructions, ought not to be allow'd; for all "Accuſations ſhould be plain, and the Crimes aſ- "certain'd.". My Lords, I hope it's unneceſſary to my preſent Purpoſe, to read to you the Second Reaſon; but as it was another Inſtance of your Lordſhips Juſtice, which ought never to be forgot, I ſhall take the Liberty of doing it: It relates to the Fine of Ten thouſand Pounds. Tho' Sir Samuel Barnardiſton was a Gentleman of a very conſiderable Eſtate, your Lordſhips declar'd, "Secondly, That "this Fine of Ten thouſand Pounds is exorbitant, "and exceſſive, and not warranted by Legal Prece- "dent in former Ages; for all Fines ought to be "with a Salvo contenemento ſuo, and not to the "Party's Ruin." Theſe were your Lordſhips Declarations in that Caſe. If there be any Uncertainty or Doubt in the Doctor's Expreſſions, your Lordſhips, I hope, will put the moſt favourable Conſtruction on them. What I have hitherto offer'd is, with Relation to theſe Words, The Supreme Power; but that which I take to be the main Objection in this Caſe, is, that the Doctor's Aſſertion of the Illegality of Reſiſtance muſt be neceſſarily underſtood with Reference to the Executive Power. And if it be utterly illegal, in any Caſe, upon any Pretence whatſoever, then 'twas unlawful at the Revolution; and from thence the Conſequence is drawn, That the Doctor is guilty of this firſt Charge, of maintaining, That the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the happy Revolution were odious and unjuſtifiable. This I take to be the Force of the Objection.

My Lords, I admit the Doctor has in General Terms aſſerted this Propoſition of the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power on any Pretence whatſoever; and yet I am not altogether without Hopes, but that I ſhall be able to ſatisfy even the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, whether that Expreſſion be underſtood of the Legiſlative, or Executive Power, that he is an innocent Man, notwithſtanding that Aſſertion.

My Lords, There is nothing further from our Hearts, nor is any thing leſs neceſſary to the Doctor's Defence, than for us to diſpute or to call in Queſtion the Juſtice of the Revolution. We are ſo far from it, that we look on our ſelves to be arguing for it, whilſt we are endeavouring to ſhow your Lordſhips, that the Reſiſtance uſed at the Revolution is not inconſiſtent with the Doctrine of the Church of England, and with the Law of England; and that the Doctor uſes no other Language than what they both ſpeak. When your Lordſhips have laid aſide what was urg'd the Second Day, to ſhow the Juſtice of the Revolution, and to aggravate the Doctor's Offence, ſuppoſing him guilty, this Matter will lie in a very narrow Compaſs; and I am in Hopes there will not appear to be ſo great a Difference as hath been repreſented, between the Doctor, in his Aſſertion concerning the Illegality of Reſiſtance, and ſome of the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons. I can't ſay, that I differ from many of them in their Notions of Allegiance, as ſtated the Second Day of this Tryal.

My Lords, The firſt thing on which I humbly inſiſt, ſuppoſing this general Aſſertion to relate to the Supreme Executive Power, is, that the Doctor has not in any Part of his Sermon apply'd it to the particular Caſe of the Revolution.

'Twas inſiſted on the firſt Day, That he had not only aſſerted the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power, on any Pretence whatſoever; but alſo that he had expreſly affirm'd, that the Revolution was not ſuch a Caſe, as ought to be excepted out of his General Rule. This I deny: If ſuch an Expreſſion can be found in the Doctor's Sermon, I ſhall think no Puniſhment too great for him. 'Tis one Thing, expreſly to affirm the Revolution is ſuch a Caſe as ought not to be excepted out of the General Rule; and another Thing, not to make the Exception. The Apoſtle, who in general Terms enjoins the Duties of Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance to the Higher Powers, makes no Exception when he lays down thoſe Precepts; nor (on the other ſide) does he ſay, no ſuch Caſe can ever happen, wherein Obedience is not to be paid, or Reſiſtance not to be made. He is ſilent in that Matter; and the Doctor's Expreſſion, in this Caſe, is agreeable with that of the Apoſtle. To prove the Doctor guilty of this firſt Charge, and that he had directly applied his General Rule of the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power, to the particular Caſe of the Revolution, a Learned Gentleman, (whoſe Province 'twas to maintain the firſt Article) on the Second Day of this Tryal, firſt ſtated to your Lordſhips the Page wherein the Doctor mentions the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, and read that Paſſage in the following Words: "The Grand Security of our Government, and the "very Pillar upon which it ſtands, is founded up-"on the ſteady Belief of the Subjects Obligation "to an Abſolute and Unconditional Obedience to "the Supreme Power, in all Things lawful, and "the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pre-"tence whatſoever." And then, ſays he, the Doctor goes on, and ſays, "Our Adverſaries think "they effectually ſtop our Mouths, and have us "ſure and unanſwerable on this Point, when they "urge the Revolution of this Day in their De-"fence." This might very reaſonably make an Impreſſion upon your Lordſhips, not comparing thoſe ſeveral Paſſages in the Doctor's Sermon, at the ſame Time that Objection was made. But I beg your Lordſhips will obſerve the Diſtance of theſe Two Paſſages from each other, between Twenty and Thirty Lines, in which ſeveral diſtinct and entire Sentences are contain'd, to which that laſt Paſſage of Our Adverſaries, &c. plainly relates. The next Method us'd to prove the Doctor guilty, was, by taking the Paſſage in it ſelf, independently, from any other; and this I own to be the true way of conſidering it: And taking it thus, 'tis objected, If in no Caſe whatſoever 'tis lawful to reſiſt, 'twas then unlawful at the Revolution. Such a Doctrine muſt be a ſlaviſh Doctrine. An unlimited Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance is a ſlaviſh Notion.

My Lords, Dr. Sacheverell does not contend for it; nor is there any Thing mentioned in his Sermon, of ſuch an Obedience or Non-Reſiſtance. There is but this ſmall Difference between the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, who think this Expreſſion ſo highly Criminal, and the Doctor, who ſtill conceives it to be otherwiſe; whether, when the General Rule of Obedience is taught, the particular Exceptions, which may be made out of that Rule, are always to be expreſs'd; or whether, when the General Rule is laid down, the particular Exceptions, which might be made out of that Rule, are not more properly to be underſtood or implied.

I humbly apprehend, my Lords, that Extraordinary Caſes, Caſes of Neceſſity, are always implied, tho' not expreſs'd, in the General Rule. Such a Caſe undoubtedly the Revolution was, when our late Unhappy Sovereign, then upon the Throne, miſled by Evil Counſellors, endeavour'd to ſubvert and extirpate the Proteſtant Religion, and the Laws and Liberties of the Kingdom. The General Rule ought always to be preſſed; but the Exceptions of Extraordinary Caſes, of Caſes of Neceſſity, are never particularly to be ſtated. To point out every ſuch Caſe before-hand is as impoſſible, as it is for a Man in his Senſes not to perceive plainly when ſuch a Caſe happens.

Every Miniſter of the Goſpel is ſufficiently inſtructed from the Doctrine of his Church, from the written Laws of the Land, and the Law of God, to preſs the General Duty of Obedience; but ſuch Extraordinary Caſes, wherein Reſiſtance is lawful, wherein it becomes an indiſpenſible Duty, are no where laid down. The ſame Apoſtle, who enjoins Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance to the Higher Powers, commands alſo Servants to obey their Maſters, and Children their Parents, in all Things: Notwithſtanding which General Precepts, many Caſes may happen, wherein it may be not only unfit, but ſinful for Servants to obey their Maſters, or Children their Parents. And yet the Apoſtle never thought it proper to ſtate, or mention thoſe Caſes, but contented himſelf to preſs the Duty of Subjection in general, leaving ſuch Caſes (when they happen'd) to juſtify themſelves.

Such Caſes, my Lords, with reſpect to Reſiſtance againſt the Supreme Power, are no way fit to be conſider'd, but in Parliament; and even the Parliament it ſelf hath never yet thought fit otherways to conſider them, than by way of Retroſpect, to juſtify what had of Neceſſity been done in thoſe Caſes; but never went ſo far as to enumerate the Caſes of that kind, which might happen for the future, wherein it might be lawful for the Subject to reſiſt; nothing being more evident, than that the Subjects would be, ſome time or other, thereby tempted to exceed their juſt Liberty.

I beg Leave to cloſe what I have humbly offer'd to your Lordſhips on this Head, with an Obſervation I borrow from Mr. Pym, at his delivering the Charge againſt Dr. Manwaring. Mr. Pym, ſpeaking of the Dutchy of Normandy, obſerves, that that Dutchy having been oppreſſed with ſome Grievances, contrary to their Franchiſes, made their Complaint to Lewis the Tenth; who by his Charter, acknowledging the Right and Cuſtom of the Country, and that they had been unjuſtly griev'd, did grant and provide, That from thenceforward they ſhould be free from all Subſidies and Exactions to be impos'd by him, and his Succeſſors, yet with this Clauſe, Unleſs when great Neceſſity required:

Which

Which ſmall Exception, Mr. Pym obſerved, had devoured all their Immunities granted by that Charter. I think I may as reaſonably conclude, That if Clergymen, or others, in their Sermons, Writings, or publick Diſcourſes, inſtead of Preaching up the General Rule of Obedience, are permitted to ſtate the ſeveral extraordinary Caſes, which may ariſe, the ſeveral excepted Caſes which, notwithſtanding the General Rule, are implied; ſuch Exceptions will in Time devour all Allegiance.

Having thus ſtated to your Lordſhips the Queſtion between us, Whether ſuch excepted Caſes as the Revolution was, are not more proper to be left as implied, than to be expreſs'd, when the General Duty of Obedience is taught; I ſhall endeavour to ſatisfy your Lordſhips, Firſt, That the Doctor's Aſſertion, of the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power on any Pretence whatſoever, in general Terms, without expreſſing any Exception, or that any Exception is to be made, is warranted by the Authority of the Church of England: And, Secondly, That this Manner of Expreſſion is agreeable to the Law of England.

Firſt, That 'tis warranted by the Authority of the Church. Your Lordſhips were informed, on the firſt Day of this Tryal, with how much Bravery even our Popiſh Anceſtors aſſerted the Legality and indiſpenſible Duty of Reſiſtance, whenever they thought the Liberty of their Country requir'd it; but that at the Reformation, when Truth began to ſhine out, then it became evident, that this Notion of the Illegality of Reſiſtance was a ſlaviſh Doctrine. The Learned Gentleman undoubtedly pitch'd on a very proper Time to begin his Search after Truth; and from thence I ſhall endeavour to trace it.

One very early Authority I find; 'twas indeed in the Dawn of the Reformation, in a Book entitled, A Neceſſary Doctrine and Erudition for any Chriſtian Man; publiſh'd by the King's Command, 34 H. VIII. 'Twas a Treatiſe compos'd by the Direction of Cranmer, by Ridley, Redmayn, and other very Great and Learned Men. I find it highly commended in the Hiſtory of the Reformation, Part 1. Book 3. Pag. 286. The Reverend Author of that Hiſtory gives an Account how well the Reformers were employed, (Anno 1540.) tho' not in the way of Convocation: That a ſelect Number of them ſat, by Virtue of a Commiſſion from the King, confirm'd in Parliament; and that their firſt Work was to draw up a Declaration of the Chriſtian Doctrine, for the neceſſary Erudition of a Chriſtian Man; and (Pag. 293.) that 'twas finiſh'd and ſet forth, with a Preface, written by thoſe of the Clergy who had been employ'd in it, declaring with what Care they had examin'd the Scriptures, and the Ancient Doctors, out of whom they had faithfully gather'd that Expoſition of the Chriſtian Faith. In this Treatiſe I find theſe Paſſages. In the Expoſition of the Fifth Commandment: "And "by this Commandment alſo, Subjects be bound "not to withdraw their Fealty, Truth, Love, and "Obedience towards their Prince, for any Cauſe "whatſoever it be; nor for any Cauſe they may "conſpire againſt his Perſon, nor do any Thing "towards the Hindrance or Hurt thereof, nor of "his Eſtate." In the Expoſition of the Sixth Commandment: "Moreover, no Subjects may "draw their Swords againſt their Prince, for any "Cauſe whatſoever it be." The Reverend Father of our Church, to whom the Publick is ſo much indebted for that Excellent Hiſtory of the Reformation, and who has received the juſt Thanks of both Houſes of Parliament for it, (Pag. 291.) declares thoſe Expoſitions of the Commandments to be very profitable.

My Lords, Tho' the Treatiſe, in which I find theſe Expoſitions, was publiſh'd in a Popiſh Reign, yet (as an undeniable Evidence that the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, there taught, is a Proteſtant Doctrine) I ſhall ſhow your Lordſhips, the Reverend Author of the Hiſtory of the Reformation has himſelf aſſerted it, in much ſtronger Terms, than Doctor Sacheverell has done. In Edward the Sixth's Time, the Glorious Light of the Goſpel ſhone out. The firſt Book of the Homilies, prepar'd by the Clergy, was then publiſh'd by the Royal Authority; in which were Three Parts of a Homily, or rather Three diſtinct Homilies of Obedience: In one of which is the Paſſage mentioned in the Doctor's Anſwer. "Here, good People, mark "diligently: It is not lawful for Inferiors, and "Subjects, in any Caſe, to reſiſt and ſtand againſt "the Superior Powers; for St. Paul's Words be "plain, that whoſoever withſtandeth, ſhall get to "themſelves Damnation; for whoſoever withſtand-"eth, withſtandeth the Ordinance of God." In Queen Mary's Reign, the Light of the Goſpel was eclips'd, and the Darkneſs of Popery again overſpread the Nation. Reſiſtance to Princes being a Doctrine of the Church of Rome, your Lordſhips will not expect any Authentick Evidence to be produced out of that Reign, in Maintenance of the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance.

When Queen Elizabeth came to the Crown, the Truth of the Goſpel ſhone forth in its full Luſtre, and then Six Homilies were added to the other Three againſt Diſobedience and wilful Rebellion; in which your Lordſhips will find many Paſſages, wherein the Duty of Non-Reſiſtance is preſſed and inculcated, in much ſtronger Terms than it hath been aſſerted by Dr. Sacheverell. In that Glorious Reign, the Thirty Nine Articles of our Religion were agreed upon by the Archbiſhops and Biſhops of both Provinces, and the Clergy in Convocation; by the 35th of which, the Homilies are declared to contain a Godly and Wholeſome Doctrine, and are order'd to be read in Churches, by the Miniſters, diligently and diſtinctly, that they may be underſtood of the People. In the Thirteenth Year of that Reign, a further Sanction was given to the Homilies; the Thirty Nine Articles were then confirm'd, and every Perſon in Holy Orders, to be admitted to any Benefice with Cure, was requir'd (by Act of Parliament made in that Year) to Subſcribe and Read them in the Church, and declare his unfeigned Aſſent thereto.

My Lords, We have now a moſt Gracious Sovereign on the Throne, as far ſurpaſſing Her Renowned Predeceſſor Queen Elizabeth, in the effectual Support She gives to the Proteſtant Intereſt, and in Her Pious Care for the perpetual Security of the Church of England, as in all the other Succeſſes and Glories of Her Reign. In this Reign, a perpetual Sanction is given to the Books of the Homilies, by inſerting in the Act of Union the Act made the 13th Eliz. which confirms the 39 Articles; by the 35th of which, the Doctrine of the Church (taught in the Homilies) is approv'd; and declaring that Act, 13 Eliz. to be an Eſſential and Fundamental Part of the Act of Union: So that I may now conclude, the Doctrine of the Church of England, taught in her Homilies, muſt continue as long as the Union of the Two Kingdoms, which I heartily tily pray may be to the World's End. On theſe Authorities do the Homilies of our Church ſubſiſt: And as they are thus ratified by the Articles and Acts of Parliament, the Doctor has the concurrent Authority of the Church and State, for what he has ſaid concerning the Illegality of Reſiſtance.

My Lords, Is this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance taught in the Homilies in general Terms, in the ſame manner as Doctor Sacheverell has aſſerted it, without expreſſing any Exception? Do the Articles of our Religion declare the Doctrine taught in the Homilies to be a Godly and Wholſome Doctrine; and will your Lordſhips permit this Gentleman to ſuffer for Preaching it? Is it Criminal in any Man to preach that Doctrine, which 'tis his Duty to read? The Doctor is not only required by the 35th Article to read this Doctrine diligently, and diſtinctly, that it may be underſtood by the People; but to ſhow your Lordſhips, the Doctrine taught in the Homilies did not die, nor was alter'd at the Revolution. I muſt obſerve to your Lordſhips, that the Rubrick of the Office appointed for the Fifth of November, by the late Queen of Bleſſed Memory, directs the Clergy on that Day, if there be no Sermon, to read one of theſe Homilies againſt Rebellion. Since the Doctor choſe rather to preach, than to read a Homily on that Day; how could he better comply with the Command of Her late Majeſty, than by preaching the ſame Doctrine as was contain'd in thoſe Homilies he was commanded to read on that Day, if he did not preach? Does an Act of Parliament, inſerted in the Act of Union, enjoin him to Subſcribe to this Doctrine before the Ordinary, and declare his unfeigned Aſſent to it in his Pariſh-Church? And ſhall he be condemn'd in Parliament, for aſſerting the Truth of it? I muſt admit, this 35th Article of our Religion is not by the Toleration-Act (I will give no Offence, by calling it by its true Name) required to be Subſcribed by any Perſons Diſſenting from the Church of England, to entitle them to their Exemption from the Penalties mentioned in that Act. But that Act of Parliament no way varies the Caſe with reſpect to the Clergy; ſo that whatever Duty was incumbent on them before, is ſo ſtill; and therefore I hope, your Lordſhips will not think this Gentleman has ſo highly offended.

As a further Proof that this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, as laid down by the Doctor in general Terms, without making any Exception, is the Doctrine of the Church of England, I ſhall ſhew your Lordſhips, that it has been ſo preach'd, maintain'd and avow'd, and in much ſtronger Terms than the Doctor has expreſs'd himſelf, by our moſt Orthodox and Able Divines from the Time of the Reformation. 'Twould be endleſs to offer to your Lordſhips all the Authorities I might produce on this Occaſion; but we ſhall beg your Lordſhips Patience to lay before you ſome Paſſages out of the Learned Writings of ſeveral Reverend Fathers of our Church, of Nine Archbiſhops, above Twenty Biſhops, and of ſeveral other very Eminent and Learned Men.

That your Lordſhips may not think this Doctrine died at the Revolution, I ſhall humbly lay before your Lordſhips the Opinions of Three Archbiſhops, and Eleven Biſhops, made ſince the Revolution, which will fully ſhew the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance is ſtill the Doctrine of our Church; I would not willingly give Offence in naming them, I am ſure I mean no Reflection, nor can it, as I think, be any Reproach to them: I find no other Doctrine in this Caſe taught by them, as far as I am able to judge, than what the Apoſtles taught before them. With your Lordſhips leave, I will therefore preſume to name them; Archbiſhop Tillotſon, the Two preſent Archbiſhops, Biſhop Stillingfleet, late Biſhop of Worceſter, the preſent Biſhops of Worceſter, Rocheſter, Salisbury, Ely, Bath and Wells, Lincoln, Exeter, St. Aſaph, Carliſle, and Chicheſter. If I am able to ſhew your Lordſhips that all theſe Right Reverend Fathers of our Church have preached the ſame Doctrine the Doctor has, Are the ſame Words coming out of Their Mouths to be received as Oracles of Truth, but ſpoke by the Doctor fit for Articles of Impeachment? I am ſure it's impoſſible to enter into the Heart of Man to conceive, that what theſe Reverend Prelates have aſſerted, that any general Poſition they have laid down concerning Non-Reſiſtance, is an Affirmance that Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution were Odious and Unjuſtifiable: Why then is Doctor Sacheverell, by having taught the ſame Doctrine, in the ſame Manner as they did, to be charg'd for having Suggeſted or Maintain'd any ſuch Thing?

My Lords, I dare not ſuppoſe this Doctrine, thus Eſtabliſh'd by ſo many Reverend Fathers of our Church, to be Erroneous. If an intemperate Expreſſion of one ſingle Archbiſhop above a Hundred Years ſince dead, is fit to be inſerted in an Article of Impeachment of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, what Puniſhment ſhould I deſerve, could I ſuppoſe the Doctrine taught by ſo many Archbiſhops and Biſhops to be erroneous. But if I might hope to be excus'd, if I made the Suppoſition, that the Homilies of our Church contain falſe Doctrine, and that ſo many of the Right Reverend Fathers of our Church are capable of erring, or being ignorant in the Doctrine of their Church, I humbly propoſe it to your Lordſhips, whether a Clergyman who errs after ſuch great Exrmples, might not reaſonably have hop'd for a more moderate Correction, than an Impeachment! Had this ſlaviſh Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance been firſt branded with its indelible Mark of Infamy, and the Right and indiſpenſible Duty of Reſiſtance to Princes plainly ſhewn; had all the ſlaviſh Notions of the Common Law which we find diſpers'd throughout our Law-Books, which give Countenance to this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, been firſt weeded out of them, and ſome few Acts of Parliament, entirely agreeable with this ſlaviſh Doctrine, been firſt repealed; had the People been ſet right in the Notions of their Obedience, and the Miniſters of the Goſpel been inſtructed by Act of Parliament what Doctrine they ought to Preach, and what not; had all theſe Things been firſt done, and the Doctor had afterwards err'd, your Lordſhips might have then look'd upon him, as an obſtinate Offender.

The next Thing I beg leave to conſider is, the Law of England; whether the Doctor's Aſſertion of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power on any Pretence whatſoever, in general Terms, is agreeable to the Law of England. I hope I need not again explain my ſelf as to this Particular, I mean, that as the General Rule is always taught and inculcated by the Church, ſo has it always been declar'd by the Legiſlature, without making any particular Exception; and if this Rule holds both in Church and State, this Gentleman is ſtrangely unfortunate, if he can't be comprehended under one or other of them.

My Lords, Whatever may at any Time heretofore have been thought proper to be done by Parliament; whatever Meaſures, in Caſes of the laſt Neceſſity, may at any Time have been taken by the People in general, for preſerving their Liberty, or aſſerting the Rights of their Country, and keeping themſelves from Slavery; yet in no Age can any Inſtance be ſhew'd, not in the Reigns of thoſe Princes who have been Depos'd, that this Doctrine, of the Right of Reſiſtance, as it has been term'd, was ever permitted to be aſſerted by any particular Perſon. A memorable Caſe to this Purpoſe happened in the Reign of King Edward the Second: An Act of Parliament paſs'd in the Fifteenth Year of that Reign, Entituled, Exilium Hugonis de Spencer Patris, & Filii. The Two Spencers were baniſhed by that Act; and the firſt Article in that Act againſt them is, "That they had affirm'd and publiſh'd in Writing, that Homage and Oath of Allegiance were due more by reaſon of the Crown, than by reaſon of the Perſon of the King; and that if the King did not demean himſelf according to Reaſon, in the Exerciſe of his Government, his Subjects might remove him; And that ſince that Removal could not be by Courſe of Law, they might therefore remove him by Force". The Time when this Act paſs'd, and what afterwards happened, is remarkable. The Act, very ſoon after the making it, was repeal'd, and 'twas thought neceſſary in that Reign the People ſhould aſſert that Right, and thereupon the King was Depos'd. But your Lordſhips will find in his Succeſſor's Reign, they were ſo far from caſting any Blot on the Act of Exile, that in the 1. Edward 3. by one of their firſt Acts, the Repeal of the Exile was annulled, and the Act of Exile confirm'd. It is true, that in the 21ſt Year of Rich. 2. the Act made the 1ſt Edw. 3. for annulling the Repeal of the Exile, was repeal'd, and the Reverſal of the Act of Exile confirm'd; but in the 1ſt of Hen. 4. the whole Parliament held the 21ſt Rich. 2. and all the Proceedings in it, for their Extravagance, were annulled, and from thence the Act of Exile of the Two Spencers continued untouch'd. I muſt humbly obſerve to your Lordſhips, that though there were Two Repeals of the Act of Exile, yet neither of them mentioned the Matter contain'd in the Articles as inſufficient, but the Reaſons aſſign'd in the Acts of Reverſal are, that "in the Proceedings againſt the Spencers, the great Charter was not obſerv'd, that the Prelates were not preſent, and did not aſſent thereto; and ſome other Defects in Form". What Opinion our greateſt Lawyers have ſince had of this Act of Exile, ſufficiently appears, Co. 7. 11. Calvin's Caſe, the Words are theſe: "In the Reign of Edw. 2. the Spencers, the Father and the Son, to cover the Treaſon hatched in their Hearts, invented this damnable and damn'd Opinion, That Homage and Oath of Leigance was more by Reaſon of the King's Crown (that is, of his Politick Capacity) than by reaſon of the Perſon of the King; upon which Opinion, ſays the Lord Chief Juſtice Coke, they inferr'd moſt execrable and deteſtable Conſequences. Firſt, If the King do not demean himſelf by Reaſon in the Right of his Crown, his Lieges are bound by Oath to remove the King. Secondly, Seeing that the King could not be reformed by Suit of Law, that ought to be done by Force: All which were condemned by Two Parliaments, one in the Reign of Edw. 2. called, Exilium Hugonis Le Spencer; and the other 1. Edw. 3. Cap. 1." I barely mention theſe Acts to ſhow, that however applicable the Caſe of the Revolution might be to that of King Edw. 2. yet that thoſe very Perſons by whom the King was depos'd, thought it ſo high a Crime in the Two Spencers to take on them to publiſh ſuch Poſitions, as to deſerve Baniſhment. The next Law I beg leave to mention, is the 25. Edw. 3. Cap. 2. By which, the levying War againſt the King in his Realm is declar'd, in general Terms, to be High Treaſon, without any Exception whatſoever: This is an Inſtance of what I am contending for, that the Law, in all Caſes concerning our Allegiance, lays down the general Rule, without making any Exception. So the Oath of Obedience (as enjoin'd 3. Ja. 1. 4.) all Perſons are to Swear to defend the King to the utmoſt of their Power, againſt all Conſpiracies and Attempts whatſoever, which ſhall or may be made againſt his Perſon, Crown or Dignity. The Oath is in General, without any Exception expreſs'd in it; and no Man will preſume to ſay, that Oath, which was taken from the 3. Ja. 1. 'till after the Revolution, was not true. But the Anſwer to be given is, what I give in this Caſe, that Caſes of Neceſſity, ſuch as the Revolution, were implied, they are improper to be expreſs'd; and why ought not the like Implication equally to be allow'd in the General Aſſertion made by Dr. Sacheverell? By the Act made 12. Car. 2. C. 30. for Attainder of the Regicides, it is declar'd, that by the Undoubted and Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, neither the Peers of this Realm nor the Commons, nor both together, in Parliament, or out of Parliament, nor the People, collectively, or repreſentatively, nor any other Perſons whatſoever, ever had, have, hath, or ought to have, any coercive Power over the Kings of this Realm.

My Lords, I can't apprehend this Act to be repeal'd: If it be not, I beſeech your Lordſhips, let Dr. Sacheverell be tried by it; and that you will be pleaſed to conſider, whether the Doctor's Aſſertion concerning Reſiſtance, hath out-gone the Declaration in this Law.

Your Lordſhips hear, how fully the Fundamental Law of the Kingdom is declared by this Act: The Doctor has only ſaid, 'Tis Illegal to reſiſt the Supreme Power on any Pretence whatſoever. The Expreſſion at the End of that Declaration may poſſibly be obſerv'd, that it extends only to a Coercive Power over the Perſon of the King; I know not what Inference may be drawn from thence, but certainly there is nothing in the Doctor's Sermon but what may be abundantly juſtified by the Declaration in that Act.

The Militia Act, the 13th and 14th Car. 2. Cap. 3. for ordering the Forces in the ſeveral Counties of this Kingdom, contains a Declaration as ſtrong as the former: By that Act 'tis declared, That neither both or either of the Houſes of Parliament can, or lawfully may, raiſe or levy any War, offenſive or defenſive, againſt his Majeſty, his Heirs, or lawful Succeſſors. When I peruſed this laſt Declaration in the recital of the Acts, I read carefully to the End of it, to look for the Exception, but could find none. If there be no Exception in that Act, but that it ſtands as a general Declaration of the Law; if neither, nor both the Houſes of Parliament can or may raiſe or levy War, offenſive or defenſive, againſt the King, is it a high Crime and Miſdemeanor to aſſert in general Terms that Reſiſtance to our Prince is unlawful? Pray, my Lords, compare the Doctor's Aſſertion in his Sermon with the Declaration in this laſt Act of Parliament.

By the Corporation Act, 13. Car. 2. Seſſ. 2. Cap. 1. all Mayors, Aldermen, Common-Council-Men, and other corporate Officers there enumerated, are required to take an Oath, That it is not lawful upon any Pretence whatſoever to take Arms againſt the King. By the Militia Act, which I have already mentioned, the ſame Oath, That it is not lawful on any Pretence whatſoever to take Arms againſt the King, is required to be taken by every Peer of the Realm, before he is capable of acting as a Lieutenant or Deputy-Lieutenant; and by every Commoner of England, before he can be capable of acting as a Lieutenant, Deputy-Lieutenant, Officer or Soldier in the Militia. By the Act of Uniformity, 13. & 14. Car. 2. Cap. 4. all Eccleſiaſtical Perſons, and many others under the ſeveral Denominations in that Act, are required to ſubſcribe to the Truth of that Aſſertion, That it is not lawful on any Pretence whatſoever to take Arms againſt the King. This is the Language of our Laws, and the like do the Apoſtles uſe in their Precepts touching Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power.

But here I ought to obſerve, an Objection has been made to theſe ſeveral Acts, that by an Act made in the Second Year of the late King and Queen, 'tis Enacted, "That from thenceforth the Oath en-"join'd to be taken or ſubſcribed, by the ſeveral "Acts I have mention'd, ſhould not be required to "be taken by any Perſon whatſoever; and that the "former Acts of Parliament, as to that Oath, are "thereby repealed". 'Tis a very tender Repeal, my Lords, if it be one; but admit it to be one, it ſeems to have been argued from thence by a Learned Gentleman, with whom in many Things he ſaid I no Way differ, that this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance was become the more Unlawful, becauſe that Oath was not to be taken from thenceforward.

My Lords, As the Corporation Act required the Swearing 'twas not Lawful to take up Arms againſt the King, ſo does it direct the Subſcribing to the Unlawfulneſs of the Solemn League and Covenant; Now by the ſame Argument, the Solemn League and Covenant may be proved to have been a Lawful Oath.

I beſeech your Lordſhips to conſider, whether the Repeal of this Oath can have any Weight with your Lordſhips. 'Twas a general Aſſertion, to which all the Peers and Commoners, in the Employments I have mention'd, were to ſwear; there is no Exception in the Oath, but what is implied in it. Was not the Propoſition as true before it was ſworn, as after? Was it therefore true becauſe 'twas ſworn; or was it ſworn becauſe it was true? Did the Swearing it make it true; or the Truth make it fit to be ſworn? If it was true when it was ſworn, the Propoſition was equally true before, and ſince. I believe, ſince the Oath was taken by ſo many Peers and Commoners, no Man will pretend to queſtion the Truth of the Propoſition.

My Lords, I have gone thro' the ſeveral Laws I ſhall lay before your Lordſhips on this Occaſion; and let me once more humbly beg your Lordſhips, that you will be pleaſed to compare the Doctor's Aſſertion in his Sermon, concerning the Illegality of Reſiſtance, with them; Whether it be ſtronger than the Declaration of the Undoubted and Fundamental Law of the Kingdom, in the Act againſt the Regicides; than the Declaration in the Militia Act; than the Oath required to be taken by ſo many Acts of Parliament; than the Declaration in the 25th of Edward III. All the Doctor has ſaid, is, That Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power is Illegal, on any Pretence whatſoever. All the Peers and Commoners of England, under the Characters and Employments I have mention'd, have ſworn to the Truth of it; the 25th of Edward III. declares it to be High-Treaſon; and your Lordſhips have heard what St. Paul ſays.

My Lords, I began this Diſcourſe, relating to the Doctrine of our Church and the Laws of the Land, with the moſt ſincere Proteſtation, That it was far from my Intention to offer any Thing inconſiſtent with the Juſtice of the Revolution: I think the Juſtice of it conſiſtent with our Laws, the Exceptions to be made being always implied. And ſurely none can ſhew themſelves truer Friends to the Revolution, than thoſe who prove that the Revolution may ſtand without Impeaching the Doctrines of our Church, or any Fundamental Law of the Kingdom. Doctor Sacheverell being impeach'd for not making the Exception, when he laid down the General Rule; I beg Leave to turn the Caſe, and ſuppoſe he had made it. Had he been ſtating the Caſe of a Revolution, on a Day when he preſs'd the Illegality of Reſiſtance, on a Day when, if he did not Preach, he was obliged to read one of the Homilies againſt Rebellion, in which there is no Exception; Had he been picking Holes for the Subject to creep out of his Allegiance, and had he been cited before his Dioceſan; might he not have been queſtion'd, on what Authority he preſumed to preach in that manner? Whether he found ſuch Doctrine taught by the Apoſtles, by the Homilies, or by any of the Reverend Fathers of our Church? Might he not have been told, it was his Duty, in Imitation of thoſe Great Examples, to preſs the General Duty of Obedience, and the Illegality of Reſiſtance, without making any Exception whatſoever? Had he been queſtion'd before the Temporal Power, for Preaching in the manner he has done; had an Indictment been fram'd againſt him on his General Aſſertion, and brought before the Twelve Judges; I humbly apprehend, not one of them would have declar'd he went too far. But had he been making Exceptions out of the General Rule of Obedience, eſpecially if he had been tried by ſuch Judges as were before the Revolution; might he not have been told, 'Twas eaſy to diſcern what Spirit he was of, of what Party he was, and what he aim'd at, what he intended; That he had not been Preaching in Defence of the late Revolution, to ſhew the Juſtice of it; but that he was covering the Treaſon of his Heart, and under Pretence of juſtifying one Revolution, he was labouring to bring about another. He, who knew how far the Deſign had gone of Landing the Pretender but Two Years ſince; what elſe could he mean, by picking Holes in the Rules for our Obedience?

I have but a Word or two to add to the other Charges of this Article. The Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons were pleas'd to obſerve, That tho' there were Four Articles, the Subſtance of them all center'd in the firſt. The Second Charge in this Article is, That His Late Majeſty, in his Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance. It is not, I hope, a ſufficient Ground for an Article of Impeachment, if the Doctor has expreſſed himſelf in an obſcure manner. I muſt confeſs, I can't eaſily comprehend him my ſelf; but it may be any Man's Misfortune to expreſs himſelf in ſuch a manner, as to make it decent and fit for him to explain himſelf: And I hope the Doctor has explain'd himſelf, ſo as to ſhow, that tho' he may have ſpoken improperly, he has yet ſpoken innocently. The Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons declare, by Reſiſtance they mean the Reſiſtance of the Subject to their Sovereign: But Reſiſtance, where the Doctor mentions His Late Majeſty to have diſclaim'd it, cannot have that Meaning. He was a Sovereign Prince, and might reſiſt whom he pleaſed. Perhaps the Paſſage in the Doctor's Sermon may be capable of different Conſtructions, but the Doctor has taken care to prevent all manner of Miſtakes that might poſſibly ariſe from thence: He has not only (as was obſerved by one of the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons) made a Marginal Reference, to ſhow what he meant; which might have been done when he apprehended that Expreſſion would be found Fault with; but he has in the Sermon it ſelf quoted what the Parliament did, in burning a Treatiſe which related to the King's having conquer'd the Kingdom.

My Lords, it was ask'd, What had he to do to take notice of that Matter? What led him to juſtify the late King? Was there ever any body living that imputed any ſuch Thing as Conqueſt to him? My Lords, If there never was but that one Imputation endeavour'd to be caſt on his Memory, as I never heard of any other, ſurely then he did well to wipe off that Imputation; and that this has been laid to his Charge, I muſt refer to the Journals of both Houſes of Parliament. Your Lordſhips reſolv'd the Aſſertion of King William's and Queen Mary's being King and Queen by Conqueſt, was injurious to their Majeſties Rightful Title to the Crown, inconſiſtent with the Principles on which this Government is founded, and tending to the Subverſion of the Rights of the People: And on the 25th of January, 1692. your Reſolution being communicated to the Commons, was unanimouſly agreed to.

The laſt Part of this Article is, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours on His Late Majeſty and the ſaid Revolution. My Lords, There are theſe Words in the Doctor's Sermon, of caſting Black and Odious Colours on His Late Majeſty and the Revolution: They are in the Cloſe of a Sentence, which immediately precedes the Expreſſion of His Late Majeſty's diſclaiming the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance. It is impoſſible to miſtake the Place; your Lordſhips will examine it; and from thence let him take his Fate, Whether that Paſſage is applicable to what went before it, or to what follows after. Thoſe Words of caſting Black and Odious Colours, are ſo far from referring to His Late Majeſty's diſclaiming the Imputation of Reſiſtance, that they conclude the Sentence which went before it; in which the Doctor mentions New Preachers, and New Teachers, that broach'd abominable Poſitions, That the People have a Right to cancel their Allegiance at Pleaſure, to call their Sovereign to Account; and who pretend to juſtify the horrid Murder of the Royal Martyr King Charles the Firſt, and endeavour to ſkreen themſelves, and their vile Notions, under the Revolution. The Doctor having mention'd theſe New Preachers and their Doctrine, goes on: Our Adverſaries think they effectually ſtop our Mouths, and have us ſure and unanſwerable on this Point, when they urge the Revolution of this Day in their Defence. But certainly they are the greateſt Enemies of that, and His Late Majeſty, and the moſt ungrateful for the Deliverance, who endeavour to caſt ſuch Black and Odious Colours upon both. I pray, my Lords, what does this refer to? Don't it clear the Revolution againſt the Venom of thoſe Miſcreants, who publiſh ſuch villanous Aſſertions as theſe? But 'twas objected by a Learned Gentleman, What has a Miniſter to do to meddle with theſe Things? If any Man offend againſt the Temporal, or Eccleſiaſtical Laws, the Courts are open; the Magiſtrates are to puniſh.

My Lords, I don't find, if this Doctrine holds, that he muſt preach againſt any Thing: If he muſt not preach againſt any Thing which may be proſecuted, either in the Temporal or Eccleſiaſtical Courts, he muſt not preach againſt any Offence that is forbid by the Ten Commandments. Perhaps it will be urg'd, that there are no ſuch People as theſe New Preachers, and New Teachers; that he is raiſing a Phantom, and then throwing it down; He is only imagining Caſes, of which there are no Inſtances; That there are no ſuch Men, who endeavour to juſtify the Murder of King Charles, or defend it by the Revolution. We will ſhow there are too many Inſtances of ſuch Perſons, who make no Scruple to publiſh theſe Poſitions, and caſt Reflections on the Queen and Her Government, whom the Doctor has been defending. He is not the Perſon he has been repreſented; he hath no diſloyal Thoughts about him: Sure I am, he would rather die in Her Majeſty's Defence. We ſhall ſhow your Lordſhips, that there are ſuch as run moſt vile Compariſons between the Revolution and the moſt Execrable Murder of King Charles the Firſt, and can find no better Difference between them, than this abominable Diſtinction of a Wet Martyrdom and a Dry One.

Mr. Dodd. MY Lords, I am likewiſe a Council for Dr. Sacheverell; and I cannot but think, by the ſame Arguments that have been uſed to maintain theſe Articles, any Book or Sermon, be it never ſo innocent, may be repreſented to be a Libel.

The Gentlemen Managers of the Houſe of Commons, with Submiſſion, have ſcarce any Three of them agreed in any one Principal Point; only in this moſt of them have agreed, That the Doctor is a Criminal before he is condemned. He has been in the whole Debate (generally ſpeaking) ſo called; the uſual Expreſſion having been, The Criminal at the Bar: This (as it is not uſual in other Places) would have been a great Diſcouragement to us that are his Council, and great Diſcouragement in his Defence, but that we conſider that the Judgment is your Lordſhips, and that by your Juſtice he muſt ſtand or fall. It has been repreſented, as if this Sermon had been peruſed and approved by Lawyers; but this is only ſuggeſted, (as other Matters have been) yet there is not the leaſt Proof thereof. We have had different Facts charged upon us; ſometimes we are taxed for having ſaid too much, and ſometimes for having ſaid too little, and not mentioning Things that were the proper Subject of the Day.

My Lords, We apprehend theſe Matters are objected for want of obſerving the Sermon it ſelf; for as it was preach'd on the Fifth of November, ſo your Lordſhips will find an Account given for a Leaf together, ſetting forth the horrible Deſign of the Powder-Plot. Your Lordſhips will alſo find, both in the Body and Concluſion of the Sermon, Notice taken of our Deliverance on this Day.

There

There have been ſome Acts of Parliament cited by the Gentlemen Managers for the Houſe of Commons; that of the 25th Henry 8. about the Supremacy, which we apprehend is not to the preſent Purpoſe. It only aſſerts the Supremacy, that is, the Independency of the Crown, which was uſurp'd by the Papal Authority; for ſurely King Henry the Eighth was a Prince that would as little bear the Doctrine of Reſiſtance, as any Sovereign that ever wore the Crowns of theſe Kingdoms.

There have been many things ſaid by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons that we heartily agree with them in. The Revolution was a Caſe we all agree out of the general Rule; and ſo in every thing we ſay, we hope your Lordſhips will underſtand it. We neither do nor can underſtand it; it is againſt our Judgment and Intereſt to think otherwiſe. We are hearty Well-wiſhers to the Revolution, and to the Happineſs of England, that is in a great meaſure built upon it. We agree the Law of the Land is the Meaſure of the Prince's Authority, and the People Rights; that in the Caſe of the Revolution, when the Laws were overturn'd, Popery was coming in upon us, and Property ſignified nothing: The People of England being invited by his late Majeſty, did reſort to the laſt Remedy, even that of Neceſſity; and that Neceſſity did induce Reſiſtance, and juſtify 'em in it; and upon that Foot the Revolution ſucceeded. We totally deny that the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, as laid down by the Doctor, and as aſſerted by him, was intended for the Pretender, or any other but Her Majeſty and Her Government; or can be conſtru'd a thwarting the Revolution: His Aſſertions are General; thoſe General Aſſertions will have their particular Exceptions.

Sure it has not, nor can be made out, that we had an Eye in favour of the Pretender in any Part of this Diſcourſe. Now it has been by ſome of the Gentlemen admitted to us, that the Doctrine in the main is Right; but, ſay they, you had your Thoughts, your Eyes on the Pretender. Now this is ſo very contrary to what the Doctor has aſſerted in his whole Sermon, that I hope there is no Ground for it: For the Doctor (as a Dutiful Subject) takes Notice that Her Majeſty is the laſt of the Lineal Deſcent, as the Relict of the Royal Family; which quite diſowns the Pretender and his Right. And can any one imagine, that in ſuch Expreſſions he could have an Eye to the Pretender? For if there be any Pretence of Title in the Pretender, it muſt be as a Deſcendant of that Family. But he takes Notice, that Her Majeſty is the only one left of that Family in a Lineal Deſcent; and I think that is enough to acquit the Doctor of having any Eye to Him beyond the Water.

Having, my Lords, made theſe Remarks, I ſhall now conſider the Articles as they lye before your Lordſhips. In the Preamble to the Articles, there is Notice taken of Three Acts of Parliament. The firſt is the Act declaring the Rights and Liberties of the Subject, and ſettling the Succeſſion of the Crown. The Second is the Act for preventing Vexatious Suits againſt ſuch as acted in order to bring in their Majeſties, and for their Services. The Third is the Act for paying the States-General of the United Provinces their Charges for his Majeſty's Expedition into this Kingdom, and for other Uſes. Theſe are the Three only Acts that are cited in the Preamble of theſe Articles: I ſhall ſay but a Word to each of them. As to the Act called The Bill of Rights, I don't find that that Act meddles with the Points of Reſiſtance or Non-Reſiſtance; the whole Ground and Tenor of that Act is upon the Abdication. It ſettles the Crown upon the Vacancy of the Throne. It is ſaid, Whereas the late King James the Second having abdicated the Government, and the Throne being thereby Vacant, &c. There is no other Fact ſtated; there is no mention of Reſiſtance. But the Throne being Vacant, the next Head in that Act ſays, That King James having abdicated the Government, and their Majeſties having accepted the Crown, did become Lawful King and Queen, &c. Theſe are the only Paſſages in that Act as to this Matter: It has preſerved the Liberties of the Subject; eſtabliſh'd ſeveral Rights which are their Ancient Inheritance; told the People that the Throne was Vacant; and being ſo, that their late Majeſties were Lawful and Rightful King and Queen, as undoubtedly we all agree they were.

My Lords, The next Act mention'd, is the Act for preventing Vexatious Suits againſt ſuch as acted in order to the bringing in their Majeſties, or for their Service. This goes further than the Bill of Rights; but whoever reads it, will find, it is but the ſame Act in effect, that was Enacted in the Reign of Edward III. after Edward II. was depos'd. It is a meer Act of Indemnity, an Act of Pardon for Officers Civil and Military. It only exempts them from Proſecution, that having been Tranſgreſſors againſt the ſtrict Rules of the Law, were ſubject to private Actions; and no leſs could be done than to exempt them from ſuch Proſecutions; and therefore that Law pardons all Actions of Treſpaſs that were committed upon that Occaſion.

My Lords, The next Act taken Notice of is, That for paying the States General. That, I don't ſee, takes any other Notice; but is only for paying the Dutch 600000 l. for their Aſſiſtance to his Majeſty at his coming into this Nation, for our Deliverance from Popery and Arbitrary Power.

Then the Preamble charges the Doctor with Preaching and Publiſhing the Sermon and Dedications; and that is ſaid to be done with a wicked, malicious and ſeditious Intention, to undermine and ſubvert Her Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law Eſtabliſhed; to defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; to aſperſe the Memory of his late Majeſty; to traduce and condemn the late Happy Revolution; to contradict and arraign the Reſolutions of both Houſes of Parliament; to create Jealouſies and Diviſions among Her Majeſty's Subjects; and to incite them to Sedition and Rebellion. Theſe are the Corollaries that are drawn from the Preamble of the Articles of Impeachment; and theſe are the Facts which muſt make theſe Articles Criminal, or they can't be ſo at all. Theſe Facts we utterly abhor and deny, and ſay we are not guilty of them; and hope it will ſo appear to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, I ſhall now come to the Firſt Article it ſelf, and ſhall ſhortly ſpeak to the Three Diviſions of this Article: It conſiſts of Three Heads. The firſt is, That the Doctor Suggeſts and Maintains, that the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Happy Revolution were Odious and Unjuſtifiable. The ſecond is, That his late Majeſty, in his Declaration diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance. And the third is, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution.

As to the firſt, That he Suggeſts, that the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution were Odious and Unjuſtifiable; My Lords, we can't have a better better Anſwer to this, than utterly to deny that we have made any ſuch Aſſertion: We have not done it in Words, nor in any Words that will bear that Conſtruction. We inſiſt, that as it can't be proved out of the Sermon, ſo neither out of any other Action of his Life, or any other Sermon by him Preach'd. We ſay, that in no Part of his Sermon he has affirmed any thing of the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution; that was a Point not fit for the Doctor to meddle with, the Legiſlature had taken Care of that. On the contrary, we have all along endeavoured in that Sermon to clear the Revolution and his late Majeſty (and we hope we have done it effectually) from the black and odious Colours which their greateſt Enemies had endeavour'd to caſt upon them. To this Part of the Article we have pleaded Not Guilty. We have denied the Fact; it has not been proved upon us; the Sermon don't prove it, nor does the Dedication prove it; but they prove quite the contrary, as by ſeveral Paragraphs of the Sermon compared together will appear.

The ſecond Diviſion of this Article is, That his late Majeſty, in his Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance. This Fact we do acknowledge, if it be underſtood as the Doctor explains it, and proves it by the Declaration it ſelf. We take it to be very juſt and true; the Reſiſtance the Doctor mentions, being ſuch a Reſiſtance as tends to Conqueſt only, as by the Words plainly appear, which are Printed, and referred to in the Sermon. It can have no other Conſideration, or Meaning, as will appear to any that read that Part of the Sermon with any Candor, or any Ingenuity. The Doctor has taken Care to expreſs it in Words, that there might be no room for Exception. His Highneſs declares, in Oppoſition to thoſe who give out, that we intend to Conquer and Inſlave theſe Nations, that we have thought fit to add a few Words to our Declaration. It is not to be imagined that either thoſe who have invited us, or thoſe who are already come to aſſiſt us, can join in a wicked Attempt of Conqueſt, to make void their own lawful Titles to their Honours, Eſtates and Intereſts. And undoubtedly it is ſo. He did not come to Conquer and Enſlave us, but to make us a Free People; to preſerve and reſtore our Religion, Laws and Liberties; which, my Lords, with humble Submiſſion, has been the Senſe of the Nation; and Notions of a different kind, and ſuch Aſſertions in Printed Sermons, have been Animadverted upon.

Now if the Doctor, having his Eye in that Expreſſion on the Matter of Conqueſt that others had inſinuated, and that the late King did diſclaim any ſuch Pretence, did expreſs the ſame by Reſiſtance, the Expreſſion, we hope, is applicable to the Subject-Matter that was before him, and ought not to be wreſted or turn'd to any other Purpoſe. Nothing can ſhew more his Meaning than his own Quotation: He refers to King William's Declaration, to juſtify him in that Matter.

The next Head is, That to impute Reſiſtance to the ſaid Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours upon his late Majeſty, and the ſaid Revolution. This we likewiſe utterly deny to have Maintained; we have ſaid no ſuch Thing quite thro' the Sermon; we have not taken upon us to meddle with that Point: It was an improper Subject for him to meddle with. The Doctor neither affirms, nor ſays any thing of thoſe that impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution; but thoſe which the Doctor intended, and which are plainly meant, if the preceding Words muſt be the Words to which the Subſequent and Concluſion of the Sentence relates, then they are Perſons of dangerous Diſpoſitions, that place the Power in the People; that pretend to a Power to call their Sovereign to an Account at their Will and Pleaſure; Poſitions that are condemned by the Laws of the Church and State, and then vouch the Revolution in Defence of theſe Principles. Theſe are the Perſons mentioned and intended by the Doctor, whoſe Principles and Practices caſt black and odious Colours upon the Revolution.

My Lords, The Doctor, we own, in his Sermon, has aſſerted this general Propoſition, viz. Abſolute Obedience in all things Lawful to the Supreme Power; and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance of the Supreme Power upon any Pretence whatſoever. And this being the Article, if we underſtand ſome of the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons aright, on which the whole Impeachment turns; and that if we were clear of this Article, there would be no Reaſon to follow us upon the others; it gives us an Occaſion to enlarge a little further upon this Point.

My Lords, Non-Reſiſtance in general we do aſſert as a Rule; yet we agree there is an Exception implied in that Rule, and that Exception, we ſay, was the Caſe of the Revolution. When this general Rule has an Exception in it, it muſt be in a Caſe of the utmoſt Neceſſity implied, and is not expreſſed, ſtated, or determined in any Law or Act of Parliament that I know of, except in the Particular herein after-mentioned.

My Lords, This Doctrine is agreeable to the Scriptures; is Taught by the Church of England in her Homilies, Articles and Injunctions; by Her Biſhops and Fathers; and in all Admonitions we have had from the Biſhops and Paſtors of the Church, from time to time. I ſhall not name them, ſome of them have been named. We ſhall produce Sermons Preach'd before Her Majeſty, your Lordſhips, and the Houſe of Commons, on the moſt ſolemn Occaſions, where this Doctrine has been fully aſſerted, even beyond what the Doctor has laid down. Both your Lordſhips and the Commons have returned Thanks to the Biſhops and Clergy that have Preach'd them; and therefore we can't apprehend our ſelves to be worthy of this Reprehenſion. We ſhall produce them in Evidence, and vouch Authorities before the Reformation, and in the Infancy of it: The Homilies which are allowed by the Church, and Eſtabliſh'd by ſeveral Acts of Parliament.

This we take to be agreeable to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm. The Law makes it High Treaſon, for particular Perſons to Reſiſt the Supreme Power.

The Spencers in Edward the Second's time aſſerted, That if the King did not Govern well, the People might remove him, and that by Force; but that was condemned by two Acts of Parliament, in E. II. and E. III.'s Reign. The Act of 25 E. III. that famous Act that has been the Standard for Treaſon for many Ages, is agreeable to the Doctor's Aſſertion; and when there were Breaches made in that Law in Queen Mary's Time, thoſe Acts were again repeal'd: Now I need not repeat, that to reſiſt the Executive Power, and the Perſon of the King by that Act, is compaſſing his Death, and levying War againſt him. They have always look'd upon it, that Reſiſting the King is levying War, it is a compaſſing and imagining the Death of the King; I ſhall therefore ſay no more on that particular Act of Parliament, but come to later Times.

In

In the Act of 12 Car. II. Cap 30. it is declared, That it is the Undoubted and Fundamental Law of this Kingdom, that neither the Peers of this Realm, nor the Commons, nor both together, in Parliament or out of Parliament, nor the People collectively or representatively, nor any other Perſons whatſoever, ever had, have, or ought to have any Coercive Power over the Perſons of the Kings of this Realm. Here is a Declaration as full as can be, I am ſure as full as the Doctor's Sermon; and yet this Declaration, I do agree, muſt have an Exception in a Caſe of the utmoſt Neceſſity: And I hope there is as much Reaſon to allow the Doctor an Exception, as in this Act of Parliament.

The next Act is the Corporation Act, 13 Car. II. in which all the Officers of Corporations are directed to Swear, That they do believe, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King. Here is as full a Declaration to be made by all the Magiſtrates of Corporations, as general Words can carry, and yet I would be underſtood in every one of theſe, that there is an Exception of Neceſſity; but whether the Doctor was a proper Judge of that Neceſſity, I ſhall take Notice by and by.

The next is the Militia Act, 13 and 14 Car. II. and there is the ſame Declaration to be made by every Lord-Lieutenant, Deputy-Leiutenant, Officer and Soldier, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King. And the Preamble of that Act is ſtronger, for in the Preamble of that Act it is declared, That both or either of the Houſes of Parliament, cannot nor lawfully may raiſe or levy any War, offenſive or defenſive, againſt his Majeſty, his Heirs, or lawful Succeſſors.

The next Act is the Act of Uniformity 13 and 14 Car. II.

The next is the Act for Select Veſtries, which enjoins all Deans, Parſons, &c. to make this Declaration, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King.

The next Act is the Act of Aſſociation, whereby all Perſons are engaged to ſtand by and aſſiſt one another, againſt all his Majeſty's Enemies, without any Limitation.

The next is the Act which eſtabliſhes the Abjuration Oath, 13 and 14 W. III. which was taken in the late Reign, and the Acts of 1 and 6 of Her Majeſty's Reign, whereby all Perſons in Office are to ſwear to defend the King and Queen, to the uttermoſt of their Power, againſt all Traiterous Conſpiracies and Attempts whatſoever, which ſhall be made againſt Her Perſon, Crown or Dignity. And that theſe Words may have the plain Senſe put upon them, They are to declare that they make that Recognition, Acknowledgment, Abjuration, Renunciation, and Promiſe, heartily, willingly, and truly, upon the true Faith of a Chriſtian. Now this Reſiſtance can't be agreeable to this Abjuration, for to reſiſt is not the way to Defend.

My Lords, We think that the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, as a general Propoſition, is warranted by the Laws of the Land; and when there is an Exception implied therein, muſt only be determined by the Wiſdom of the Nation, and not by any one Doctor or private Perſon whatſoever. The Doctor's Propoſition is about Non-Reſiſtance of the Supreme Power, and we have no Reaſon to take a greater Weight upon us than the Words of our Sermon; and whatever Conſtruction may be put upon it, in Relation to the Executive Power, yet the Propoſition holds as to the Supreme Power, which is all the Doctor has aſſerted. The Supreme Power is the Queen and Parliament, and to this Supreme Power the Doctor has preſs'd the utter Unlawfulneſs of Reſiſtance; and I have not heard it ſaid by any that it is lawful to reſiſt the Queen in Parliament. Here is the Strength of the Nation, and here there ought to be a Standing Obedience, otherwiſe it is ſetting up the People to be Judges, and not the Collective Body of the People aſſembled in Parliament.

My Lords, In a particular Caſe of the utmoſt Neceſſity, what Conſtruction muſt be made as an Exception out of the General Rule, muſt be left to Time and Circumſtances (when ſuch a Caſe ſhall happen) to determine, and muſt be determined by the Wiſdom and Strength of the Nation, if ever ſuch a Caſe ſhould happen, which I hope never will more.

There is indeed one Exception made in one particular Caſe in the Bill of Rights, where it is Enacted, That if the King or Queen ſhall be reconciled to the See of Rome, or profeſs the Popiſh Religion, or marry a Papiſt, then ſuch Perſon ſhall be excluded to inherit the Crown, or have Regal Power in the Realm, and that the People ſhall be abſolved of their Allegiance. And this I take to be the firſt ſtated and determined Exception to this general Rule that ever was made in any Act of Parliament.

My Lords, We think the Government can ſcarce be juſt to it ſelf, that don't encourage and command this Obedience, this Non-Reſiſtance. This is a Rule profitable to all Governments, let the Nature of them be what they will; it is for the Peace and Quiet both of Church and State. It would be wiſe Work to have the Exception to this Rule ſtated by every one that comes into a Pulpit. I know not whether it would not be High Treaſon in them to do it, ſure I am, it would be a high Crime: And if theſe Points are doubtful or diſputable (as at leaſt muſt be agreed) ſure they are no Grounds for an Impeachment.

What Doctrines ſhould a Miniſter of the Church of England preach, if not thoſe that are delivered in the Scriptures, and in the Doctrines of the Church? Muſt he ſearch another Rule than the Scriptures, the Laws and the Fathers of the Church, have laid down? Muſt he tell the People, that the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance of the Supreme Power is the Doctrine of the Church of England? Or muſt he limit this Rule, and ſtate the Exceptions to it? Sure this would be very ſtrange for the Doctor to do: He muſt tell them Reſiſtance is unlawful, but there is an Exception to that Rule; but what that Exception is, I muſt not tell you, but you muſt find it out as you can. Is not this to pick Holes in the Duty and Allegiance of the Subject, and would look like the Blind leading the Blind.

My Lords, We think it would be a very ſtrange thing for a Miniſter of the Goſpel to diſtinguiſh in this Caſe: It would not be allowed him, it would be an Offence for any Preacher to do it. He muſt preach the general Propoſition, he muſt inculcate the General Rule, and he muſt preach in the Words that the Laws of God, and of this Land, have delivered it in; he muſt not vary it, to find Meanings to help the People, like a good Caſuiſt, to diſtinguiſh themſelves out of their Allegiance.

Now ſo far we apprehend is the whole Sermon of the Doctor's to be underſtood, as not razing the Foundations of the Government, not inciting to Rebellion, but preaching Obedience to the Laws of God and Man. It is a great Misfortune for the Doctor to be repreſented as preaching this Doctrine for the ſake of the Pretender. We think at leaſt it may be a Comfort to him, that there is not a Syllable of Proof or Truth in it; and that on the contrary, the Doctor diſclaims all Right in the Pretender, by aſſerting and acknowledging Her Majeſty's Right, and expreſſing a paſſionate Concern, that Her Majeſty is the Relict of the Royal Family.

We have given all the Aſſurance of our Fidelity the Law demands, we have taken the Oath of Abjuration, and been always ſubmiſſive to her Majeſty, and the Laws of the Nation, given all the Security of our Allegiance and Loyalty that the Government required.

The Doctor fully declares his Meaning in this Sermon: Does he not all along ſubmit to the Government, and pray for the Queen and Government? He has done it in ſeveral Places of his Sermon, particularly in one Place, which will carry a great Weight in it. What (ſays he) I have thus freely ſpoken, I hope is as much without Offence, as it proceeds from a tender Concern for Her Majeſty's Perſon, and a hearty Zeal for the Safety of our Church and Conſtitution. Surely after this Declaration, in Common Juſtice, there ought to be no Conſtruction of a Man's Meaning made by Inference. Here is a full Declaration, that what he has done he has done in Service and Zeal to Her Majeſty and the Conſtitution in Church and State.

When there is not through the whole Sermon any plain Words to ground ſuch a Conſtruction, when there is not the leaſt Proof offered, but only by ſuch forc'd Conſtructions, when different Words are pick'd out from different Places, and Words ſo diſtant are joined together to make up Sentences; and then Arguments framed, and Concluſions drawn from thoſe Sentences to make good the Impeachment, we think it is much too hard, and hope it never will be endured, to pick Part of a Line here, and ſix or eight Lines after to pick part of another, and to join the Concluſions of one Sentence, and the Beginning of another; this would be to confound all Reaſon and Underſtanding whatſoever. This we take not to be a right way of Reaſoning, nor a proper Evidence to maintain an Impeachment, and we hope your Lordſhips will therefore acquit the Doctor of this Article.

Mr. Phipps. MY Lords, I am alſo aſſign'd by your Lordſhips to be one of the Council for Doctor Sacheverell, who, I beg leave to ſay, I cannot yet think to be a Criminal; and, when we have been heard, I hope your Lordſhips will not think him ſuch.

I do admit, as the Caſe is ſtated by the Gentlemen who are the Managers for the Commons, that it is a Cauſe of very great Moment, and is worthy of your Lordſhips Determination, becauſe it deſerves the greateſt Deliberation; it being a Cauſe as conſiderable in its Conſequences to Her Majeſty, the Church, and theſe Kingdoms, as ever came before your Lordſhips. And therefore, ſince it has been the Doctor's Misfortune to incur the Diſpleaſure of the Houſe of Commons, and to lye under the Weight of an Impeachment by that Great and Honourable Body, it is his greateſt Comfort (next to his being Innocent) that he has the Honour to have your Lordſhips for his Judges, and the Opportunity of ſo publick a Vindication of his Innocence; for he does not doubt to give your Lordſhips, and all by whom we have the Honour to be heard, full Satisfaction, that he is not Guilty of any of the Crimes charged upon him in any or either of the Articles.

My Lords, We agree with the Managers, that his late Majeſty, when Prince of Orange, did, with an armed Force, undertake a glorious Enterprize for delivering the Kingdom from Popery and Slavery. We admit, that divers Subjects well affected to their Country joined with and aſſiſted him in that Enterprize; and that the Enterprize being crown'd with Succeſs, the late happy Revolution took Effect, and was Eſtabliſh'd. We alſo admit, that the bleſſed Conſequences of the Revolution are, the Enjoyment of our Religion and Laws, the Preſervation of Her Majeſty's Perſon, the many Advantages ariſing by Her Majeſty's wiſe and glorious Adminiſtration, the Proſpect of Happineſs to future Ages by the Settlement of the Succeſſion, and the Union of the two Kingdoms.

But there are other Matters ſuggeſted in the Preamble, in which we differ with the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons; for it is therein alledg'd, That Doctor Sacheverell Preach'd and Publiſh'd his two Sermons with a malicious and ſeditious Intention, to Undermine the Government and Proteſtant Succeſſion, to Defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, to Aſperſe the Memory of His late Majeſty, and Traduce and Condemn the Revolution, to Arraign the Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, to create Jealouſies and Diviſions among Her Majeſty's Subjects, and to Incite them to Sedition and Rebellion. And all this we totally deny.

The Offences charged upon the Doctor are of a very high and heinous Nature, and the greater the Crimes are with which a Man is charged, the clearer and plainer ought the Evidence to be to maintain and make good that Charge. And to make the Doctor a Criminal within theſe Articles, every Branch of the Articles muſt be prov'd as they are laid. It muſt be prov'd that he Preach'd and Publiſh'd theſe Sermons with ſuch wicked, malicious and ſeditious Intention, as is alledg'd in the Preamble; and the Proof ought to be plain and poſitive; for the Laws of England have ſo guarded the Perſons and Properties of the Subjects, that their Lives, Liberties, or Eſtates, cannot be ſubject to Forfeiture, or Reſtraint, by uncertain or conjectural Evidence, by ſtrain'd or unnatural Inferences, Inſinuations, or Inuendo's. And altho' I could cite many Authorities and Determinations in the Courts of Weſtminſter-Hall, wherein the Judges have expreſs'd their Diſlike and Deteſtation of Convicting Men of Offences, either Capital or Criminal, by Inuendo's or Inferences; yet I forbear to trouble your Lordſhips with any of them, becauſe I have an Authority Superior to them all to warrant what I have ſaid, and that is the Determination and Reſolution of your Lordſhips in Sir Samuel Barnardiſton's Caſe, which having been read by Sir Simon Harcourt, I forbear to trouble your Lordſhips with a Repetition of it.

The next thing therefore to be conſidered is, Whether the Sermons were Preach'd with ſuch malicious and ſeditious Intention as is aſſerted in the Preamble, and if there be ſuch plain, direct and poſitive Proof, as is by your Lordſhips Determination, in Sir Samuel Barnardiſton's Caſe, declared to be neceſſary.

But before I come to ſpeak to any particular Article, I beg leave to obſerve ſomething, which though it hath not been made a particular Charge againſt the Doctor in any one Article, yet it has been urged and inſinuated almoſt by every one of the Managers of the Houſe of Commons to enforce every every Article, and that is, That notwithſtanding the Doctor's Expreſſion of Loyalty to the Queen, yet his Intention is to bring in the Pretender.

It has been Objected, as I apprehended (and I beg Pardon if I am miſtaken) " that the Doctor " confines his Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience and " Non-Reſiſtance to a Jure Divino King or Queen, " and that from thence it was eaſy to underſtand " againſt what Queen the Doctor excites the Peo- " ple to take up Arms". If the Queen, who has an Hereditary Right, and alſo a Right confirm'd and eſtabliſh'd by Act of Parliament, cannot be ſaid to be a Jure Divino Queen, I do not know who can. I did not think that the Doctor, who Aſſerts the Hereditary Right of the Queen, could be charg'd with an Intention to bring in the Pretender. I am in your Lordſhips Judgment, whether the denying Her Majeſty's Hereditary Right be not the moſt likely way to bring him in: For I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, whether the denying the Hereditary Right of the Queen, be not to ſuppoſe an Hereditary Right in ſomebody elſe; and whether that does not leave a Way open (when the Queen's Enemies are ſtrong enough) to bring in that Perſon in whom the Hereditary Right is ſuppos'd.

It is Aſſerted, " That the Doctor's pretended " Zeal is for Her Majeſty, but his real Zeal is for " the Pretender: It is hard to ſay a Man means " contrary to what he ſpeaks, and that, though he " declares that the Safety, Rights and Eſtabliſh- " ment of Her Majeſty's Government, with thoſe " of the Church, are the things which he ſo earneſt- " ly contends for, and are his only Aim and Intenti- " on; and though he prays that God will Preſerve " Her Majeſty, for the Comfort and Support of the " Church and Nation, yet it is ſuggeſted that his " chief Aim and Deſign is to Dethrone Her Majeſty, " to ſet the Crown upon the Head of the Pretender, " and to eſtabliſh Popery, or at leaſt a Church in- " dependent on the State. And altho' he Preaches " up Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance under Her " Majeſty's happy Adminiſtration, yet it is object- " ed he ſtirs up the People to Rebellion, and " means Non-Reſiſtance and Paſſive Obedience " to the Gentleman on the other ſide the " Water.

I do agree theſe Things have been urg'd with great Ingenuity, but what Proof, what Evidence is there of any of theſe Matters thus ſuggeſted?

My Lords, By the Law of England Men are not to be Harangu'd out of their Lives, Liberties or Eſtates, but, as I have obſerv'd, it muſt be plain and poſitive Proof alone that can ſubject them to a Forfeiture: And I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, where a Man affirms a Thing in his Sermon, if an Averment by any Body elſe that he means quite the contrary, be a ſufficient Evidence to Convict a Man of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

There is another Matter which I confeſs puts me under a great Difficulty, to determine which way to apply our Defence to the firſt Article, and that is the different Conſtruction which the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons have made of that Part of the Doctor's Sermon, on which the firſt Article is founded. The Gentlemen that ſpoke to the firſt Article (if I apprehend them right) affirm, " That " the Doctor aſſerts an unlimited Obedience, and " the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Queen, as " the Supreme Executive Power, and that ſuch an " Aſſertion was a Reflection upon the Revolution, " which was brought about by the Reſiſtance that " was given to the late King James". And all their Arguments on the firſt Article were grounded on this Aſſertion. But a very Learned Gentleman, who ſpoke Yeſterday to the fourth Article, was pleas'd to object, " That tho' the Doctor Aſſerted " the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme " Power, yet he had no where Aſſerted the utter " Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Queen, thereby " leaving himſelf at liberty to reſiſt the Queen, " and bring in the Pretender.

Now the Queſtion is, which of theſe Conſtructions we muſt believe; if the Conſtruction made by the Gentlemen who ſpoke to the firſt Article be true, then the Doctor has taken that Care of Her Majeſty's Perſon which he ought, by aſſerting the utter Illegality of Reſiſting Her, and hath not left himſelf at liberty to take up Arms againſt Her Majeſty to bring in the Pretender; and ſo the great Objection made againſt the Doctor by the Learned Gentleman who ſpoke to the fourth Article falls. But if his Conſtruction prevails, there is no Reflection on the Revolution, and the firſt Article falls to the Ground; for the Reflecting on the Revolution can be only by aſſerting the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Queen, as the Supreme Executive Power; becauſe the Reſiſtance which brought about the Revolution was made to the late King James only, and not againſt the Legiſlature: But whichſoever of theſe Gentlemen your Lordſhips ſhall be of Opinion is in the Right, I beg leave to ſay, that this may certainly be concluded and inferr'd, That the Conſtruction of that Sentence muſt be very doubtful, in which ſuch Learned Men differ, and conſequently cannot be a Charge ſufficient and certain enough to ground a Conviction for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. Theſe Matters being ſubmitted to your Lordſhips Judgment, I come next to conſider the Articles themſelves, and ſhall humbly propoſe to your Lordſhips Conſideration what I have to offer in Anſwer to them, and ſhall take Notice of the ſeveral Branches of the reſpective Articles, which the Doctor mentions in his Anſwer to them.

As to the firſt Branch of the firſt Article, which charges, the Doctor does Suggeſt and Maintain, that the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the happy Revolution were Odious and Unjuſtifiable; the Doctor denies there are any ſuch Expreſſions in his Sermon at St. Paul's: And I beg leave to ſay, that there is not one Paragraph or Sentence in his Sermon that can ſupport this Charge; the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution not being once mentioned in his Sermon; and therefore I at firſt doubted whether I had the right Sermon; for I could no more find that Sentence in the Doctor's Sermon at St. Paul's, than one of the Learned Managers could find a Text of Scripture, quoted by the Doctor, in his Bible.

One of the Gentlemen who ſpoke to this Article, was pleas'd to admit, that the Words charged in this Part of the Article are not in the Doctor's Sermon, but ſaid there are Words that are tantamount; ſo that this Branch is to be proved by Inuendo's, and yet they have not been pleaſed to let us know what thoſe Words are which do amount to the ſame Signification, and we deny there are any ſuch Words.

The laſt Part of the firſt Article (for I ſhall conſider that next, becauſe it relates to the Revolution) charges, that the Doctor does Suggeſt and Maintain, that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his Majeſty and the Revolution. In anſwer to which I muſt must beg leave to take notice, that the Words of the Sermon are here tranſpos'd and miſplac'd; for the Doctor does not ſay, that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his Majeſty and the Revolution; but he ſays, that to urge the Revolution to juſtify the Doctrine of Dethroning and Murdering of Princes, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours on his Majeſty and the Revolution; for the Doctor in Page 11th, ſays, that " the New Preachers and New Politicians pre- " tend to have a Power to cancel their Allegiance " at Pleaſure, to call their Sovereign to an Account " for High-Treaſon, to Dethrone and Murder him " for a Criminal, as they did the Royal Martyr by " a Judiciary Sentence, and that to juſtify this " Doctrine, they urge the Revolution of this Day: But, ſays he, they are the greateſt Enemies of that, and his late Majeſty, and the moſt ungrateful for the Deliverance, who endeavour to caſt ſuch Black and Odious Colours upon both; ſo that what he ſays is no more than that to juſtify the calling the Sovereign to an Account for High-Treaſon, and the Dethroning and Murdering of him, by the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon both. And is there any Body that has any Reſpect for the glorious and happy Revolution, that has any Regard for the Preſervation of our Conſtitution, can ſay leſs? Can there be a greater Reflection on the Revolution, than to urge That in Vindication of the Rebellion in Forty One, as if the Caſes were alike?

I humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, if there be any Thing in his Sermon that can be conſtru'd to reflect on the Revolution, if the Words be taken according to the Natural and Genuine Senſe of them; nor can it be thought the Doctor would caſt the leaſt Reflection upon it: Can it be imagined, that he who is a Member of Magdalen College in Oxford, ſhould ſo ſoon forget the Attempts that were made on their Liberties, and would reflect on the Revolution, by which not only he and the reſt of the Fellows of that College, but all the Colleges in both the Univerſities, nay, all Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects, now enjoy their Religion, Rights and Liberties? That he who is a Church-of-England-Man ſhould calumniate the Revolution, by which the beſt Eſtabliſh'd Church in the World is preſerv'd from Popiſh Superſtition and Idolatry? That he who contends ſo earneſtly for the Preſervation of our Conſtitution, ſhould caſt Black and Odious Colours on that, by which alone the Succeſſion is ſettled and ſecur'd in the Proteſtant Line, and Her Majeſty is now Lawfully and Rightfully ſeated on the Throne of Her Royal Anceſtors, on which the Doctor prays, and I hope we all join with him, that ſhe may long continue for the Support and Comfort of this Church and Nation? No, my Lords, it is not the Revolution in 1688, but the Revolution in 1648, that he endeavours to blacken, and the Principles by which that was brought to paſs, thoſe Principles which made Rebellious Subjects take up Arms againſt one of the beſt Princes that ever Sway'd the Sceptres of theſe Kingdoms; thoſe Principles which brought that Pious Martyr to the Block, Baniſh'd the Royal Family, and ſet an Uſurper upon the Throne; this is the Dethroning, this is the Murthering which he means: And can any Colours be too Black, any Colours too Odious for ſuch Crimes? No doubt, my Lords, they cannot; and therefore inſtead of charging the Doctor with reflecting on the late happy Revolution, I hope your Lordſhips will be of Opinion he vindicates it in the higheſt degree, when he diſtinguiſheth it from that in 1648, and ſhews what a wide Difference there is between them.

As to that Part of the firſt Article which ſays, That his late Majeſty, in his Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; If the Doctor had not Explain'd himſelf, it is humbly ſubmitted how far he is juſtified by his Majeſty's Declaration. The Declaration ſays, We have thought fit to go over to England, and to carry with us a Force ſufficient, by the Bleſſing of God, to defend us from the Violence of evil Counſellors; and that his Expedition is intended for no other Deſign but to have a free and lawful Parliament: So that this Expedition was to have a Free Parliament, and his Forces were to defend him from the Violence of Evil Counſellors, in carrying on that glorious Deſign; and when the late King James Abdicated the Government, what Reſiſtance was it to ſupply the Vacancy, by ſettling his late Majeſty on the Throne?

In Conſtruction of Words and Sentences, if any part be ambiguous, and may be taken in a double Senſe, it ought in favour of Life and Liberty to be taken in the beſt Senſe. But when the Author declares what his Senſe is, what he means by it, there it cannot be taken in any other Senſe than that: And this is the Doctor's Caſe; for he ſhews, both in his Sermon, and by a Note printed at the Bottom of the Page, that by Reſiſtance he means ſuch Reſiſtance as tended to a Conqueſt: And is he not juſtified in that by his Majeſty's Declaration, wherein he diſowns the wicked Attempt of Conqueſt? And by the Vote of both Houſes of Parliament, who ſo highly reſented the Deſign of making that Expedition a Conqueſt, that they ordered a Pamphlet which attempt- to prove it ſuch, to be Burnt by the Common Hangman?

And therefore, if the general Words would have carried ſuch a Reflection, yet the Clauſe which explains it, being Printed with it, prevents ſuch a Conſtruction; for there is no Reaſon to apprehend any Danger from the Poyſon, when the Antidote is adminiſtred at the ſame Time. Thus, my Lords, I take it, I have anſwered every Branch of this Article, and ſhewn, that there are not any Expreſſions in the Sermon, that can Warrant or Support any Part of it: But, from what I obſerv'd from the Gentlemen who are the Managers, and ſpoke to this Article, the great Foundation and Streſs upon which this Article depends, is in the Sentence in Pag. 11. of the Doctor's Sermon, where he ſays, The Grand Security of our Government, and the very Pillar upon which it ſtands, is founded upon the ſteady Belief of the Subjects Obligation to an abſolute and unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power in all things lawful, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever. But I take it, the Charge in this Article can never be ſupported by any Words in this Sentence; for it is Evident, that the abſolute and unconditional Obedience, which he ſays Subjects are obliged to, is to the Supreme Power in all things lawful; and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever, (being in one and the ſame Sentence) muſt be intended to be of the Supreme Power in all Things lawful; ſo that it is no more than if he had ſaid, 'Tis utterly Illegal, upon any Account whatſoever, to reſiſt the Supreme Power in Things lawful. Can any Aphoriſm be truer than this, viz. That where the Thing commanded by the Supreme Power is lawful, the Reſiſtance given to it muſt be unlawful? And this is all the Doctor hath aſſerted in this Paragraph.

If I may have Leave to cite a Foreign Author, Puffendorf ſays, The Supreme Power is that in which the Legiſlature is veſted; for he ſays, Human Laws are the Decrees of the Supreme Power, concerning Matters to be obſerv'd by the Subjects for the Good of the State. And one of the Learned Managers, who ſpoke to this Article, admits it to be ſo. And then the Doctor's Aſſertion is, That the Security of our Government, and the very Pillar on which it ſtands, is founded upon the ſteady Belief of the Subjects Obligation to an Abſolute and Unconditional Obedience to the Laws made by the Queen, Lords and Commons, in Parliament aſſembled, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſting ſuch Laws on any Pretence whatſoever. And if this be not ſo univerſal a Truth, as not to admit any Exception, is humbly ſubmitted to your Lordſhips: And this is an Anſwer to all that hath been ſaid againſt us on the firſt Article. For all the Gentlemen have founded their Diſcourſe on a Suppoſition, that the Doctor preach'd up an Abſolute Unconditional Obedience to, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance of the Queen; whereas he preaches up the Illegality of Reſiſting the Supreme Power, and that in all Things lawful.

Suppoſe it could be collected, that by the Supreme Power the Doctor meant the Supreme Executive Power, which is the Queen; yet the Doctor cannot be thought by this to reflect on the Revolution, or to condemn that Oppoſition given to King James.

For can it be imagin'd, that he condemns the Oppoſition given to that Prince in the Diſpenſing Power, in committing the Biſhops, depriving Men of their Freeholds and Liberties, by Eccleſiaſtical and other unlawful Commiſſions, and endeavouring to eſtabliſh Popery, by introducing a Foreign Power? I ſay, Can it be imagin'd the Doctor condemns that Oppoſition, when he urges the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power in all Things lawful? If thoſe Proceedings of King James were lawful, then the Doctor condemns the Oppoſition given to 'em; but thoſe Proceedings being Illegal, the Oppoſition given to them is no where condemn'd by the Doctor, nor hath this Paragraph in his Sermon any Relation to it.

To carry this yet further; Suppoſe that the urging the Illegality of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever had been a Subſtantive Clauſe, and had no Relation to, or Dependance upon any other Clauſe or Sentence; or ſuppoſe ſuch a General Aſſertion can be collected from any Part of the Doctor's Sermon, yet it muſt be taken only for a General Propoſition: And if ſuch General Propoſitions are true in the general, and to a common Intent, tho' they are ſubject to particular Exceptions, yet it is ſubmitted, whether the Doctor is not well warranted in aſſerting ſuch a General Propoſition, without mentioning the particular Exception? For all General Rules have Exceptions; and yet the Perſon that cites them, ſeldom or never mentions the Exceptions; for whenever ſuch General Propoſitions are urged, the Exceptions are always underſtood and implied. And there was leſs Reaſon to mention the Exception in this Caſe, becauſe it is ſo univerſally known: It had the Concurrence of the whole Nation, and was ſo often eſtabliſh'd and approv'd by the Legiſlature.

And the Doctor entirely concurs with the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, that the Revolution is an Exception; and is not Adverſary to one of the Learned Managers, who was pleas'd to admit, it was the only Exception from this General Rule. And I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, if the naming that Exception, would not be a greater Reflection on the Revolution, than the Preaching that Doctrine in general Terms, without naming it; for to name it now, ſince the Revolution, would be to ſuppoſe, that it was not implied and underſtood as an Exception out of that General Propoſition, before the Revolution; and then the Exception is to be warranted by the Revolution; which is to infer, that no Reſiſtance was lawful till the Revolution: Whereas we ſay, That ſuch an Extraordinary Caſe as that of the Revolution, was always implied as an Exception out of that General Doctrine, and ſo the Doctrine juſtifies the Revolution.

And therefore, the Doctor urging this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance in ſuch general Terms, as all other General Propoſitions are uſually urged, it is humbly ſubmitted, Whether he can for this be eſteem'd guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; eſpecially ſince this very Doctrine hath been affirmed in ſuch general Terms, by Learned Men in all Ages, by our Church, and by the Legiſlature; of which I'll beg Leave to give ſome few Inſtances.

When the Duke of Monmouth was to be executed, his preſent Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, the preſent Lord Biſhop of Bath and Wells, the then Biſhops of Ely and Bath and Wells, were appointed by the King to attend his Grace. They preſs'd him to make a particular Confeſſion of his Crime, and to acknowledge himſelf guilty of Rebellion: His Anſwer was, He died a Proteſtant of the Church of England. They replied, My Lord, If you be of the Church of England, you muſt acknowledge the Doctrine of Non Reſiſtance to be true.

Archbiſhop Tillotſon, in his Letter writ to my Lord Ruſſel, July 20. 1683. offers theſe Conſiderations concerning the Point of Reſiſtance. "(1.) "That the Chriſtian Religion doth plainly forbid "the Reſiſting of Authority. (2.) That in the "ſame Law which eſtabliſhes our Religion, it is "declared, It is not lawful upon any Pretence what-"ſoever to take up Arms againſt the King.

Biſhop Sanderſon, in his Works, Pag. 522. ſays, No Conjuncture of Circumſtances whatſoever, can make that expedient to be done at any time, that is of it ſelf, and in the kind, unlawful. For a Man to take up Arms (Offenſive or Defenſive) againſt a Lawful Sovereign, being a Thing in its Nature ſimply, and de toto genere. unlawful; may not be done by any Man, at any Time, in any Caſes, upon any Colour or Pretence whatſoever.

Thus your Lordſhips obſerve, how much higher theſe Great and Learned Men carried this Doctrine, than Doctor Sacheverell hath done in his Sermon: And Multitudes of Inſtances there are, which ſhew, That it hath been the Concurrent and Univerſal Opinion of all the Learned Men of our Church, in all Ages, that Reſiſtance of the Sovereign Power is not lawful upon any Pretence whatſoever. And what Puniſhment, what Cenſures have been inflicted upon, nay, what Fault has been found with any of them to this Day? One of the Learned Gentlemen, to enforce the Legality of Reſiſtance, was pleas'd to urge the Original Contract, as the Foundation of the Prerogative of the Crown, and the Liberties of the People; and to aſſert, That if the Supreme Executive Power invaded the Rights of the People, the Contract was diſſolv'd, and the People diſcharg'd from their Allegiance. I will not be poſitive as to the very Words, but I take this to be the Purport of them.

When the Original Contract was made, that Learned Gentleman did not think fit to inform us. Was it before Magna Charta? If ſo, why not compriz'd in it? All the Liberties the Subjects then laid Claim to, being included in that Act; and 'tis much, a Thing of that Moment, and which was the Source and Spring of all their Liberties, ſhould not be ſo much as mentioned in it. I never met with it in any of our Law-Books, in my little Experience. - - - - I never heard it urg'd in any Court before. Was it before the Statute of 25 Edw. III.? I never knew it pleaded to any Indictment for High Treaſon, nor objected, to enervate or take off the Force of that Statute: And our Law-Books being ſilent in it, I think it is too tender a Point for us, who are no Members of any Part of the Legiſlature, to meddle with. And therefore, till the Legiſlature have declar'd what the Original Contract is, and determin'd what Act of the Supreme Executive Power ſhall amount to a Diſſolution of that Original Contract, and diſcharge the Subjects from their Allegiance; I muſt beg Pardon, if I think, that as to Reſiſtance in general, the Law ſtands ſtill upon the Foot of the 25th of Edward III. and that all Reſiſtance, except in the Caſe of the Revolution, is ſtill Treaſon within that Act.

But to give ſome further Inſtances, in Vindication of the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance. Archbiſhop Tillotſon, in his Letter to the Lord Ruſſel, ſays, The Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance is the Doctrine of all Proteſtant Churches: I may add, it was the Doctrine of Chriſt and his Apoſtles: It was the Doctrine in David's Time; for it was this Doctrine that reſtrained David from offering Violence to King Saul, tho' that King ſought to take away his Life. It was that Holy Man's Opinion, that he could not lift up his Hand againſt the Lord's Anointed, and be guiltleſs. Can it be done now with greater Innocence than it could then? Is the Perſon of the Lord's Anointed now leſs Sacred than it was then? Or have the People now a greater Liberty to reſiſt, than David had then? My Lords, One of the Learned Gentlemen ſaid, That in reſpect of the Patriarchal Right, it is a Doctrine as old as Adam, and I will not pretend to carry it further.

The next Thing therefore to be conſider'd, is, Whether this Doctrine, that is of ſo great Antiquity, has had any Alteration; whether it hath been preach'd, or urg'd in any other Terms ſince the Revolution, than it was before. Biſhop Beveridge, in a Book call'd Private Thoughts upon Religion, Pag. 247, 249, 250. ſays, Upon any ſeeming real Default or Defect of our Sovereign, we are to be more earneſt in our Prayers and Interceſſion for him; but upon no Account to fight or rebel againſt him. This Book had Her Majeſty's Royal Licenſe, and was counterſign'd by a Noble Lord, eminent for Learning, and Her Majeſty's Principal Secretary of State; I mean, the Right Honourable the Earl of Sunderland.

I beg Leave to cite next a Learned Gentleman, whoſe Affection to the Government, and Underſtanding in Antiquity, no body can doubt: 'Tis Dr. Kennet, who in his Sermon preach'd before the Houſe of Commons, January 30. 1705. ſays, This is the true Foundation of that common Axiom, The King can do no Wrong; becauſe there is no Right nor Remedy againſt his Royal Perſon. And in the ſame Sermon he ſays, It was declarative of our Original Conſtitution, (which one would think ſhould be the Original Contract, unleſs the Original Contract and the Original Conſtitution differ) that our Legiſlature, upon Occaſion of this Day, would have it expreſs'd, That by the Undoubted and Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, neither the Peers of this Realm, nor the Commons, nor Both together, in Parliament, or out of Parliament, nor the People, collectively or repreſentatively, nor any other Perſons whatſoever, ever had, have, or ought to have, any Coercive Power over the Perſons of the Kings of this Realm. And I think it is evident, where there can be no Coercive Power, there cannot be any Reſiſtance. This was but in the Year 1705. And was the Original Contract found out ſince? If not, then it is plain, the Commons did not think this Doctrine to derogate from that Contract, or to reflect upon the Revolution; for the Doctor had the Thanks of the Commons for his Sermon, and their Order to Print it.

I do moſt readily concur with the Learned Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, That that Reverend Bench is fill'd with Fathers of the Church, who are as great an Ornament to it for Learning and Piety as any of their Predeceſſors, and are moſt juſtly famed for their Religious Moderation; and therefore Inſtances of their aſſerting this Doctrine ſince the Revolution, will have the greateſt Weight with your Lordſhips, and tend the moſt to the Satisfaction of that Honourable Houſe, upon whoſe Impeachment the Doctor is brought hither.

The Biſhop of St. Aſaph, in his Sermon on the 30th of January, 1699. preach'd before the Lord-Mayor, Pag. 18. ſays, It is plain, that a Government can't poſſibly ſubſiſt for any Time, where any kind of Violence is allowed againſt the Magiſtrate: Government is at an End, where Rulers are expos'd to Popular Aſſaults.

The Biſhop of Lincoln, in his Sermon Preach'd before your Lordſhips the 30th of January, 1708. pag. 15, 16, 17, ſays, Where-ever that Supreme Power and Authority is Lodg'd, or in whomſoever it reſides, we are bound to pay either an Active or Paſſive Obedience, muſt either do what it requires, or ſuffer what it inflicts. This is, without Controverſy, the ſtanding Doctrine of Chriſtianity, and has been confirm'd by the Practice of the beſt Chriſtians in all Ages of the Church. My Lord Biſhop likewiſe cites the Words of the Statute of the 12th of Charles II. which were mention'd by Dr. Kennet; your Lordſhips were pleas'd to thank my Lord Biſhop for this Sermon, and deſir'd him to Print it.

My Lord Archbiſhop of York, in his Sermon Preach'd before your Lordſhips in 1700, has ſtated this Doctrine ſo fully and clearly, that it is not capable of the leaſt Contradiction or Doubt: His Grace expreſſes himſelf thus, That there is ſuch a Submiſſion due from all Subjects to the Supreme Authority of the Place where they Live, as ſhall Tie up their Hands from oppoſing or reſiſting it by Force, is evident from the very Nature and Ends of Political Society; and I dare ſay, there is not that Country upon Earth, let the Form of their Government be what it will, (Abſolute Monarchy, Ariſtocracy, or Commonwealth) where this is not a Part of the Conſtitution. Subjects muſt obey Paſſively, where they cannot obey Actively, otherwiſe the Government would be precarious, and the Publick Peace at the Mercy of every Malecontent; and a Door would be ſet open to all the Inſurrections, Rebellions and Treaſons in the World. Nor is this only a State-Doctrine, but the Doctrine alſo of Jeſus Chriſt; and that a Neceſſary and Indiſpenſible one too, as ſufficiently appears from theſe famous Words of St. Paul's, Rom. 13. 1, 2. which are ſo plain that they need no Comment: So that ſo long as this Text ſtands in our Bibles, the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance or Paſſive Obedience muſt be of Obligation to all Chriſtians.

Is not this Doctrine confirm'd by our Church in her Homilies, and enjoin'd to be read on certain Days in the Church? Are not theſe Homilies allow'd by the Articles? Are not theſe Articles eſtabliſh'd by the 13th of Eliz. Chap. 14.? And is not that very Act confirm'd and made Perpetual by the Act of Union made in the Fifth Year of Her Majeſty? Is it not likewiſe ratify'd and eſtabliſh'd by the Legiſlature, by the Act of the 12th of Charles the Second, cited in the Sermons of the Biſhop of Lincoln and Dr. Kennet; by the Act of the 13th of Charles the Second? For that Act of the 13th of Charles the Second, Chap. 4. obliges all Miniſters, &c. to ſubſcribe a Declaration: The firſt Part whereof was this, I A. B. Do declare that it is not Lawful upon any Pretence whatſoever to take up Arms againſt the King. Was not that Declaration to be Swore to by all Officers of Corporations, by the Corporation-Act; by all Lieutenants, Deputy-Lieutenants, and all Officers and Soldiers of the Militia, by the Militia-Act? And can any Man doubt the Truth of that Doctrine, which the Legiſlature has obliged the greateſt Part of the Nation ſo ſolemnly to ſubſcribe and ſwear to? We have collected many more Inſtances of this kind, which we will offer to your Lordſhips in the Courſe of our Evidence.

Thus your Lordſhips obſerve how this Doctrine hath been Preach'd and Maintain'd by Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Eminent Divines, confirm'd and eſtabliſh'd by the Church, and by the Legiſlature: And is this Doctrine alter'd; or hath it receiv'd any Diminution or Reſtriction by the Revolution? I will not preſume to ſay, but are in your Lordſhips Judgment, on the Conſideration of the ſeveral Sermons before-mention'd, Preach'd and Publiſh'd with the reſpective Approbation of both Houſes of Parliament ſince the Revolution. I beſeech your Lordſhips, How many Revolutions have there been in this Kingdom, and yet this Doctrine always continued the ſame; and I ſubmit, whether we have not the Authority of your Lordſhips on this very Point; for in a Sermon Preach'd before your Lordſhips on the 30th of January 1702, by my Lord Biſhop of Carliſle, his Lordſhip expreſſes himſelf thus. Our Foundations, 'tis to be hoped, are not ſhaken by the Weight of thoſe many Great and Extraordinary Revolutions that have paſs'd upon us. The All-wiſe Providence of God has frequently of late (and, as ſome of us always thought, very graciouſly) exchang'd our Governors; but if we ungratefully alter our Notions of the Divine Right of Government, and throw off our Ancient and Primitive Rules of Obedience, we ſhall make an unworthy Return for the Mercies we have received. I hope I may have your Lordſhips Leave to conclude your Lordſhips are of the ſame Opinion, ſince my Lord Biſhop had your Lordſhips Thanks for his Sermon, and your Deſire to Print it. I alſo preſume to offer it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether this very Doctrine be not eſtabliſh'd and enjoin'd under the Obligation of an Oath, by the Legiſlature, in the Reign of his late Majeſty, and of her preſent Majeſty; I mean in the Abjuration-Oath, in which Oath there is this Clauſe, viz. And I do Swear that I will bear Faith and True Allegiance to Her Majeſty, and Her will defend to the utmoſt of my Power againſt all Traiterous Conſpiracies whatſoever, which ſhall be made againſt Her Perſon, Crown and Dignity. I believe it will not be deny'd by any Lawyer, that taking up Arms againſt Her Majeſty is High-Treaſon, by the Statute of the 25th of Edward the Third; and therefore the Parliament having enjoin'd all Perſons in Office, &c. to defend Her Majeſty againſt all Traiterous Conſpiracies and Attempts, ſhew, that it was their Opinion, that the taking up Arms and Reſiſting Her Majeſty, upon any Pretence whatſoever, is unlawful; becauſe whereſoever Reſiſtance is Lawful, the Defence muſt be Unlawful.

I would only beg Leave to add, that the Puniſhment inflicted by our Law in this World for Reſiſtance, and the Judgment denounc'd againſt it in the Next, ſufficiently evinces the Illegality of it. Taking up Arms and Reſiſting againſt the Queen, by the Statute of the 25th of Edward the Third, is High-Treaſon; the Puniſhment of which is to be Drawn, Hang'd and Quarter'd. And in what Condition they are to be in a future State, St. Paul informs us: For he ſays, They that Reſiſt ſhall receive to themſelves Damnation. And ſurely no Body will conteſt the Truth of that Doctrine, the Breach of which is attended with ſuch diſmal Conſequences. I hope, therefore, ſince this Doctrine has been ſo univerſally preach'd and approv'd, the Preaching of it now ſhall not be thought to reflect on the Revolution, more than it has done hitherto, ſince Her Majeſty's Happy Acceſſion to the Throne; and more than it did in the Reign of his late Majeſty, who was the Glorious Inſtrument of that Happy Revolution. Was not his Majeſty appriz'd of the Neceſſary Means by which the Revolution was brought about? Had not His late Majeſty as tender a Regard for the Honour of the Revolution, as any Body elſe can be ſuppoſed to have? No body can doubt it: And yet this Doctrine was preach'd in his Time, in as general Terms as the Doctor has preach'd it; and not only without Objection, but with the Approbation of his Majeſty, and both Houſes of Parliament. And if all this will not vindicate the Doctrine; yet, I hope, it will at leaſt excuſe the Doctor from being a Criminal.

Can he be a Criminal for Preaching that Doctrine which has been aſſerted by ſo many Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and other Eminent Divines, not only with Impunity, but even with the Approbation of both Houſes of Parliament? That Doctrine which is enjoin'd by our Church, ratify'd, confirm'd and eſtabliſh'd by the Legiſlature, and which is the Doctrine of all the Proteſtant Churches in the World, which was the Doctrine of our Saviour himſelf, and which hath been the Doctrine ever ſince Adam, and will continue ſo as long as there is a Bible upon Earth?

Can a Man be a Criminal for Preaching the Doctrine of Paſſive-Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance, tho' without Reſtriction and Limitation, while we are ſo happy as to have her Majeſty to Reign over us, upon whoſe Life the Welfare and Happineſs of theſe Nations depend, as much (I hope I may be excus'd if I ſay more) than the Welfare of any Nation ever did upon the Life of any Prince whatſoever ſince the Foundation of the World? And therefore we are ſure your Lordſhips will not leſſen Her Security; and the rather, becauſe it is impoſſible, during her Majeſty's Life, any Invaſion or the leaſt Attempt ſhould be made upon that Religion, that Liberty and Property, for the Preſervation of which ſhe run ſo great a Hazard.

This

This is what I humbly offer to your Lordſhips, on behalf of my Client, on this Head. And tho' I have mention'd theſe Inſtances, to ſhow in what general Senſe the Doctrine of Paſſive-Obedience has been Preach'd, and that if the Doctor had aſſerted it in ſuch general Terms, he could be no more a Criminal than others; yet it muſt be always underſtood that he does not aſſert it in ſuch general Terms, but only aſſerts the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power in all Things lawful.

Before I quit this Article, I would take notice, it has been objected, that it is highly improper and unſeaſonable for Divines in their Pulpits to meddle with Matters of this Nature: In anſwer to which, I would (beſides the Injunction that the Apoſtles have laid on their Succeſſors, to put People in Mind of being ſubject to Principalities and Powers) humbly offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration, a Bold and Seditious Paragraph in a Pamphlet Printed in 1705, call'd, The Review; which hath this Paragraph, If the next Parliament ſhould purſue the Steps of the laſt, the Nation, in my Opinion, will be ſo much nearer that Criſis of Time, when Engliſh Liberty being brought to the laſt Extremity, muſt open the Magazine of Original Power. The ſame Author, ſpeaking of the Family of the Stuarts, calls it the Line of all the World, fam'd for Blood, and that had Ravaged the beſt Families of the Kingdom. And in another Paragraph he ſays, In ſhort, if Jure Divino comes upon the Stage, the Queen has no more Title to the Crown than my Lord Mayor's Horſe: All the People are bound by the Laws of God to depoſe Her as an Uſurper, and reſtore their Rightful and Lawful King, James the Third. If therefore to defame the whole Line of Her Majeſty; to aſſert that the Pretender has an Hereditary Right to the Crown; if telling the People, if they do not like the Parliament, they muſt have Recourſe to the Magazine of Original Power, be not ſounding a Trumpet to Rebellion, and does not make this Doctrine ſeaſonable and neceſſary to be preach'd at this Time, we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips. And therefore, I humbly hope, that inſtead of laying a Brand of indelible Infamy on this Doctrine, your Lordſhips, for the Preſervation of Her Majeſty, and Her Succeſſors, and for the ſecuring the Peace of the Kingdom, will convey this Doctrine as entire, and in as full Force, down to Poſterity, as it was tranſmitted to your Lordſhips by your Noble Progenitors.

And as to what one of the Honourable Gentlemen concluded with, viz. That your Lordſhips would direct what Doctrine the Miniſters ſhould Preach:

If there be any Doctrine in the Bible not proper to be preach'd; if there be any Doctrine, except that of the Deity, of greater Antiquity than this, which commences from Adam, or is more uſeful or neceſſary for the Preſervation of the Government, then we ſubmit this Doctrine ſhould be let alone. Upon the whole Matter, I am in your Lordſhips Judgment, if upon Conſideration of what hath been ſaid, your Lordſhips can be of Opinion, that the Doctor is guilty of the High Crimes and Miſdemeanors contain'd in the Firſt Article.

Mr. Dee. MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhips, After ſo much has been ſaid, and ſo well preſſed by the Gentlemen that have gone before me, of the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance (which is ſo well eſtabliſh'd by the Opinion of the Fathers of the Church, and founded on the Laws of the Land) I ſhould think my ſelf very unmannerly to ſpend your Lordſhips Time, in repeating it in worſe Words. I beg Leave only to make a few Remarks: Firſt on ſome Generals, and then to add a few Words, and draw an Inference or two from one Law that has not yet been taken Notice of.

My Lords, We readily join with the Gentlemen who managed on behalf of the Houſe of Commons, in deſiring your Lordſhips to aſſert Fundamentals; and deſire your Lordſhips to conſider the Ancient Legal Conſtitution of the Kingdom. This we readily comply with them in, and doubt not but your Lordſhips will do it.

My Lords, There was ſome Notice taken of the Time and Place where this Sermon preach'd; and it was ſaid by one of the Gentlemen, that it was an improper Time, becauſe it was a Doctrine fit only to be preach'd in the Reign of a bad Prince, but not of a good one. My Lords, indeed I am at a Loſs to underſtand that: I think, if at any Time, it is ſeaſonable when we have ſo gracious a Princeſs upon the Throne, much rather than in the Reign of a Tyrant or Uſurper.

My Lords, This Doctrine has been made appear to your Lordſhips to be conſonant to the Laws of God, and the Laws of the Land; and when we have laid before your Lordſhips our Proofs that have been opened, I hope your Lordſhips will allow we have proved our Caſe.

The Gentlemen of the other Side ſaid they had proved their Articles: But how? In no other way than by reading the Sermon, which we hope ſhall be permitted to ſpeak for it ſelf.

My Lords, It was ſaid, that the Municipal Laws of the Land ſignify nothing only in Times of Peace. What the Meaning of that is, I know not, unleſs that the Laws muſt be ſilent in the Time of War; but the way to maintain Peace, and to prevent Blood and Wars at Home, is to preſerve our Laws.

My Lords, It has been likewiſe urg'd as a Maxim, Thre there can be no Right, but there muſt be a Remedy to preſerve it. And thereupon it was hinted, as if there were ſome ſecret Right veſted in the People to do ſomething they did not think fit to name. That Saying, my Lords, I take to be a Maxim in the Law, and to relate only to Legal Matters, and the Meaning of it to be, That when any Man has a Property, the ſame Law that gives Property, gives him a Remedy, if the ſame be invaded. But I never underſtood that Maxim to be meant of a Remedy by Force; and I am ſure, in moſt Caſes, ſuch a Remedy is worſe than the Diſeaſe.

My Lords, We would not be thought (I am ſure no Gentleman of our Side would be thought) in the leaſt to reflect on the Revolution mention'd in the Impeachment; nor does any thing, as we think, that the Doctor has ſaid in his Sermon, in the leaſt look that way. The general Poſition of the utter Illegality of Reſiſting the Supreme Power, does (as it has been obſerv'd already) imply in it a Condition, (which perhaps may extend to ſome other Caſes); and, as we ſay, extends to that of the Revolution.

One of the Managers inſtanced in the Fourth Command, which in general forbids any Work to be done on the Lord's Day; and yet, ſays he, Works of Neceſſity and Mercy are allowed to be done on that Day, and are an implied Exception. The like we ſay of the implied Exception to the general general Doctrine laid down by the Doctor of the Illegality of Reſiſtance.

My Lords, Certainly there is no room to ſuppoſe any Reflection to be made on his late Majeſty; for ſurely his Majeſty wanted no Excuſe for his coming hither; nor could he be guilty of any thing that we properly call Reſiſtance. He was a Sovereign Prince, and might do what he thought fit. He owed no Allegiance to any one, ſo could not be ſaid to reſiſt, in the Senſe Reſiſtance bears in the Doctor's Sermon, which is the Reſiſtance by Subjects to the Supreme Power.

My Lords, I now beg Leave to mention the Act of the Second Year of King William and Queen Mary, entituled, An Act for a general Pardon; by the laſt Clauſe whereof it is provided, That nothing in that Act ſhall extend to Pardon, or diſcharge any one for counſelling or procuring the raiſing War againſt their Majeſties, after the 13*th Day of* February, 1688, unleſs ſuch Perſon ſhall before the 26*th of* July take the following Oath. Then follows the Oath of Allegiance. From hence I beg Leave to make an Inference or two: Firſt, That it was the Senſe of the Legiſlature at that Time, that thoſe Perſons that contrived or abetted the raiſing War againſt their Majeſties after they came to the Crown, were guilty of a High Crime, and ſtood in need of a Pardon. So that if any thing had ſhaken the Doctrine of the Illegality of Reſiſtance, here Reſiſtance is made as Criminal as it was before. Secondly, It appears by that Clauſe to be the Opinion of the Legiſlature, that by the Oath of Allegiance, as it is now framed, this Doctrine of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance is firmly eſtabliſh'd. For, my Lords, To what Purpoſe ſhould that Oath be made the Condition of a Pardon for having reſiſted, unleſs they thought that Oath laid an Obligation on the Perſons taking it not to do ſo again?

My Lords, That Conſtruction which ſome of the Managers for the Commons put on the Doctor's Sermon, that this Notion of Non-Reſiſtance could only be applied to ſomebody beyond Sea, we think to be very hard and ſtrained: I am ſure it don't appear from any thing the Doctor has ſaid in his Sermon; but the contrary plainly appears; for the Doctor doth aſſert Her Majeſty's Hereditary Right, and yet doth not reflect on the Revolution; for though he ſpeaks of Her Majeſty's Hereditary Right, he does not any where ſay, that ſhe has no other than an Hereditary Right in Her. And it was owned by one of the Gentlemen that managed for the Houſe of Commons, that his late Majeſty had a ſingle Right by the Act of Settlement; but that Her Majeſty has a twofold Right, a Right according to the Act of Settlement, and an Hereditary Right too.

My Lords, There has been a great deal of Time ſpent, therefore I ſhall only make this one Remark further, that is, That the Learned Managers for the Houſe of Commons have drawn very many Inferences, by their Skill and Ingenuity, from Paſſages in the Doctor's Sermon, which I believe none of your Lordſhips can think the Doctor ever thought of, when he was compoſing his Sermon, or delivering it in the Pulpit.

Doctor Henchman. MY Lords, I am likewiſe aſſign'd Council for Doctor Sacheverell; but if he has been repreſented by the learned Managers in his proper Colours, if he has been ſet before your Lordſhips in a true Light, and with his Maſk off, I muſt beg leave to ſay, that nothing leſs than the Commands of this Honourable Houſe could prevail with any one to appear in his Defence. If he is a Mover of Sedition, and an Underminer of the Proteſtant Succeſſion and preſent Eſtabliſhment; if he has fomented deſtructive Diviſions, and excited his Fellow-Subjects to Arms and Violence, and has taken all Advantages to vent his ſeditious Notions in the moſt publick manner, I muſt humbly think that no Body would dare to open his Mouth in his Behalf in the Face of the Government, and before the united Legiſlature of the whole Kingdom. I proteſt for my ſelf I would not do it, and I believe I may ſay the ſame for all the Gentlemen that have ſpoke before me.

My Lords, the general Part of theſe Articles has been already largely ſpoken to, and I ſhall therefore apply my ſelf directly to the Firſt Article, and the firſt Branch of that Article, which has been made the Ground of this whole Accuſation, viz. That he does ſuggeſt and maintain that the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the late happy Revolution were Odious and Unjuſtifiable. I muſt own this is a Charge of a very high Nature, and has been aggravated to the utmoſt by the great Pains that the Gentlemen of the Honourable Houſe of Commons have taken, and the elaborate Speeches that have been made on this Head.

My Lords, The Juſtice of the Revolution is too plain to need any Vindication, every one of us is ſenſible of the happy Effects of it; and therefore for any one to caſt black and odious Colours on it, would be, as has been truly ſaid by the Honourable Managers, a Reflection on his late Majeſty, and muſt bring a foul Imputation on Her preſent Majeſty and Government; which, if the Revolution be Unjuſtifiable, muſt be an Uſurpation, and all Her Subjects Rebels.

My Lords, The Clauſe made uſe of to prove this Part of the Article, is in the 11th Page of the Sermon at St. Paul's, and has been often read; The grand Security of our Government, and the very Pillar on which it ſtands, is founded upon the ſteady Belief of the Subjects Obligation to an abſolute and unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power in all things Lawful, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever. This, my Lords, is the Ground of the Commons Impeachment, becauſe here they ſay the Doctor condemns all Reſiſtance, and in that the Reſiſtance which was neceſſary to be made uſe of at the Revolution.

Whether what is here laid down be agreeable to the Doctrine of the Church of England is not my Province to determine, neither ſhall I now miſſpend your Lordſhips time in eſtabliſhing this Doctrine; that has been already ſufficiently done, and the Doctor himſelf abundantly vindicated, from the Doctrine of St. Paul himſelf, from the expreſs Doctrine of the Church of England ſet forth in her Homilies, from the Writings of Biſhops and Divines dead and living, from the known and unrepeal'd Laws of the Land, and from the Reaſonableneſs of laying down a general Rule without any Exception. What farther Vindication can be neceſſary? Or how can a good Subject of the Realm, and a true Son of the Church, better make his Defence, than from the Laws of the one, and the Doctrines of the other? But becauſe the great Objection has been, That this Doctrine is here laid down without any Limitation or Exception at all; and being my ſelf of a different Profeſſion from the Gentlemen that have ſpoken before me, I ſhall take a different Way in Vindication of this Paſſage, and beg leave leave to follow the Method preſcrib'd by one of the Learned Managers of the Houſe of Commons. It was ſaid by one of them, Ex ore ſuo judicabitur. My Lords, let him ſpeak for himſelf, and then it will be ſeen if this Paſſage may not be juſtified by the very ſame Methods that have been made uſe of to accuſe him. If nothing will ſatisfy the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons but an Exception, an Exception they ſhall have, and that out of his own Mouth. It is in the 10th Page, and the beginning of that very Paragraph, where the whole Foundation of this Accuſation is laid. But I don't well know whether I may venture to mention it, leſt it ſhould ſubject him to a Proſecution in the Spiritual Court, or the Cenſure of his Dioceſan; but if it may help to acquit him from this Impeachment, I will adviſe him to run the Riſque of any Proſecution elſewhere.

The Clauſe is this, But, Secondly, Men may be denominated Falſe Brethren, with relation to the State, Government, or Society of which they are Members. The Conſtitutions of moſt Governments differing according to their ſeveral Frames and Laws upon which they are Built and Founded, it is impoſſible to lay down any one univerſal Rule, as the Scheme and Meaſure of Obedience, that may ſquare to every one of them.

My Lords, This is an obſervable Inſtance of this Gentleman's good Temper and Moderation; nothing can be ſaid more like a good Chriſtian, and a good Subject, and a Man of Temper: He is not here for bringing all Things to his own Rule, but every Government muſt ſtand upon its own Foundation, and be govern'd according to its own Rules. But he goes on; Only this Maxim in general, I preſume, may be Eſtabliſh'd, for the Safety, Tranquility, and Support of all Governments, That no Innovation whatſoever ſhould be allow'd in the Fundamental Conſtitution of any State, without a very preſſing, nay unavoidable Neceſſity for it.

My Lords, In theſe Words there is a plain Exception made, whenever the Caſe of an unavoidable Neceſſity ſhall happen. No Body will deny but that the Revolution was ſuch an unavoidable Caſe, and of Neceſſity, and what can't be reflected on, but with great Satisfaction, and Thanks to God for bringing it about. But it ſeems very ſtrange that this Exception ſhould ſtand ſo very full and plain in the very Front of that Paragraph from which the Learned Managers have chiefly drawn this Accuſation, and yet never be ſo much as once taken notice of by them. Paſſages at a much greater Diſtance have been Connected in order to Accuſe him; and there can be no Reaſon given why the ſubſequent Paſſage in the ſame Paragraph ſhould not be explain'd by this; why what in the beginning is ſaid of all Governments in general, ſhould not be extended to that Part where he ſpeaks particularly of our own Conſtitution. This, no doubt of it, he had in his Thoughts, and will, I hope, ſufficiently Vindicate him from this Charge.

I ſhall trouble your Lordſhips no longer on this Head, but only obſerve, that the Doctor in his Anſwer has put himſelf upon his Defence, That this Doctrine is agreeable to the Doctrine of the Church of England and the Laws of the Land, and we are ready to produce his Vouchers, and make it Evident to your Lordſhips.

Sir Simon Harcourt. My Lords, If we have not already tired your Lordſhips, there is this wide Difference between the Managers for the Houſe of Commons and us; they deſire your Lordſhips to truſt them, and to take their Words in every thing; we humbly beg your Lordſhips to take our Words in nothing, but that you will give us leave to lay before you the Teſtimonies for every thing we have open'd; but they being very long, we humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether it will be proper for us now to produce them. The firſt Evidence we deſire to read is, Some godly and wholſome Doctrine contained in the Homilies; we have, my Lords, for your Lordſhips Eaſe, collected them by a Perſon that is ready to ſwear to them. We humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether it ſhall be read out of the Writing, or whether the Books themſelves ſhall be produced; we ſhall obſerve your Lordſhips Commands, and proceed which way your Lordſhips pleaſe.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We are ready to obſerve your Lordſhips Directions in this Matter: We have collected the Paſſages out of the Homilies, the Articles, the Sermons, and Acts of Parliament; and have a Perſon ready to make Oath that they are truly collected. But if there be any Objection, we are ready to refer to the Books themſelves, and have them all here ready to produce.

Mr. Phipps. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, the Witneſs may be ſworn.

Then Mr. Trapp was ſworn.

Lord Chancellor. If you offer any Thing in Evidence, you muſt take the ſame Method that the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons did; it muſt be proved, and then deliver'd in at the Table, and there read.

Sir Joſeph Jekyll. My Lords, We have given the Gentlemen that are Council for the Priſoner no Diſturbance in any Thing they have ſaid during their Defence, that ſo we might come to a Determination as ſpeedily as poſſible in this Tryal; otherwiſe every body muſt think, we had Reaſon to object to ſome Things that have been ſaid by the Council. That which they are now going to do, is what we think proper to deliberate upon; and, according to former Precedents, we deſire to withdraw, and we will attend your Lordſhips again preſently.

Mr. Smith. My Lords, I beg Leave to ſpeak one Word. We have endeavour'd to behave our ſelves before your Lordſhips, according to the Duty we owe to the Houſe of Commons, and to your Lordſhips: We think there is ſomething offer'd, that is fit for us to conſider of. We don't propoſe more, than for the Managers to withdraw for a few Minutes; for we think we have ſomething to offer to your Lordſhips.

Accordingly the Managers withdrew; and then the Lords adjourned to their Houſe above: And in a ſhort time their Lordſhips being returned, and ſeated as before, and the Managers being returned to the Place appointed for them at their Lordſhips Bar; Proclamation for Silence was made by the Serjeant at Arms.

Sir Joſeph Jekyll. My Lords, The Managers withdrew for Two Reaſons; the one, to conſider of ſeveral Expreſſions that fell from the Council at the Bar, which we had Reaſon to take Exceptions to; the other was, to conſider of the Evidence they offer to your Lordſhips. For the firſt; The Managers are ſo deſirous that no Interruption ſhould be given to the Doctor's Council in his Defence, that they at preſent take no notice of it, but reſerve that Matter to be taken notice of at ſuch other Time as they ſhall think proper. As to the Second, The Managers being unwilling the Doctor ſhould be deprived of any Thing that his Council can fancy is Material for his Defence, they are contented to let them go on in the Way they propoſed; but, to ſave your Lordſhips Time, we admit the Books, Sermons and Pamphlets, to be as they have open'd them.

Sir Simon Harcourt. My Lords, We humbly pray they may be read, becauſe we have not open'd the Tenth Part of them.

Mr. Dodd. We have collected them, to ſave your Lordſhips Time; but we have not open'd them, becauſe we reſerved them to be read.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The Witneſs is ſworn. Is that a True Copy of what it refers to?

Mr. Trapp. I did compare them with the Originals: It is a Tranſcript from the Original.

Mr. Phipps. Are they entire Paragraphs?

Mr. Trapp. They are moſt of them entire Paſſages.

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons, do you object to the Evidence?

Sir Joſeph Jekyll. No, my Lords.

Then the LORDS Adjourned to their Houſe Above.

Saturday, March 4. The Sixth Day.

THE Lords being ſeated as uſual, and the Commons in a Committee of the whole Houſe, and the Managers at their Lordſhips Bar; the uſual Proclamations being alſo made;

And Dr. Sacheverell appearing at the Bar:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, You who are Council for Doctor Sacheverell were proceeding to your Evidence, and had offered ſome Papers which you deſired to be read in Evidence; and the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons did agree to let them be read, as you deſired.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We pray thoſe Papers may be read.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The Defendant does in his Anſwer aſſert, "That the Doctrine of the Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power, is "contained in the Homilies, and approved by many of the Divines of the Church of England: We deſire now to have thoſe Homilies, and the Sermons of thoſe Divines, read.

Sir Joſeph Jekyll. My Lords, The Gentlemen that open'd for the Doctor, were pleaſed to mention ſome Homilies, and other Books; one entitled, A Neceſſary Doctrine and Erudition for any Chriſtian Man; which they deſired might be read; and ſaid, They had collected the Paſſages out of them, in a Paper which they offer'd to your Lordſhips. We have look'd into that Paper, and find Extracts out of Gazettes, and other Papers. We are willing to let them read the Homilies, and that other Book called, The Erudition for any Chriſtian Man; but when they come to the others, we pray they may produce the Books or Papers themſelves.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We ſhall obſerve it accordingly.

Mr. Phipps. We pray we may begin with the Book entitled, The Erudition for any Chriſtian Man.

Clerk reads the Paper-Abſtract.

'A Neceſſary Doctrine and Erudition for any 'Chriſtian Man; ſet furthe by the King's Majeſty 'of England, &c. Anno 34 H. VIII.

In the Expoſition of the Fyfthe Commandment.

'And by this Commandment alſo, 'Subjects be bounde not to withdrawe Fol. 113. 'their ſaid Fealtie, Trouth, Love, and 'Obedience towards their Prince, for any Cauſe 'whatſoever it be; ne for any Cauſe they may conſpire againſt his Perſon, ne do any Thing towards the Hindrance or Hurt thereof, nor of his 'Eſtate.

In the Expoſition of the Syxte Commandment.

'Moreover, no Subjects may draw 'their Swords againſt their Prince, for Fol. 187. 9. 'any Cauſe, whatſoever it be.

Mr. Dodd. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, that we may now read ſeveral Paſſages in the Homilies.

Clerk reads.] The Second Part of the Sermon of Obedience, Pag. 110.

'Whereby Chriſt taught us plainly, that even 'the wicked Rulers have their Power and Authority from God; and therefore it is not lawful for 'their Subjects to withſtand them, altho' they abuſe 'their Power.

Ibid. p. 113. 'But nevertheleſs, in that Caſe 'we may not in any wiſe withſtand violently, or rebel againſt Rulers, or make any Inſurrection, Sedition or Tumults, either by Force of Arms, or 'otherwiſe, againſt the Anointed of the Lord, or 'any of his Officers; but we muſt in ſuch Caſe 'patiently ſuffer all Wrongs and Injuries, referring 'the Judgment of our Cauſe only to God.

The Third Part of the Sermon of Obedience, Pag. 114.

'Yee have heard before, in this Sermon of good 'Order and Obedience, manifeſtly proved, both by 'the Scriptures and Examples, that all Subjects are 'bounden to obey their Magiſtrates, and for no 'Cauſe to reſiſt, or withſtand, or rebel, or make 'any Sedition againſt them, yea altho' they be 'wicked Men.

Firſt Part of the Sermon againſt wilful Rebellion, Pag. 589.

'What ſhall Subjects do then? Shall they obey 'valiant, ſtout, wiſe and good Princes; and contemn, diſobey, and rebel againſt Children being 'their Princes; or againſt undiſcreet and evil Governors? God forbid! For, firſt, What a perilous Thing were it to commit unto the Subjects 'the Judgment which Prince is wiſe and godly, and 'his Government good, and which is otherwiſe? 'As tho' the Foot muſt judge of the Head! An 'Enterprize very heinous, and muſt needs breed 'Rebellion.

Ibid. p. 590. 'And whereas indeed a Rebel is 'worſe than the worſt Prince, and Rebellion worſe 'than the worſt Government of the worſt Prince 'that hitherto hath been.

Second Part of the Sermon againſt wilful Rebellion, Pag. 600.

'Now let David anſwer to ſuch Demands, as 'Men deſirous of Rebellion do uſe to make: Shall 'not we, eſpecially being ſo good Men as we are, 'riſe and rebel againſt a Prince hated of God, and 'God's Enemy; and therefore like not to proſper 'either in War or Peace, but to be hurtful and pernicious to the Commonwealth? No, ſaith good and 'godly David. Ibid.

Ibid. p. 601. 'But, ſay they, ſhall we not riſe 'and rebel againſt ſo unkind a Prince, nothing con- 'ſidering or regarding our true, faithful and painful 'Service, or the Safeguard of our Poſterity? No, 'ſaith good David.

Ibid. 'Shall we not riſe and rebel againſt our 'known, mortal, and deadly Enemy, that ſeeketh 'our Lives? No, ſaith godly David.

Ibid. 'Shall we not aſſemble an Army of ſuch 'good Fellows as we are, and by hazarding of our 'Lives, and the Lives of ſuch as ſhall withſtand us, 'and withal hazarding the whole Eſtate of our 'Country, remove ſo naughty a Prince? No, ſaith 'godly David.

Ibid. 'What ſhall we then do to an evil, to an 'unkind Prince, an Enemy to us, hated of God, 'hurtful to the Commonwealth, &c.? Lay no vio- 'lent Hand upon him, ſaith good David; but let 'him live, until God appoint and work his End, 'either by natural Death, or in War, by lawful 'Enemies, not by traiterous Subjects.

Ibid. p. 602. 'If King David would make theſe 'Anſwers, as by his Deeds and Words recorded in 'the Holy Scriptures indeed he doth make, unto 'all ſuch Demands concerning Rebelling againſt 'evil Princes, unkind Princes, cruel Princes, Prin- 'ces that be to their good Subjects mortal Enemies, 'Princes that are out of God's Favour, and ſo 'hurtful, or like to be hurtful to the Common- 'wealth.

Mr. Dodd. If your Lordſhips pleaſe now, that we may read the Thirty Fifth Article of the Church of England, which approves theſe Homilies.

Mr. Phipps. We open'd, that theſe Homilies were approv'd of by the Articles of the Church of England, as containing ſound and wholſome Doctrine: We pray the Thirty Fifth Article may be read.

Clerk reads.] Article the Thirty Fifth. Of Homilies.

'The Second Book of Homilies, the ſeveral Ti- 'tles whereof we have joined under this Article, 'doth contain a godly and wholſome Doctrine, and 'neceſſary for theſe Times; as doth the former 'Book of Homilies, which were ſet forth in the 'Time of Edward the Sixth. And therefore we 'judge them to be read in Churches by the Mini- 'ſters, diligently and diſtinctly, that they may 'be underſtanded of the People. The Names of 'the Homilies. 1. Of the Right Uſe of the 'Church. 2. Againſt Peril of Idolatry. 3. Of 'repairing and keeping clean of Churches. 4. Of 'good Works; Firſt, of Faſting. 5. Againſt Glut- 'tony and Drunkenneſs. 6. Againſt Exceſs of Ap- 'parel. 7. Of Prayer. 8. Of the Place and Time 'of Prayer. 9. That Common Prayers and Sacra- 'ments ought to be miniſtred in a known Tongue. '10. Of the Reverend Eſtimation of God's Word. '11. Of Alms-doing. 12. Of the Nativity of 'Chriſt. 13. Of the Paſſion of Chriſt. 14. Of 'the Reſurrection of Chriſt. 15. Of the worthy 'Receiving of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood 'of Chriſt. 16. Of the Gifts of the Holy Ghoſt. '17. For the Rogation-Days. 18. Of the State of 'Matrimony. 19. Of Repentance. 20. Againſt 'Idleneſs. 21. Againſt Rebellion.

Mr. Phipps. By the Statute of 13 Eliz. theſe Articles are confirmed: I believe the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons will allow of it.

Mr. Dodd. They are confirmed by the Act of Uniformity; and we think we need not ſpend your Lordſhips Time in reading it.

Sir Joſ. Jekyll. My Lords, We told them, that we were willing to admit all they open'd; and then we admit this.

Mr. Dodd. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, we will go on with the Abſtract.

Mr. Phipps. The Gentlemen ſay, that they admit us to read what we open'd. Now what we are going to read next, we did not open; and therefore we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether we ſhall read out of the Abſtract, or produce the Book it ſelf?

Sir Joſ. Jekyll. My Lords, We deſire to know what it is they would read?

Mr. Phipps. It is Biſhop Overall's Convocation-Book.

Mr. Dee. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, we ſhall produce the Book; becauſe there are ſome broken Paſſages collected, and there may be ſome Objection, if the Book be not produced.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We hope the whole Canon which is mention'd in this Book, tho' it is recited by Parcels, ſhall be read.

Clerk reads.] 'And therefore - - - -

Sir Joſ. Jekyll. My Lords, They are reading a Paſſage out of this Book. We might object, That a Printed Book is no Proof of a Canon; and that they ought to make a Legal Proof of it. But that which we object, is, That they begin in the Middle of a Sentence: Your Lordſhips obſerve, the Clerk begins with the Words, And therefore. I pray, he may read at the Beginning of a Sentence.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, Where the Clerk began, was the Beginning of that Canon; but it being at the End of another Canon, is the Reaſon that it begins And therefore.

Clerk reads.] 'And therefore, if 'any Man ſhall affirm, under Colour 'of any thing that is in the Scriptures, 'either that the Doctrine of Grace in 'the New Teſtament doth more abo- 'liſh the Rules of Nature, or Moral Law of God, 'than it did in the Old; or, that thro' Faith the 'ſaid Law was not rather eſtabliſh'd, than in any 'ſort impeach'd; or, that becauſe as many as be- 'lieve are redeemed, and made free from the 'Curſe of the Law, they are therefore exempted, 'and free from the Obedience of the Law; or, 'that by the Incarnation of our Saviour Chriſt, 'Obedience to the Fifth Commandment, touching 'Honours due to Parents and Princes, was in any 'ſort impeach'd, the reſt of the Law being eſta- 'bliſh'd; or, that our Saviour Chriſt having un- 'dertaken the Fulfilling of the whole Law, (as far 'forth, at the leaſt, as ever Mankind was bound to 'have fulfilled it) came ſhort in this one Law, by 'exempting himſelf from any Obedience due to 'the Civil Magiſtrate; or, that he, having tied 'himſelf according to the ſaid Commandment, as 'well to the Obedience of the Civil Magiſtrate, as 'the Obedience which was due to his Parents, did 'not, whilſt he liv'd in the World, fulfil the Law 'wholly concerning them both; or, that he did any 'way, or at any Time, encourage the Jews, or any 'other, directly or indirectly, to Rebel, for any 'Cauſe whatſoever, againſt the Roman Emperor, or 'any of his Subordinate Magiſtrates; or, that he 'did not very willingly, both himſelf pay Tribute 'to Cæſar, and alſo adviſe the Jews ſo to do; or, 'that when he willed the Jews to pay Tribute to 'Cæſar, including therein their Duty of Obedience 'unto him, he did not therein deal plainly and ſin- 'cerely,

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We opened, that from the Time of the Reformation this had been the Doctrine of the Church. We deſire to begin, and ſhew it was Archbiſhop Cranmer's Opinion: In Strype's Memorial of Archbiſhop Cranmer.

M. Gen. Stanhope. My Lords, Since Hooker's Eccleſiaſtical Polity is before your Lordſhips, and they have read that Part, I pray that from pag. 444, to the latter End of pag. 446, may likewiſe be read.

Mr. Dodd. We ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, Whether it is proper to break into our Defence? Or whether the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons will read what they think proper when they come to Reply? Your Lordſhips know the Courſe in other Courts is to give our Evidence entire.

Sir J. Jekyll. My Lords, The Indulgence of the Managers, to let the Doctor's Council go into this Evidence, is very great; (for I believe ſuch ſort of Evidence was never known before in any Court of Juſtice whatſoever); but ſurely, as they have called this Witneſs, for ſo I may term the Book they were reading, we may be at Liberty to croſs-examine that Witneſs; perhaps the Place we deſire to have read may explain the Paſſages read by them.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We ſubmit to it.

M. Gen. Stanhope. Pray what Edition is that Book?

Clerk. It is Printed in 1705.

M. Gen. Stanhope. My Lords, If we ſhould be miſtaken in the Edition, I hope we ſhall not be hindred in our Reply from reading thoſe Paſſages in the Edition which I have conſulted.

' Clerk Reads.] Again, on whom the Fol. 444. ' ſame is beſtowed at Mens Diſcretions,
' they likewiſe do hold it by Divine
' Right. If God in his revealed Word hath ap' pointed ſuch Power to be, altho' himſelf extra-
' ordinarily beſtow it not, but leave the Appoint' ment of Perſons to Men; yea, albeit God do nei' ther appoint nor aſſign the Perſon; nevertheleſs,
' when Men have aſſigned and eſtabliſhed both,
' who doth doubt but that ſundry Duties and Affairs
' depending thereupon, are preſcribed by the Word ' of God, and conſequently by that very Right to ' be exerted? For Example ſake, the Power which ' Roman Emperors had over Foreign Provinces,
' was not a thing which the Law of God did ever
' inſtitute; neither was Tiberius Ceſar by eſpecial
' Commiſſion from Heaven therewith inveſted; and
' yet Payment of Tribute unto Ceſar, being now
' made Emperor, is the plain Law of Jeſus Chriſt
' unto Kings by Human Right; Honour by very Di' vine Right is due. Man's Ordinances are many ' times propoſed as Grounds in the Statutes of God.
' And therefore, of what kind ſoever the Means be ' whereby Governors are lawfully advanced to their
' States, as we by the Laws of God ſtand bound
' meekly to acknowledge them for God's Lieute-
' nants, and do confeſs their Power His; ſo by the ' ſame Law they are both authoriz'd and requir'd to
' uſe that Power, as far as it may be in any State
' available to his Honour. The Law appointeth no
' Man to be a Huſband; but if a Man hath betaken
' himſelf unto that Condition, it giveth him Power
' and Authority over his own Wife. That the Chri-
' ſtian World ſhould be ordered by the Kingly Re' giment, the Law of God doth not any where
' Command; and yet the Law of God doth give ' them, which once are exalted unto that Place of ' Eſtate, Right to exact at the Hands of their Sub' jects general Obedience in whatſoever Affairs their ' Power may ſerve to Command; and God doth
' ratify Works of that Sovereign Authority, which ' Kings have received by Men. This is therefore
' the Right whereby Kings do hold their Power;
' but yet in what ſort the ſame doth reſt and abide
' in them, it ſomewhat behoveth farther to Search;
' where, that we be not enforced to make over
' large Diſcourſes about the different Conditions of ' Sovereign or Supreme Power, that which we ſpeak
' of Kings ſhall be in reſpect of the State, and ac' cording to the Nature of this Kingdom, where
' the People are in no Subjection, but ſuch as wil' lingly themſelves have condeſcended unto for their ' own moſt Behoof and Security. In Kingdoms
' therefore of this Quality, the higheſt Governor
' hath indeed univerſal Dominion, but with Depen-
' dency upon that whole entire Body, over the ſeve-
' ral Parts whereof he hath Dominion; ſo that it
' ſtandeth for an Axiom in this Caſe, The King is
' Major ſingulis, univerſis Minor. The King's De' pendency we do not conſtrue as ſome have done,
' who are of Opinion, that no Man's Birth can ' make him a King; but every particular Perſon
' advanced to ſuch Authority hath, at his Entrance
' into his Reign, the ſame beſtowed on him as an
' Eſtate, in Condition, by the voluntary Deed of ' the People in whom it doth lye, to put by any ' one, and to prefer ſome other before him better
' liked of, or judged fitter for the Place; and that ' the Party ſo rejected hath no Injury done unto ' him; no, altho' the ſame be done in a Place where ' the Crown doth go Sic ℔℞, by Succeſſion, and to ' a Perſon which is Capital, and hath apparently, if ' Blood be reſpected, the neareſt Right. They
' plainly affirm, in all well appointed Kingdoms,
' the Cuſtom evermore hath been, and is, that ' Children ſucceed not their Parents 'till the Peo' ple, after a ſort, have created them anew;
' neither that they grow to their Fathers as ' natural and proper Heirs, but are then to be
' reckon'd for Kings, when at the Hands of ſuch
' as repreſent the King's Majeſty, they have by ' Sceptre and a Diadem received as it were the ' Inveſtiture of a Kingly Power: Their very Words
' are, " That where ſuch Power is ſettled into a " Family or Kindred, the Stock it ſelf is thereby
" choſen, but not the Twig that ſpringeth of it.
" The next of the Stock unto him that reigneth,
" are not through Nearneſs of Blood made Kings;
" but rather ſet forth to ſtand for the Kingdom:
" Where Regal Dominion is Hereditary, it is not-" withſtanding (if we look to the Perſons which " have it) altogether Elective." To this Purpoſe
' are ſelected Heaps of Scriptures concerning the ſo-
' lemn Coronation or Inauguration of Saul, David,
' of Solomon, and others, by the Nobles, Ancients,
' and People of the Commonweal of Iſrael: As if
' theſe Solemnities were a kind of Deed, whereby
' the Right of Dominion is given; which ſtrange,
' untrue, and unnatural Conceits, ſet abroad by
' Seedſmen of Rebellion, only to animate unquiet
' Spirits, and to feed them with Poſſibility of ' aſpiring to Thrones, if they can win the Hearts of ' the People, what Hereditary Title ſoever any other
' before them may have; I ſay, unjuſt and inſolent
' Poſitions, I would not mention, were it not there-
' by to make the Countenance of Truth more Orient;
' for unleſs we will openly proclaim Defiance unto
' all Law, Equity and Reaſon, we muſt (there is ' no Remedy) acknowledge, that in Kingdoms, He' reditary Birth gives Right unto Sovereign Domini' on; and the Death of the Predeceſſor puts the ' Succeſſor by Blood in Seiſin. Thoſe publick So' lemnities before ſpecified, do but ſerve for an open
' Teſtification of the Inheritor's Right, or belong-
' ing unto the Form of inducting him into Poſſeſſion
' of that Thing he hath Right unto. Therefore, in
' caſe it doth happen, that without Right of Blood,
' a Man in ſuch wiſe be poſſeſſed, all theſe new ' Elections and Inveſtings are utterly void; they

'make him no indefeasible Estate, the Inheritor by 'Blood may dispossess him as an Usurper. The 'Case thus standing, albeit we judge it a thing most 'true, that Kings, even Inheritors, do hold their 'Right in the Power of Dominion, with Dependen- 'cy upon the whole Body Politick, over which they 'have Rule as Kings; yet so it may not be under- 'stood, as if such Dependency did grow; for that 'every Supreme Governor doth Personally take 'from thence his Power, by way of Gift, bestowed 'of their own free Accord upon him at the Time of 'his Entrance into the said Place of his Sovereign 'Government. But the Case of Dependency is that 'first Original Conveyance when Power was derived 'from the whole into one; to pass from him unto 'them, whom out of him, Nature, by Lawful 'Births, should produce, and no Natural or Legal 'Inability make uncapable. "Neither can any "Man with Reason think, but that the first Institu- "tion of Kings a sufficient Consideration; where- "fore their Power should always depend on that "from which it always flows: By Original Influence "of Power from the Body unto the King, is the "Cause of Kings Dependency in Power upon the "Body." By Dependency we mean Subordination 'and Subjection; a manifest Token of which De- 'pendency may be this: As there is no more certain 'Argument that Lands are held under any as Lords, 'than if we see that such Lands, in Defect of Heirs, 'fall unto them by Escheat: In like manner, it 'doth follow rightly, that seeing Dominion, when 'there is none to inherit it, it returneth into the 'Body; therefore they which before were Inheri- 'tors thereof, did hold it with Dependency upon 'the Body: So that by comparing the Body with 'the Head, as touching Power, it seemeth always 'to reside in both; fundamentally and radically in 'the one, in the other derivatively; in one the Ha- 'bit, in the other the Art of Power. May a Body 'Politick then at all Times, withdraw in whole or 'in part, the Influence of Dominion, which passeth 'from it, if Inconveniencies do grow thereby? It 'must be presumed, that Supreme Governors will 'not in such Case oppose themselves, and be stiff 'in detaining that, the Use whereof is with pub- 'lick Detriment. But surely without their Consent, 'I see not how the Body by any just Means should 'be able to help it self, saving when Dominion doth 'Escheat; such Things therefore must be thought 'upon beforehand, that Power may be limited e'er 'it be granted; which is the next Thing we are to 'consider.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, Doctor Sacheverell being educated in the Univerſity of Oxford, we offer the Decrees of that Univerſity touching this Matter. They were publiſhed in the Gazette the 26th of July, 1683, by Authority.

Clerk reads.] Numb. 1845.

The London Gazette. Publiſhed by Authority. From Monday July 23. to Thurſday July 26. 1683.

'Whitehall, July 24. This Day was preſented 'to his Majeſty the following Judgment and Decree of the Univerſity of Oxford, paſs'd in their 'Convocation, on Saturday the 21*ſt* Inſtant.

'The Judgment and Decree of the Univerſity of 'Oxford, paſs'd in their Convocation, July 21. '1683. againſt certain pernicious Books, and damnable Doctrines, deſtructive to the Sacred Perſons 'of Princes, their State and Government, and of 'all Human Society.

'ALTHO' the barbarous Aſſaſſination lately enterprized againſt the Perſon of his Sacred Majeſty, 'and his Royal Brother, engage all our Thoughts to 'reflect with utmoſt Deteſtation and Abhorrence on 'that execrable Villany, hateful to God and Man; 'and pay our due Acknowledgments to the Divine 'Providence, which by extraordinary Methods 'brought it to paſs, That the Breath of our Noſtrils, the Anointed of the Lord, is not taken in 'the Pit which was prepared for him; and that 'under his Shadow we continue to live, and enjoy 'the Bleſſings of his Government; yet notwithſtanding we find it to be a neceſſary Duty at this 'Time, to ſearch into, and lay open thoſe impious 'Doctrines, which having of late been ſtudiouſly 'diſſeminated, gave Riſe and Growth to theſe Nefarious Attempts, and paſs upon them our ſolemn 'publick Cenſure and Decree of Condemnation.

'Therefore, to the Honour of the Holy and undivided Trinity, the Preſervation of Catholick Truth 'in the Church, and that the King's Majeſty may 'be ſecured both from the Attempts of open bloody 'Enemies, and Machinations of Treacherous Hereticks and Schiſmaticks; We the Vice-Chancellor, 'Doctors, Proctors, and Maſters, Regent and not 'Regent, met in Convocation, in the accuſtomed 'Manner, Time and Place, on Saturday the one 'and twentieth Day of July, in the Year One 'thouſand ſix hundred and eighty three, concerning 'certain Propoſitions contain'd in divers Books and 'Writings, publiſh'd in the Engliſh and alſo the Latin Tongue, repugnant to the Holy Scriptures, Decrees of Councils, Writings of the Fathers, the 'Faith and Profeſſion of the Primitive Church; 'and alſo deſtructive of the Kingly Government, 'the Safety of his Majeſty's Perſon, the publick 'Peace, the Laws of Nature, and Bonds of Human 'Society, by our unanimous Aſſent and Conſent, 'have decreed and determined in Manner and Form 'following:

The Firſt Propoſition.

'All Civil Authority is derived Originally from 'the People.

The Second.

'There is a mutual Compact, Tacit or Expreſs, 'between a Prince and his Subjects; and that if 'he perform not his Duty, they are diſcharged 'from theirs.

The Third.

'Thrt if lawful Governors become Tyrants, or 'govern otherwiſe than by the Laws of God and 'Man they ought to do, they forfeit the Right they 'had unto their Government. Lex Rex. Buchanan 'de Jure Regni. Vindiciæ contra Tyrannos Bellarmine de Conciliis. De Pontificie Milton. Goodwin. Baxter. H. C.

The Fourth.

'The Sovereignty of England is in the three Eſtates

'Eſtates, viz. King, Lords and Commons. The 'King has but a Co-ordinate Power, and may be 'over-rul'd by the other Two. Lex Rex. Hunton of a Limited and Mixed Monarchy. Baxter H. C. Polit. Catechiſ.

The Fifth.

'Birth-right and Proximity of Blood give no Ti-'tle to Rule or Government; and it is lawful to 'preclude the next Heir from his Right and Succeſ-'ſion to the Crown. Lex Rex. Hunt's Poſtſcript. Doleman's Hiſtory of Succeſſion. Julian the Apoſtate. Mene Tekel.

The Sixth.

'It is Lawful for Subjects, without the Conſent, 'and againſt the Command of the Supreme Magi-'ſtrate, to enter into Leagues, Covenants and Aſſo-'ciations, for Defence of themſelves and their Re-'ligion. Solemn League and Covenant. Late Aſſo-ciations.

The Seventh.

'Self-Preſervation is the Fundamental Law of 'Nature, and ſuperſedes the Obligation of all o-'thers, whenſoever they ſtand in Competition with 'it. Hobbs de Cive Leviathan.

The Eighth.

'The Doctrine of the Goſpel concerning patient 'Suffering of Injuries, is not inconſiſtent with vio-'lent Reſiſting of the Higher Powers, in caſe of 'Perſecution for Religion. Lex Rex. Julian Apoſtate. Apolog. Relat.

The Ninth.

'There lies no Obligation upon Chriſtians to 'Paſſive Obedience, when the Prince commands 'any Thing againſt the Laws of our Country; 'and the Primitive Chriſtians choſe rather to die 'than reſiſt, becauſe Chriſtianity was not ſettled 'by the Laws of the Empire. Julian Apoſtate.

The Tenth.

'Poſſeſſion and Strength give a Right to Go-'vern; and Succeſs in a Cauſe or Enterprize, pro-'claims it to be Lawful and Juſt. To purſue it, is 'to comply with the Will of God; becauſe it is 'to follow the Conduct of his Providence. Hobbs. Owen's Sermon before the Regicides, Jan. 31. 1648. Baxter. Jenkins's Petition, Octob. 1651.

The Eleventh.

'In the State of Nature there is no Difference 'between Good and Evil, Right and Wrong. The 'State of Nature is a State of War, in which eve-'ry Man hath a Right to all Things.

The Twelfth.

'The Foundation of Civil Authority is this Na-'tural Right, which is not given, but left to the 'Supreme Magiſtrate upon Mens entring into So-'cieties; and not only a Foreign Invader, but a 'Domeſtick Rebel, puts himſelf again into a State 'of Nature, to be proceeded againſt, not as a Sub-'ject, but an Enemy; and conſequently, acquires 'by his Rebellion the ſame Right over the Life of 'his Prince, as the Prince (for the moſt heinous 'Crimes) has over the Life of his own Subjects.

The Thirteenth.

'Every Man, after his entring into a Society, re-'tains a Right of defending himſelf againſt Force, 'and cannot transfer that Right to the Common-'wealth, when he conſents to that Union whereby 'a Commonwealth is made: And in caſe a great 'many Men together have already reſiſted the Com-'monwealth, for which every one of them expect-'eth Death; they have Liberty then to join toge-'ther, to aſſiſt and defend one another. Their bear-'ing of Arms, ſubſequent to the firſt Breach of their 'Duty, tho' it be to maintain what they have done, 'is no new unjuſt Act; and if it be only to defend 'their Perſons, is not unjuſt at all.

The Fourteenth.

'An Oath ſuperadds no Obligation to Pact, and 'a Pact obliges no farther than it is credited; and 'conſequently, if a Prince gives any Indication that 'he does not believe the Promiſes of Fealty and 'Allegiance made by any of his Subjects, they are 'thereby freed from their Subjection; and notwith-'ſtanding their Pacts and Oaths, may lawfully re-'bel againſt, and deſtroy their Sovereign. Hobbs de Cive Leviathan.

The Fifteenth.

'If a People, that by Oath and Duty are obliged 'to a Sovereign, ſhall ſinfully diſpoſſeſs him, and '(contrary to their Covenants) chuſe and covenant 'with another; they may be obliged by their later 'Covenants, notwithſtanding their former. Bax-ter H. C.

The Sixteenth.

'All Oaths are unlawful, and contrary to the 'Word of God. Quakers.

The Seventeenth.

'An Oath obligeth not in the Senſe of the Impo-'ſer, but the Takers. Sheriff's Caſe.

The Eighteenth.

'Dominion is founded in Grace.

The Nineteenth.

'The Powers of this World are Uſurpations up-'on the Prerogative of Jeſus Chriſt; and it is the 'Duty of God's People to deſtroy them, in order 'to the ſetting Chriſt upon his Throne. Fifth-Mo-narchy-Men.

The Twentieth.

'The Presbyterian Government is the Scepire 'of Chriſt's Kingdom, to which Kings as well as 'others are bound to ſubmit; and the King's Su-'premacy in Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, aſſerted by the 'Church of England, is injurious to Chriſt, the 'ſole King and Head of his Church. Altare Da-maſcenum. Apolog. Relat. Hiſt. Indulg. Cartwright. Travers.

The Twenty firſt.

'It is not Lawful for Superiors to impoſe any 'Thing in the Worſhip of God, that is not ante-'cedently neceſſary.

The Twenty ſecond.

'The Duty of not offending a weak Brother, is 'inconſiſtent with all Human Authority of making 'Laws concerning indifferent Things. Proteſtant Reconciler.

The Twenty third.

'Wicked Kings and Tyrants ought to be put to 'Death; and if the Judges and Inferior Magiſtrates 'will not do their Office, the Power of the Sword 'devolves to the People: If the major Part of the 'People refuſe to exerciſe this Power, then the 'Miniſters may Excommunicate ſuch a King; af-'ter which it is Lawful for any of the Subjects to 'kill him, as the People did Athaliah, and Jehu 'Jezebel. Buchanan. Knox. Goodman. Gilby. Jeſuits.

The Twenty fourth.

'After the Sealing of the Scripture Canon, the 'People of God in all Ages are to expect New Re-'velations for a Rule of their Actions; and it is 'Lawful for a Private Man, having an inward Motion from God, to kill a Tyrant. Quakers, and other Enthuſiaſts. Goodman.

The Twenty fifth.

'The Example of Phineas is to us inſtead of a Command; for what God hath commanded or approved in one Age, muſt needs oblige in all. Goodman. Knox. Naphali.

The Twenty ſixth.

'King Charles the Firſt was lawfully put to Death, and his Murderers were the bleſſed Inſtruments of God's Glory in their Generation. Milton. Goodwin. Owen.

The Twenty ſeventh.

'King Charles the Firſt made War upon his Parliament; and in ſuch a Caſe the King may not only be reſiſted, but he ceaſeth to be King. Baxter.

'We Decree, Judge, and Declare all and every of theſe Propoſitions to be Falſe, Seditious, and Impious, and moſt of them to be alſo Heretical and Blaſphemous, Infamous to Chriſtian Religion, and Deſtructive of all Government in Church and State.

'We farther Decree, That the Books which contain the aforeſaid Propoſitions and impious Doctrines, are fitted to deprave good Manners, corrupt the Minds of unwary Men, ſtir up Seditions and Tumults, overthrow States and Kingdoms, and lead to Rebellion, Murther of Princes, and Atheiſm it ſelf: And therefore We interdict all Members of the Univerſity from the Reading of the ſaid Books, under the Penalties in the Statutes expreſs'd. We alſo order the ſaid recited Books to be publickly burnt by the Hand of our Marſhal, in the Court of our Schools.

'Likewiſe we Order, That in perpetual Memory hereof, theſe our Decrees ſhall be entred in the Regiſtry of our Convocation; and that Copies of them being communicated to the ſeveral Colleges and Halls within this Univerſity, they be there publickly affix'd in the Libraries, Refectories, or other fit Places, where they may be ſeen and read of all.

'Laſtly, We command and ſtrictly enjoin all and ſingular the Readers, Tutors, Catechiſts, and others to whom the Care and Truſt of Inſtitution of Youth is committed, that they diligently inſtruct and ground their Scholars in that moſt neceſſary Doctrine, which in a manner is the Badge and Character of the Church of England; Of Submitting to every Ordinance of Man for the Lord's Sake; whether it be to the King as Supreme, or unto Governors as unto them that are ſent by him, for the Puniſhment of evil Doers, and for the Praiſe of them that do well. Teaching that this Submiſſion and Obedience is to be clear, abſolute, and without Exception of any State or Order of Men. Alſo that they, according to the Apoſtle's Precept, exhort, That firſt of all, Supplications, Prayers, Interceſſions, and giving of Thanks be made for all Men, for the King, and all that are in Authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable Life, in all Godlineſs and Honeſty; for this is good and acceptable in the ſight of God our Saviour. And in eſpecial manner, that they preſs and oblige them humbly to offer their moſt ardent and daily Prayers at the Throne of Grace, for the Preſervation of our Sovereign Lord King Charles, from the Attempts of open Violence, and ſecret Machinations of perfidious Traytors; that the Defender of the Faith, being ſafe under the Defence of the Moſt High, may continue his Reign on Earth, till he exchange it for that of a late and happy Immortality.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, To ſhew that this was likewiſe at the ſame time Archbiſhop Tillotſon's Opinion, we deſire to read his Letter which he wrote to my Lord Ruſſel, when he was under his Condemnation in Newgate, July 20. 1683.

Clerk reads.] 'My Lord, I was heartily glad to ſee your Lordſhip this Morning in that calm and devout Temper at Receiving of the Bleſſed Sacrament; but Peace of Mind, unleſs it be well grounded, will avail little: And becauſe tranſient Diſcourſe many times hath little Effect, for want of Time to weigh and conſider it; therefore, in tender Compaſſion of your Lordſhip's Caſe, and from all the good Will that one Man can bear to another, I do humbly offer to your Lordſhip's deliberate Thoughts theſe following Conſiderations concerning the Points of Reſiſtance, if our Religion and Rights ſhould be invaded, as your Lordſhip puts the Caſe; concerning which, I underſtand by Dr. B. that your Lordſhip had once receiv'd Satisfaction, and am ſorry to find a Change.

'Firſt, That the Chriſtian Religion doth plainly forbid the Reſiſtance of Authority.

'Secondly, That tho' our Religion be eſtabliſh'd by Law, (which your Lordſhip urges as a Difference between our Caſe and that of the Primitive Chriſtians) yet in the ſame Law which eſtabliſhes our Religion, it is declar'd, That it is not lawful upon any Pretence whatſoever to take up Arms, &c. Beſides, that there is a particular Law, declaring the Power of the Militia to be ſolely in the King; and that ties the Hands of Subjects, tho' the Law of Nature, and the general Rules of Scripture had left us at Liberty, which I believe they do not, becauſe the Government and Peace of Human Society could not well ſubſiſt upon theſe Terms.

'Thirdly, Your Lordſhip's Opinion is contrary to the declar'd Doctrine of all Proteſtant Churches; and tho' ſome particular Perſons have taught otherwiſe, yet they have been contradicted herein, and condemn'd for it, by the Generality of Proteſtants. I beg your Lordſhip to conſider, how it will agree with an avow'd aſſerting of the Proteſtant Religion, to go contrary to the General Doctrine of Proteſtants. My End in this is, to convince your Lordſhip that you are in a very great and dangerous Miſtake; and being ſo convinc'd, that which was before a Sin of Ignorance, will appear of much more heinous Nature, as in truth it is, and call for a very particular and deep Repentance; which if your Lordſhip ſincerely exerciſe upon the ſight of your Error, by a penitent Acknowledgment of it to God and Men, you will not only obtain Forgiveneſs of God, but prevent a mighty Scandal to the Reform'd Religion. I am very loth to give your Lordſhip any Diſquiet in the Diſtreſs you are in, which I commiſerate from my Heart, but am much more concern'd that you do not leave the World in a Deluſion and falſe Peace, to the Hindrance of your Eternal Happineſs. I heartily pray for you; and beſeech your Lordſhip to 'believe

'believe that I am, with the greateſt Sincerity and 'Compaſſion in the World,

My Lord,
Your Lordſhip's moſt Faithful and Afflicted Servant,

J. TILLOTSON.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We next offer the Opinion of Biſhop Stillingfleet.

Clerk reads.] 'A Vindication of the Anſwer to 'ſome late Papers, concerning the Unity and Au-'thority of the Catholick Church, and the Refor-'mation of the Church of England.

Pag. 89. Lond. 1687. 'But it hath been ſaid by ſome-'body, That we had our Govern-'ment and Ceremonies from his 'Church, our Doctrine from Luther 'and Calvin; and that we had nothing peculiar to 'our Church, but our Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, 'and much good may it do us; and we hope we 'ſhall never fare the worſe for it. This might 'give Occaſion to enquire, Whether the Church, 'which pretends to be infallible, doth teach it ſo 'orthodoxly, or not? Or whether thoſe who do 'think themſelves oblig'd to believe what ſhe 'teaches, are thereby oblig'd to the ſtricteſt Princi-'ples of Loyalty? But I forbear. It is ſufficient to 'my Purpoſe, to ſhew that our Church doth not 'only teach them, as her own Doctrine, but (which 'is far more effectual) as the Doctrine of Chriſt 'and his Apoſtles, and of the Primitive Church.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The ſame Biſhop, in a Diſcourſe of the Unreaſonableneſs of a new Separation, takes Notice of ſome Objections made by thoſe who are Friends to the Government, as if Non-Reſiſtance were not conſiſtent with the Revolution.

Lord Chancellor. There is no Name of an Author to theſe Books which you now produce.

Mr. Dodd. The Book is generally known by all Learned Men to be Biſhop Stillingfleet's. Mr. Chiſwell, who printed it, attended here three Days to prove it, but is ill now; but he has left a Certificate that he printed it, and all Learned Men know it to be his.

Page 8. Lond. 1689. Clerk reads.] 'I come to the par-'ticular Examination of the Difficul-'ties which relate to the preſent 'Oaths [to King William and Queen 'Mary;] and becauſe we are charg'd with Apoſtacy 'from the Principles of the Church of England, 'and that is made the main Ground of the deſign'd 'Separation, I would fain know what this Charge 'is built upon, with reſpect to the Oaths, for that 'is all we are concern'd in. If any particular Per-'ſons have advanc'd new Hypotheſes of Govern-'ment, contrary to the Senſe of our Church, let 'them anſwer for themſelves. The Caſe of the 'Oaths is quite of another Nature; here is no Re-'nouncing the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, or 'aſſerting the Lawfulneſs of Reſiſtance.

Mr. Phipps. Your Lordſhips obſerve that ſince the Revolution that general Doctrine of Obedience is aſſerted by him.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, The next we offer is Dr. Sherlock in his Caſe of Allegiance ſtated.

Page 37. Lond. 1691. Quarto. Clerk reads.] 'And Biſhop Overall's 'Convocation-Book, which is lately 'publiſh'd, the principal Deſign of 'which is to aſſert the irreſiſtible 'Authority of Sovereign Princes, does 'as plainly aſſert this too, That all ſettled Govern-'ments, whatever their Beginnings were, have 'God's Authority, and muſt be obey'd; of which 'more above: For thoſe wiſe Men who ſat in that 'Convocation, plainly ſaw the neceſſary Connexion 'between Non-Reſiſtance, and Obedience to the pre-'ſent Powers; both which were equally reſolv'd 'into the Authority of God, in removing Kings 'and ſetting up Kings: So that Obedience and Al-'legiance to the preſent Powers, when they are 'once well ſettled among us, is ſo far from being a 'renouncing of the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance 'and Paſſive Obedience, that thoſe who refuſe to 'comply, muſt renounce the only Principle whereon 'that Doctrine is reaſonably founded, and conſe-'quently renounce the Doctrine it ſelf.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We now offer a Book publiſh'd by the late Biſhop Beveridge, which was publiſh'd by Her Majeſty's Licenſe, counterſign'd by the Earl of Sunderland.

Clerk reads.] ANNE R.

RESOLUTION I.

Pag. 251, 252, 253, 254. Lond. 1709. 8*vo.*

'I am reſolv'd, by the Grace 'of God, to Honour and Obey 'the King, or Prince, whom God 'is pleas'd to ſet over me; as 'well as to expect he ſhould ſafe-'guard and protect me, whom God is pleas'd to 'ſet under him.

'The King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, the 'great and glorious Monarch of all the World, ha-'ving enacted many gracious Laws, is pleas'd to 'ſet over every Kingdom and Nation, ſuch Perſons 'as may put them in Execution: So that I cannot 'but look upon a lawful King as truly a Repreſen-'tative of the moſt high God, as a Parliament is of 'the People. And am therefore perſuaded that 'whoſoever rebels againſt him, rebels againſt God 'himſelf; not only in that he rebels againſt the Or-'dinance of God, and ſo againſt the God of that 'Ordinance; but becauſe he rebels againſt him 'whom God hath ſet up as his Vicegerent, to 'repreſent his Perſon and execute his Laws, in ſuch 'a Part of his Dominions.

'Hence it is, that theſe two Precepts, Fear God, 'and Honour the King, are ſo often join'd together 'in Holy Writ; for he that fears God's Power, can-'not but honour his Authority; and he that ho-'nours not the King that repreſents God, cannot be 'ſaid to fear God, who is repreſented by him. And 'hence likewiſe it is, that God hath been as ſtrict 'and expreſs in enjoining us Obedience to our Go-'vernors, as to himſelf: For, thus ſaith the Lord 'of Hoſts, Rom. 13. 1. Let every Soul be ſubject 'to the Higher Powers. Why? Becauſe there is 'no Power but of God; the Powers that be, are or-'dain'd of God.

'And he hath denounc'd as great a Judgment 'againſt ſuch as rebel againſt the Magiſtrate he 'hath ordain'd, as againſt thoſe that rebel againſt 'himſelf: For, Whoever reſiſteth the Power, re-'ſiſteth the Ordinance of God; and they that reſiſt 'ſhall receive to themſelves Damnation, ver. 2. So 'that the Wrath of God ſhall as certainly fall upon 'thoſe that riſe up againſt the King, as upon thoſe 'that fight againſt God. And no wonder, that the 'Puniſhment ſhould be the ſame, when the Fault 'is the ſame. For he that fights againſt his King, 'fights againſt God himſelf, who hath inveſted him 'with that Power and Authority to govern his 'People, repreſenting his own glorious Majeſty be-'fore them.

'Upon this Ground it is, that I believe the 'Wickedneſs of a Prince cannot be a ſufficient Plea 'for the Diſobedience of his Subjects; for it is not 'the Holineſs, but the Authority of God that he re-'preſents, which the moſt Wicked, as well as the 'moſt Holy Perſon may be endow'd with. And 'therefore, when the Goſpel firſt began to ſpread it 'ſelf over the Earth, tho' there was no Chriſtian 'King, or Supreme Magiſtrate, of what Title 'ſoever, to cheriſh and protect it; nay, tho' the 'Civil Powers were then the greateſt Enemies to it, 'yet, even then, were the Diſciples of Chriſt en-'join'd to ſubmit themſelves to every Ordinance of 'Man, for the Lord's ſake.

'Inſomuch, that did I live among the Turks, I 'ſhould look upon it as my Duty to obey the 'Grand Signior, in all his Lawful Edicts, as well 'as the moſt Chriſtian and Pious King in the World. 'For, ſuppoſe a Prince be never ſo wicked, and ne-'ver ſo negligent in his Duty of Protecting me, 'it doth not follow, that I muſt neglect mine of 'Obeying him. In ſuch a Caſe, I have another 'Duty added to this, and that is, to pray for him, 'and to intercede with God for his Converſion: 'For, thus hath the King of Kings commanded, 'that Prayers, Supplications, Interceſſions, and giving 'of Thanks be made, as for all Men, ſo more eſpe-'cially for Kings, and thoſe that are in Authority, 'that we may live a quiet and peaceable Life, in all 'Godlineſs and Honeſty, 1 Tim. 2. 1, 2. So that 'whenſoever I addreſs to the Court of Heaven, I 'muſt be ſure to remember my Sovereign on 'Earth, as himſelf doth in Heaven, in Righteouſ-'neſs and Mercy. But eſpecially, in caſe of any 'ſeeming or real Default or Defect; tho' I do not 'think it a Subject's Duty to judge or cenſure his 'Sovereign's Actions: I am to be the more earneſt 'in my Prayers and Interceſſions for him; but up-'on no Account to fight and rebel againſt him.

Mr. Dodd, My Lord, the next Book we offer is his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's Treatiſe, intituled, The Creed of Mr. Hobbs Examined.

Clerk reads.] 'There is no Tye ſo 'ſtrong as that of Religion, which 'eternally bindeth a Conſcientious 'Subject in Allegiance to his Sove-'reign. Pag. 158. Lond. 1670.

'Wo to all the Princes upon 'Earth, if this Doctrine be true, 'and becometh popular. If the 'Multitude believe this, the Prince not arm'd with 'the Scales of the Leviathan, that is, with irre-'ſiſtible Power, can never be ſafe from the Spears, 'and barbed Irons, which their Ambition and pre-'ſumed Intereſt will provide, and their Malice will 'ſharpen, and their paſſionate Violence throw a-'gainſt him. If the Beaſt we ſpoke of come but 'to know its own Strength, it will never be manag'd. 'Wherefore ſuch as own theſe pernicious Doctrines, 'deſtructive to all Societies of Men, may be ſaid 'to have Wolves Heads, as the Laws of old were 'wont to ſpeak concerning Excommunicated Per-'ſons; and are like thoſe Ravenous Beaſts, ſo far 'from deſerving our Love and Care, that they 'ought to be deſtroy'd at the common Charge. Ibid. p. 160, 161.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, There is a further Ac-count of the Opinion of the ſame Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in a Printed Paper, entituled, An Ac-count of what paſſed at the Execution of the late Duke of Monmouth, on Wedneſday the 15*th of July*, 1685. on Tower-Hill.

Clerk reads.] 'The late Duke of Monmouth 'came from the Tower to the Scaffold, attended 'by the Biſhop of Ely, the Biſhop of Bath and 'Wells, Doctor Teniſon, and Doctor Hooper; which 'four the King was graciouſly pleas'd to ſend him, 'as his Aſſiſtants to prepare him for Death; and 'the late Duke himſelf intreated all four of them 'to accompany him to the Place of Execution, and 'to continue with him to the laſt. The two Biſhops 'going in the Lieutenant's Coach with him to the 'Bars, made ſeaſonable and devout Applications to 'him all the way; and one of them deſir'd him 'not to be ſurpriz'd, if they to the very laſt upon 'the Scaffold renew'd thoſe Exhortations to a par-'ticular Repentance, which they had ſo often re-'peated before.

'At his firſt coming upon the Scaffold, he look'd 'for the Executioner; and ſeeing him, ſaid, Is this 'the Man to do the Buſineſs? Do your Work 'well.

'Then the late Duke of Monmouth began to 'ſpeak, ſome one or other of the Aſſiſtants, during 'the whole time, applying themſelves to him.

Mon. 'I ſhall ſay but very little; I come to die; 'I die a Proteſtant of the Church of England.

'Aſſiſt. My Lord, if you be of the Church of 'England, you muſt acknowledge the Doctrine of 'Non-Reſiſtance to be true.

'Mon. If I acknowledge the Doctrine of the 'Church of England in general, that includes all.

''Aſſiſt. Sir, it is fit to own that Doctrine par-'ticularly, with reſpect to your Caſe. Here he was 'much urg'd about that Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance; 'but he repeated in effect his firſt Anſwer.

'Aſſiſt. My Lord, it is fit to be particular; and 'conſidering the publick Evil you have done, you 'ought to do as much Good now as poſſibly you 'can, by a publick Acknowledgment.

'Mon. What I have thought fit to ſay of pub-'lick Affairs, is in a Paper which I have ſign'd; I 'refer to my Paper.

'Aſſiſt. My Lord, there is nothing in that Paper 'about Reſiſtance, and you ought to be particular 'in your Repentance, and to have it well-grounded. 'God give you true Repentance.

'Mon. I die very penitent, and die with great 'Chearfulneſs, for I know I ſhall go to God.

'Aſſiſt. My Lord, you muſt go to God in his 'own way: Sir, be ſure you be truly penitent, and 'aſk Forgiveneſs of God for the many you have 'wronged.

'Mon. I am ſorry for every one I have wronged; 'I forgive every body; I have had many Enemies, 'I forgive them all.

'Aſſiſt. Sir, your Acknowledgment ought be 'publick and particular.

'Mon. I am to die; pray, my Lord---- I refer 'to my Paper.

'Aſſiſt. They are but a few Words that we deſire: 'We only deſire an Anſwer to this Point.

'Mon. I can bleſs God that he hath given me ſo 'much Grace, that for theſe two Years laſt paſt I 'have led a Life unlike to my former Courſe, and 'in which I have been happy.

'Aſſiſt. Sir, Was there no Ill in theſe two Years? 'In theſe Years theſe great Evils have happen'd; 'and the giving publick Satisfaction is a neceſſary 'Part of Repentance; be pleaſed to own a Deteſta-'tion of your Rebellion.

'Mon. I beg your Lordſhips that you will ſtick 'to my Paper.

'Aſſiſt. My Lord, as I ſaid before, there is no-'thing in your Paper about the Doctrine of Non-'Reſiſtance.

'Mon. I repent of all things that a true Chriſtian 'ought to repent of. I am to die; pray, my 'Lord.------

'Aſſiſt. Then, my Lord, we can only recom-'mend you to the Mercy of God; but we cannot 'pray with that Chearfulneſs and Encouragement as 'we ſhould, if you had made a particular Acknow-'ledgment.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We pray we may read the Sermon of his Grace the preſent Archbiſhop of York, preached before your Lordſhips on the 30th of January, 1700.

Clerk reads.] And in caſe it ever hap-'pen that we cannot with a ſafe Conſci- Page 13. 'ence obey, there we are patiently to 'ſuffer the Penalties of our Diſobedience; but by 'no means either to affront their Perſons, or to di-'ſturb their Government, by raiſing or partaking in 'any Tumult, or Inſurrection, or Rebellion.

'That there is ſuch a Submiſſion 'due from all Subjects to the Su- Ibid. p. 19, 20. 'preme Authority of the Place 'where they live, as ſhall tie up their Hands from 'oppoſing or reſiſting it by Force, is evident from 'the very Nature and Ends of Political Society. 'And I dare ſay, there is not that Country upon 'Earth, let the Form of their Government be what 'it will (Abſolute Monarchy, Legal Monarchy, Ari-'ſtocracy, or Commonwealth) where this is not a 'Part of the Conſtitution. Subjects muſt obey 'Paſſively, where they cannot obey Actively: Other-'wiſe the Government would be precarious, and the 'Publick Peace at the Mercy of every Malecontent, 'and a Door would be ſet open to all the Inſur-'rections, Rebellions and Treaſons in the World. 'Nor is this only a State-Doctrine, but the Do-'ctrine alſo of Jeſus Chriſt, and that a neceſſary, 'indiſpenſible one too; as ſufficiently appears from 'thoſe famous Words of St. Paul, Rom. 13. 1, 2. 'which are ſo plain, that they need no Comment: 'Let every Soul (ſaith he) be ſubject to the higher 'Powers, for there is no Power but of God, and the 'Powers that be are ordained of God; whoſoever 'therefore reſiſteth the Power, reſiſteth the Ordinance 'of God; and they that reſiſt ſhall receive to them-'ſelves Damnation. So that ſo long as this Text 'ſtands in our Bibles, the Doctrine of Non-Re-'ſiſtance and Paſſive-Obedience muſt be of Obliga-'tion to all Chriſtians.

Mr. Dodd. Pray ſee whether there is any thing purporting the Thanks of the Houſe to be given to the Archbiſhop for his Sermon.

'Clerk Reads.] Die Jovis, 1 Februarii, 1699. 'It is ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal 'in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Thanks of this 'Houſe be and are hereby given to his Grace the 'Lord Archbiſhop of York, for his Sermon preached 'before this Houſe the Thirtieth of January laſt; 'and he is hereby deſired to Print and Publiſh the 'ſame. Matth. Johnſon, Cl' Parliamentor'.

Mr. Walpole. My Lords, I preſume the Council have offered all they think proper to offer out of this Sermon: But that your Lordſhips may have a Specimen of the Candor of the Doctor's Quotations, I pray the Clerk may read the two next Paragraphs of that Sermon, and that he may read them as diſtinctly as he did the others.

'Clerk Reads.] But then, after I have 'ſaid this, Care muſt be taken, that this Fol. 20. 'general Doctrine be not miſapplied in 'particular Countries. Tho' Non-Reſiſtance, or 'Paſſive-Obedience, be a Duty to all Subjects, and 'under all Governments; yet it is not expreſſed the 'ſame way in all Places, but both the Objects and 'the Inſtances of it do vary in different Nations, 'according to the different Models of their Govern-'ment.

'To ſpeak this as plainly as I can: As the Laws 'of the Land are the Meaſures of our active Obe-'dience, ſo are alſo the ſame Laws the Meaſures of 'our Submiſſion; and as we are not bound to obey, 'but where the Laws and Conſtitution require our 'Obedience, ſo neither are we bound to ſubmit, 'but as the Laws and Conſtitution do require our 'Submiſſion.

Mr. Walpole. Before we part with that Sermon, I deſire one Paragraph more may be read; it begins with theſe Words, If indeed a Preacher.

Clerk reads.] 'If indeed a Preacher ſhould in the Pulpit preſume to 'give his Judgment about the Management of publick Affairs, or to lay down Doctrines 'as from Chriſt about the Forms and Models of 'Kingdoms or Commonwealths, or to adjuſt the 'Limits of the Prerogative of the Prince, or of the 'Liberties of the Subject in our preſent Government; I ſay, if a Divine ſhould meddle with 'ſuch matters as theſe in his Sermons, I do not 'know how he can be excuſed from the juſt Cenſure of meddling with things that nothing concern 'him: This is indeed a practiſing in State Matters, 'and is uſurping an Office that belongs to another 'Profeſſion, and to Men of another Character; and 'I ſhould account it every whit as undecent in a 'Clergyman to take upon him to deal in theſe 'Points, as it would be for him to determine Titles 'of Land in the Pulpit, which are in diſpute in 'Weſtminſter-Hall.

Fol. 6.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, If your Lordſhips pleaſe, as to the two Paragraphs read next after what we read, we entirely concur in what is laid down in them; and if we ſhew that this Doctrine is agreeable to the Laws of the Land, then it is agreeable to what is there laid down: As to the other part, if he has taken upon him to treat of the Model of Government, he will be under the Cenſure of the Archbiſhop; but we deſire to read a little before the beginning of that Paragraph.

Clerk reads.] 'Titus 3. 1. Put them in mind to 'be ſubject to Principalities and Powers, to obey 'Magiſtrates.

'You all know what kind of Argument this Day 'calls for: For by the deſign of keeping it, the buſineſs that the Preacher hath to do, is to preſs 'Obedience and Subjection to the Government we 'live under; and to preach againſt Faction, and Rebellion; and accordingly it is preſcrib'd, in the 'Rubrick of this Day's Service, that if there be a 'Sermon at all, and not a Homily, it ſhall be upon 'this Argument.

'It is very well that Authority hath taken care 'that at ſome ſolemn Times we ſhould preach upon 'this Subject in a more ſolemn manner; becauſe, 'tho' it be as needful as any, yet there are ſome 'among us think it a very improper Theme for the 'Pulpit. I muſt confeſs I had an Eye to this Sug'geſtion when I pitch'd upon theſe Words which 'I have now read to you: Becauſe I think there 'is ſomething to be obſerved in them which will 'effectually confute it.

'St. Paul here lays his Charge upon Titus, that 'he ſhould put the People that were under his 'Care in mind, to be ſubject to Principalities and 'Powers, and to obey Magiſtrates.

'Two things I would here conſider, Firſt, the Per'ſon that is order'd thus to put the People in mind: 'And Secondly, the Thing that he is to put them 'in mind of, which is Subjection and Obedience to 'Principalities, and Powers, and Magiſtrates.

'I begin with the firſt thing, the Perſon to 'whom St. Paul writes this Epiſtle, and to whom 'he gives it in charge, that he ſhould put the People in mind to be ſubject.

'Who was this Perſon? Why, it was Titus, an 'Eccleſiaſtick, Biſhop, a Preacher of the Goſpel, 'not a Layman, not a Magiſtrate, but a pure 'Churchman. What can be more plainly gather'd 'from hence than this, That it is not Foreign to 'a Clergyman's Office to preach Obedience and Sub'jection to the Government; but on the contrary 'a part of his Function, a neceſſary Duty incum'bent upon him to do it? If any Man affirm otherwiſe, he muſt either ſay that St. Paul did not 'rightly inſtruct Titus in his Office, but enjoin'd 'him to do that which he had nothing to do 'with; or he muſt ſhew that the Caſe of Titus 'was different from that of the Miniſters of the 'Goſpel at this Day: Neither of which things can, 'I believe, be eaſily made out.

'And yet into ſuch Times are we fallen, that it is 'taken ill by many, that Miniſters ſhould in their 'Pulpit-Diſcourſes meddle with theſe Matters: I 'muſt confeſs, I think, that of all Men it moſt 'concerns a Miniſter of Religion not to be a Buſy-Body, or a Meddler in other Men's matters; for, 'in Truth, he hath Work enough to do of his own, 'and ſuch kind of Work too, as, let him behave 'himſelf as inoffenſively as he can, will create him 'Difficulties and Enemies enow. And therefore 'it would be very imprudent in him to uſurp other 'Mens Provinces, and to burn his Finger where he 'needs not, eſpecially conſidering that the Succeſs 'of his Labours and Endeavours among the People 'doth in a great Meaſure depend upon the good 'liking they have of him.

'But what is it that gives Offence? Or what is 'it that renders this Argument we are ſpeaking of 'ſo improper a Subjects for a Clergyman to treat 'of? Why, ſeveral things are pretended, and I ſhall 'name ſome of them.

Firſt, It is ſaid, That the Work of a Clergyman 'is to inſtruct Men in Chriſt's Religion, to preach 'againſt Vice and Sin, and to preach up Holineſs 'and Good Life, and mutual Love and Charity; 'but what hath he to do with State-Affairs, as 'Matters of Government are?

'I anſwer, He hath nothing indeed to do with 'them: But his only Work is to make Men good 'Chriſtians, by endeavouring to poſſeſs them with 'a hearty Belief of our Saviour's Doctrines and Promiſes, and perſuading them to a Conformity in 'their Lives to his Precepts. This is our proper 'Work, and this is that we ought to attend to all 'the days of our Life; and with Government and 'State-Affairs we ought not to meddle, in our Ser'mons eſpecially.

'But then, after all this, it doth not follow but 'that we are all bound, as we have Occaſion, to 'preach up Loyalty, and Obedience to our Gover'nors; for this is no State-Affair, but an Affair of 'the Goſpel. We cannot inſtruct Men in Chriſt's 'Religion, without inſtructing them in this.

'If, indeed, it was an indifferent thing to a 'Man's Chriſtianity, or to his Salvation, whether 'he was a good or a bad Subject, then indeed it 'would be as indifferent to a Preacher, whether 'he inſiſted on theſe things to the People; but it 'is not ſo.

'One great Branch of Chriſtian Holineſs, as it 'is declar'd in the New Teſtament, is, That every 'Man demean himſelf quietly, and peaceably, and 'obediently to the Government he lives under; and 'that not only for Wrath, or Fear of Puniſhment, 'but alſo for Conſcience-ſake: And this is made as

'neceſſary

'neceſſary a Condition of going to Heaven, as any 'other particular Virtue is. And therefore, if we 'will inſtruct Men in Chriſt's Religion, and in the 'indiſpenſable Points of Holineſs requir'd thereby, 'we muſt inſtruct them in this alſo.

'One great Vice and damnable Sin that the Reli-'gion of our Lord has caution'd againſt, is the Sin 'of Factiouſneſs and Rebellion; and therefore if it 'be our Duty to declare againſt the Sins and Vices 'that are contrary to Chriſtianity, it is our Duty to 'declare and caution againſt this alſo.

'Laſtly, We do readily grant that a great Part of 'our Office conſiſts in moſt affectionately recom-'mending and preſſing the Neceſſity of mutual 'Love and Charity; but if this be neceſſary, is it 'not more ſo to recommend and preſs Obedience to 'Authority, without which, mutual Love and Cha-'rity cannot poſſibly ſubſiſt? That being the com-'mon Ligament of them; and take away that, we 'ſhould be no better than Bears and Tygers one to 'another.

'But it is ſaid in the Second place, That Preach-'ers ought not to meddle with theſe Points, be-'cauſe they are not competent Judges of them: 'They do not know the Meaſures and Limits of 'Loyalty and Diſloyalty, of being a good and a bad 'Subject; theſe depending altogether upon the 'Conſtitution of the Government we live under, 'and the determining of them belongs to the Ci-'vil Courts, and not to their Profeſſion.

'To this I anſwer, That in all thoſe Inſtances 'wherein this Argument falls under the Cogni-'zance and Determination of Parliaments, or Judges, 'or Lawyers, we do not pretend to meddle with 'it; and if any Man do, let him anſwer for him-'ſelf: All that we pretend to, is to preſs the plain, 'general, indiſpenſible Duties of Obedience to Laws, 'and of Peaceableneſs and Subjection to the Higher 'Powers, which Chriſt and his Apoſtes have every 'where taught in the Bible.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We don't deſire to read any more; we think we have juſtified our Quotations, and ſhew'd that it is the Opinion of that Great and Learned Archbiſhop, That the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance is the Doctrine of our Church; and that it is a Duty incumbent upon the Clergy to preach it to the People.

Mr. Dodd. The next we offer to your Lordſhips, is the Opinion of the preſent Biſhop of Worceſter, in a Sermon preach'd before the late Queen the 29th of May 1692. when he was Biſhop of St. Aſaph.

Clerk reads.] 'They had brought
Pag. 18,19. 'Things to that paſs, that our Laws 'ſignify'd nothing but what they 'pleas'd; our Religion was held at the Courteſy of 'them that were the bloody Enemies of it. Our 'Obedience was made uſe of as a perfect Snare to 'us; we muſt not reſiſt; that our Religion would 'not allow. —— It was God that infatuated our 'Oppreſſors, to join the Injuries of a People that 'could not lawfully Reſiſt, with thoſe of a Prince 'that could not lawfully paſs them by without Re-'ſiſtance.

Mr. Phipps. We ſhall now offer to your Lordſhips a Sermon preach'd by the Biſhop of Rocheſter before the Artillery-Company, upon the 29th of May, 1692.

Clerk Reads.] 'Put up thy Sword,
Pag. 5. 'ſays he; O Peter, ſubmit with Pa-'tience. Oppoſe not Authority. Do 'not then break the Laws of thy Country, tho' for 'Kindneſs and Love of me. Put up thy Sword. He 'that uſes the Sword unlawfully, tho' on a Pretence 'never ſo pious, ſhall periſh by the Sword; ſhall 'either be deſtroy'd by it here, or puniſh'd here-'after by God himſelf for having ſo us'd it.

'Wherefore we are not to conclude, that our 'Bleſſed Lord by this Check given to St. Peter 'did abſolutely prohibit all manner of uſing the 'Sword among Chriſtians, but only that he taught 'us the great Duty of Chriſtian Submiſſion. For if 'St. Peter was, then certainly all other Chriſtian 'Subjects are forbidden to unſheath the Sword 'againſt their Lawful Sovereign, or his Miniſters, 'as they are commiſſion'd by him, tho' they do it 'on a Pretext ſo Spiritual, as the Cauſe of Chriſt 'himſelf.

'Tho' they could not be induc'd

'ces equal with their God, yet 'they preſerved them in the next Place: Tho' they 'would never worſhip them as Gods upon Earth, 'yet they religiouſly obey'd them as God's Depu-'ties and Repreſentatives. They judg'd thoſe who 'rebell'd againſt them worthy of Death, as if they 'had actually rebell'd againſt God himſelf. What 'elſe means St. Paul, when in ſo many Words he 'declares, That whoſoever reſiſteth the Power, reſiſt-'eth the Ordinance of God; and they that reſiſt ſhall 'receive to themſelves Damnation? Rom. 13. 2. 'Out of all doubt he there ſpeaks of the Tempo-'ral Power, and of Eternal Damnation to enſue up-'on reſiſting it; than which, what more grievous 'Puniſhment could have been inflicted, had they 'immediately reſiſted God himſelf?

'And recollect, I intreat you, the Time when 'this was ſo poſitively pronounc'd by St. Paul. It 'muſt have been writ under the Reign of Claudius 'or Nero. So that 'tis evident, all that reſiſted 'them were, without Repentance, in a damnable 'State. Can there be then any Colour ſo ſpecious, 'any Cauſe ſo juſt, in which, inſtead of Damnati-'on, a Chriſtian Subject may juſtly expect to re-'ceive to himſelf Salvation, on the Account of 'Reſiſting?

Mr. Phipps. We ſhall next offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration the Authority of the Lord Biſhop of Sarum; where he ſhews, that this is not only the Doctrine of the Church of England, but of the Church of Scotland, and of all Chriſtian Churches.

If then they ſwerve from this, they forſake 'the End for which they are raiſed up, and ſo fall 'from their Power and Right to our Obedience.

'Bazil. Truly what you have ſaid makes me 'not repent of any haſte I ſeemed to make; for 'what you have alledged proves indeed that the

'So-

'Sovereign is a Minister of God for good, so that 'he corrupts his Power grosly when he pursues not 'that Design: But in that he is only accountable to 'God, whose Minister he is. And this must hold 'good, except you give us good ground to believe, 'that God hath given Authority to the Subjects 'to call him to account for his Trust; but if that 'be not made appear, then he must be left to God, 'who did impower him, and therefore can only co-'erce him. As one having his Power from a 'King, is countable to none for the Administration 'of it, but to the King, or to those on whom the 'King shall devolve it: So except it be proved, 'that God hath warranted Subjects to call their So-'vereigns to account, they being his Ministers, must 'only be answerable to him. And according to 'these Principles of yours, the Magistrates Autho-'rity shall be so enervated, that he shall no more 'be able to serve these Designs, for which God hath 'vested him with Power: Every one being thus 'taught to shake off his Yoke when they think he 'acts in Prejudice of Religion. And here I shall 'add one thing, which all Casuists hold a safe Rule 'in matters that are doubtful, That we ought to 'follow that side of the Doubt which is freest of 'hazard. Here then Damnation is at least the seem-'ing hazard of Resistance; therefore except upon 'as clear Evidence you prove the danger of absolute 'Submission to be of the same Nature that it may 'balance the other, then absolute Submission, as 'being the securest, is to be followed.

Mr. Phipps. There is another Sermon, Preach'd by the Bishop of Salisbury, entitled, Subjection for Conscience Sake asserted, in a Sermon preach'd at Guildhall, 1689.

Clerk reads.] 'Blessed be God, our Printed at London, Pag. 30. 'Church hates and condemns this Do-'ctrine from what Hand soever it 'comes, and hath establish'd the 'Rights and Authority of Princes, 'on sure and unalterable Foundations; enjoining an 'entire Obedience to all the lawful Commands of 'Authority, and an absolute Submission to that Su-'preme Power God hath put into our Sovereign's 'Hands. This Doctrine we justly glory in; and 'if any that had their Baptism, and Education in 'our Church, have turn'd Renegades from this, 'they prov'd no less Enemies to the Church her self, 'than to the Civil Authority: So that their Apo-'stacy leaves no Blame on our Church, which 'glories in nothing more than in a well-temper'd 'Reformation, from the later Corruption which 'the dark Ages brought into the Pure and Primi-'tive Doctrines which our Saviour and his Apo-'stles taught, and the first Christians retain'd, and 'practis'd for many Ages.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, I only observe, That the absolute Submission to the Supreme Power, are the Words in the Doctor's Sermon.

Sir Peter King. My Lords, Before your Lord-ships go on to any other, I pray the 17th Page of the Book which they read, entitled, The Vindicati-on of the Authority, Constitution and Laws of the Church and State of Scotland, may be read.

'The Case varies very much when
Pag. 17. 'the Abuse is such that it tends to a 'total Subversion, which may be cal-'led justly a Phrensy, since no Man is capable of 'it 'till he be under some Lesion of his Mind; in 'which case, the Power is to be administred by 'others, for the Prince and his People's Safety: 'But this will never prove that a Magistrate go-'verning by Law, though there be great Errors in 'his Government, ought to be coerced: Other-'wise you must open a Door to perpetual Broils, 'since every one by these Maxims becomes Judge; 'and where he is both Judge and Party, is not 'like to be cast in his Pretensions; And even few 'Malefactors die, but they think hard measure is 'given them. If then forcible Self-defence be to be 'followed, none of these should yield up their 'Lives without using all Attempts for rescuing 'them.

Mr. Dee. My Lords, The next we offer is a Sermon preach'd by the Bishop of Ely before the Lord-Mayor and Aldermen at Guildhall, the 26th of January 1684.

Clerk reads.] 'The patient Chri-
Pag. 19. 'stian cannot but condemn those, who 'under the Pretence of defending their 'Rights or Religion, resist lawful Authority. It 'being a Blasphemy against the Divine Wisdom 'and Power, to suppose God can ever stand in need 'of our Sins to bring to pass his most glorious 'Designs. He then in whom this Virtue of Pati-'ence dwells, keeps a due Regard to the Commands 'laid upon him, to submit himself to the Supreme 'Powers; and he dares not lift up his Hand against 'the Lord's Anointed, or levy War upon the most 'plausible Account whatsoever; nay, to him it can-'not but seem a Wonder that the Doctrine of Re-'sistance should have gone down so glibly with any 'who have read the New Testament, and are baptiz'd 'into the Christian Faith.

'There is an universal absolute
Ib. P. 20, 21. 'Command in the Holy Scripture 'laid upon all Christians, to be sub-'ject to the Supreme Powers in all Cases. Now 'nothing is plainer, than than that if we be requi-'red to be subject in all Cases, Resistance in any 'will be sinful. Let every Soul be subject to the 'Higher Power; to which Christian Precept there 'is no Exception to be found for any Person, in any 'Instance, from one End of the Christian Instituti-'on to the other. —— Subjection is a Duty, than 'which there is hardly any other repeated in the 'Christian Law, so as we cannot plead Ignorance of it; 'it is press'd with such Evidence of Reason, that 'cuts off all Pretences of evading it; it is set down 'in such plain, easy, and full Expressions, as that 'there can be no Colour to doubt about the right 'Understanding of it. The Holy Scripture gives Per-'mission no more to the People collected into one 'Body to rebel, than it does to each of them, by 'himself singly considered. Every Christian, in all 'Circumstances, is requir'd to conform to the Laws 'of the Supreme Authority, if they have no 'Repugnancy to God's Laws, and to suffer patient-'ly where Obedience would be a Sin.

Mr. Dee. My Lords, The next we beg leave to offer, is a Sermon of the Bishop of Bath and Wells, preach'd before the King at Whitehall the 5th of November 1681.

Clerk reads.] 'Is he not the Vice-
Pag. 11. 'gerent of God? Whereever therefore 'his Sovereign the Almighty has not 'prevented him by any precedent Commands, there 'he has a Right and Liberty to put forth his; in 'these Cases to expect an active chearful Obedience, 'and that we should in no Case, and for no Reason 'resist.

Mr. Dee. The next we offer to your Lordſhips, is a Sermon preach'd by the Biſhop of Lincoln before your Lordſhips, on the 30th of January, 1708. which was publiſh'd by your Lordſhips Commands.

Clerk reads.] ‘ Die Sabbati, 31 Januarii, 1708. ‘ Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Tempo- ‘ ral in Parliament aſſembled, That the Thanks ‘ of this Houſe be, and are hereby given to ‘ the Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, for his Sermon ‘ preach'd before this Houſe yeſterday, in the ‘ Abby-Church in Weſtminſter; and that he ‘ be deſired to Print and Publiſh the ſame.

Matth. Johnſon, Cler' Parliamentor'.

Pag. 15, 16, 17, 18. ‘ And if neither the Ma- ‘ lice of the Jews, nor the Innocence of our Lord; ‘ if neither the Truth of our Religion perſecuted in ‘ its Founder, nor the apparent Marks of Malice ‘ and Envy, of Violence and Oppreſſion, which ap- ‘ peared in the whole Courſe of their Proſecution ‘ of Him; were ſufficient to warrant St. Peter to ‘ draw the Sword in his Defence, againſt that Legal ‘ Authority by which they acted; We muſt con- ‘ clude, that neither will any of theſe Pretences ‘ ſuffice to juſtify any other Chriſtians, in the like ‘ Circumſtances, now. But if it ſhall pleaſe God ‘ at any time to permit the Lawful Powers to be ‘ againſt Us, and make them that hate us, to rule ‘ over us; We muſt follow the Example of our ‘ Bleſſed Maſter, and ſubmit patiently to their Au- ‘ thority; and not, with this warm Apoſtle, take ‘ the Sword againſt thoſe, to whom God has commit- ‘ ted the Power of the Sword.

‘ Let this then ſuffice to ſhew, what the true ‘ Chriſtian Doctrine, of Submiſſion to the Civil Ma- ‘ giſtrate, is. I ſhall not here enquire, whether ‘ ſome may not poſſibly have miſapplied theſe ‘ Principles, or have ſtretched them further than ‘ they ought to have done, and by that means have ‘ led both themſelves and others into great Mi- ‘ ſtakes, and no leſs Inconveniencies. What that ‘ Authority in every State or Country is, to which ‘ ſuch a Subjection (as I have now been ſpeaking ‘ of) is due, and againſt which no Reſiſtance (no ‘ not to defend the Beſt Cauſe, or the moſt Inno- ‘ cent Perſon in the World) may be uſed by any ‘ of the Community, is a Point which the Munici- ‘ pal Laws and Conſtitution of every State and ‘ Country muſt determine: But that whereever that ‘ Supreme Power and Authority is lodged, or in ‘ whomſoever it reſides, to which God has com- ‘ manded us to be ſubject, not only for Wrath, ‘ but alſo for Conſcience ſake; concerning which ‘ St. Paul has laid down this Rule, Let every Soul ‘ be ſubject to the Higher Powers; and St. Peter ‘ himſelf declar'd, that we muſt ſubmit to it for ‘ the Lord's Sake: We are bound to pay either an ‘ Active, or Paſſive Obedience to it; muſt either ‘ do what it requires, or ſuffer what it inflicts: ‘ This is without Controverſy the ſtanding Doctrine ‘ of Chriſtianity, and has been confirm'd by the ‘ Practice of the beſt Chriſtians in all Ages of the ‘ Church.

‘ Which being ſo, let us go on finally (upon ‘ theſe Principles) to conſider, ‘ III. What we are to judge of Thoſe, who, ‘ notwithſtanding ſo plain an Admonition, not on- ‘ ly took the Sword, (tho' that had been too much) ‘ but cut off with it that Royal Perſon, who alone ‘ had the Rightful Power of it.

‘ And here I cannot follow either a plainer or ‘ ſurer Guide, than our Laws themſelves, which ‘ ſpeak not only with Authority, but Approbation ‘ too; and tell us, in effect, what the Senſe of the ‘ whole Nation is, or at leaſt ought to be, both of ‘ Them and their Proceedings. The Fact it ſelf ‘ they call a Horrid, Execrable, Deteſtable Mur- ‘ der; an impious Fact, an unparallel'd Treaſon: ‘ The Court, which decreed it, a Traiterous Aſ- ‘ ſembly, a prodigious and unheard-of Tribunal. ‘ The Perſons who thus unwarrantably drew the ‘ Sword againſt their own Sovereign, they brand as ‘ a Parcel of wretched Men, deſperately wicked, ‘ hardned in their Impiety. And laſtly, As to the ‘ Principles upon which they proceeded, the ſame ‘ Laws declare, " That by the Undoubted and Fun- " damental Laws of this Kingdom, neither the Peers " of this Realm, nor the Commons, nor both toge- " ther, in Parliament, or out of Parliament, Colle- " ctively or Repreſentatively, nor any other Perſons " whatſoever, ever had, have, hath, or ought to " have, any Coercive Power over the Perſons of the " Kings of this Realm.

Clerk reads on by Direction of the Managers.

‘ Such is the Cenſure which our Laws have paſ- ‘ ſed upon the Murder of our Royal Sovereign, and ‘ the Perſons who committed it: And the ſame is ‘ the Senſe which both the Word of God, and the ‘ Laws of all other Nations, teach us to have of ‘ both.

‘ For to allow that ſome Things had been done ‘ under the Authority of that Unfortunate Prince ‘ leſs regularly than were to have been wiſhed; That ‘ the Prerogative had been ſtrained to an Exorbi- ‘ tant Height, and the Subject too much provoked ‘ to complain, if not of the King himſelf, yet of ‘ thoſe who were about him, and ſhould have ad- ‘ viſed, and acted more moderately than they did. ‘ To grant that when the Parliament met, with ‘ which our Troubles began, it was excuſable, or ‘ even fitting for it to have redreſſed thoſe Grie- ‘ vances, and reduced the Prerogative within its ‘ juſt Bounds; and that thoſe therefore who en- ‘ tred upon the proper Methods of doing this in a ‘ Parliamentary way, without any ill Deſigns, ei- ‘ ther againſt the Perſon or Government of the ‘ King, were not to be blamed. Yet certainly, when ‘ this was done, and thereupon ſuch Acts were paſ- ‘ ſed, as not only abundantly repaired whatever the ‘ Subject had ſuffered before, but ſufficiently ſecu- ‘ red him againſt any more Invaſions, either of his ‘ Liberty or Property, for the Time to come; for ‘ Men to proceed farther ſtill, and without any ‘ lawful Authority, or evident Neceſſity, enter into ‘ a War againſt their Sovereign, who had ſo far ‘ condeſcended to all their juſt Deſires, muſt needs ‘ have been as illegal as it was unreaſonable, and be- ‘ ſpeak thoſe who did it, to have taken the Sword ‘ in that Senſe which our Saviour here forbad, and ‘ all good Men have ever condemned.

‘ Had that Excellent Prince indeed never called ‘ his laſt Parliament at all, nor given any Opportu- ‘ nity to his People to redreſs their Grievances by

‘ the

'the proper Methods of it; had he not only continued to inſiſt upon thoſe Pretenſions which ſome 'had ſet up under the Shelter of his Authority, but 'ſo far improved them as utterly to ſet aſide the 'Laws of the Realm, and to act arbitrarily, not 'only without Law, but againſt it; and when no-'thing elſe would do, had he choſen rather to de-'ſert the Government, than to rule according to 'his own Oath, and the Fundamental Laws and 'Limitations of it; this might have warranted an 'oppreſſed People to take the Sword for the neceſ-'ſary Defence of their Laws and Conſtitution, and 'their Religion and Liberties founded thereupon. 'But to take up Arms againſt a King, whoſe Ex-'ceſſes had been moderate, and whoſe Neceſſities 'preſſed him, contrary to his own Inclinations, to 'run into the moſt of them; but eſpecially, who had 'already, without Force, not only freely redreſſed 'the Grievances of his People, but abundantly re-'paired them, and ſecured them againſt the like 'Attempts for the future: This muſt needs have 'been an unwarrantable Enterprize; a War as un-'juſtifiable in its Riſe, as it proved fatal in its Con-'ſequences.

Mr. Dodd. The next we ſhall offer to your Lordſhips, is the Biſhop of Exeter's Sermon preach'd before Her Majeſty, on Her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne.

Clerk reads.] Pag. 13, 14. 'Nay, tho' the 'Laws of our Earthly Governors ſhould in ſome 'Inſtances be contrary to the Divine Laws, (upon 'which Suppoſition the Magiſtrate does certainly 'exceed the Bounds of his Commiſſion) yet this 'does not void their Authority, they are the Mini-'ſters of God for all this; or elſe there were none 'that were ſo, there were none that could be call'd 'ſo, when the Apoſtle wrote this Epiſtle: And 'there is a Duty lying on Subjects even in this 'Caſe, viz. not to oppoſe, nor reſiſt the Power, 'but quietly and patiently to ſuffer the Penalty of 'thoſe Laws, which they can't, without ſinning 'againſt God, yield an active Obedience to.

Mr. Dodd. The next we ſhall offer to your Lordſhips, is the Biſhop of St. Aſaph's Sermon, preach'd before the Lord-Mayor, on the Thirtieth of January, 1699.

Clerk reads.]

Pag. 18. 'It is plain, that a Government can't 'poſſibly ſubſiſt for any Time, where any kind of 'Violence is allowed againſt the Magiſtrate. We 'ſee what wicked Work is made in ſome unhappy 'States, where private Executions of Revenge be-'twixt Particulars are indulg'd, or frequently con-'nived at. But Government is at an end, where 'Rulers are expoſed to Popular Aſſaults.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We ſhall now produce a Sermon, preach'd by the Biſhop of Carliſle before your Lordſhips, upon the Thirtieth of January, 1702.

Clerk reads.] 'Die Lunæ, 1 Februarii, 1702. 'It is ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Tem-'poral, in Parliament aſſembled, That the 'Thanks of this Houſe ſhall be (and are here-'by) given to the Lord Biſhop of Carliſle, for 'his Sermon preach'd before this Houſe on 'the Thirtieth of January laſt, in the Abby-'Church at Weſtminſter: And he is hereby 'deſired to Print and Publiſh the ſame.

Matth. Johnſon, Cler' Parliamentor'.

Pag. 31. 'Our Foundations, 'tis to be hoped, 'are not ſhaken by the Weight of thoſe many 'great and extraordinary Revolutions that have 'paſs'd upon us. The All-wiſe Providence of God 'has frequently of late (and as ſome of us always 'thought, very graciouſly) exchanged our Gover-'nors: But if we ungratefully alter our Notions of 'the Divine Right of Government, and throw off 'our Ancient and Primitive Rules of Obedience, 'we ſhall make an unworthy Return for the Mer-'cies we have received.

Mr. Phipps. We beg Leave to offer to your Lordſhips Three Sermons, preach'd before the Houſe of Commons; one preach'd before them by Doctor Eyre, upon January 30. 1707.

Clerk reads.] 'Sabbat. 31 Die Jan. 1707. Or-'dered, That the Thanks of this Houſe be gi-'ven to Dr. Eyre, for the Excellent Sermon 'by him preach'd before this Houſe, at St. 'Margaret's Weſtminſter, Yeſterday, being 'the Day appointed for a Solemn Faſt and 'Humiliation, for the Murder of King Charles 'the Firſt: And that he be deſired to Print 'the ſame; and that Mr. Bridges, Mr. 'Chandler, the Lord William Powlett, and 'Mr. Eyre, do acquaint him therewith.

Paul Joddrell, Cl. Dom. Com.

'Let no Seditious and Antimonarchical Princi-'ples be ſo much as once named among us, as be-'cometh good Subjects, and good Chriſtians: Let 'no ſly Inſinuations of Male-Adminiſtration be 'ſuggeſted, no new Doctrines advanced, nor any 'old ones revived, whereby to leſſen the Security 'of the Crown, under the ſpecious Pretence of 'maintaining the Rights and Liberties of the Peo-'ple.

Mr. Dee. The next is Dr. Kennet's Sermon, preach'd before the Commons the 30th of January, 1705.

Clerk reads.] 'Jovis 31 Die Januarii, 1705. 'Ordered, That the Thanks of this Houſe be 'given to Dr. Kennet, Archdeacon of Hun-'tingdon, for the Sermon by him preached 'before this Houſe yeſterday, at St. Marga-'ret's Weſtminſter: And that he be deſired to 'Print the ſame. And that Sir Thomas Little-'ton, Mr. Worſley, and Mr. King, do acquaint 'him therewith.

Paul Joddrell, Cl. Dom. Com.

'This is the true Foundation of that common 'Axiom, The King can do no wrong; becauſe 'there is no Right nor Remedy againſt his Royal 'Perſon.

'It was declarative of our Original Conſtitution, 'that our Legiſlature, upon Occaſion of this Day, 'would have it expreſs'd, "That by the Undoubt-"ed and Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, nei-"ther the Peers of this Realm, nor the Commons,

" ſentatively, nor any other Perſons whatſoever,
" ever had, have, or ought to have, any Coercive
" Power over the Perſons of the Kings of this " Realm.

Mr. Dee. My Lords, The next is Dr. Delaune's Sermon, preach'd before the Houſe of Commons, upon the 30th of January, 1702.

Clerk reads.] ' Lunæ 1 die Feb. 1702. Order-

Paul Jodrell, Cl. Dom. Com.

Pag. 10. ' The Civil Laws of a Country are in ' the Nature of Articles of Agreement between the ' Rulers and their Subjects; Duty and Obedi-
' ence are ſecur'd on one Hand, and on the other,
' Protection in Civil Rights. If the Subject breaks
' his Part of the Covenant, (as I may call it) his
' Puniſhment is at Hand; and if the Supreme Pow-
' er breaks his, his Puniſhment is no leſs certain,
' tho' more remote; for he is guilty before God,
' who is his Ruler, tho' it is impoſſible he ſhould
' be accountable for it in his own Dominions, for
' that would infer a Power Superior to the Supreme,
' which is a flat Contradiction.

Mr. Dodd. Your Lordſhips obſerve by all theſe Sermons, how generally this Point is laid down, without making any Exception; and yet I don't doubt, but that there is an Exception included in every one of theſe; yet it is always laid down in general Terms: And we deſire that the ſame Exception may be allowed to the Doctor, as is to all theſe: And if he has erred, he can only be ſaid, Errare cum Patribus.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We have thus far made good our Defence, That this is the Doctrine of the Church of England; That the Fathers of the Church have always avow'd it; That it has been preach'd in the ſame Terms in which the Doctor has preach'd it, ever ſince Her Majeſty's Acceſſion to the Throne, and no Objection has been made to it till now; and that it has been approv'd by both Houſes of Parliament, and by Her Majeſty. We will now proceed to ſhew, that it is confirm'd by ſeveral Acts of Parliament: The firſt is in the 12th of Charles II. C. 30.

Clerk reads.] ' And be it hereby declared, That ' by the Undoubted and Fundamental Laws of this ' Kingdom, neither the Peers of this Realm, nor
' the Commons, nor both together, in Parliament,
' or out of Parliament, nor the People Collectively
' or Repreſentatively, nor any other Perſons what-
' ſoever, ever had, have, hath, or ought to have,
' any Coercive Power over the Perſons of the Kings
' of this Realm.

Mr. Dodd. The next Act of Parliament we ſhall read to your Lordſhips, is the Corporation-Act, 13 Car. II. Stat. 2. §. 5.

Clerk reads.] ' I A. B. do declare and believe,
' That it is not Lawful, upon any Pretence whatſo-
' ever, to take up Arms againſt the King; and that ' I do abhor that Traiterous Poſition, of taking Arms
' by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe
' that are commiſſioned by him. So help me God.

Mr. Dodd. This is a General Oath, to be taken by all the Officers of Corporations.

Sir Joſ. Jekyll. I can't but obſerve, my Lords, that it is a little extraordinary, the Doctor's Council ſhould open this Act of Parliament, and offer it to be read, and not inform your Lordſhips that it is repeal'd.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We did open it that it is repeal'd; but we did inſiſt, That as this Oath had been taken by all Officers of Corporations ſo many Years, ſo it was then a true Propoſition, and ſtill remains ſo, altho' it be repealed: That Repeal don't make the Propoſition falſe.

Mr. Phipps. We admit, my Lords, that in the Act for abrogating the Oaths, and appointing others, this Paragraph is omitted. But what we offer it for, is, to ſhew that this Doctrine has been ſworn to by moſt of the Great Men, and all the Great Officers of England, for ſo many Years together.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, The next is the Militia Act, 13 & 14 Car. II. Cap. 3. We deſire to read the Preamble of that Act, and then the Oath appointed to be taken.

Clerk reads.] ' Foraſmuch as within all His ' Majeſty's Realms and Dominions, the Sole and
' Supreme Power, Government, Command and
' Diſpoſition of the Militia, and of all Forces
' by Sea and Land, and of all Forts and Places
' of Strength, is, and (by the Laws of England)
' ever was the undoubted Right of His Majeſty,
' and his Royal Predeceſſors, Kings and Queen of ' England; And that both, or either of the Houſes
' of Parliament, cannot, nor ought to pretend to ' the ſame; nor can, nor lawfully may, raiſe or
' levy any War, Offenſive or Defenſive, againſt His ' Majeſty, his Heirs, or Lawful Succeſſors: And ' yet the contrary thereof hath of late Years been
' practiſed, almoſt to the Ruin and Deſtruction of ' this Kingdom: And during the late Uſurped Go-
' vernments, many evil and rebellious Principles
' have been inſtilled into the Minds of the People
' of this Kingdom, which may break forth, unleſs
' prevented, to the Diſturbance of the Peace and ' Quiet thereof.

' §. 18. I A. B. do declare and believe, That it ' is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to ' take up Arms againſt the King: And that I do ab-
' hor that Traiterous Poſition, That Arms may be ' taken by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt
' thoſe that are commiſſioned by him, in Purſuance
' of ſuch Military Commiſſions. So help me God.

Mr. Dee. My Lords, The next is the Act of Uniformity, 13 & 14 Car. II. Cap. 4.

Clerk reads.] ' And be it further enacted by the ' Authority aforeſaid, That every Dean, Canon,
' and Prebendary of every Cathedral or Collegiate ' Church, and all Maſters and other Heads, Fel' lows, Chaplains, and Tutors of or in any College,
' Hall, Houſe of Learning, Hoſpital, and every
' Publick Profeſſor and Reader in either of the Uni-
' verſities, and in every College elſewhere, and eve' ry Parſon, Vicar, Curate, Lecturer, and every ' other Perſon in Holy Orders, and every School-
' maſter keeping any publick or private School, and
' every Perſon inſtructing or teaching any Youth in ' any Houſe or private Family as a Schoolmaſter,
' who upon the firſt Day of May, which ſhall be ' in the Year of our Lord God, 1662. or at any 'Time thereafter, ſhall be incumbent, or have Poſſeſſion of any Deanery, Canonry, Prebend, Maſterſhip, Headſhip, Fellowſhip, Profeſſor's Place, or Reader's Place, Parſonage, Vicarage, or any other Eccleſiaſtical Dignity or Promotion, or any Curate's Place, Lecture or School, or ſhall inſtruct or teach any Youth as Tutor or Schoolmaſter, ſhall before the Feaſt-Day of St. Bartholomew, which ſhall be in the Year of our Lord, 1662. or at or before his or their reſpective Admiſſion to be Incumbent, or have Poſſeſſion aforeſaid, ſubſcribe the Declaration or Acknowledgment following; (ſcilicet,)

'I A. B. do declare, That it is not lawful, upon any Pretence whatſoever, to take Arms againſt the King; and that I do abhor that Traiterous Poſition, of taking Arms by his Authority againſt his Perſon, or againſt thoſe that are commiſſioned by him: And that I will Conform to the Liturgy of the Church of England, as it is now by Law Eſtabliſhed. And I do declare, That I hold there lies no Obligation upon me, or any other Perſon, from the Oath commonly call'd The Solemn League and Covenant, to endeavour any Change or Alteration of Government either in Church or State; and that the ſame was in it ſelf an unlawful Oath, and impoſed upon the Subjects of this Realm, againſt the known Laws and Liberties of this Kingdom.

Mr. Phipps. The Reaſon of our Reading this, is to let your Lordſhips ſee, what Obligations were on all Clergymen to Subſcribe this Declaration; and then we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Judgment, whether the Doctor is Criminal for Preaching that which all Parſons were (before that Act was repealed) obliged to Subſcribe, in order to qualify themſelves for Preaching. And I beg Leave juſt to obſerve to your Lordſhips, That by 16 Car. II. the Act for Select Veſtries, all Veſtrymen were obliged to Subſcribe the ſame Declaration.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, There are Two other Acts, but I think we need not read them, becauſe they were ſo lately made: The one is for the Aſſociation, the other for the Abjuration, which is taken almoſt every Day in Weſtminſter-Hall.

Mr. Phipps. If your Lordſhips pleaſe, we ſhall offer nothing more on this Article, but only ſome Part of his late Majeſty's Declaration, to ſhew that there was ſome Reaſon for what the Doctor ſaid of his late Majeſty's diſclaiming all manner of Reſiſtance.

Sir Joſeph Jekyll. My Lords, I perceive they are going to read ſome Part of his late Majeſty's Declaration: We ſhould have offer'd ſome Part of that Declaration, as a Material Proof againſt the Doctor; but we would not produce any Papers as Evidence, which are not ſo; tho' we allow that to the Doctor. But ſince it is produced as Evidence for the Doctor, I deſire it may be read quite through.

Clerk reads.] 'The Declaration of his Highneſs, William Henry, by the Grace of God, Prince of Orange, &c. of the Reaſons inducing him to appear in Arms in the Kingdom of England, for preſerving of the Proteſtant Religion, and for reſtoring the Laws and Liberties of England, Scotland, and Ireland.

1. 'IT is both certain and evident to all Men, That the Publick Peace and Happineſs of any State or Kingdom cannot be preſerved, where the Laws, Liberties, and Cuſtoms Eſtabliſh'd by the Lawful Authority in it, are openly tranſgreſſed and annulled: More eſpecially, where the Alteration of Religion is endeavoured, and that a Religion which is contrary to Law, is endeavoured to be introduced: Upon which thoſe who are moſt immediately concerned in it, are indiſpenſibly bound to endeavour to preſerve and maintain the Eſtabliſhed Laws, Liberties and Cuſtoms, and above all, the Religion and Worſhip of God that is eſtabliſhed among them; and to take ſuch an effectual Care, that the Inhabitants of the ſaid State or Kingdom, may neither be deprived of their Religion, nor of their Civil Rights. Which is ſo much the more neceſſary, becauſe the Greatneſs and Security, both of Kings, Royal Families, and of all ſuch as are in Authority, as well as the Happineſs of their Subjects and People, depend in a moſt eſpecial manner upon the exact Obſervation and Maintenance of theſe their Laws, Liberties and Cuſtoms.

'2. Upon theſe Grounds it is, that we cannot any longer forbear to declare, That to our great Regret, we ſee that thoſe Counſellors, who have now the Chief Credit with the King, have overturned the Religion, Laws and Liberties of thoſe Realms, and ſubjected them in all Things relating to their Conſciences, Liberties and Properties, to Arbitrary Government; and that not only by ſecret and indirect Ways, but in an open and undiſguized Manner.

'3. Thoſe Evil Counſellors, for the advancing and colouring this with ſome plauſible Pretexts, did invent and ſet on foot the King's Diſpenſing Power; by virtue of which, they pretend, that, according to Law, he can ſuſpend and diſpenſe with the Execution of the Laws that have been enacted by the Authority of the King and Parliament, for the Security and Happineſs of the Subject, and ſo have render'd thoſe Laws of no Effect: Tho' there is nothing more certain, than that as no Laws can be made, but by the joint Concurrence of King and Parliament; ſo likewiſe Laws ſo enacted, which ſecure the Publick Peace and Safety of the Nation, and the Lives and Liberties of every Subject in it, cannot be repealed or ſuſpended but by the ſame Authority.

'4. For tho' the King may pardon the Puniſhment that a Tranſgreſſor has incurred, and to which he is condemned, (as in the Caſes of Treaſon or Felony) yet it cannot be with any Colour of Reaſon inferred from thence, that the King can entirely ſuſpend the Execution of thoſe Laws relating to Treaſon or Felony; unleſs it is pretended, that he is cloathed with a Deſpotick and Arbitrary Power; and that the Lives, Liberties, Honours and Eſtates of the Subjects, depend wholly on his good Will and Pleaſure, and are entirely ſubject to him; which muſt infallibly follow, on the King's having a Power to ſuſpend the Execution of the Laws, and to diſpenſe with them.

'5. Thoſe Evil Counſellors, in order to the giving ſome Credit to this ſtrange and execrable Maxim, have ſo conducted the Matter, that they have obtained a Sentence from the Judges, declaring, That this Diſpenſing Power is a Right belonging to the Crown: As if it were in the Power of the Twelve Judges to offer up the Laws, Rights, and Liberties of the whole Nation to the King, to be diſpoſed of by him arbitrarily, and at his Pleaſure; and expreſly contrary to Laws enacted 'for

'for the Security of the Subjects. In order to the 'obtaining this Judgment, thoſe evil Counſellors 'did before-hand examine ſecretly the Opinion of 'the Judges, and procured ſuch of them as could not 'in Conſcience concur in ſo pernicious a Sentence, 'to be turned out, and others to be ſubſtituted in 'their rooms, 'till by the Changes which were made 'in the Courts of Judicature, they at laſt obtained 'that Judgment. And they have raiſed ſome to 'thoſe Truſts, who make open Profeſſion of the 'Popiſh Religion, tho' thoſe are by Law rendred 'incapable of all ſuch Employments.

'6. It is alſo manifeſt and notorious, That as his 'Majeſty was, upon his coming to the Crown, re-'ceiv'd and acknowledg'd by all the Subjects of 'England, Scotland, and Ireland, as their King, 'without the leaſt Oppoſition, tho' he made then 'open Profeſſion of the Popiſh Religion; ſo he did 'then promiſe, and ſolemnly ſwear at his Corona-'tion, That he would maintain his Subjects in the 'free Enjoyment of their Laws and Liberties; and 'in particular, that he would maintain the Church 'of England as it was eſtabliſhed by Law. It is like-'wiſe certain, that there have been at divers and 'ſundry times ſeveral Laws enacted for the Preſer-'vation of thoſe Rights and Liberties, and of the 'Proteſtant Religion; and among other Securities, 'it has been enacted, That all Perſons whatſoever, 'that are advanced to any Eccleſiaſtical Dignity, or 'to bear Office in either Univerſity, as likewiſe all 'other that ſhould be put in any Employment, Civil 'or Military, ſhould declare that they were not 'Papiſts, but were of the Proteſtant Religion, and 'that by their taking of the Oaths of Allegiance and 'Supremacy, and the Teſt; yet theſe Evil Coun-'ſellors have in effect annulled and aboliſhed all 'thoſe Laws, both with relation to Eccleſiaſtical 'and Civil Employments.

'7. In order to Eccleſiaſtical Dignities and Offices, 'they have not only without any Colour of Law, 'but againſt moſt expreſs Laws to the contrary, ſet 'up a Commiſſion, of a certain Number of Perſons, 'to whom they have committed the Cognizance 'and Direction of all Eccleſiaſtical Matters; in the 'which Commiſſion there has been, and ſtill is 'one of his Majeſty's Miniſters of State, who 'makes now publick Profeſſion of the Popiſh Reli-'gion, and who at the time of his firſt profeſſing 'it, declared that for a great while before he had 'believed that to be the only true Religion. By all 'this, the deplorable State to which the Proteſtant 'Religion is reduced, is apparent, ſince the Affairs 'of the Church of England are now put into the 'Hands of Perſons who have accepted of a Com-'miſſion that is manifeſtly illegal, and who have 'executed it contrary to all Law; and that now one 'of their chief Members has abjured the Proteſtant 'Religion, and declared himſelf a Papiſt; by which 'he is become uncapable of holding any publick 'Employment. The ſaid Commiſſioners have hi-'therto given ſuch Proof of their Submiſſion to the 'Directions given them, that there is no Reaſon to 'doubt, but they will ſtill continue to promote all 'ſuch Deſigns as will be moſt agreeable to them. 'And thoſe Evil Counſellors take Care to raiſe none 'to any Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, but Perſons that 'have no Zeal for the Proteſtant Religion, and that 'now hide their Unconcernedneſs for it, under the ſpe-'cious Pretence of Moderation. The ſaid Commiſſi-'oners have ſuſpended the Biſhop of London, only 'becauſe he refuſed to obey an Order that was ſent 'him to ſuſpend a worthy Divine, without ſo 'much as citing him before him to make his own 'Defence, or obſerving the common Forms of Pro-'ceſs. They have turned out a Preſident choſen by 'the Fellows of Magdalen College, and afterwards 'all the Fellows of that College, without ſo much 'as citing them before any Court that could take 'legal Cognizance of that Affair, or obtaining any 'Sentence againſt them by a competent Judge. 'And the only Reaſon that was given for turning 'them out, was their refuſing to chuſe for their 'Preſident, a Perſon that was recommended to them 'by the Inſtigation of thoſe Evil Counſellors; tho' 'the Right of a Free Election belonged undoubtedly 'to them. But they were turned out of their Free-'holds contrary to Law, and to that expreſs Provi-'ſion in the Magna Charta, That no Man ſhall loſe 'Life or Goods, but by the Law of the Land. And 'now theſe Evil Counſellors have put the ſaid Col-'lege wholly into the Hands of Papiſts, tho' as is 'aboveſaid, they are incapable of all ſuch Employ-'ments, both by the Law of the Land, and the 'Statutes of the College. Theſe Commiſſioners 'have alſo cited before them all the Chancellors and 'Arch-deacons of England, requiring them to certi-'fy to them the Names of all ſuch Clergymen as 'have read the King's Declaration for Liberty of 'Conſcience, and of ſuch as have not read it; with-'out conſidering that the reading of it was not en-'joined the Clergy by the Biſhops, who are their 'Ordinaries. The Illegality and Incompetency of 'the ſaid Court of the Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſio-'ners was ſo notoriouſly known, and it did ſo evi-'dently appear that it tended to the Subverſion of 'the Proteſtant Religion, that the moſt Reverend 'Father in God, William Archbiſhop of Canterbury, 'Primate and Metropolitan of all England, ſeeing 'that it was raiſed for no other End but to oppreſs 'ſuch Perſons as were of eminent Virtue, Learning 'and Piety, refuſed to ſit, or to concur in it.

'8. And tho' there are many expreſs Laws a-'gainſt all Churches or Chapels for the Exerciſe of 'the Popiſh Religion, and alſo againſt all Monaſte-'ries and Convents, and more particularly againſt 'the Order of the Jeſuits; yet thoſe Evil Coun-'ſellors have procured Orders for the building of 'ſeveral Churches and Chapels for the Exerciſe of 'that Religion. They have alſo procured divers 'Monaſteries to be erected; and in Contempt of 'the Law, they have not only ſet up ſeveral Colleges 'of Jeſuits in divers Places for the corrupting of 'the Youth, but have raiſed up one of the Order to 'be a Privy-Counſellor, and a Miniſter of State. 'By all which they do evidently ſhew, that they 'are reſtrained by no Rules of Law whatſoever; 'but that they have ſubjected the Honours and 'Eſtates of the Subjects, and the eſtabliſh'd Religion 'to a Deſpotick Power, and to Arbitrary Govern-'ment. In all which they are ſerved and ſeconded 'by thoſe Eccleſiaſtical Commiſſioners.

'9. They have alſo followed the ſame Methods 'with relation to Civil Affairs; for they have pro-'cured Orders to examine all Lords-Lieutenants, 'Deputy-Lieutenants, Sheriffs, Juſtices of Peace, 'and all others that were in any Publick Employ-'ment, if they would concur with the King in the 'Repeal of the Teſt and Penal Laws; and all ſuch 'whoſe Conſciences did not ſuffer them to comply 'with their Deſigns, were turned out, and others 'were put in their Places, who they believed would 'be more compliant to them in their Deſigns of de-'feating the Intent and Execution of thoſe Laws 'which had been made with ſo much Care and 'Caution for the Security of the Proteſtant Religion. 'And in many of theſe Places they have put profeſſed Papiſts, tho' the Law has diſabled them, 'and warranted the Subjects not to have any Regard 'to their Orders.

'10. They have alſo invaded the Privileges, and 'ſeized on the Charters of moſt of thoſe Towns 'that have a Right to be repreſented by their Burgeſſes in Parliament, and have procured Surrenders 'to be made of them, by which the Magiſtrates in 'them have delivered up all their Rights and Privileges, to be diſpoſed of at the Pleaſure of thoſe 'Evil Counſellors, who have thereupon placed new 'Magiſtrates in thoſe Towns, ſuch as they can moſt 'entirely confide in; and in many of them they 'have put Popiſh Magiſtrates, notwithſtanding the 'Incapacities under which the Law has put them.

'11. And whereas no Nation whatſoever can 'ſubſiſt without the Adminiſtration of good and 'impartial Juſtice, upon which Mens Lives, Liberties, Honours and Eſtates do depend, thoſe Evil 'Counſellors have ſubjected theſe to an Arbitrary 'and Deſpotick Power. In the moſt important 'Affairs, they have ſtudied to diſcover, beforehand, 'the Opinion of the Judges, and have turned out 'ſuch as they found would not conform themſelves 'to their Intentions, and have put others in their 'Places, of whom they were more aſſured, without 'having any Regard to their Abilities. And they 'have not ſtuck to raiſe even profeſſed Papiſts to the 'Courts of Judicature, notwithſtanding their Incapacity by Law, and that no Regard is due to any Sentences flowing from them. They have carried this 'ſo far, as to deprive ſuch Judges, who in the common Adminiſtration of Juſtice, ſhewed that they 'were governed by their Conſciences, and not by 'the Directions which the others gave them. By 'which it is apparent, that they deſign to render 'themſelves the abſolute Maſters of the Lives, Honours and Eſtates of the Subjects, of what Rank 'or Dignity ſoever they may be; and that without 'having any Regard either to the Equity of the 'Cauſe, or to the Conſciences of the Judges, whom 'they will have to ſubmit in all things to their own 'Will and Pleaſure; hoping by ſuch Ways to intimidate thoſe who are yet in Employment, as 'alſo ſuch others, as they ſhall think fit to put in 'the rooms of thoſe whom they have turned out; 'and to make them ſee what they muſt look for, 'if they ſhould at any time act in the leaſt contrary 'to their good-liking; and that no Failings of that 'kind are pardoned in any Perſons whatſoever. A 'great deal of Blood has been ſhed in many Places 'of the Kingdom, by Judges governed by thoſe 'Evil Counſellors, againſt all the Rules and Forms 'of Law, without ſo much as ſuffering the Perſons 'that were accuſed to Plead in their own Defence.

'12. They have alſo, by putting the Adminiſtration of Juſtice in the Hands of Papiſts, brought 'all the Matters of Civil Juſtice into great Uncertainties; with how much Exactneſs and Juſtice 'ſoever that theſe Sentences may have been given. 'For ſince the Laws of the Land do not only exclude 'Papiſts from all Places of Judicature, but have put 'them under an Incapacity, none are bound to acknowledge or to obey their Judgments, and all 'Sentences given them are null and void of themſelves: So that all Perſons who have been caſt 'in Trials before ſuch Popiſh Judges, may juſtly 'look on their pretended Sentences, as having no 'more Force than the Sentences of any private 'or unauthoriz'd Perſon whatſoever. So deplorable 'is the Caſe of the Subjects who are obliged to anſwer to ſuch Judges, that muſt in all things ſtick 'to the Rules which are ſet them by thoſe Evil 'Counſellors, who, as they raiſed them up to thoſe 'Employments, ſo can turn them out of them at 'Pleaſure, and who can never be eſteemed Lawful 'Judges; ſo that all their Sentences are in the 'Conſtruction of the Law of no Force and Efficacy. 'They have likewiſe diſpoſed of all Military Employments in the ſame manner; for tho' the Laws 'have not only excluded Papiſts from all ſuch Employments, but have in particular provided, that 'they ſhould be diſarm'd; yet they, in Contempt of 'theſe Laws, have not only armed the Papiſts, but 'have likewiſe raiſed them up to the greateſt Military Truſt both by Sea and Land; and that Strangers 'as well as Natives, and Iriſh as well as Engliſh; 'that ſo by thoſe Means, having rendred themſelves 'Maſters both of the Affairs of the Church, of the 'Government, of the Nation, and of the Courts of 'Juſtice, and ſubjected them all to a Deſpotick and 'Arbitrary Power, they might be in a Capacity to 'maintain and execute their wicked Deſigns, by the 'Aſſiſtance of the Army, and thereby to enſlave the 'Nation.

'13. The diſmal Effects of this Subverſion of 'the Eſtabliſhed Religion, Laws, and Liberties in 'England, appear more evidently to us, by what 'we ſee done in Ireland; where the whole Government is put in the Hands of Papiſts, and where 'all the Proteſtant Inhabitants are under the daily 'Fears of what may be juſtly apprehended from the 'Arbitrary Power which is ſet up there; which has 'made great Numbers of them leave that Kingdom, 'and abandon their Eſtates in it, remembring well 'that Cruel and Bloody Maſſacre which fell out in 'that Iſland in the Year 1641.

'14. Thoſe Evil Counſellors have alſo prevailed 'with the King to declare in Scotland, That he is 'cloathed with Abſolute Power, and that all the 'Subjects are bound to obey him without Reſerve: 'Upon which he has aſſumed an Arbitrary Power 'both over the Religion and Laws of that Kingdom; 'from all which it is apparent, what is to be looked 'for in England, as ſoon as Matters are duly prepared for it.

'15. Thoſe great and inſufferable Oppreſſions, 'and the open Contempt of all Law, together with 'the Apprehenſions of the ſad Conſequences that 'muſt certainly follow upon it, have put the Subjects under great and juſt Fears; and have made 'them look after ſuch lawful Remedies as are allowed of in all Nations; yet all has been without 'effect. And thoſe Evil Counſellors have endeavoured to make all Men apprehend the Loſs of 'their Lives, Liberties, Honours, and Eſtates, if 'they ſhould go about to preſerve themſelves from 'this Oppreſſion by Petition, Repreſentations, or 'other Means authoriz'd by Law. Thus did they 'proceed with the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and 'the other Biſhops, who having offered a moſt 'humble Petition to the King, in Terms full of Reſpect, and not exceeding the Number limited by 'Law; in which they ſet forth in ſhort, the Reaſons for which they could not obey that Order, 'which, by the Inſtigation of thoſe Evil Counſellors, 'was ſent them, requiring them to appoint their 'Clergy to read in their Churches the Declaration 'for Liberty of Conſcience; were ſent to Priſon, 'and afterwards brought to a Trial, as if they had 'been guilty of ſome enormous Crime. They were 'not only obliged to defend themſelves in that Purſuit, but to appear before profeſs'd Papiſts, who 'had not taken the Teſt, and by conſequence were 'Men whoſe Intereſt led them to condemn them; 'and the Judges that gave their Opinions in their 'Favours, were thereupon turned out.

'16. And yet it cannot be pretended, that any 'Kings, how great ſoever their Power has been, 'and how Arbitrary and Deſpotick ſoever they have 'been in the Exerciſe of it, have ever reckon'd it 'a Crime for their Subjects to come in all Submiſſion 'and Reſpect, and in a due Number, not exceeding 'the Limits of the Law, and repreſent to them the 'Reaſons that made it impoſſible for them to obey 'their Orders. Thoſe Evil Counſellors have alſo 'treated a Peer of the Realm as a Criminal, only 'becauſe he ſaid, That the Subjects were not bound 'to obey the Orders of a Popiſh Juſtice of Peace; 'tho' it is evident, that they being by Law rendred 'incapable of all ſuch Truſts, no Regard is due to 'their Orders. This being the Security which the 'People have by the Law for their Lives, Liberties, 'Honours, and Eſtates, that they are not to be 'ſubjected to the Arbitrary Proceedings of Papiſts, 'that are contrary to Law put into any Employments Civil or Military.

'17. Both We our ſelves, and our Deareſt and 'moſt Entirely Beloved Conſort the Princeſs, have 'endeavoured to ſignify, in Terms full of Reſpect 'to the King, the juſt and deep Regret which all 'theſe Proceedings have given us; and in Compliance with his Majeſty's Deſires ſignified to us, 'We declared both by Word of Mouth, to his Envoy, and in Writing, what our Thoughts were, 'touching the Repealing of the Teſt and Penal 'Laws; which We did in ſuch a manner, that We 'hoped We had propoſed an Expedient, by which 'the Peace of thoſe Kingdoms, and a happy Agreement among the Subjects of all Perſuaſions, might 'have been ſettled: But thoſe Evil Counſellors 'have put ſuch ill Conſtructions on theſe our 'good Intentions, that they have endeavoured to 'alienate the King more and more from us; as if 'We had deſigned to diſturb the Quiet and Happineſs of the Kingdom.

'18. The laſt and great Remedy for all thoſe 'Evils, is the Calling of a Parliament, for ſecuring 'the Nation againſt the evil Practices of thoſe wicked Counſellors: But this could not be yet compaſſed, nor can it be eaſily brought about. For 'thoſe Men apprehending, that a Lawful Parliament being once aſſembled, they would be brought 'to an Account for all their open Violations of Law, 'and for their Plots and Conſpiracies againſt the 'Proteſtant Religion, and the Lives and Liberties 'of their Subjects; they have endeavoured, under 'the ſpecious Pretence of Liberty of Conſcience, 'firſt to ſow Diviſions among Proteſtants, between thoſe of the Church of England and the 'Diſſenters: The Deſign being laid to engage Proteſtants, that are all equally concerned to preſerve 'themſelves from Popiſh Oppreſſion, into mutual 'Quarrellings, that ſo by theſe, ſome Advantages 'might be given to them to bring about their Deſigns; and that both in the Election of the Members of Parliament, and afterwards in the Parliament it ſelf. For they ſee well, that if all Proteſtants could enter into a mutual good Underſtanding one with another, and concur together in 'the preſerving of their Religion, it would not be 'poſſible for them to compaſs their wicked Ends. 'They have alſo required all Perſons, in the ſe'veral Counties of England, that either were in 'any Employment, or were in any conſiderable Eſteem, to declare before-hand, that they would 'concur in the Repeal of the Teſt and Penal Laws; 'and that they would give their Voices in the Elections to Parliament, only for ſuch as would concur in it. Such as would not thus pre-engage 'themſelves, were turned out of all Employments; 'and others who enter'd into thoſe Engagements, 'were put in their Places, many of them being 'Papiſts. And contrary to the Charters and Privileges of thoſe Boroughs that have a Right to 'ſend Burgeſſes to Parliament, they have ordered 'ſuch Regulations to be made, as they thought fit 'and neceſſary, for aſſuring themſelves of all the 'Members that are to be choſen by thoſe Corporations: And by this means they hope to avoid 'that Puniſhment which they have deſerved; tho' 'it is apparent, that all Acts made by Popiſh Magiſtrates, are null and void of themſelves. So that 'no Parliament can be Lawful, for which the Elections and Returns are made by Popiſh Sheriffs and Mayors of Towns; and therefore as 'long as the Authority and Magiſtracy is in ſuch 'Hands, it is not poſſible to have any Lawful Parliament. And tho' according to the Conſtitution 'of the Engliſh Government, and immemorial 'Cuſtom, all Elections of Parliament-Men ought 'to be made with an entire Liberty, without any 'Sort of Force, or the requiring the Electors to 'chuſe ſuch Perſons as ſhall be named to them; 'and the Perſons thus freely elected, ought to give 'their Opinions freely, upon all Matters that are 'brought before them; having the Good of the 'Nation ever before their Eyes, and following in all 'Things the Dictates of their Conſcience; yet 'now the People of England cannot expect a Remedy from a Free Parliament, legally called and 'choſen. But they may, perhaps, ſee one called, 'in which all Elections will be carried by Fraud or 'Force; and which will be compoſed of ſuch Perſons, of whom thoſe Evil Counſellors hold themſelves well aſſured; in which all Things will be 'carried on according to their Direction and Intereſt, without any Regard to the Good or Happineſs of the Nation. Which may appear evidently from this, That the ſame Perſons tried the 'Members of the laſt Parliament, to gain them to 'conſent to the Repeal of the Teſt and Penal Laws; 'and procured that Parliament to be diſſolved, 'when they found that they could not, neither by 'Promiſes nor Threatnings, prevail with the 'Members to comply with their wicked Deſigns.

'19. But to crown all, There are great and violent Preſumptions, inducing us to believe, that 'thoſe Evil Counſellors, in order to the carrying 'on of their ill Deſigns, and to the gaining to 'themſelves the more Time for the effecting of 'them, (for the encouraging of their Complices, 'and for the diſcouraging of all good Subjects) 'have publiſhed, That the Queen hath brought 'forth a Son; tho' there have appeared, both during the Queen's pretended Bigneſs, and in the 'Manner in which the Birth was managed, ſo many juſt and viſible Grounds of Suſpicion, that not 'only we our ſelves, but all the good Subjects of 'thoſe Kingdoms, do vehemently ſuſpect, that the 'Pretended Prince of Wales was not born by the 'Queen. And it is notoriouſly known to all the 'World, that many both doubted of the Queen's 'Bigneſs, and of the Birth of the Child; and yet

'there

'there was not any one Thing done to ſatisfy them, 'or to put an end to their Doubts.

'20. And ſince our Deareſt and moſt entirely-'Beloved Conſort the Princeſs, and likewiſe We 'Our Selves have ſo great an Intereſt in this Mat-'ter, and ſuch a Right (as all the World knows) to 'the Succeſſion to the Crown: Since alſo the Eng-'liſh did in the Year 1672. when the States-Gene-'ral of the United Provinces were invaded in a 'moſt unjuſt War, uſe their utmoſt Endeavours to 'put an End to that War, and that in Oppoſition 'to thoſe who were then in the Government; and 'by their ſo doing, they run the Hazard of loſing 'both the Favour of the Court, and their Employ-'ments: And ſince the Engliſh Nation has ever te-'ſtified a moſt particular Affection and Eſteem, 'both to Our Deareſt Conſort the Princeſs, and to 'Our Selves, We cannot excuſe Our Selves from 'eſpouſing their Intereſts, in a Matter of ſuch high 'Conſequence; and from contributing all that lies 'in us, for the maintaining both of the Proteſtant 'Religion, and of the Laws and Liberties of thoſe 'Kingdoms, and for the ſecuring to them the con-'tinual Enjoyment of all their juſt Rights. To the 'doing of which, We are moſt earneſtly ſollicited 'by a great many Lords, both Spiritual and Tem-'poral, and by many Gentlemen, and other Sub-'jects of all Ranks.

'21. Therefore it is, that We have thought fit 'to go over to England, and to carry over with 'us a Force, ſufficient by the Bleſſing of God, to 'defend us from the Violence of thoſe Evil Coun-'ſellors. And We being deſirous that our Intenti-'ons in this may be rightly underſtood, have, for 'this End, prepared this Declaration, in which, as 'we have hitherto given a True Account of the 'Reaſons inducing us to it; ſo, We now think fit 'to declare, That this our Expedition is intended 'for no other Deſign, but to have a Free and Law-'ful Parliament Aſſembled, as ſoon as is poſſible: 'and that in order to this, all the late Charters 'by which the Election of Burgeſſes are limited 'contrary to the Ancient Cuſtom, ſhall be conſi-'dered as Null and of no Force: And likewiſe 'all Magiſtrates who have been unjuſtly turned out, 'ſhall forthwith reſume their former Employments, 'as well as all the Boroughs of England ſhall re-'turn again to their Ancient Preſcriptions and Char-'ters: And more particularly that the Ancient 'Charter of the Great and Famous City of London, 'ſhall again be in force: And that the Writs for 'the Members of Parliament ſhall be addreſſed to 'the proper Officers, according to Law and Cuſtom. 'That alſo none be ſuffered to chuſe, or to be cho-'ſen Members of Parliament, but ſuch as are qua-'lified by Law: And that the Members of Parlia-'ment being thus lawfully Choſen, they ſhall meet 'and ſit in full Freedom; that ſo the two Houſes 'may concur in the preparing of ſuch Laws, as 'they upon full and free Debate ſhall judge neceſ-'ſary and convenient, both for the confirming and 'executing the Law concerning the Teſt, and ſuch 'other Laws as are neceſſary for the Security and 'Maintenance of the Proteſtant Religion; as like-'wiſe for making ſuch Laws as may eſtabliſh a 'good Agreement between the Church of England 'and all Proteſtant Diſſenters; as alſo for the co-'vering and ſecuring of all ſuch who will live 'peaceably under the Government, as becomes good 'Subjects, from all Perſecution upon the Account 'of their Religion, even Papiſts themſelves not ex-'cepted; and for the doing of all other Things, 'which the Two Houſes of Parliament ſhall find 'neceſſary for the Peace, Honour and Safety of the 'Nation, ſo that there may be no more danger 'of the Nations falling at any Time hereafter under 'Arbitrary Government. To this Parliament we 'will alſo refer the Enquiry into the Birth of the 'Pretended Prince of Wales, and of all Things 'relating to it, and to the Right of Succeſſion.

'22. And We, for our part, will concur in every 'thing that may procure the Peace and Happineſs 'of the Nation, which a Free and Lawful Parlia-'ment ſhall determine; ſince we have nothing be-'fore our Eyes in this our Undertaking, but the 'Preſervation of the Proteſtant Religion, the Co-'vering of all Men from Perſecution for their Con-'ſciences, and the ſecuring to the whole Nation 'the free Enjoyment of all their Laws, Rights and 'Liberties under a Juſt and Legal Government.

'24. This is the Deſign that we have propoſed to 'our ſelves, in appearing upon this Occaſion in Arms: 'In the Conduct of which, We will keep the For-'ces under our Command, under all the Strictneſs 'of Martial Diſcipline; and take a ſpecial Care, 'that the People of the Countries through which 'we muſt March, ſhall not ſuffer by their Means; 'and as ſoon as the State of the Nation will admit 'of it, We promiſe that we will ſend back all 'thoſe Foreign Forces that we have brought along 'with us.

'24. We do therefore hope that all People will 'judge rightly of us, and approve of theſe our 'Proceedings: But we chiefly rely on the Bleſſing 'of God for the Succeſs of this our Undertaking, 'in which We place our whole and only Confi-'dence.

'25. We do in the laſt Place invite and require 'all Perſons whatſoever, all the Peers of the Realm 'both Spiritual and Temporal, all Lords-Lieutenants, 'Deputy-Lieutenants, and all Gentlemen, Citizens, 'and other Commons of all Ranks, to come and aſ-'ſiſt us, in order to the executing of this our De-'ſign, againſt all ſuch as ſhall endeavour to oppoſe 'us; that ſo we may prevent all thoſe Miſeries 'which muſt needs follow upon the Nations being 'kept under Arbitrary Government and Slavery: 'And that all the Violences and Diſorders which 'have overturned the whole Conſtitution of the 'Engliſh Government, may be fully redreſſed in a 'Free and Legal Parliament.

'26. And we do likewiſe reſolve, that as ſoon 'the Nations are brought to a ſtate of Quiet, We 'will take Care that a Parliament ſhall be called in 'Scotland, for the reſtoring the Ancient Conſtituti-'on of that Kingdom, and for bringing the Mat-'ters of Religion to ſuch a Settlement, that the Peo-'ple may live eaſy and happy, and for putting an 'End to all the unjuſt Violences, that have been in 'a Courſe of ſo many Years committed there.

'We will alſo ſtudy to bring the Kingdom of 'Ireland to ſuch a ſtate, that the Settlement there 'may be religiouſly obſerved; and that the Prote-'ſtant and Britiſh Intereſt there, may be ſecured. 'And we will endeavour by all poſſible Means to 'procure ſuch an Eſtabliſhment in all the Three 'Kingdoms, that they may all live in a happy Uni-'on and Correſpondence together; and that the 'Proteſtant Religion, and the Peace, Honour and 'Happineſs of theſe Nations, may be eſtabliſh'd 'upon laſting Foundations.

Given under our Hand and Seal, at our Court in in the Hague, the Tenth Day of October, in the Year of our Lord 1688.

WILLIAM HENRY, PRINCE of ORANGE.

By his Highneſs's Special Command,
C. HUYGENS.

His Highneſs's Additional Declaration.

'AFter we had prepared and printed this our 'Declaration, we have underſtood, that the 'Subverters of the Religion and Laws of thoſe Kingdoms, hearing of our Preparations to aſſiſt the People 'againſt them, have begun to retract ſome of the Arbitrary and Deſpotick Powers that they had aſſumed, 'and to vacate ſome of their Unjuſt Judgments and 'Decrees. The Senſe of their Guilt, and the Diſtruſt 'of their Force, have induced them to offer to the 'City of London ſome ſeeming Relief from their 'great Oppreſſions; hoping thereby to quiet the 'People, and to divert them from demanding a Re-'eſtabliſhment of their Religion and Laws under 'the ſhelter of our Arms: They do alſo give out, 'That we do intend to Conquer and Enſlave the Nation; and therefore it is that we have thought fit 'to add a few Words to our Declaration.

'We are confident, that no Perſons can have 'ſuch hard Thoughts of us, as to imagine that we 'have any other Deſign in this Undertaking, than 'to procure a Settlement of the Religion, and of the 'Liberties and Properties of the Subjects, upon ſo 'ſure a Foundation, that there may be no danger 'of the Nations relapſing into the like Miſeries at 'any Time hereafter. And as the Forces that we 'have brought along with us, are utterly diſproportioned to that wicked Deſign of Conquering the 'Nation, if we were capable of Intending it; ſo 'the great Numbers of the principal Nobility and 'Gentry, that are Men of Eminent Quality and 'Eſtates, and Perſons of known Integrity and 'Zeal both for the Religion and Government of 'England, many of them alſo being diſtinguiſhed 'by their conſtant Fidelity to the Crown, who do 'both accompany us in this Expedition, and have 'earneſtly ſollicited us to it, will cover us from all 'ſuch malicious Inſinuations: For it is not to be 'imagined, that either thoſe who have Invited us, 'or thoſe that are already come to Aſſiſt us, can 'join in a wicked Attempt of Conqueſt, to make 'void their own lawful Titles to their Honours, 'Eſtates and Intereſts. We are alſo confident, that 'all Men ſee how little Weight there is to be laid 'on all Promiſes and Engagements, that can be now 'made; ſince there has been ſo little Regard had in 'the Time paſt, to the moſt ſolemn Promiſes. And 'as that imperfect Redreſs that is now offered, is a 'plain Confeſſion of thoſe Violations of the Govern-'ment that we have ſet forth; ſo the Defectiveneſs 'of it is no leſs apparent: For they lay down no-'thing which they may not take up at Pleaſure; 'and they reſerve entire, and not ſo much as mentioned, their Claim and Pretences to an Arbitrary 'and Deſpotick Power; which has been the Root 'of all their Oppreſſion, and of the total Subverſion of the Government. And it is plain, that 'there can be no Redreſs, no Remedy offered but 'in Parliament; by a Declaration of the Rights of 'the Subjects that have been invaded, and not by 'any pretended Acts of Grace, to which the Extremity of their Affairs has driven them. Therefore 'it is that we have thought fit to declare, That we 'will refer all to a Free Aſſembly of the Nation, in 'a Lawful Parliament.

Given under our Hand and Seal, at our Court in the Hague, the Twenty fourth Day of October, in the Year of our Lord 1688.

WILLIAM HENRY, PRINCE of ORANGE.

By his Highneſs's Special Command,
C. HUYGENS.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The Reaſon why we humbly offer this Declaration, is with relation to that Paſſage in the Sermon, which ſays, that the Prince of Orange diſclaimed all Manner of Reſiſtance. All we obſerve is, That it don't appear that he came over with an Army with any other Intent than to defend himſelf againſt evil Counſellors: And if the Doctor has made a wrong Inference, we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether ſuch a Miſapprehenſion of his Highneſs's Meaning ſhall ſubject him to a Charge of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We have finiſhed what we have to offer on this Article, and ſubmit it to your Lordſhips whether we have not made good our Defence. We are ready to go on to the Second Article, if it be your Lordſhip's Pleaſure.

Then the LORDS Adjourned to their Houſe Above.

Monday, March 6. The Seventh Day.

THE Lords coming down into Weſtminſter-Hall, and being ſeated in the manner before-mentioned, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, ſave thee and thy Bail, elſe thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, you that are Council for the Priſoner may proceed in his Defence.

Mr. Dodd. MY Lords, We who are Council for Doctor Sacheverell, beg the Favour that we may enter on the Doctor's Defence as to the Second Article: This Article is divided into three Heads. 1. That the Toleration is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable. 2. That he is a falſe Brother, who defends Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience. 3. That it is the Duty of the chief Paſtors to thunder out Anathema's, &c.

The firſt Head I ſhall ſpeak to is, as to the Toleration. My Lords, We ſay there is no ſuch Thing as a Toleration granted by Law; the Word is not to be found in the Act of Parliament; there is an Act (which we ſuppoſe is intended) to exempt Proteſtant Diſſenters from the Penalties of certain Laws therein mentioned: However in this Debate, we ſhall take Notice of it as a Toloration; altho' we think, when there is a Legal Proceeding, the Act ſhould have been called by its own proper Name:

Now, my Lords, this Act of Parliament hath ſeveral Reſtrictions and Limitations in it, and (amongſt others) not to exempt any Perſons from the Penalties, that do not frequent ſome Religious Aſſembly thereby allowed. The Doctor no where finds Fault with a Legal Toleration, or a Toleration granted by Law, within the Deſcription and Meaning of this Act of Parliament. My Lords, we think the Doctor has taken ſuch Care, leſt any Expreſſion ſhould undergo a wrong Conſtruction, as if he were uneaſy at the Toleration, that he Explains himſelf very particularly about it: We ſhall read the Words out of the Sermon, which I think will clear the Doctor as to this Objection; the Doctor ſays, Pray do not miſunderſtand me, as if I reflected upon that Indulgence the Government has given the Diſſenters, which I am ſure all Well-wiſhers to our Church are ready to grant; nor do I intend to caſt the leaſt Reflection on that Indulgence, which the Law has given to Conſciences truly Scrupulous; let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law has preſcribed.

Now after ſuch a Declaration, ſo plain a Confeſſion, ſo full in the Caſe, in Words as ſignificant as can be to ſhew his Meaning, we hope there is no room to tax him with this Part of the Article by any incoherent Words, or Inferences, when it is directly contrary to what he has in Words at length expreſs'd.

My Lords, This being conſidered, we think it is too hard to draw Inferences, and Conſequences, that the Doctor is againſt the Toleration allowed by Law; it is not to be done with Candor, by any one that reads the Sermon without Prejudice, and conſiders the Care he takes to avoid giving any Offence in this Caſe.

As to the Second Part of this Article, we think it may receive the ſame Anſwer; That he is a Falſe Brother who Defends Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience. The Doctor does not ſay they are Falſe Brethren that Defend a Legal Toleration; no Body complains of that; but the Perſons intended, are thoſe that Defend an unlawful Toleration, and not a Legal Exemption; which Legal Exemption the Doctor admits to be good and juſt, in the Paſſage I have before repeated. We apprehend, the Doctor means thoſe are Falſe Brethren, and blameable, that Excuſe the Separation from the Church, not on account of the Toleration, but by laying the Faults on the true Sons of the Church, for carrying Matters too high; theſe are the People, the Falſe Brethren, that cry out againſt the Church upon all Occaſions.

As to the Doctor's Expreſſions about Archbiſhop Grindall, the Doctor thought he had good Grounds for them; but at leaſt they were but unwary Expreſſions, and we hope not Criminal. The Toleration he mentions Archbiſhop Grindall to be blamed for, was quite another Thing from the preſent Indulgence now granted; the firſt was by Queen Elizabeth alone, or by the Archbiſhop's Authority under her, and without the Parliament; the Diſſenters were then few, and it had been no great Difficulty to have prevented that Schiſm at the beginning. But now the Diſſenters are a conſiderable Part of the Nation, have great Riches, and Properties amongſt us, and it became the Wiſdom of the Legiſlature, to give them an Indulgence according to the Reſtrictions in the Act of Parliament: But this is a different Caſe, and by a different Authority, from what was in Archbiſhop Grindall's time. The Story of that Archbiſhop, as related by one of the Gentlemen Managers, does indeed acquit the Archbiſhop, but how far it clears Queen Elizabeth, we muſt leave to your Lordſhips; for ſhould a great Favourite attempt to procure a Grant of the Archbiſhop's Palace, or a chief Revenue of that See or Church, and that the Archbiſhop's oppoſing the Favourite herein (as was by the Gentleman ſuggeſted) ſhould be the Reaſon of his Diſgrace; or if the Archbiſhop did Proſecute or Puniſh a Man in the Spiritual Court, for having two Wives at the ſame time; (which Proſecution or Puniſhment was highly commendable in the Archbiſhop, and was his Duty to do) it would be hard to think, that Queen Elizabeth ſhould Suſpend him from the Archbiſhoprick for ſuch a Proceeding, for thus diſcharging his Duty; therefore we can't give Credit to that Hiſtory as it is related; but we ſhall ſhew your Lordſhips, from the Archbiſhop's Letter to the Council, and Letters from Beza and Calvin at that Time, that it was his Indulgence to the Diſſenters of that Time, that drew the Anger of Queen Elizabeth on him; and that this was the Reaſon of it, we ſhall make out by undeniable Proof. Now, my Lords, we apprehend the Fault the Doctor finds in his Sermon is againſt an Univerſal general Toleration that tends to a Diſſolution of all Things; and ſuch a Toleration, would make Religion like that of the Samaritans, a mixture of all ſorts, that was odious to the World, and an Abomination to the Jews; and indeed, my Lords, we apprehend ſuch a Toleration the Doctor had great Reaſon to find Fault with. Surely ſuch a Toleration is not to be defended, nor would be of any Service to either Church or State: This is the Toleration which we think the Doctor intended, and not againſt a Legal or particular Exemption, which the Wiſdom of the Nation hath thought fit to give. Indeed he thinks, that Occaſional Conformiſts do attempt to hoiſt the Toleration into an Eſtabliſhment, and come into the Communion of the Church to ſerve a particular Purpoſe; and this at moſt can only be ſaid to be the Doctor's Opinion of that Matter, and whether true or falſe, cannot be Criminal. To ſpeak againſt a Law, or to break a Law, is not to be juſtified: Nor has he ſpoke againſt this Law; but if he had, ſurely he had been Puniſhable in the ordinary Methods of Juſtice, and not in a Proceeding of this Nature.

As to the next Head, that is, as to that Part of the Charge about thundering out Anathema's; the Diſcourſe is general, and not determin'd to any Perſons, not pointed at the Diſſenters, but properly intended againſt Irreligion; and the Sentence that he dares any Power on Earth to reverſe, is ſuch, and ſuch only, as is ratified in Heaven. He believes ſome Sentences of the Church to be ratified in Heaven; and if that Sentence which is pronounced here on Earth, be ratified in Heaven, it is, beyond all Diſpute, out of the Power of Man to reverſe it. He ſuppoſes ſome Perſons exempt from Puniſhment by particular Laws, may yet, by the Law of Chriſt, be liable to ſuch a Sentence: But from hence, or his Anſwer to the Articles, to draw a Concluſion, That he Aſſerts the State had not Power to reverſe the Sentence of the Spiritual Court, (of which there can be no doubt, but that the Legiſlature has ſuch a Power) or that the Legiſlature is guilty of Blaſphemy, (as has been objected by one of the Gentlemen Managers) is neither true Reaſon nor Logick.

That

That Schiſm is a Sin puniſhable by the Laws of the Church, will not be diſputed, if it be a Separation without a juſt Cauſe; and how far this is ſuch a Separation, or that the Act of Parliament hath taken away this Schiſm, this Sin, we ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

Mr. Phipps. MY Lords, We are come now to the Second Article, and we humbly apprehend, ſhall give your Lordſhips as full Satisfaction of the Doctor's Innocence, as to the Crimes charged in this Article, as we hope we did as to thoſe contained in the firſt Article.

As to that Part of the Second Article which ſays, That the Doctor does Suggeſt and Maintain, that the Toleration granted by Law is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable: He conceives there is nothing in his Sermon can warrant that Charge. The Toleration Act is not what the Doctor finds Fault with, but the Perſons that Abuſe it; and I beg leave to ſay, that the ill Uſe which is made of it, is unreaſonable and unwarrantable. But, that the Doctor aſſerts the Toleration it ſelf to be unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable, will appear to be a great Miſtake, when the Paragraphs in the Doctor's Sermon, upon which this Article is founded, are conſidered.

My Lords, The firſt Paſſage is in Page the 8th, where the Doctor ſays thus: If upon all Occaſions to comply with the Diſſenters, both in publick and private Affairs, as Perſons of tender Conſciences and Piety, to promote their Intereſts in Elections, to ſneak to them for Places and Preferment, to defend Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience, and under the Pretence of Moderation, to excuſe their Separation, and lay the Fault upon the true Sons of the Church for carrying Matters too high, &c. Theſe are ſome of the Characters which the Doctor gives of Falſe Brethren: But, is there any Thing in this Paſſage that avers Toleration to be unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable?

Page the 10th, the Doctor hath theſe Words, which were urged to Prove this Article: Our Conſtitution, both in Church and State, has been ſo admirably contrived, with that Wiſdom, Weight and Sagacity, and the Temper and Genius of each, ſo exactly Suited and Modell'd, to the mutual Support and Aſſiſtance of one another, that 'tis hard to ſay, whether the Doctrines of the Church of England contribute more to Authorize and Enforce our Civil Laws, or our Laws to Maintain and Defend the Doctrines of our Church. The Natures of both are ſo nicely Correſpondent, and ſo happily intermixt, that 'tis almoſt impoſſible to offer a Violation to the one, without breaking in upon the Body of the other. So that in all thoſe Caſes before-mentioned, whoſoever preſumes to innovate, alter, or miſrepreſent any Point in the Articles of the Faith of our Church, ought to be arraign'd as a Traytor to the State; Heterodoxy in the Doctrines of the one, naturally producing, and almoſt neceſſarily inferring Rebellion and High Treaſon in the other; and conſequently a Crime that concerns the Civil Magiſtrate as much to puniſh and reſtrain, as the Eccleſiaſtical. Can this be meant of the Toleration? Is the Toleration ſo much as mentioned here? Does he not here ſpeak againſt ſuch as innovate, alter, or miſrepreſent the Articles of our Faith? Is there any Innovation, Alteration, or Miſrepreſentation of any Article of our Faith by the Proteſtant Diſſenters? The Diſſenters do not differ from us in Matters of Faith, but in Matters of Form and Ceremony; if they differ'd from us in Matters of Faith, they would be Hereticks, and Hereſy was never intended to be Tolerated by the Act of Indulgence: And therefore what the Doctor ſays in this Paragraph, can never be taken to be a Reflection on the Toleration.

I ſhall next humbly offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration another Clauſe, which was cited by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons to ſupport this Article, which is Page 14. where 'tis ſaid, Theſe falſe Brethren in our Government, do not ſingly, and in private, ſpread their Poiſon, but (what is lamentable to be ſpoken) are ſuffer'd to combine into Bodies, and Seminaries, wherein Atheiſm, Deiſm, Tritheiſm, Socinianiſm, with all the Helliſh Principles of Fanaticiſm, Regicide and Anarchy, are openly Profeſs'd, and Taught, to Corrupt and Debauch the Youth of the Nation, in all Parts of it, down to Poſterity, to the preſent Reproach, and future Extirpation of our Laws, and Religion. Certainly the Toleration was never intended to Indulge, and Cheriſh ſuch Monſters and Vipers in our Boſom, that ſcatter their Peſtilence at Noon-day, and will Rend, Diſtract, and Confound, the firmeſt and beſt ſettled Conſtitution in the World. Is there any thing in this Clauſe that can maintatn this Article? The Doctor ſays, Certainly the Toleration was never intended to Indulge and Cheriſh ſuch Monſters, and Vipers in our Boſom, as Atheiſts, Tritheiſts, Socinians, &c. And the Doctor is well warranted in ſaying that, becauſe thoſe enormous Crimes are particularly excepted in the Act of Toleration, and for this we refer to the Act it ſelf.

The next Clauſe that was urg'd to maintain this Article is in the 16th Page, where the Doctor expreſſeth himſelf in theſe Words: But ſince this Model of an Univerſal Liberty and Coalition fail'd, and theſe falſe Brethren could not carry the Conventicle into the Church, they are now reſolv'd to bring the Church into the Conventicle, which will more plauſibly and ſlily Effect her Ruin: What could not be gain'd by Comprehenſion and Toleration, muſt be brought about by Moderation and Occaſional Conformity; that is, what they could not do by open Violence, they will not fail by ſecret Treachery to accompliſh. If the Church can't be pull'd down, it may be blown up; and no matter with theſe Men how 'tis Deſtroy'd, ſo that it is Deſtroy'd. Does this ſuggeſt the Toleration to be unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it Unwarrantable? It rather excuſes it from having hurt the Church: For he ſays, What could not be gain'd by Toleration, muſt be brought about by Moderation and Occaſional Conformity; ſo that the Injury which is done to the Church is aſcribed by him to ſome other Cauſe. Thus your Lordſhips obſerve there is not any Paſſage in the Doctor's Sermon, whereby he Suggeſts that the Toleration granted by Law is Unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it Unwarrantable, and conſequently no Foundation for this Article, unleſs it is to be ſupported by Inferences contrary to the Doctor's expreſs Words: For the Doctor in his Sermon, pag. 20. ſays, I would not here be underſtood, as if I intended to caſt the leaſt invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence the Government has condeſcended to give them, which I am ſure all thoſe that wiſh well to our Church are very ready to grant to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous; let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law has preſcrib'd. By which 'tis evident, he allows the Indulgence given by the Act to Diſſenters, and is very far from ſuggeſting, that it is unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable. He wiſhes with all his Heart they may enjoy it in the full full Limits of the Law. And therefore if there be any other Expreſſions concerning Toleration, which may ſeem to carry a dubious Senſe, 'tis humbly conceiv'd they ought not to be apply'd to the Exemption granted by Law, but will be ſo interpreted as may conſiſt with his avowed Approbation of that Law. For in all Writings, ſuch Expoſition is to be made, that one Part may not contradict or be inconſiſtent with the other. But to ſtrain the Senſe of any ambiguous Clauſe, and to put ſuch a Conſtruction upon it, as to make it contradict a plain and poſitive Aſſertion in the ſame Writing, was never allow'd, and I am ſure will not be permitted by your Lordſhips, who have ſhew'd ſuch a juſt Abhorrence of ſtrain'd and foreign Inſinuations and Innuendo's. And therefore where he ſeems to blame thoſe who defend Toleration, he cannot be thought to condemn the Indulgence granted by Law, becauſe he hath in ſuch poſitive and expreſs Terms allowed and approved of it.

But it muſt have ſome other Meaning, and I think his Meaning is very plain. For by condemning ſuch as defend Toleration, 'tis evident, he means ſuch as maintain, that the Act of Indulgence is a Juſtification of their Separation, and excuſeth them from the Sin of Schiſm: For the Defence of Toleration, and Excuſe of Separation, are mentioned in one and the ſame Clauſe of the Sentence, and in one and the ſame Branch of their Character of falſe Brethren. So that the True and Genuine Senſe of what he hath ſaid in his Sermon concerning Toleration is,

1. That he entirely approves of the Exemption by the Act of Indulgence of Proteſtant Diſſenters from the ſeveral Penalties inflicted by the ſeveral Statutes for their Non-Conformity.

2. That tho' they are exempt from the Penalties, yet that does not excuſe their Separation from the Sin of Schiſm in foro Conſcientiæ. And is the Doctor alone in this Notion? Is he not juſtified in it by the Opinion of many Learned Men, who have writ on that Subject? Nay, I appeal to your Lordſhips, whether it be not the concurrent Opinion of the greateſt Part, if not all the Learned Men of our Church at this Day.

And ſince the Act of Uniformity is in Force, and is not repeal'd or enervated by the Act of Indulgence, ſince the Doctrine and Worſhip of the Church of England is the Eſtabliſh'd Religion of this Kingdom, whether a Separation from the Church, ſince the Act of Indulgence, is not as much a Schiſm in foro Conſcientiæ, as it was before, is humbly ſubmitted.

But ſuppoſe that Separation from the Church by Diſſenters, ſince the Act of Indulgence, ſhould not be thought a Schiſm, yet he having the Opinion of ſo many Learned Men of his Side, his Aſſertion cannot be ſaid to be Wicked, Malicious, and Seditious, nor to be ſo high a Crime and Miſdemeanor, as to be the ſubject Matter of an Impeachment.

But the Paſſages in the Doctor's Sermon, which are ſuppoſed to condemn the Toleration, or to reflect on the Diſſenters, are open to another plain and natural Conſtruction. For ſince he poſitively, and in expreſs Terms, allows Liberty of Conſcience to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous, and which are entitled to the Benefit of the Act: Where he condemns or ſpeaks againſt Toleration, it muſt be intended as to ſuch Diſſenters who are not entitled to the Benefit of the Act, but are excepted out of it: And thoſe are ſuch as by Printing or Writing deny the Trinity, ſuch as do not come to ſome Aſſembly of Religious Worſhip allowed by that Act; and no Aſſembly of Religious Worſhip is allow'd by that Act 'till the Place of meeting be certified to the Biſhop, Archdeacon, or Juſtices at the Quarter-Seſſions, and Recorded, and a Certificate thereof given: And, what Multitudes frequent Religious Aſſemblies which are not allowed by that Act? Nay how few Religious Aſſemblies are qualified according to the Act? What vaſt Numbers go to no Religious Worſhip at all? And how many there are who deny the Second Perſon of the Trinity, is too too evident: And againſt every one of theſe, all the Laws for frequenting Divine Service on the Lord's-Day are ſtill in Force, by the expreſs Words of that Act. Therefore all thoſe who defend a general Toleration, who maintain that the Act extends to all ſuch Diſſenters, are juſtly Cenſur'd by the Doctor; and all the Expreſſions in the Doctor's Sermon againſt Toleration muſt be intended againſt thoſe excepted in the Act, ſince he ſo expreſly approves the Indulgence allow'd to thoſe that conform to the Terms preſcribed by the Act.

My Lords, As to that Branch of this Second Article, which charges the Doctor with aſſerting, That Queen Elizabeth was deluded by Archbiſhop Grindall to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline; whether he be not warranted in this Aſſertion, is humbly ſubmitted to your Lordſhips, when 'tis conſider'd, That Archbiſhop was once in the higheſt Eſteem with the Queen, She made him Biſhop of London, then Archbiſhop of York, and afterwards promoted him to the See of Canterbury; and that after this he was in Diſgrace, and died in Her Majeſty's Diſpleaſure, cannot be deny'd. The Reaſon aſſign'd for his Diſgrace was, That he was a great Encourager of unlawful Conventicles, or Propheſyings, as they were then called. Whether that Charge againſt him was true, or whether it was only a falſe Suggeſtion of the Earl of Leiceſter, to remove him from the Queen's Favour, I will not preſume to determine. The Learned Manager who ſpoke firſt to this Article, was pleaſed to acquit the Archbiſhop, and lay the Fault upon the Queen; though, whoever reads Calvin's and Beza's Letters to him, when Biſhop of London, whoever reads Queen Elizabeth's Letter to the Biſhops, dated the 3d of May, 1577, and the Archbiſhop's own Letter to the Lords of the Council the 25th of November, 1577, will be fully ſatisfied that he was not Innocent; for he confeſſes he was commanded by the Queen and Council to ſuppreſs the Propheſyings, and that he refuſed, and could not comply with that Command; and acknowledged it to be an Act of great Clemency in Her Majeſty, that She carried Her Reſentment no higher. So, I think, that pious good Queen is entirely acquitted by the Archbiſhop himſelf.

All Hiſtorians admit, that in his Time the Puritans were very numerous, and their Party very ſtrong; and it is evident they grew ſo dangerous, that the Statute of the 35th of Elizabeth was made to ſuppreſs their Conventicles, and compel them to come to Church. And at his Death the Affairs of the Church were in ſo great Confuſion, that his Succeſſor, Archbiſhop Whitgift, was put to great Trouble to check that growing Faction, and reduce Things into good Order again. If therefore the Doctor was of Opinion the Puritans receiv'd too great Encouragement by the Countenance of that great Man, and if it was his Zeal for the Church, and the Reſentment he had that it ſhould receive any Prejudice by the Connivance of one at the Head of it, that provoked him to uſe a harſh Expreſſion of that Archbiſhop, 'tis humbly to be hop'd that is not a ſufficient Ground for an Impeachment of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors.

The Gentleman that ſpoke firſt to this Article, was pleas'd to admit, that what the Doctor ſaid in relation to that Archbiſhop, was not an Offence, as it was a Reflection on the Archbiſhop; but that uſing ſuch Expreſſions of the Archbiſhop for his Moderation to the Puritans, was a Reflection on the late Act of Toleration granted to Proteſtant Diſſenters; and that calling the Proſecutions againſt the Propheſyings in Queen Elizabeth's Time Wholeſome Severities, is an Encouragement to uſe ſuch Severities againſt the Proteſtant Diſſenters now.

Can what was done in Queen Elizabeth's Time reflect on the Toleration? Can calling the Proſecutions by Queen Elizabeth againſt ſuch as frequented Conventicles againſt the Law, and for which there was no Toleration; I ſay, can the calling ſuch Proſecutions Wholeſome Severities, reflect on this Toleration granted by Law? Or can it encourage a Proſecution againſt the Diſſenters, who are entituled to the Benefit of the Toleration, and are Exempt from the Penalties of the Laws?

The only Thing that can be inferr'd from what the Doctor ſays, in relation to the Wholeſome Severities is, That he intended to excite the Magiſtrates to put the Laws in Execution againſt ſuch Diſſenters as were excepted out of the Act of Toleration; and I am at a Loſs to find how that can make him an Offender. For ſurely the Parliament never intended that any Perſon ſhould have the Benefit of the Act of Toleration, that did not comply with the Terms and Conditions of it: And therefore when the Doctor preſſeth the Execution of the Laws againſt ſuch as are not entitled to the Benefit of the Act, he ſeems to me rather to Vindicate than Reflect upon the Toleration. Great Offence hath been taken at the Words Wholeſome Severities in the Doctor's Sermon; yet, my Lords, I cannot think the Word Wholeſome an improper Epithet for the Severities uſed by Queen Elizabeth againſt the Puritans; for Faction was then in its Infancy, Schiſm did but juſt begin to diſturb the Church; and by the Severities of the Laws that were put in Execution, and the Courage, Learning, and Prudence of Archbiſhop Whitgift, a Stop was put to them. And, I preſume, ſuch Severities as ſuppreſs'd theſe bold and daring Crimes in their Infancy, may be called Wholeſome without a Catachreſis; and can never be conſtrued to be a Suggeſtion, that the Toleration now granted by Law is unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable.

As to that Part of the Second Article, which chargeth the Doctor with maintaining, That it is the Duty of Superior Paſtors to thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration: The Doctor humbly apprehends there is nothing in his Sermon can be a juſt Foundation for that Charge.

The Sermon hath this Sentence, Page 25. Let our Superior Paſtors do their Duty, in thundering out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's; and let any Power on Earth dare reverſe a Sentence ratified in Heaven. This is an entire and independent Sentence, that doth not relate to any particular Perſon, or any particular Crimes, and does not mention the Perſons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration.

Nor can it be imagin'd that he ſhould deſire Anathema's to be thunder'd out againſt ſuch Perſons who he wiſheth may enjoy the Toleration in the full Limits the Law hath preſcrib'd. But the Anathema's muſt be intended to be againſt the Works of Darkneſs, Atheiſm, Prophaneneſs, Faction, and other enormous Crimes which are mention'd in the preceeding Part of his Sermon, ſince it is not apply'd by him to any particular Sins or Offences.

The thundering Anathema's, is declaring thoſe Judgments which are denounced in Scripture againſt Sin. And he deſires the Superior Paſtors of the Church to thunder out theſe Anathema's, becauſe the greater the Authority is of the Perſon that declares theſe Judgments, the greater Influence they are like to have upon the Perſons guilty of ſuch Sins.

But if he had deſir'd Anathema's, or Excommunications, (as they would infer) ſhould be thunder'd out againſt Diſſenters, yet it muſt be intended only againſt ſuch as are not entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration; and ſince the Act of Indulgence leaves ſuch Perſons open to the Laws, it cannot be a Crime in the Doctor to preſs the Execution of the Laws againſt them.

For not to accept of the Toleration on the Terms offer'd by the Act, is what the Doctor calls hoiſting the Toleration into an Eſtabliſhment, in deſpite of the Act, and ſetting up a Toleration of their own in Defiance of it.

As to the laſt Part of the Second Article, which charges, that the Doctor Inſolently dares and defies any Power on Earth to reverſe ſuch Sentences, which Sentences are there inſinuated to be the Sentences, or Anathema's, given and thundered out by Superior Paſtors; there are no ſuch Words in the Doctor's Sermon: For, the Doctor's Words are, Let any Power on Earth dare reverſe a Sentence Ratified in Heaven. So that the bare Recital of the Doctor's Expreſſion, is a ſufficient Confutation of that Part of the Article.

For, if the Judgments or Anathema's denounc'd by Superior Paſtors againſt Sin, are ſuch as are denounc'd againſt ſuch Sins in Scripture, ſuch Sentences may truly be ſaid to be ratified in Heaven: And if ſo, then no one can dare to think, that ſuch Sentences, ſo ratified in Heaven, can be revers'd by all the Powers on Earth united together. And therefore, the Doctor hopes it will not be thought Inſolence, or a High Crime or Miſdemeanor in him, to aſſert what he conceiv'd would be Blaſphemy in any one to deny. This is what I humbly offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration on this Article.

Mr. Dee. MY Lords, I humbly beg the Favour of a few Words on this Article. It is divided into Three Parts. The firſt is concerning Toleration; the Charge againſt the Doctor is, That he has reflected on the Toleration as it is Eſtabliſhed by Law. I crave leave to take Notice, that on conſidering the whole Sermon, there are two diſtinct Tolerations mentioned in it; a Toleration that is Legal, (for ſo I call the Act of Indulgence) and a Toleration that is general; and we think that Diſtinction, well obſerved, will clear the Doctor of any Crime in this Particular. Where he reflects on Toleration, it is not the Legal Toleration, but the general; and if it will bear this Conſtruction, you will not put the other upon it; for where he has taken Notice of a Legal Toleration, (which he hath done only in one Place of his Sermon) he is for extending it to the utmoſt Bounds; his Words are theſe, I would not be here miſunderſtood, as if I intended to caſt the leaſt invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence the Government hath condeſcended to give them; which I am ſure all thoſe that wiſh well to our Church, are very ready to grant to Conſciences truly Scrupulous; let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law hath preſcribed. But, where he ſpeaks againſt Toleration, it's a Toleration of ſuch enormous Crimes, as are not fit to be tolerated in any Chriſtian Nation.

As to the Second Part of the Article, for reflecting on Archbiſhop Grindal, and thereby reflecting on the Toleration, it was given up on the other Side; and admitted, that, whether True or Falſe, it was not Material, and then ſurely that will hardly amount to a Crime. But, we ſhall be ſo far from giving up that Point, that we ſhall ſhew he was Falſe to the Church at that Time; and it was a Crime in him, to give up the Diſcipline of the Church. No Laws were then made to indulge any Separation: And for the Head of the Church, under the Queen, to give up the Diſcipline of the Church, was a high Crime in him; and though it may be thought harſh, will bear the true Term of a Falſe Brother.

As to the Third Part of the Article, the thundering out Anathema's, I would beg leave to read that Part of the Doctor's Sermon, which, I hope, ſhall not be applied to thoſe that are within the Legal Toleration. Schiſm and Faction are Things of impudent and encroaching Natures, they thrive upon Conceſſions, take Permiſſion for Power, and advance a Toleration immediately into an Eſtabliſhment: (I hope the Diſſenters will not take theſe Characters on themſelves:) And are therefore to be treated like growing Miſchiefs, or infectious Plagues, &c. Preſently after follows, Let our Superior Paſtors do their Duty, in thundering out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's; and let any Power on Earth dare reverſe a Sentence ratified in Heaven. Now, my Lords, I would beg leave to ſay, that this is only Advice; and although the Doctor may be accounted pretty Pert, to give Advice to his Superior Paſtors, that they ought to thunder out Anathema's; yet this cannot be conſtrued to extend to them that are deſcribed in the Act of Toleration, thoſe that could not conform to ſome Ceremonials by reaſon of Scrupulous Conſciences, theſe could not be called Factious, but is meant of other People deſcribed in the Sermon. But if the Doctor had adviſed to thunder out Anathema's againſt Diſſenters; (ſuppoſing, but not granting it,) the Queſtion would come to this Point, Whether he was deceived in Point of Judgment or no: For, if they were Schiſmaticks before, the Schiſm remains the ſame, notwithſtanding the Toleration; and if it was Sin before the Act of Toleration, it is ſo ſtill, notwithſtanding the Act; and then his Advice to the Superior Paſtors, is, to do that which is, (with Submiſſion) their Duty to do, 'till prohibited by the Temporal Courts. My Lords, I ſhall mention one Caſe, that will ſhew you, that it is ſtill Schiſm to ſeparate from the Church, and that it is the Duty of Diſſenters to Communicate with the Church. That was the Caſe of one Mr. Larwood: In Hillary Term, ſexto of King William. An Information was exhibited againſt him, for refuſing to take upon him the Office of Sheriff of the City of Norwich; he pleads he had not taken the Sacrament in Twelve Months; the Attorney replied, that he ought to have done it. He rejoins, that he was a Proteſtant Diſſenter, and was excuſed by the Act for Toleration. There were two Points in the Caſe; the firſt was, whether it appeared by the Information that the Defendant was duly Elected; the other, whether the Plea in Bar was good, (for the whole Court held, that the Rejoinder was a Departure from the Bar, and that the Replication was inſufficient;) ſo that Judgment was to be given upon the Information, and the Plea in Bar. Samuel Eyre, Juſtice, was of Opinion with the Defendant as to both Points; my Lord Chief Juſtice Holt, and Mr. Juſtice Giles Eyre, were of Opinion againſt him as to both Points, and held the Bar to be inſufficient, becauſe it was only excuſing of one Fault by another, which no Man ſhall be admitted to do; and they held, that the Duty of Communicating with the Church remained notwithſtanding the Act of Toleration: And I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether if it be a Duty to Communicate with the Church of England, it be not Schiſm to Separate from it. My Lords, I ſhall ſay no more to this Article, but ſubmit it to your Lordſhips.

Dr. Henchman. MY Lords, We are now endeavouring to defend Doctor Sacheverell againſt the Charge contain'd in the Second Article of Impeachment, in the two firſt Clauſes of which he is ſaid to ſuggeſt and maintain, That the Toleration granted by Law is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable: And to aſſert, That he is a Falſe Brother with Relation to God, Religion and the Church, who defends Toleration and Liberty of Conſcience. But it has not been ſaid by any of the Learned Managers on this Head, that either of thoſe two Branches of this Article are expreſly delivered in any Part of the Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's; but what is no where affirm'd, is ſaid to be ſuggeſted, and this Charge is maintain'd by Inferences only, becauſe there is no plain poſitive Propoſition that it can be ſupported by.

My Lords, It is humbly hop'd, That if an Inference may be allow'd as Proof to accuſe him, an open Declaration will be heard in his Defence: If what another Man makes him ſay be thought Ground enough for an Accuſation, then certainly what he himſelf openly declares will be eſteem'd ſomething more than a dry Caution, and have its due Weight with your Lordſhips in his Vindication. I would therefore beg Leave to read a Paſſage where he explains himſelf, and plainly declares what his Thoughts are concerning the Indulgence granted by Law: This Paſſage is in the twentieth Page, where ſpeaking of ſome wholſome Severities us'd in former Reigns, he adds, I would not here be miſunderſtood, as if I intended to caſt the leaſt invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence the Government has condeſcended to give them, which I am ſure all thoſe that wiſh well to our Church are very ready to grant to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous; let 'em enjoy it in the full Limits the Law has preſcrib'd.

My Lords, theſe Words are plain and expreſs, and not capable of being miſconſtrued or miſunderſtood: Whether thoſe Learned Gentlemen, who have applied ſome Parts of this Sermon to Purpoſes directly oppoſite to this plain Declaration, have miſunderſtood or miſconſtrued thoſe Paſſages, muſt be ſubmitted to your Lordſhips Judgment; but it ſeems hardly reconcileable, that the ſame Perſon in the ſame Diſcourſe ſhould declare, That all who wiſh well to the Church are ready to grant Indulgence to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous; and at the ſame time maintain, That ſuch Toleration is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable; that he ſhould deſire it may be enjoy'd in its full La-

Latitude, and yet aſſert that he is a Falſe Brother that defends it.

My Lords, This ſeeming Difficulty will be eaſily reconcil'd, by conſidering who thoſe Perſons are who are deſign'd to be eas'd by the Act of Exemption, and who the Falſe Brethren are, deſcrib'd by Doctor Sacheverell in this Sermon.

That Act, in the Preamble, is ſaid to be intended for the Eaſe of ſcrupulous Conſciences; one Sett of the Falſe Brethren, mention'd in the Sermon, are Men of no Conſcience at all; whether Diſſenters, or ſuch as profeſs themſelves with Zeal to be of the eſtabliſh'd Church, but yet break her Communion by not obeying her Precepts.

That Act was intended for ſuch only, as qualify themſelves according to the Directions laid down in that Act; the Falſe Brethren which the Doctor every where ſpeaks of are ſuch, and ſuch only, as neither qualify themſelves according to that Act, nor think themſelves ſubject to the Penalties of former Acts.

This Act was intended in favour of ſuch as either ſubſcribe the Articles of Religion, excepting only the thirty fourth, thirty fifth and thirty ſixth, ſome Part of the twentieth, and that Part of the twenty ſeventh which relates to Infant-Baptiſm; or elſe for ſuch as ſubſcribe a Profeſſion of their Chriſtian Belief in theſe Words; I profeſs Faith in God the Father, and in Jeſus Chriſt his Eternal Son the true God, and in the Holy Spirit, one God bleſſed for evermore; and do acknoweldge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament to be given by Divine Inſpiration. Theſe are the Qualifications requir'd of ſuch as will entitle themſelves to the Benefit of this Act.

On the other hand, the Falſe Brethren deſcrib'd by Doctor Sacheverell, are Atheiſts, Deiſts, Tritheiſts, Socinians, Revilers of the Holy Scripture, and ſuch like. Are not Men of theſe Opinions Falſe Brethren, with Relation to God and Religion? Or ſhall ſuch Men be ſuffer'd to cover themſelves under the Protection of an Act of Parliament, deſign'd only for the Eaſe of ſcrupulous Conſciences. That there are Men among us of theſe Principles, will be but too viſible, from a Paſſage or two, which I beg leave to lay before your Lordſhips from Books lately Publiſhed.

The firſt which I ſhall mention, is entituled, A brief but clear Confutation of the Trinity: If the Title it ſelf has not given too much Offence to your Lordſhips, I ſhall proceed to look into the Book it ſelf; and in the Ninth Page there is this Propoſition laid down, The Divinity attributed to the Son and Holy Ghoſt is unſcriptural and idolatrous; and in Page the Tenth he goes on in theſe Words, This one Fundamental Falſe Principle, as well with Jews and Turks, as Heathens, has done more Miſchief to Chriſtianity than all other Errors beſides. Theſe are ſuch bare-fac'd Blaſphemies as muſt make every Man's Ears tingle that hears them; and the Reſpect which is due to your Lordſhips, and this Aſſembly, makes me forbear inſtancing any Thing more from this Author: But he does not ſtand alone; out of many more of the like ſort I ſhall mention but one only, and

This is a Book, entituled, The Rights of the Chriſtian Church; and the Author, in p. 108, lays down this Doctrine.

Among Chriſtians one no more than another can be reckon'd a Prieſt. And a little after, The Clerk has as good a Title to the Prieſthood as the Parſon.

Thus, my Lords, theſe two Men ſtrike off our whole Religion at once; the Fundamental Doctrine of our Faith is deſtroy'd by the firſt of 'em; and the Miniſters, who are to ſupport and defend that Doctrine, are ſet aſide by the other.

If theſe and ſuch like Opinions have any where prevail'd, is it not high time that ſome wholſome Severities were us'd to ſtop the growing Contagion? Or, if the Superior Paſtors of the Church ſhould thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt the Authors and Abettors of ſuch horrible Blaſphemies, by what Conſtruction can this be ſaid to be done againſt Perſons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration?

But, my Lords, there is one Paſſage in this Sermon, which has been urg'd by the Learned Managers on this Head with more than ordinary Force, and as a direct Breach and Inſult upon the Toleration; with your Lordſhips Patience, I ſhall endeavour to ſet that Paſſage in a true Light. It is in the Eighth Page: Should any one, out of Ignorance or Prejudice to the ancient Rights and eſſential Conſtitution of the Catholick Church affirm, that the Divine Apoſtolical Inſtitution of Epiſcopacy is a novel Doctrine, not ſufficiently warranted by Scripture, and that it is indifferent, whether the Church be govern'd by Biſhops or Preſbyters; is not ſuch an one an Apoſtate from his own Orders?

It was ſaid, my Lords, that all thoſe Diſſenters who do not acknowledge the Divine Right of Epiſcopacy, and are therefore ſpecially exempted by the Act of Indulgence from Subſcribing ſome of the Articles of Religion, and who are immediately under the Protection of that Act, are yet, in the End of this Paragraph, charg'd with being Falſe Brethren, where he prays, That God would deliver us from all ſuch Falſe Brethren.

But, my Lords, it is plain, that theſe Words are not meant, nor can be conſtrued, generally of Diſſenters, who deny the Divine Inſtitution of Epiſcopacy; but are intended peculiarly of ſuch Perſons as have themſelves been Epiſcopally ordain'd; the firſt of theſe cannot be ſaid to be Apoſtates from that Doctrine which they never own'd, nor Subſcrib'd to; the latter, who could not be admitted to their Orders 'till they had ſubſcrib'd the receiv'd Doctrine of our Church, are the only Perſons who can be ſaid to be Apoſtates from their own Orders, if they deny that Divine Inſtitution, by which they themſelves have been Ordain'd, and conſequently, the only Perſons that are intended in this Paſſage, and term'd Falſe Brethren.

My Lords, I ſhall not preſume to ſay, what the Duty of the Superior Paſtors of the Church is, when our Religion and Diſcipline is invaded by Atheiſts and Schiſmaticks, much leſs to determine what Sentences juſtly paſs'd by them on Earth, may be ratify'd in Heaven. Thus much I hope I may ſay without Offence, That the Spiritual Power of Church-Paſtors is not deriv'd from the Civil Magiſtrate, but from God; that one Branch of that Power is the cenſuring of Notorious Offenders, and excluding them from the Communion of the Church; and that this has in all Ages, in Fact, and of Right too, been exercis'd by the Paſtors of the Church, by Permiſſion of the Civil Magiſtrate. The Reverend and Learned Bench of Biſhops well know, That before the Civil Magiſtrate did embrace the Chriſtian Religion, the Paſtors of the Church did inflict Spiritual Cenſures on Offenders, for doing ſuch Things as the Imperial Edicts did not only permit, but command; and this Power of inflicting

Cen-

Cenſures on Perſons exempted from Puniſhment by the Laws of the Land, has been always challeng'd, and is now exercis'd by the Reform'd Churches abroad; and by the Rubrick of our own Liturgy, open and notorious Evil Livers are to be repell'd from the Lord's Table, until they have openly declar'd their Repentance and Amendment.

We are told by the Learned Managers, That in caſe any Eccleſiaſtical Judge ſhould inflict an illegal Cenſure of Excommunication, the Temporal Courts may, and would ſoon give Relief, by ſending forth a Prohibition. But, your Lordſhips will conſider, that there is a wide and manifeſt Difference betwixt an Excommunication founded upon a Proſecution in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, and the pronouncing Cenſures purely Spiritual. The external coercive Juriſdiction of Eccleſiaſtical Courts being deriv'd from the Laws of the Land, may, and is frequently by thoſe Laws reſtrain'd; but ſuch Reſtraint does not hinder the Paſtors of the Church from exerciſing the Spiritual Power of the Keys, which they derive not from the Laws of the Land, but from the Inſtitution of Chriſt; and therefore tho' it be provided in the Act of Exemption, that Perſons taking the Oaths, and making the Declaration in that Act mention'd, ſhall not be proſecuted in any Eccleſiaſtical Court for not conforming to the Church of England, yet it is not by that Act expreſs'd or intended that Nonconformity to the Eſtabliſh'd Church ſhould no longer be look'd upon as Schiſm; or that Separatiſts may not, by the Paſtors of the Church, be pronounc'd Schiſmatical. If Separatiſts from the Church of England were guilty of Schiſm before the Act of Exemption, they are as much guilty of it ſince; the Laws of the Land which require Conformity, being not by that Act repeal'd, tho' the Tranſgreſſors of thoſe Laws are releas'd from thoſe Pains and Penalties to which they were before obnoxious: But were the Laws of the Land which require Conformity to the Church of England expreſly or virtually repeal'd; yet whilſt the Laws of God requiring Church-Unity, and forbidding Schiſm, are uncancell'd, and remain in their full Force, thoſe who make cauſeleſs and unneceſſary Diviſions are ſtill guilty of Schiſm, and may by the Paſtors of the Church be cenſur'd as ſuch.

My Lords, I ſhall add but one Word in relation to Archbiſhop Grindal, not to diſturb his Aſhes, or blacken his Character, but to vindicate the Memory of that Glorious Queen, under whoſe Diſpleaſure he died.

It was ſaid, my Lords, that the true Ground of that Archbiſhop's Suſpenſion, was partly becauſe he would not give up his Manor of Lambeth to the Earl of Leiceſter; and partly becauſe he had cenſur'd one Julio an Italian for an illegal Marriage. Had theſe been the known Reaſons of his Suſpenſion, he would have had juſt Cauſe to complain loudly of that Cenſure; but without entring into the Secret Hiſtory of that Reign, I ſhall put the whole Matter upon that Archbiſhop's own Sentiments, both as to the Cauſe of his Suſpenſion, and the Juſtice of it.

By the Account which is yet extant under his own Hand it appears, that there were in thoſe Days Men of a Fanatical Spirit that call'd themſelves Propheſiers: that that Archbiſhop had been order'd by the Queen and Council to ſuppreſs ſuch Exerciſes within his Province, as contrary to the Laws of the Land, and the Eſtabliſh'd Diſcipline of the Church; but this Archbiſhop thought fit not only to delay, but abſolutely to refuſe to join in ſuppreſſing thoſe Exerciſes; and for this Diſobedience to the lawful Commands of his Sovereign he was ſuſpended.

My Lords, His own Words which he uſes upon this Occaſion are very remarkable, when he applies to the Council to intercede with Her Majeſty to be reſtor'd to Her gracious Favour, viz.

And whereas I have ſuſtain'd the Reſtraint of my Liberty, and the Sequeſtration of my Juriſdiction, now by the Space of Six Months; I am ſo far from repining thereat, or thinking my ſelf injuriouſly or hardly dealt withal therein at Her Majeſty's Hands, that I do thankfully embrace, and frankly with all Humility acknowledge, Her Princely and Gracious Care and Clemency towards me, who having Authority and Power to have us'd greater and ſharper Severity againſt me, and for good Policy and Example thinking it ſo expedient, hath notwithſtanding dealt ſo mercifully, mildly and gently with me.

My Lords, In this Letter that Archbiſhop frankly acknowledges that he had given Offence, and was, for good Policy and Example, juſtly puniſh'd by Her Majeſty; but had it been known that he was ſuſpended for not tamely parting with the Revenues of his See, or for pronouncing Sentence in a Court of Juſtice againſt an unlawful Marriage, there could have been no Reaſon for him to have acknowledg'd the Juſtice of his Suſpenſion; neither could it be for good Policy and Example expedient, that he ſhould be puniſh'd for not alienating the Revenues of his Church, or for not pronouncing Julio's Marriage with another Man's Wife lawful.

Mr. Dodd. We ſhall ſpend little of your Lordſhips Time in reading to this Head; we ſhall only read the Toleration-Act, to ſhow the Exception in it; and offer the Archbiſhop's Letter to the Council, and the Queen's Letter to the Biſhops. We have the Letters of Calvin and Beza; but I believe we ſhall not have occaſion to read them, but only the other Three. The firſt is the Act of Toleration.

Clerk reads.] Anno Primo Guliel mi & Mariæ. An Act for Exempting their Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects, Diſſenting from the Church of England, from the Penalties of certain Laws.

'FOraſmuch as ſome Eaſe to ſcrupulous Conſciences in the Exerciſe of Religion may be an effectual Means to unite their Majeſties Proteſtant Subjects in Intereſt and Affection,

And likewiſe none of the 'Perſons aforeſaid, ſhall give or pay as any Fee, or 'Reward to any Officer, or Officers belonging to 'the Court aforeſaid, above the Sum of Six-pence, 'nor that more than once, for his or their Entry of his 'taking the ſaid Oaths, and making and ſubſcribing 'the ſaid Declaration. Nor above the further Sum 'of Six-pence for any Certificate of the ſame to be 'made out, and ſigned by the Officer or Officers of 'the ſaid Court.

'And be it further enacted by the Authority 'aforeſaid, That all and every Perſon and Perſons 'already convicted, or proſecuted in order to Con-'viction of Recuſancy, by Indictment, Information, 'Action of Debt, or otherwiſe, grounded upon the 'aforeſaid Statutes, or any of them, that ſhall take 'the ſaid Oaths mention'd in the ſaid Statute made 'this preſent Parliament, and make and ſubſcribe 'the Declaration aforeſaid, in the Court of Exche-'quer, or Aſſizes, or General or Quarter Seſſions 'to be held for the County where ſuch Perſon lives, 'and to be thence reſpectively certified into the Ex-'chequer, ſhall be thenceforth exempted and diſ-'charged from all the Penalties, Seizures, Forfei-'tures, Judgments and Executions, incurred by Force 'of any the aforeſaid Statutes, without any Com-'poſition, Fee, or further Charge whatſoever.

'And be it further Enacted by the Authority 'aforeſaid, That all and every Perſon and Perſons 'that ſhall as aforeſaid, take the ſaid Oaths, and 'make and ſubſcribe the Declaration aforeſaid, ſhall 'not be liable to any Pains, Penalties, or Forfeitures, 'mention'd in an Act made in the Five and thirtieth 'Year of the Reign of the late Queen Elizabeth, 'intituled, An Act to retain the Queen's Majeſty's 'Subjects in their due Obedience: Nor in an Act 'made in the Two and twentieth Year of the Reign 'of the late King Charles the Second, intituled, 'An Act to prevent and ſuppreſs Seditious Conven-'ticles. Nor ſhall any of the ſaid Perſons be pro-'ſecuted in any Eccleſiaſtical Court, for or by rea-'ſon of their Nonconforming to the Church of 'England.

'Provided always, and be it Enacted by the Au-'thority aforeſaid, That if any Aſſembly of Per-'ſons Diſſenting from the Church of England ſhall 'be had in any Place for Religious Worſhip, 'with the Doors Locked, Barred or Bolted during 'any time of ſuch meeting together, all and 'every Perſon or Perſons that ſhall come to and be 'at ſuch Meeting, ſhall not receive any Benefit 'from this Law, but be liable to all the Pains and 'Penalties of all the aforeſaid Laws recited in this 'Act for ſuch their Meeting, notwithſtanding his 'taking the Oaths, and his making and ſubſcribing 'the Declaration aforeſaid.

'Provided always, that nothing herein contained 'ſhall be conſtrued to exempt any of the Perſons 'aforeſaid from paying of Tythes or other Parochial 'Duties, or any other Duties to the Church or 'Miniſter; nor from any Proſecution in any Eccle-'ſiaſtical Court or elſewhere for the ſame.

'And be it further Enacted by the Authority afore-'ſaid, That if any Perſon Diſſenting from the 'Church of England, as aforeſaid, ſhall hereafter be 'choſen or otherwiſe appointed to bear the Office 'of High Conſtable, or Petit Conſtable, Church-'Warden, Overſeer of the Poor, or any other Pa-'rochial or Ward-Office, and ſuch Perſon ſhall 'ſcruple to take upon him any of the ſaid Offices 'in regard of the Oaths, or any other Matter or 'Thing required by the Law to be taken or done 'in reſpect of ſuch Office, every ſuch Perſon ſhall 'and may execute ſuch Office or Employment by a 'ſufficient Deputy, by him to be provided, that 'ſhall comply with the Laws on this behalf.

'Provided always the ſaid Deputy be allowed 'and approved by ſuch Perſon or Perſons, in 'ſuch manner as ſuch Officer or Officers reſpectively 'ſhould by Law have been allowed and approved.

'And be it further enacted by the Authority 'aforeſaid, That no Perſon Diſſenting from the 'Church of England, in Holy Orders, or pretended 'Holy Orders, or pretending to Holy Orders, nor 'any Preacher or Teacher of any Congregation of 'Diſſenting Proteſtants, that ſhall make and ſub-'ſcribe the Declaration aforeſaid, and take the ſaid 'Oaths at the General or Quarter Seſſions of the 'Peace, to be held for the County, Town, Parts 'or Diviſion where ſuch Perſon lives; which Court 'is hereby impower'd to adminiſter the ſame; and 'ſhall alſo declare his Approbation of, and ſubſcribe 'the Articles of Religion, mention'd in the Statute 'made in the Thirteenth Year of the Reign of the 'late Queen Elizabeth, except the Thirty fourth, 'Thirty fifth, and Thirty ſixth, and theſe Words 'of the Twentieth Article, viz. [The Church hath 'Power to decree Rites or Ceremonies, and Autho-'rity in Controverſies of Faith] and yet ſhall be li-'able to any of the Pains or Penalties mentioned 'in an Act made in the Seventeenth Year of the 'Reign of King Charles II. entitled, An Act for 'Reſtraining Nonconformiſts from Inhabiting in Cor-'porations; nor the Penalties mentioned in the 'aforeſaid Act made in the Two and twenti-'eth Year of his ſaid late Majeſty's Reign, for or

'by

'by reaſon of ſuch Perſons Preaching at any Meeting for the Exerciſe of Religion; nor to the Penalty of One Hundred Pounds, mention'd in an Act made in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth of King Charles II. entitled, An Act for the Uniformity of Publick Prayers, and Adminiſtration of Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies; and for Eſtabliſhing the Form of Making, Ordaining, and Conſecrating of Biſhops, Prieſts, and Deacons in the Church of England, for Officiating in any Congregation for the Exerciſe of Religion, permitted and allowed by this Act.

'Provided always, That the making and ſubſcribing the ſaid Declaration, and the taking the ſaid Oaths, and making the Declaration of Approbation and Subſcription to the ſaid Articles, in manner as aforeſaid, by every reſpective Perſon or Perſons herein before-mentioned, at ſuch General or Quarter Seſſions of the Peace as aforeſaid, ſhall be then and there entred of Record in the ſaid Court, for which Six-pence ſhall be paid to the Clerk of the Peace, and no more.

'Provided, That ſuch Perſon ſhall not at any time Preach in any Place, but with the Doors not Locked, Barred or Bolted, as aforeſaid.

'And whereas ſome Diſſenting Proteſtants ſcruple the Baptizing of Infants; Be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That every Perſon in pretended Holy Orders, or pretending to Holy Orders, or Preacher, or Teacher, that ſhall ſubſcribe the aforeſaid Articles of Religion, (except before excepted, and alſo except Part of the Seven and twentieth Article, touching Infant-Baptiſm) and ſhall take the ſaid Oaths, and make and ſubſcribe the Declaration aforeſaid, in manner aforeſaid, every ſuch Perſon ſhall enjoy all the Privileges, Benefits and Advantages, which any other Diſſenting Miniſter, as aforeſaid, might have or enjoy by virtue of this Act.

'And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That every Teacher or Preacher in Holy Orders, or pretended Holy Orders, that is a Miniſter, Preacher or Teacher of a Congregation, that ſhall take the Oaths herein required, and make and ſubſcribe the Declaration aforeſaid, and alſo ſubſcribe ſuch of the aforeſaid Articles of the Church of England, as are required by this Act in manner aforeſaid, ſhall be thenceforth exempted from ſerving upon any Jury, or from being choſen or appointed to bear the Office of Church-Warden, Overſeer of the Poor, or any other Parochial or Ward-Office, or other Office in any Hundred, of any Shire, City, Town, Pariſh, Diviſion or Wapentake.

'And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That every Juſtice of the Peace may at any Time hereafter require any Perſon, that goes to any Meeting for Exerciſe of Religion, to make and ſubſcribe the Declaration aforeſaid, and alſo to take the ſaid Oaths, or Declaration of Fidelity herein after mentioned, in caſe ſuch Perſon ſcruples the taking of an Oath; and upon Refuſal thereof, ſuch Juſtice of the Peace is hereby required to commit ſuch Perſon to Priſon without Bail or Mainprize; and to certify the Name of ſuch Perſon to the next General or Quarter Seſſions of the Peace to be held for that County, City, Town, Part or Diviſion where ſuch Perſon then reſides: And if ſuch Perſon ſo committed, ſhall, upon a Second Tender at the General or Quarter Seſſions, refuſe to make and ſubſcribe the Declaration aforeſaid, ſuch Perſon refuſing ſhall be then and there recorded; and he ſhall be taken thenceforth, to all Intents and Purpoſes, for a Popiſh Recuſant Convict, and ſuffer accordingly, and incur all the Penalties and Forfeitures of all the aforeſaid Laws.

'And whereas there are certain other Perſons, Diſſenters from the Church of England, who ſcruple the taking of any Oath; Be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That every ſuch Perſon ſhall make and ſubſcribe the aforeſaid Declaration, and alſo this Declaration of Fidelity following; Viz.

'I A. B. do Sincerely Promiſe, and Solemnly Declare before God and the World, that I will be True and Faithful to King William and Queen Mary; and I do ſolemnly profeſs and declare, that I do from my Heart abhor, deteſt and renounce, as impious and heretical, that damnable Doctrine and Poſition, That Princes Excommunicated, or Deprived by the Pope, or any Authority of the See of Rome, may be depoſed or murthered by their Subjects, or any other whatſoever. And I do declare, That no Foreign Prince, Perſon, Prelate, State or Potentate, hath, or ought to have, any Power, Juriſdiction, Superiority, Preeminence or Authority, Eccleſiaſtical or Spiritual, within this Realm.

'And ſhall ſubſcribe a Profeſſion of their Chriſtian Belief, in theſe Words;

'I A. B. profeſs Faith in God the Father, and in Jeſus Chriſt his Eternal Son, the True God, and in the Holy Spirit, One God bleſſed for evermore; and do acknowledge the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Teſtament to be given by Divine Inſpiration.

'Which Declarations and Subſcription ſhall be made, and entred of Record, at the General or Quarter Seſſions of the Peace for the County, City, or Place where every ſuch Perſon ſhall then reſide. And every ſuch Perſon that ſhall make and ſubſcribe the Two Declarations and Profeſſion aforeſaid, being thereunto required, ſhall be exempted from all the Pains and Penalties of all and every the aforementioned Statutes made againſt Popiſh Recuſants, or Proteſtant Nonconformiſts; and alſo from the Penalties of an Act made in the Fifth Year of the Reign of the late Queen Elizabeth, entitled, An Act for the Aſſurance of the Queen's Royal Power, over all Eſtates and Subjects within Her Dominions; for or by reaſon of ſuch Perſons not taking, or refuſing to take the Oath mentioned in the ſaid Act; and alſo from the Penalties of an Act made in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Years of the Reign of King Charles II. entitled, An Act for preventing Miſchiefs that may ariſe by certain Perſons (called Quakers*) refuſing to take Lawful Oaths*; and enjoy all other the Benefits, Privileges and Advantages, under the like Limitations, Proviſo's and Conditions, which any other Diſſenters ſhall, or ought to enjoy by virtue of this Act.

'Provided always, and be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That in caſe any Perſon ſhall refuſe to take the ſaid Oaths, when tender'd to them, which every Juſtice of the Peace is hereby empower'd to do, ſuch Perſon ſhall not be admitted to make and ſubſcribe the Two Declarations aforeſaid, tho' required thereunto either before any Juſtice of

'the Peace, or at the General or Quarter Seſſi-
'ons, before or after any Conviction of Popiſh Re-
'cuſancy, as aforeſaid, unleſs ſuch Perſon can with-
'in Thirty one Days after ſuch Tender of the De-
'clarations to him, produce Two ſufficient Prote-
'ſtant Witneſſes, to teſtify upon Oath, that they 'believe him to be a Proteſtant Diſſenter, or a Cer'tificate under the Hands of Four Proteſtants who 'are conformable to the Church of England, or
'have taken the Oaths, and ſubſcribed the Declara-
'ration above-mentioned; and ſhall alſo produce a 'Certificate under the Hands and Seals of Six, or 'more, ſufficient Men of the Congregation to 'which he belongs, owning him for one of them.

'Provided alſo, And be it enacted by the Autho'rity aforeſaid, That until ſuch Certificate under 'the Hands of Six of his Congregation (as afore-
'ſaid) be produced, and Two Proteſtant Witneſſes
'come to atteſt his being a Proteſtant Diſſenter, or
'a Certificate under the Hands of Four Proteſtants
'(as aforeſaid) be produced, the Juſtice of the 'Peace ſhall, and hereby is required to take a Re-
'cognizance with Two Sureties, in the Penal Sum
'of Fifty Pounds, to be levied of his Goods and 'Chattels, Lands and Tenements, to the Uſe of 'the King and Queen's Majeſties, their Heirs and 'Succeſſors, for his producing the ſame; and if he 'cannot give ſuch Security, to commit him to Pri-
'ſon, there to remain until he has produced ſuch
'Certificates, or Two Witneſſes, as aforeſaid.

'Provided always, And it is the true Intent and 'Meaning of this Act, That all the Laws made and 'provided for the frequenting of Divine Service on
'the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, ſhall be
'ſtill in Force, and executed againſt all Perſons
'that offend againſt the ſaid Laws; except ſuch
'Perſons come to ſome Congregation, or Aſſembly
'of Religious Worſhip, allowed or permitted by 'this Act.

'Provided always, And be it further enacted by 'the Authority aforeſaid, That neither this Act,
'nor any Clauſe, Article, or Thing herein contain'ed, ſhall extend, or be conſtrued to extend, to 'give any Eaſe, Benefit or Advantage, to any Pa-
'piſt, or Popiſh Recuſant whatſoever; or any Per-
'ſon that ſhall deny, in his Preaching or Writing,
'the Doctrine of the Bleſſed Trinity, as it is decla-
'red in the aforeſaid Articles of Religion.

'Provided always, And be it enacted by the Au'thority aforeſaid, That if any Perſon or Perſons,
'at any Time or Times after the Tenth Day of 'June, do and ſhall, willingly and of purpoſe, ma-
'liciouſly or contemptuouſly, come into any Ca-
'thedral or Pariſh-Church, Chapel, or other Con'gregation permitted by this Act, and diſquiet or
'diſturb the ſame, or miſuſe any Preacher or Teach'er; ſuch Perſon or Perſons, upon Proof thereof
'before any Juſtice of Peace, by Two or more ſuf-
'ficient Witneſſes, ſhall find Two Sureties to be 'bound by Recognizance in the Penal Sum of Fifty 'Pounds; and in Default of ſuch Sureties, ſhall be 'committed to Priſon, there to remain till the next
'General or Quarter Seſſions; and upon Conviction
'of the ſaid Offence at the ſaid General or Quarter
'Seſſions, ſhall ſuffer the Pain and Penalty of Twen'ty Pounds, to the Uſe of the King and Queen's
'Majeſties, their Heirs and Succeſſors.

'Provided always, That no Congregation or As-'ſembly for Religious Worſhip, ſhall be permitted
'or allowed by this Act, until the Place of ſuch
'Meeting ſhall be certified to the Biſhop of the
'Dioceſe, or to the Archdeacon of that Archdea-
'conry, or to the Juſtices of the Peace, at the Ge'neral or Quarter Seſſions of the Peace, for the 'County, City, or Place in which ſuch Meeting
'ſhall be held, and regiſtred in the ſaid Biſhop's
'or Archdeacon's Court reſpectively, or recorded at
'the ſaid General or Quarter Seſſions; the Regiſter
'or Clerk of the Peace whereof reſpectively, is 'hereby required to regiſter the ſame, and to give
'Certificate thereof to ſuch Perſon as ſhall demand
'the ſame; for which there ſhall be none greater
'Fee nor Reward taken, than the Sum of Six-'Pence.

Mr. Dodd. The next is the Queen's Letter to the Biſhops: We have it from the Cotton Library, and a Perſon here, that has the Cuſtody of it, and proves it a True Copy.

Then Mr. Rawlinſon was Sworn.

Mr. Dodd. Pray give my Lords an Account, whether you examin'd that Paper; and where; and whether it be a True Copy.

Rawlinſon. I examin'd it in the Cotton Library, and (Errors excepted) I believe it a True Copy.

Mr. Dodd. Do you believe it to be a True Copy?

Rawlinſon. Yes, I do believe it.

'and Forms in the Church, as well by their preach-
'ing, readings, and miniſtring the Sacraments, as 'well by procureing unlawful Aſſemblies of a great 'Number of our People out of either their ordina'ry Pariſhes, and from Place far diſtant; and that

We therefore, accor'ding to Authoritie we have, do Charge and 'Command you, as the Biſhopp of that Dyoceſſe, 'with all manner of Diligence, to take Order 'through your Dioceſſe, as well in Places exempt 'as otherwiſe; that no manner of Publique and 'Devine Service, nor other Form of th' Admini'ſtration of the Holy Sacraments, nor any other 'Rightes or Ceremonies be in any ſort uſed in the 'Church, but directlie according to the Orders 'eſtabliſhed by our Laws. Nether that any maner 'of Perſon be ſuffred within your Dioceſſe to 'preach, teach, read, or ani exerciſe any Function 'in the Church, but ſuch as ſhall be lawfully Ap'proved and Licenſed, as Perſons able for their 'Knowledge, and conformable to the Miniſtrie in 'the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church of Eng'land. And where there ſhall not be ſufficient able 'Perſons for Learning in any Cures, to preach or 'inſtruct their Cures as were requiſet, there ſhall 'you lymitte the Curates to read the publique 'Homlines, according to the Injunctions heretofore 'by us given for like Cauſes: And furthermore 'conſidering, for the great Abuſe that have byn in 'ſundrie Places of our Realme, by reaſon of our 'forſaid Aſſemblies called Exerciſes, and for that the 'ſame are not, nor have not been Appointed nor 'Warranted by us or by our Laws, we Will and 'ſtraightlie Charge you, that you do charge the 'ſame forthwith to ceaſe, and not to be uſed: But 'if any ſhall attempt, or continew or renew the 'ſame, We will you not onlie to committe there'unto Priſon, as Maynteyners of Diſorders, but al'ſo to advertiſe Us or our Counſaile of the Names 'and Qualities of them, and of their Mayntainers 'and Abbettors, that theupon for better Example 'their Puniſhment may be more ſharp for their Re'formation. To the Lords of the Privy-Council.

'RIGHT Honorable and my ſinguler good 'Lords; I cannot deny but that I have been 'commanded both by the Quenes Majeſtie her 'ſelf, and alſo by divers of your Honorable Lord'ſhips in Her Name, to ſuppreſſe all thoſe Exerci'ſes within my Province, that are commonly called 'Propheſies; but I do proteſt before God, the Judge 'of all Hartes, that I did not of any Stubbernneſs 'or Wilfulneſs refuſe to Accompliſh the ſame, but 'onlye upon Conſcience; for that I found ſuch 'kind of Exerciſe ſet down in the Holie Scriptures, 'and the uſe of the ſame to have contynued in 'the Primitive Church, and was perſwaded that '(the Abuſes being reformed which I always offered 'my ſelf ready to Labour in) the ſaid Exerciſe might 'yet ſerve to the great Proffitt of the Church, and 'feared that the utter ſuppreſſing of them would 'bread Offence, and therefore was a moſt humble 'Suter unto Her Majeſtie, that I might not be 'made the chiefe Inſtrument in ſuppreſſing the 'ſame: Yet not prejudicing or condemning any 'that in reſpect of Pollicie or otherwiſe ſhould be 'of contrary Judgment, or being of Authority, 'ſhould ſuppreſs them: For I know right well, that 'there be ſome things of that Nature, wherein di'verſe Men may be of diverſe Opinions, and abownd 'in their owne Senſe, (being not repugnant to the 'Analogie of Faithe) without any Prejudice to 'their Salvation, or any Prejudice of ether to other. 'Notwithſtanding howſoever others being other'wiſe perſwaded, might ſafely do yt; yet I 'thought it not ſafe for me (being ſo perſwaded 'in Minde) to be the Doer of that whereof my 'own Heart and Conſcience would condemn me. 'And whereas I have ſuſteyned the Reſtraint of my 'Libertie, and Sequeſtration of my Juriſdiction 'nowe by the ſpace of ſix Monethes, I am ſo farre 'from Repininge thereat, or thinkinge my ſelf in'juriouſly or hardlie dealt withal therein at Her 'Majeſties Hands, that I do thankfully Embrace, 'and franklie, with all Humilitie, acknowledge her 'Princely, Gracious, and Rare Clemencie towards 'me, who having Authoritie and Power to have 'uſed greater and ſharper Severitie againſte me, 'and for good Pollicie and Example thinking it ſo 'expedient, hath notwithſtanding dealt ſo merci'fullie, myldelye, and gentlie with me. But the 'greateſt Griefe that ever I have had or have, is the 'Loſs of Her Majeſties Favour, and the ſuſteyninge 'of the Diſpleaſure of ſo gracious a Soveraigne, by 'whom the Church and Realm of Englande hath 'been ſo longe and ſo happilie Governed; and by 'whom my ſelf privatelie and ſpeciallie above other 'Subjects have received ſo many and ſo great Be'nefitts above all my Deſervings, for the recovery 'of whoſe gracious Favour, I moſt humbly beſeech 'your Lordſhips to be a meanes to Her Majeſtie for 'me: The which obteyned, I ſhall eſteme far a'bove all worldly Benefits whatſoever. And I pro'teſt here before God and your Honours, that not 'onely my dewtifull and humble Obedience to 'Her Majeſtie ſhall be ſuche, as She ſhall have no 'Cauſe to Repente Her of Her graciouſe Goodneſs 'and Clemencie ſhewed unto me; but alſo that 'by moſte fervente, heartie, and dailie Prayer (as 'I have done hitherto) ſo I will contynew, accor'dinge to my bownden Dewtie, to make moſte 'earneſte Sute unto Almightie God for the longe 'Preſervation of Her Majeſties moſt happie Raigne, 'to the unſpeakable Benefitt of the Church and 'Realm of England, &c.

Mr.

Mr. Dodd. We hope these Two Letters have set that Matter in a true Light, that the Reason of the Archbishop's Disgrace was, for not complying with the Commands of the Queen. We will add no more upon this Article, but proceed to the Third.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The Dates of these Letters are material; for your Lordships take notice, they were written in the Year 1577; and Her Majesty's Commands for suppressing the Prophesyings not being obey'd, the Puritans in few Years became so dangerous, that the Parliament was necessitated to make the Act of the 35th Year of Her Reign, (with those severe Penalties, which have been so much censured by one of the Learned Managers) to give a Check to them.

Mr. Dodd. MY Lords, The Third Article that the Doctor is charged with, is, That he does suggest and assert, That the Church of England is in a Condition of great Peril and Adversity under Her Majesty's Administration; And that, in order to arraign and blacken the Vote or Resolution of both Houses of Parliament, approv'd by Her Majesty, he, in Opposition thereto, does suggest the Church to be in Danger. And, my Lords, this we take the Liberty totally to deny: The Doctor asserts no such Thing in his Sermon, nor hath it (as we apprehend) been proved upon him.

But true it is, that he asserts, That when National Sins are ripened to Maturity, with other Immoralities and Irreligious Practices therein mention'd, then such a People and Church are in very great Danger, as we apprehend, from the Sins and Vices of wicked Men. My Lords, This we conceive no ways to be opposite to the Votes of the Two Houses of Parliament, nor to Her Majesty's Declaration: We think we have followed the Act of Parliament of the 9th and 10th of King William, for suppressing Blasphemy and Prophaneness, and other Acts of Parliament, in asserting this Matter. It must be agreed, that the Church, as a Church Militant, is always in Danger, till it is a Church Triumphant: It is always taken notice so to be; she has many Enemies; she ought to be always on her Guard and Watch, and all good People ought to pray for her Support. The Prayers directed by Her Majesty to be used, and that are used in all Churches, are, That no Sedition may disturb the State, nor Schism distract this Church; and that we all ought to lay it to Heart, how great Dangers we are in by our unhappy Divisions: These are the Prayers that are put up every Day in the Churches. Now to object from this, that we look on the Church to be in Danger under Her Majesty's Administration, is so directly contrary to what the Doctor has asserted in his Sermon, wherein he does, as a good and loyal Subject, pray, and pray heartily for the Best of Queens, that she may long live for the Comfort and Support of this Church and Nation; after this, one would think, when he has so positively laid it down in plain Words, there could be no Ground to quarrel with him on this Head. And as to that which was urged by one of the Gentlemen Managers for the House of Commons, observing that the Doctor's Expressions were taken out of the Lamentations, and that when the Lamentations were written, the King was a Prisoner, and the People in Captivity; and therefore the Doctor intended the Parallel to answer the present Times: Surely no such Inference can be drawn from these Passages: I hope the People are in no Captivity whatsoever; nor is our Queen (blessed be God) a Prisoner. And if it was intended by the Gentleman Manager, (as I suppose it was) that the Doctor herein meant the Pretender; the Doctor utterly denies it, and has all along disclaimed his Right, and asserted Her Majesty's Right in very express Terms. But in this Place cited by the Doctor, is represented the Prophet's Lamentation for the Sins of the People, and the Judgments that had overtaken the Jews for their Sins and Rebellion. The like Prayers may be observed to have been made by King David, and yet the Church of the Jews was in the greatest Prosperity in his Time: However, there is scarce a Psalm but he laments the Sins of the People, for fear lest they should bring down Judgments on the Jewish Church and State. This is pathetically express'd almost throughout all the Psalms.

As to the Allegation, That the Members of both Houses were Conspiring the Ruin of the Church, he totally denies it; nor has the Doctor, in all his Sermon, mentioned the Votes of the Two Houses: Therefore for the Article to charge the Doctor with asserting, That the Members of both Houses, who pass'd the Vote relating to the Danger of the Church, were Conspiring her Ruin, when they Voted her out of Danger, is a mistaken Fact. That Vote was almost Four Years ago. There could be no Reason to think he reflected on that Vote; nor is there any Thing that can induce your Lordships (as we humbly apprehend) in the Doctor's Sermon, to believe such a Charge. The Passage in the Doctor's Sermon relates to the Wars in the late Times: And as in those Days there were many ill Men, and God permitted them to bring their ill Designs about; so it is plain, that there were many good Men innocent, as my Lord Clarendon expresses it, that had no such ill Designs. Now, when your Lordships and the Commons pass'd that Vote, no doubt it was a just Vote, and gave a great Satisfaction: But no body could expect that Passage to be turned on the Doctor, as a Reflection on your Lordships, the Commons, and Her Majesty, in relation to that Vote. But what he reflects upon is quite another Thing: He takes notice, that the Church is in Danger from evil Men, from evil Practices, and evil Books that are daily publish'd. We hope your Lordships will not take it, that when we urge this, we intend to reflect either on the Pastors of the Church, or the Ministry of the Queen; for it would be hard, that they should be answerable for all those Pamphlets. But when such are publish'd to poison the Notions of the People, and a Minister in the Pulpit takes notice of them, to prevent the ill Consequences of them; whether this can have such a Construction as has been contended for, we may safely submit to your Lordships. The now asserting the Christian Faith to be in Danger by Vice and Irreligion, cannot be contrary to the Votes in the Articles alledged, nor affect him, who makes the Assertion, with any Crime, or (as we think) subject him to any Punishment.

My Lords, We shall be the shorter in opening this Article, because we fear we shall be very long in our Evidence upon this Head; we shall produce and give in Evidence several Books that daily come out, which contain the highest Blasphemy, Irreligion and Heresy that can be publish'd. I will not take upon me to open them, they are so horrid, I leave the Passages to be read, that your Lordships may see what Grounds there are for a Preacher in the Pulpit to take Notice of these Matters. When the Church is run down, the Clergy vilify'd; when they tell us a grey Coat has as much Authority to adminiſter the Sacrament as a black Coat; and that a Country-Man may make as good a Prieſt as the Parſon of the Pariſh; theſe Things may excuſe the Zeal of the Doctor in ſo warmly Reprehending them.

We ſhall read abundance of this ſort of Learning, and we ſhall do it only to ſhew that there was Reaſon for the Doctor in the Pulpit to forewarn the People, to caution them that they may not have ill Impreſſions made upon them, by ſuch wicked and ſcurrilous Writings. We ſhall humbly offer our Evidence to your Lordſhips, and then ſubmit this Article.

Mr. Phipps. MY Lords, I am now to ſpeak to the Third Article exhibited by the Commons of Great Britain againſt Doctor Sacheverell: And I humbly beg your Lordſhips Patience, while I take Notice of the ſeveral Branches of this Article, and ſhew your Lordſhips, that the Doctor is not guilty of any Offence therein charged.

As to ſuch Part of this Article as charges the Doctor, That he doth falſly and ſeditiouſly ſuggeſt and aſſert, that the Church of England is in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and that to arraign and blacken the Vote and Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, approv'd by Her Majeſty, he, in Oppoſition thereto, doth ſuggeſt the Church to be in Danger:

I beg Leave to take Notice, that the Firſt Part of the Fourth Article explains this Branch of the Third Article, and ſhews what the Commons meant by the Church being in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration: For, the Firſt Part of the Fourth Article ſays, That the Doctor ſuggeſts, that her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution. So that by charging that the Doctor aſſerts the Church is in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, it muſt be intended that he aſſerts the Church to be in Danger by Reaſon of Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration. And therefore if there be any Expreſſion in the Doctor's Sermon which ſuggeſts the Church to be in Danger; yet if it be not alſo therein aſſerted that the Danger proceeds from Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, the Doctor cannot be an Offender within the Meaning and Intention of this Article: And the Doctor denies, that he hath aſſerted any thing in his Sermon, from whence any ſuch Suggeſtion can be inferred.

To give your Lordſhips full Satisfaction in this Point, I ſhall firſt take Notice of the ſeveral Clauſes in the Doctor's Sermon at St. Paul's, which have been cited to make good this Article.

The firſt Paſſage quoted for this Purpoſe, is in Page the 5th, where the Doctor thus expreſſeth himſelf: I ſhall take the Expreſſion in its full Latitude, without confining it to the expreſs Deſign of the Place, tho' it were very obvious to draw a Parallel here betwixt the ſad Circumſtances of the Church of Corinth formerly, and of the Church of England at preſent; wherein her Holy Communion has been rent and divided by factious and ſchiſmatical Impoſtors; her pure Doctrine has been corrupted and defil'd; her Primitive Worſhip and Diſcipline prophan'd and abus'd; her ſacred Orders deny'd and vilify'd; her Prieſts and Profeſſors (like St. Paul*) calumniated, miſrepreſented and ridicul'd; her Altars and Sacraments proſtituted to Hypocrites, Deiſts, Socinians and Atheiſts; and this done, I wiſh I could not ſay, without Diſcouragement, I am ſure with Impunity, not only by our profeſs'd Enemies; but, which is worſe, by our pretended Friends and Falſe Brethren.*

This is the Paſſage which is chiefly inſiſted on to make good this Branch of the Article. My Lords, Is there not too much Truth in this Clauſe? Hath not the Communion of the Church been rent and divided by ſome Factious and Schiſmatical Teachers in Separate Congregations, who have no Orders at all; and by others who refuſe to take the Oaths, and will not comply with the Act of Toleration; by Popiſh Prieſts, who have drawn away Perſons from our Communion to their Church? Have not her Sacred Orders been deny'd and vilify'd by the Papiſts, who pretend Archbiſhop Parker was conſecrated at the Nags-Head? Are not her Altars and Sacraments proſtituted to Atheiſts, Deiſts and Socinians, who communicate to qualify themſelves for Offices and Places of Truſt; and yet, Is there any thing in this Clauſe can ſupport this Article? Are theſe Evils charg'd upon Her Majeſty; or is it aſſerted, that theſe Miſchiefs are owing to, or proceed from Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration?

The next Paragraph cited to maintain this Article, is in the 14th Page, where the Doctor ſays, In ſhort, as the Engliſh Government can never be ſecure on any other Principles, but ſtrictly thoſe of the Church of England; ſo I will be bold to ſay, where any Part of it is truſted in Perſons of any other Notions, they muſt be falſe to themſelves, if they are true to their Truſts; or if they are true to their Opinions and Intereſt, muſt betray that Government they are Enemies to upon Principle. Indeed, we muſt do them that Juſtice, to confeſs, That ſince the Sectariſts have found a way (which their Fore-fathers, God knows, as wicked as they were, would have abhorr'd) to ſwallow not only Oaths, but Sacraments, to qualify themſelves to get into Places and Preferments; theſe ſanctify'd Hypocrites can put on a ſhew of Loyalty, and ſeem tolerably eaſy in the Government, if they can ingroſs the Honours and Profits of it: But, let Her Majeſty reach out Her little Finger to touch their Loins, and theſe Sworn Adverſaries to Paſſive Obedience, and the Royal Family, ſhall fret themſelves, and Curſe their Queen and their God, and ſhall look upwards.

Here is not one Word of the Church being in Danger by Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration: He only ſhews the Danger the Engliſh Government may be in by Occaſional Conformiſts put into Offices and Places of Truſt. For Occaſional Conformiſts, who are Diſſenters, Republicans, Atheiſts and Deiſts, that communicate only to qualify themſelves for Places, if they are true to their Opinions, cannot be true to the Church of England in which they communicate, cannot be true to the Government by which they are entruſted in ſuch Offices; for they will be always promoting their own Principles in Religion, and their own Forms of Government in the State.

Both Lords and Commons were of Opinion, it was not ſafe to truſt Occaſional Conformiſts with the Guardianſhip of our Church or Crown, when they agreed to the Bill for preventing Occaſional Conformity, which Enacts, That if any Perſon, who had any Office Civil or Military, or any Command or Place of Truſt under Her Majeſty; or if any Perſon bearing any Office of Magiſtracy, or Place of Truſt in Corporations, who by the Laws are obliged to receive the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, according to the Rites and Uſage of the Church of England, ſhould after their Admiſſion into their reſpective ſpective Offices, and during their Continuance in ſuch Offices, reſort unto any Conventicle, Aſſembly or Meeting, under Colour or Pretence of any Exerciſe of Religion, in any other Manner than according to the Liturgy and Practice of the Church of England, they ſhould, being convicted thereof, be diſabled from henceforth to hold ſuch Office or Offices. Tho' this was never Enacted into a Law, yet as it was the Opinion of both Houſes of Parliament, I beg Leave to offer it as a Reaſon, to confirm what the Doctor hath aſſerted.

My Lords, I ſhall trouble your Lordſhips only with one Paſſage more, which was urg'd to prove this Article, which is in Page the 15th, where the Doctor hath theſe Words, To lay before you the great Peril and Miſchiefs of theſe Falſe Brethren in Church and State; which I ſhall endeavour to do, by proving that they weaken, undermine, and betray in themſelves, and encourage, and put it into the Power of our profeſs'd Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment of both. Theſe Falſe Brethren are the Occaſional Conformiſts mention'd in the Page preceding.

I heartily wiſh, that all who communicate in the Church, were true Sons of the Church; but if, as the Doctor ſuggeſts, there are any that communicate at her Altars, who diſown her Miſſion, who refuſe to comply with her Liturgy, and are Enemies to her Conſtitution; if Arians, Socinians, Deiſts, and almoſt all Diſſenters, and other Enemies to the Church, communicate with her to get Places and Preferments in Church and State, what Prejudice the Church may receive from ſuch Falſe Brethren, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips Judgment; begging Leave only to offer to your Lordſhips, what was ſaid by the Commons at a Conference with your Lordſhips, upon the Bill for preventing Occaſional Conformity; and which, I hope, in an Impeachment by the Commons, will have ſome Weight with your Lordſhips.

The Commons upon that Conference were pleaſed to take Notice, "That when the Corporation-"Act was made, the Parliament had freſh in their "Minds the Confuſions and Calamities that had "been brought upon the Nation, by ſuch as pre-"tended to be at the ſame time in the true Intereſt "of Religion and their Country. That the Parlia-"ment by that Act, and afterwards by the Teſt-"Act, thought they had ſecured our Eſtabliſhment "both in Church and State; and that they had pro-"vided a ſufficient Barrier to defeat and diſappoint "any Attempts upon them, by Enacting, That all "in Office ſhould receive the Sacrament of the Lord's "Supper, according the Rights and Uſages of the "Church of England; and never imagin'd a Set of "Men would riſe up, whoſe Conſciences were too "tender to obey the Laws, but harden'd enough to "break through any.

Thus, my Lords, having ſhewn that the Paſſages cited by the Managers do not maintain this Article, and that the Doctor hath not aſſerted the Church to be in Danger by Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration: I will next ſhew, from what Cauſes the Doctor doth ſuggeſt the Danger of the Church to ariſe: And of theſe Schiſm is one.

That Schiſm may diſtract the Church, a Prayer lately added to our Liturgy tells us? That Separation from the Eſtabliſh'd Church, which impoſeth no Sinful Terms of Communion, is Schiſm, all the Learned Men of our Church agree; and that there are many People in this Nation that are guilty of Schiſm, I think no Body will deny. And altho' it cannot be imagined, nor is it aſſerted by the Doctor, that ſuch Schiſm ſhould grow to ſuch a Head as to endanger the Church, during Her Majeſty's happy Adminiſtration; yet, what ill Conſequence it may be to the Church in another Age, no Body can pretend to know, tho' every Body may have too much Reaſon to fear.

So, my Lords, when Men attack the Articles of our Religion and our Homilies, and repreſent them as Spurious; when they call the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance and Paſſive Obedience a Blaſphemous Doctrine, what Influence that may have hereafter upon our Government both in Church and State, your Lordſhips are the beſt Judges.

I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, if the Queen can be ſafe, when it ſhall be averr'd in Print, that there is one on the other Side of the Water that is a Jure Divino King, and hath an Hereditary Right. Can the Queen or Church be ſafe, when all the whole Adminiſtration is vilify'd and abus'd as it is in the Obſervator, in this Manner? Countryman aſks the Queſtion, Have you any more Knaves to talk of? Obſ. Honeſt Countryman, What would you have me to do? If I muſt run through all the Liſts of Knaves, I muſt bring in all the Courts, all the Employments, all the Claſſes of Publick Affairs in the Nation.

Can the Queen be ſafe, when the Murther of King Charles the Firſt is juſtify'd in Print, by the Review and Obſervator? When the Wet Martyrdom of King Charles the Firſt, and Dry Martyrdom of King James the Second are ſaid to be all one, and no Difference between them? I ſay, How can Her Majeſty be ſafe, when ſuch Rebellious Principles are ſo publickly avow'd? And if Her Majeſty be in Danger, Can the Church be ſafe?

All Learned Men that underſtand our Conſtitution, have always agreed, that there is ſuch a near Relation between the Church and Monarchy, ſuch a Dependance of one upon the other, that where one falls, the other cannot ſtand.

Can either Church or Queen be ſafe, when ſo great and neceſſary a Part of our Conſtitution, our Parliament, is ſtruck at? When it ſhall be ſaid that the Members ſit in the Houſe to do nothing, making long Speeches without Meaning, and Voting Bills without Deſign to have them paſs? And when ſuch Rebellious Principles are broached, as I mentioned to your Lordſhips upon Friday laſt out of the Review, to ſhew the Neceſſity of Preaching the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, viz. If the next Parliament ſhould prove like this, the Nation will be ſo much nearer that Criſis of Time, when Engliſh Liberty being brought to the laſt Extremity, muſt open the Magazine of Original Power? Theſe are ſome of the Things alledged by the Doctor to be dangerous to the Church and State.

But the chief Cauſes from whence the Doctor ſuggeſts the Danger of our Church and State to proceed, are Atheiſm, Prophaneneſs, and Immorality; for he thus expreſſeth himſelf, Pag. 20. What Reaſon have we to think but that the National Sins are ripen'd up to a full Maturity to call down Vengeance from Providence on a Church and Kingdom thus debauch'd in its Principles, and corrupted in its Manners; and inſtead of the True Faith, Diſcipline and Worſhip, given over to all Licentiouſneſs both in Opinion and Practice; to all Senſuality, Hypocriſy, Lewdneſs and Atheiſm?

From theſe Sins it is he apprehends the Church and Nation to be in Danger; and what Judgments have been brought down upon Kingdoms and Nations for theſe Sins, we have Multitudes of Inſtances, both in Sacred and other Hiſtories; ſometimes they have have been depriv'd of the true Worſhip of God, and overwhelm'd with Idolatry and Mahometaniſm. Is not the Name of Chriſt forgot in the Place of his miraculous Birth? And is not the Light of the Goſpel totally extinguiſh'd where it at firſt ſo glorioufly ſhin'd? And by what Means? By Infidelity, Prophaneneſs and Immorality. And may not the ſame Cauſes produce the ſame Effects?

Can England be always ſecure from ſuch Judgments, when ſome amongſt us ſcarce own the firſt Perſon of the Trinity, by whom they were created? But many have the Boldneſs to deny the Divinity of the ſecond Perſon, by whom they were redeemed, and many other ſuch Blaſphemies and Atheiſtical Notions are daily propagated and ſpread abroad among us; of which I ſhall beg your Lordſhips Permiſſion to cite ſome few Inſtances, of thoſe many we ſhall offer to your Conſideration in the Courſe of our Evidence; and they are ſuch as I hardly dare Name, and as your Lordſhips will ſcarce bear to hear.

There is a Treatiſe call'd, A brief but clear Confutation of the Doctrine of the Trinity, Page the 9th it ſays, The Divinity attributed to the Son and Holy Ghoſt is unſcriptural and idolatrous. Page the 14th, To be ſhort, Trinitarianiſm is Polytheiſm and Idolatry, if there be any ſuch Thing in Nature.

And a Book called Brief Notes on the Creed of Athanaſius, ſpeaking of the Trinity and Incarnation, ſays, A Belief in theſe Points is in no Degree neceſſary, much leſs neceſſary before all Things.

The Account of the Growth of Deiſm, Page 17. ſays, Many Doctrines are made neceſſary to Salvation, which it is impoſſible to believe, becauſe they are in their Nature Abſurdities. Idem, p. 22. One of my Old Acquaintance always thought the moral Part of the Bible very good; but he alſo thought that by the Strength of his own Reaſon, he could have writ as good a Moral himſelf.

Theſe are Sins of a very deep Dye, and may juſtly draw down very heavy Judgments; and altho' we are very well aſſured, that the Piety of her Majeſty alone is ſufficient to avert thoſe Judgments that are due to ſuch Crimes during her own Life; and altho' we are ſure, that, by her Majeſty's Care, and the Vigilance of Her Miniſters, thoſe Sins will not grow to ſuch a Head during her Majeſty's Life, as to endanger the Church and State; yet (if not prevented) they may take ſuch Root now, as may hereafter endanger the State, the Church, and even Chriſtianity it ſelf: For as among Men, Nemo repentè fuit turpiſſimus, ſo Hereſies and Schiſms in the Church, Factious and Seditious Principles in the State, are not invented and arrive to the Height at once, but ſteal by Degrees into the Church and State: And therefore, as in the Body Natural, ſo in the Body Politick, we muſt meet the Diſeaſe, and prevent the ſpreading of its Contagion: And one of the beſt Methods to do it, is by our Miniſters ſhewing the Heinouſneſs of theſe Crimes, and the dangerous Conſequences that attend them. And we ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether the Doctor hath any otherwiſe aſſerted the Church to be in Danger, than what may happen to her as the Conſequences of ſuch Sins; and whether he any where avers the Church to be in Danger by or under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration.

As to the Votes of both Houſes, we dare not preſume to ſay how far they were deſign'd to extend: But I humbly ſubmit to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether the Vote of both Houſes in 1705, did relate only to ſuch Suggeſtions and Inſinuations of the Church's Danger, as ſhould be made about that Time, or ſome ſhort Time after; or whether it was intended to have a Proſpect, and relate to what ſhould be ſuggeſted four Years after; whereas it was impoſſible for the Wit of Man to foreſee what ſhould happen in ſo long a Time.

We were then, as we are now, engaged in a War with a powerful Enemy; a Pretender, ſupported by that Enemy, and who, ſince that Vote, attempted to invade theſe Kingdoms, if that Army of the French had been ſucceſsful in Flanders, and the Advantage of the War had turn'd on their Side; and if the Pretender had landed with ſuch a ſucceſsful and powerful Army of French Papiſts in Great Britain, I believe it would have been impoſſible to have made the Generality of the People avoid thinking both Church and State too in Danger under thoſe Circumſtances.

To conclude this Branch, If there be any Thing in his Sermon, from whence it can be inferr'd that he ſuggeſts the Church to be in Danger, yet if it be not ſuggeſted to be by Reaſon of her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and if it was not done with a wicked, malicious, and ſeditious Intent to defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, and to contradict and arraign the Reſolutions of both Houſes of Parliament; and unleſs ſuch Intention plainly appears, without Inuendo's, he cannot be guilty within the Intent of this Article.

And as to ſo much of the third Article, which chargeth that the Doctor, as a Parallel, mentions a Vote that the Perſon of King Charles the Firſt was voted to be out of Danger, at the ſame time that his Murderers were conſpiring his Death, thereby wickedly and maliciouſly inſinuating, that the Members of both Houſes who paſs'd the ſaid Vote were then conſpiring the Ruin of the Church; I cannot give a better Anſwer than the Doctor himſelf hath given to it, viz.

1. That he doth not draw any Parallel between the Vote concerning the King's Perſon, and the Vote of the Two Houſes.

2. That he does not in his Sermon mention the Vote of the Two Houſes.

3. That if he had mentioned it, he would not thereby wickedly and maliciouſly have inſinuated that the Members of both Houſes, who paſs'd that Vote, were then conſpiring the Ruin of the Church; but would have inſinuated, that as ſome Perſons were conſpiring the Murder of the King, whilſt others, no way privy to their wicked Intentions, voted his Perſon to be out of Danger; ſo when the Two Houſes voted the Church to be in no Danger under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, there might be ſome others who were conſpiring the Ruin of the Church, and many others, who by their Vice and Infidelity were drawing down God's Vengeance both on Church and State.

Mr. Dee. MAY it pleaſe your Lordſhips to indulge me a little upon this Article, and I beg leave to make a Diſtinction, as on the laſt Article, that is, that theſe Words, Danger of the Church, ſeem in the Articles to bear one Senſe, and in the Doctor's Sermon another. The Danger ſuggeſted in the Article, is a Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration. I muſt beg leave to ſay, theſe Words were put in, to inſinuate, that the Doctor does in his Sermon urge the Danger of the Church to ariſe from her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; which, I think, is not to be found there; and if they were omitted, then it will ſtand only thus, That the Doctor ctor doth affirm that the Church of England is under great Peril and Adverſity; and if ſo, I hope, the Aſſertion is not Criminal. I can't, by all the Obſervation I have made on the Doctor's Sermon, find that the Doctor ſuggeſts that there is any form'd Body of Men conſpiring to overthrow the Church; but the Doctor ſays that there are ſuch Men that are falſe Brethren that endanger the Doctrines and Diſcipline of the Church. That there is ſome ſort of Danger, appears by the Form of Prayer that is daily offer'd up for her Safety, and therefore a general Suggeſtion of Danger would not have anſwer'd the End of the Commons to make the Doctor Criminal, without adding the Words under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and if they can ſhew that the Doctor in any Part of his Sermon has charg'd the Queen with ſuch Adminiſtration as endangers the Church, I am ſure I ſhould be very much to blame to appear for him at this Bar; but the contrary, I think, appears, when he prays for her Life, with theſe Words added, for the Comfort and Support of this Church and Nation.

My Lords, I ſhall ſay no more to that Part of the Article, it having been fully ſpoken to already, but beg leave to take Notice, that the Managers for the Houſe of Commons have been pleaſed to ſay, That the Doctor has reflected upon the Reſolutions of both Houſes of Parliament, by drawing a Parallel between the Vote relating to the Murder of King Charles, and the Vote of the Two Houſes that the Church was not in Danger. My Lords, To make a Parallel there muſt be Two Lines, a Line firſt given to draw the Parallel Line to; and I beg leave to ſay, that in the Doctor's Sermon there is no ſuch firſt Line given; for he has not in all his Sermon taken Notice of any Vote of both Houſes. If he has not taken Notice of this Reſolution of both Houſes in his Sermon, the Law will not imply that he had any Notice of it. For Votes are private Reſolutions of the Houſes, and always were ſo 'till of late they have been publiſh'd in Print, and the Printing of them will not infer that he had Notice of them. The Doctor's Diſtinction in his Anſwer is very true and plain, that he doth not charge the Perſons concern'd in paſſing that Vote with being concern'd in that odious add execrable Deſign of carrying on the Murder of that Royal Prince; (and I hope Charity will carry us ſo far as to think that very many Perſons that join'd in that Vote were not concern'd in it) but that yet at the ſame Time they paſſed that Vote, that bloody Deſign was carry'd on by a private Juncto of Bloodthirſty Men.

My Lords, I do not admit, but ſuppoſing I ſhould admit the Doctor hath contradicted the Reſolutions of both Houſes, I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips what Crime the contradicting a Vote of the Houſe of Commons, or the Reſolution of both Houſes, is. The contradicting a known eſtabliſh'd Law may be Seditious; but I ſubmit it whether a Vote is ſo publick an Act, that contradicting it, at leaſt without taking Notice of it, be any Crime, or at leaſt be ſo high a Crime as to deſerve a Cenſure. It is very certain he may be thought Saucy and Unmannerly to do it, or it may be a Breach of Privilege; but whether your Lordſhips will interpret it to be a Crime, and ſuch a Crime as will bear an Impeachment for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, We humbly hope, that notwithſtanding any thing yet offered againſt the Doctor, that your Lordſhips will be of Opinion, that the acquitting the Doctor of this Impeachment will be a noble and convincing Proof of the undoubted Truth of that Vote, That the Church of England, (of which the Doctor is a true, though an unfortunate Son, whilſt under a Charge by the Commons of Great Britain for High Crimes) under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, is in a ſafe and flouriſhing Condition.

Dr. Henchman. MY Lords, We are now upon the Third Article of Impeachment, in which Doctor Sacheverell is charg'd with [falſly and ſeditiouſly ſuggeſting and aſſerting, That the Church of England is in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration.] If by theſe Words, under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, your Lordſhips are to underſtand By the Courſe and Tendency of her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, that Charge we poſitively deny, and humbly aſſure our ſelves that the Learned Managers have not been able to maintain it, either from the general Scope and Deſign of the whole Sermon, or from any particular Paſſages contain'd in it.

If by thoſe Words, under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, is to be underſtood only during the Time of her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, then we apprehend that there may be Perils under her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, which do no ways proceed from ſuch her Adminiſtration, and which may be mention'd without any ſeditious Thought or Intention of Reflecting upon her Majeſty's happy Adminiſtration.

If your Lordſhips look thro' the whole Sermon, it will appear, that he who now ſtands accuſed for caſting this foul Aſperſion upon her Majeſty, never once mentions her throughout this whole Diſcourſe, but in Terms full of the profoundeſt Reſpect and Reverence: In the very beginning of this Sermon, in the ſecond Page, this is reckon'd as one chief Part of that Day's Deliverance, which he was then ſolemnizing, That this good and pious Relick of the Royal Family ſits now happily upon the Throne of her great Anceſtors. In the 19th Page we find him with an honeſt and hearty Zeal aſſerting Her Majeſty's Right to the Throne, and praying God to bleſs her in it; and within a few Lines he again repeats that Prayer, That God would long preſerve her on that Throne, for this very remarkable Reaſon, becauſe She is the Comfort and Support of the Eſtabliſh'd Church.

Is this, my Lords, the Language of one that would ſuggeſt and aſſert, that very Church to be in a Condition of great Peril and Adverſity from her Majeſty's Adminiſtration? Or can your Lordſhips preſume, that any one can ſo far prevaricate with God and Man, as openly to thank God for the peculiar Happineſs that we now enjoy by her Majeſty's ſitting on the Throne of her Anceſtors, and to beſeech him long to preſerve her there for the Support and Comfort of the Eſtabliſh'd Church, and yet aſſert, that that Church is in great Adverſity under, that is from, her Majeſty's Adminiſtration.

In this Caſe your Lordſhips will ſuffer me to ſhew what thoſe Perils are which the Church is ſaid to be in, in this Diſcourſe, and how they do not proceed from her Majeſty's Adminiſtration.

The Dangers ſpoken of in this Sermon are either ſuch as ariſe from the Infidelity and Prophaneneſs, the Vice and Immorality of the Age, or elſe ſuch as always have attended the Chriſtian Church from her firſt Foundation, and always will attend her whilſt ſhe continues Militant upon Earth.

That

That there are Dangers arising to the Church from Infidelity and Prophaneneſs, is already, I doubt, too evident from thoſe Authors I mention'd under the ſecond Article, and from what the Gentlemen who have ſpoke before me, have obſerv'd upon this: If it yet wants a Confirmation, we ſhall beg leave to lay before your Lordſhips a black Catalogue of Prophaneneſs and Blaſphemy, not fit to be heard more than once.

As to the Dangers proceeding from Vice and Immorality, the Laws of the Land, and the many Proclamations iſſued out by Royal Authority upon that Occaſion, are an undeniable Evidence of the growing Danger to the Church on that Head, and of her Majeſty's ſpecial Care to ſuppreſs and prevent that Danger. In the Cloſe of thoſe Proclamations Her Majeſty declares Her Royal Reſolution to puniſh all manner of Vice, Immorality and Prophaneneſs in Perſons of all Degrees whatſoever, and particularly in ſuch as are near her Royal Perſon; and theſe Proclamations are ordered to be read by all Miniſters in their reſpective Congregations at leaſt Four Times in every Year; and they are directed to incite and ſtir up their Congregations to the Practice of Piety and Virtue, and the avoiding all Immorality and Prophaneneſs. My Lords, hard is the Fate of Miniſters, if they muſt reprove Prophaneneſs in Men of all Degrees under Her Majeſty's Diſpleaſure; and yet if they once happen to mention Men of Characters and Stations in their publick Diſcourſes, that too muſt be made one Part of an Impeachment againſt him.

My Lords, It was ſaid indeed by a Learned Manager, that the Pulpit was not a proper Place for Complaints of this Nature; that theſe things ought not to be ſpoken of in Publick, unleſs they could be prov'd; and if they could be prov'd, thoſe that are known to be guilty ſhould be proſecuted in a due Courſe of Law. But, my Lords, I humbly apprehend it to be the Duty of a Miniſter of the Goſpel to be inſtant in ſeaſon, and out of ſeaſon; to exhort and rebuke with all Authority, and without Diſtinction. This their Holy Function obliges them to do, and the Dignity of that Function does and ought to protect them in the Performance of that Duty; but that Miniſters ſhould be obliged to proſecute every Offender in a Court of Juſtice, is not yet known to be any Part of their Office; and he that at any time ſhould take that Part upon him, would hardly avoid that Imputation which many People are ready to lay upon the whole Profeſſion.

In the next Place, your Lordſhips will conſider whether the Dangers mention'd in this Sermon are not ſuch as have in all Ages, and under the beſt Princes, infeſted the Church.

I appeal to the Reverend Bench of Biſhops, whether even in the Apoſtles Time there were not Men of unſtable Minds crept in among them; ſome carried about with every wind of Doctrine, deceiving, and being deceiv'd; others teaching for Doctrines the Traditions of Men; and whether in the immediate ſucceeding Ages the Church was not miſerably rent and divided by factious and ſchiſmatical Impoſtors. Their Lordſhips well know that the pious Care of Chriſtian Emperors was not able to prevent the ſpreading of old Errors, and the continual ſpringing up of new ones; neither has Her Majeſty's peculiar Piety and Zeal prevented many Inſtances of Prophaneneſs and Irreligion under Her happy Adminiſtration; but certainly no Inference ought to be made from an Hiſtorical Account, or bare Mention of ſuch like Perils of the Church, as if that was intended to arraign the Adminiſtration of thoſe Princes in whoſe Times they happen'd.

My Lords, That there are ſuch Dangers attending the Church, even under her Majeſty's happy Adminiſtration, needs no other Evidence than that Form of Prayer which is by her Majeſty's Authority directed to be uſed in all Churches; in which we beſeech God, That no Sedition may diſturb this State, nor Schiſm diſtract this Church; and that he would give us all Grace ſeriouſly to lay to Heart the great Danger we are in by our unhappy Diviſions. My Lords, this Prayer is enjoin'd to be uſed by publick Authority; and particularly mentions the great Danger of the Church, in being at this Time diſtracted with Schiſm; and I muſt ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, how hard it is that a Miniſter may not from his Pulpit mention thoſe Dangers without Offence, which he is ſpecially commanded to pray againſt in his Deſk.

Mr. Dodd. We ſhall beg Leave to produce ſeveral Books, wherein there are the ſtrangeſt Opinions that perhaps your Lordſhips ever heard of: And we ſhall firſt confine ourſelves unto them which relate to Blaſphemy, Irreligion and Hereſy, which we confeſs are not pleaſant to be heard, or fit to be publiſh'd, if it were not abſolutely neceſſary for the Doctor's Defence.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, We begin with ſome Miſcellaneous Tracts, publiſh'd by Mr. Edmund Hickeringill. And we offer them firſt to your Lordſhips Conſideration, becauſe he was a falſe Brother; and we think his Tracts will juſtify the Doctor in what he hath ſaid in relation to the Church being in Danger, from the Blaſphemy and other enormous Crimes mention'd in his Sermon.

Mr. Dee. It's in Page 12.

Mr. Thompſon. My Lords, Upon what is offer'd to be given in Evidence, the Managers apprehend there is ſomething that will require their Conſideration, and they deſire to withdraw.

Accordingly the Managers withdrew, and then the Lords adjourned to their Houſe above; and in a ſhort time their Lordſhips being returned, and ſeated as before, and the Managers being returned to the Place appointed for them at their Lordſhips Bar, Proclamation for Silence was made by the Serjeant at Arms.

Mr. Thompſon. My Lords, The Managers have conſider'd the Nature of the Evidence open'd by the Council; and without troubling your Lordſhips to obſerve how material it is for the Priſoner's Defence, ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, whether ſuch impious and blaſphemous Paſſages as the Council were aſham'd to repeat, ſhall be republiſh'd in ſo ſolemn a Mana Manner, by reading them in Evidence before your Lordſhips.

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, You that are of Council for the Doctor may proceed in your Evidence as you ſhall think proper.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We muſt own there are a Multitude of Sentences never to be repeated, if it were not neceſſary for our Defence; but we think it ſo material for the Doctor's Defence, that we dare not depart from it without your Lordſhips Order.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The Reaſon that Learned Gentleman gave againſt reading them, is the very Reaſon we offer for reading them; for the Doctor aſcribes the Danger of the Church to thoſe Blaſphemies and impious Doctrines and Tenets, that are ſo frequently publiſhed and which call for God's Judgments on the Nation.

Mr. Dee. My Lords, We deſire he may read in the ſame Book he was reading before.

'That this Sacrament cannot be rightly celebrated
'without the Aſſiſtance of a Prieſt, who muſt con-
'ſecrate the Elements to the Uſe for which they are
'deſign'd; whereby the Prieſt is made abſolutely

'neceſſary to the very Being of the Sacrament. 'The Prieſt alſo making himſelf Judge of every 'one's Preparation for this Sacrament, has it in his 'Power to admit to a Participation whom he thinks 'fit; as likewiſe to exclude whom he pleaſes from 'this neceſſary Means of Salvation: And hereby 'he is enabled to make his Terms with his People, 'who muſt be contented to ſave their Souls upon 'what Conditions he will admit. No wonder, 'then, that ſo great a Noiſe has been made con-'cerning this Sacred Commemorative Repaſt. 'That Chriſtian Communion which you read of as 'practiſed in the Apoſtles Days, was nothing elſe 'but a Religious Converſation of Chriſtians one 'amongſt another. 'Twas for Society-ſake that 'they went from Houſe to Houſe, that they eat 'and drank together frequently.---- Now it's plain, 'that this ſort of Religious Converſation may be 'kept up among Chriſtians without either Prieſt 'or Altar, or any ſet Form of Prayer, or Praiſe. 'It was long after the Apoſtles were dead and 'buried, before the Temples were built, or Altars 'erected, or ſet Orations were made to the People in 'Churches. And what if you ſhould further con-'ſider, if there be any Part of this Primitive Church-'Communion that might not have been performed 'by a Woman as well as a Man?---- When the Pri-'mitive Chriſtians met together to break Bread, 'from Houſe to Houſe, had any of theſe Women 'craved a Bleſſing on that Bread, we have no Rea-'ſon to doubt but that God would have heard her 'Prayer.

Mr. Phipps. The next is, A Letter concerning Enthuſiaſm.

'Clerk reads.] Is the doing Good
'Or is it not diviner to do Good even 'where it may be thought inglorious, even to the 'ungrateful, and to thoſe who are inſenſible of the 'Good they receive? How comes it then, that 'what is ſo divine in us ſhould loſe its Character in 'the Divine Being? And that, according as the 'Deity is repreſented to us, he ſhould more reſem-'ble the Weak, Womaniſh, and Impotent Part of 'our Nature, than the Generous, Manly and Di-'vine?

'And now I appeal to all Men that have any 'Freedom of Judgment remaining, whether this 'Creed is fit to be retain'd in any Chriſtian, much 'leſs Proteſtant and Reform'd Church? Since it 'ſubverts the Foundations not only of Chriſtianity, 'but of all Religion, that is to ſay, Reaſon and 'Revelation.

Mr. Dee. There is a Book mark'd with the Letter L, call'd, An Account of the Growth of Deiſm.

'Clerk reads.] Many Doctrines are 'made neceſſary to Salvation, which Page 17.
'it's impoſſible to believe, becauſe 'they are in their Nature Abſurdities. I reply'd, 'that theſe things were Myſteries, and ſo above 'our Underſtanding. But he aſk'd me, To what 'End could an unintelligible Doctrine be revealed? 'Not to inſtruct, but to puzzle and amuſe.

'One of my old Acquaintance al'ways thought the moral Part of the Ibid. p. 22.
'Bible very good; but then he alſo 'thought that by the Strength of his own Reaſon 'he could have written as good a Moral himſelf.

'If you look over the State of Re'ligion, as it ſtandeth in Chriſtendom, Ibid. p. 24.
'there is no Church whatſoever which 'will accept you as a Member of its Communion, 'but upon ſome particular Terms of Belief, or 'Practice, which Chriſt never appointed, and it 'may be ſuch as an honeſt and wiſe Chriſtian can-'not conſent to.---- It looks like a Trick in all 'Churches to take away away the Uſe of Mens 'Reaſon, that they may render us Vaſſals and Slaves 'to all their Dictates and Commands. But what 'greater Slavery than to force on Men a Belief of 'ſuch Things as neceſſary to Salvation, of which 'it's not poſſible to form an Idea? Though I am ſa-'tisfied there is no ſuch Thing as a Change of 'Bread into the Fleſh of Chriſt, yet I can form an 'Idea that ſuch a Thing may be, that the ſame 'Power that changed Earth into a Man, may change 'Bread into Fleſh; but I can frame to my ſelf no 'Idea of what your Church teacheth in the Sacra-

'ment,

'ment, That the Body and Blood of Chriſt are verily and indeed taken and received of the Faithful: 'And when I ask, how can this be underſtood by a 'Proteſtant who believeth that there is no other 'Body but that of Bread? I am told that the 'Church means it in a Spiritual Senſe. Now I have 'try'd, and find it impoſſible for me to form to my 'ſelf an Idea of a Body verily and indeed in a Spi'ritual Senſe.

Ibid. p. 25. 'Your Church will require me to 'believe other Abſurdities as bad 'as theſe; as that Kings and 'Biſhops have Divine Right to that Power which 'they exerciſe over us; whereas with my own Eyes, 'I ſaw our great and gracious King accept the 'Crown of England as the Gift of the People. And 'I ſee as plainly that Biſhops are an Order of Men 'of their own (not of Chriſt's) making.

Ibid. p. 26. 'I can find no Footſteps of any Ju'riſdiction given to the Twelve over the 'Seventy, or indeed over any Body 'elſe.

Mr. Dee. The next is, The Hiſtory of Religion.

Pag. 310. 'Clerk Reads.] Strange and puz'zling Methods of religious Cere'monies and Myſteries, and of vari'ous Rights of ſacrificing, good for nothing but to 'confound and diſtract the Minds of Men.

Ibid. p. 312. 'In very deed, Creeds were the 'Spiritual Revenges of Diſſenting 'Parties upon one another.

Mr. Dodd. The next is Aſgyl's Argument.

Pag. 36. 'Clerk Reads.] God told Adam, 'that if he did eat he ſhould die; 'the Devil told Eve, that they might 'eat and not die; and theſe were the firſt Words 'ſpoken to Man by God, or the Devil; upon the 'Truth or Falſhood whereof, the very Beings of 'them both were to depend for ever: For which 'ever of them could maintain the Truth of his 'Word againſt the other, he muſt have been God, 'and the other the Devil. And therefore God, 'having turn'd the Lie upon the Devil, he is from 'thence call'd a Liar from the Beginning, and the 'Father of it, and will never be believed again for 'ever. God could not have diſpenſed with his 'Word, without complimenting the Devil with his 'Godhead.

Ibid. p. 82. 'What is it that you do, or would 'believe of Chriſt, or in Chriſt? 'Anſw. Why, we believe him for 'our Saviour. Save you! from what? Why, from 'our Sins. Why, what Hurt will Sin do you? 'Why, it will kill us. How do you know? Why, 'the Law of God ſaith ſo: In the Day thou eateſt 'thereof, thou ſhalt die. Why, but then will 'not this Saviour ſave you from this Law, and from 'this Death? No, he'll ſave us from Sin. Why, 'then it ſeems you have got a Pardon for Horſe'Stealing, with a Non-Obſtante to be hanged. Do 'but ſee now what a Jeſt you have made of your 'Faith. And yet I defy the Order of Prieſthood to 'form a better Creed than this, without admitting 'the Truth of my Argument, or to make Senſe of 'their own Faith without adding mine to it. It's 'much eaſier to make a Creed, than to believe it 'after it's made: Nor can any Man really believe 'any Part of the Goſpel that doth not believe it at 'all. For it is a Doctrine ſo dependant upon it ſelf, 'that unleſs we know the whole of it from the Be'ginning to the End, we can't know the Uſe and 'Reaſon of any Part of it. Wherefore (notwith'ſtanding this Inundation of Death in the World, 'and the Infection of Fear contracted upon Man 'from hence) I am not affrighted from re-aſſuming 'my Aſſertion at the Beginning, That this long 'Poſſeſſion of Death over Man, is a Poſſeſſion a'gainſt Right.

Ibid. p. 97. 'Behold, ye Deſpiſers, and won'der! Wonder at what? Wonder to 'ſee Paradiſe Loſt, with the Tree of 'Life in the midſt of it! Wonder and curſe at A'dam for an Original Fact, who in the Length of 'one Day, never ſo much as thought to put forth 'his Hand for him, and us, and pull, and eat, and 'live for ever. Wonder at, and damn your ſelves 'for Fools of the laſt Impreſſion, that in the Space 'of 1700 Years, never ſo much as thought to put 'forth our Hands every one for himſelf, and ſeal 'and execute the Covenant of Eternal Life, and live 'for ever.

Ibid. p. 98. 'To be even with the World at 'once, he that wonders at my Faith, 'I wonder at his Unbelief. And ſtare 'at me as long as you will, I am ſure that neither 'my Phyſiognomy, Sins, nor Misfortunes, can 'make me look ſo unlikely to be tranſlated, as my 'Redeemer was to be hanged.

Mr. Dee. The next is a Book call'd, Chriſtianity not Myſterious.

Pag. 80. 'Clerk Reads.] God himſelf, nor 'any of his Attributes are Myſteries 'to us for want of an adequate Idea: 'No, not Eternity.

Ibid. p. 107. 'As far as any Church allows of 'Myſteries, ſo far it is Antichriſtian, 'and may with a great deal of Ju'ſtice, though little Honour, claim Kindred with 'the Scarlet Whore.

Ibid. p. 134. 'For to ſpeak freely, Contradi'ction and Myſtery are but two Em'phatick Ways of ſaying nothing.

Ibid. p. 156. 'Contradiction expreſſes nothing by a Couple of 'Idea's that deſtroy one another; and Myſtery ex'preſſes nothing, by Words that have no Idea's at 'all.

'It will not be amiſs to lay down 'a ſhort Parallel of the ancient Hea'then, and new-coin'd Chriſtian 'Myſteries. And I ſhall endeavour ſo to do it, as 'to make it evident they were one in Nature, how'ever different in their Subjects.

Mr. Dee. The next is Sermons and Eſſays of Mr. Whiſton's.

Page 213. 'Clerk Reads.] When the Scri'ptures ſpeak of the one God, or 'of one God, they plainly and di'ſtinctly mean, one Original Fountain and Author 'of all Beings whatſoever; or mean thereby one 'Supreme God, the Father only.

Ibid. p. 215. 'The Moderns call'd theſe three 'Divine Perſons but one God, and 'ſo introduced at leaſt a new, and 'unſcriptural, and inaccurate, if not a falſe Way 'of ſpeaking in the Church.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We have now done with our Proofs; we have gone over the Heads of Blaſphemy, Irreligion and Hereſy; the Church reflected on; the Queen, Miniſtry, and all Orders of Men reflected upon and abuſed. We have cited theſe Books and Paſſages, not to reflect on the Government, but as thoſe which put the Doctor in ſome Heat and Concern both for the Church and State; and we hope your Lordſhips will make the beſt Conſtruction of the Doctor's Intentions in this Matter.

Mr. Phipps. If Blaſphemy and Irreligion can endanger the Church; if Treaſon and Rebellion can endanger the Nation, I think, with great Submiſſion, the Doctor has made good his Anſwer; and therefore I hope he is not guilty of any Part of this Article.

Mr. Dee. My Lords, I beg Leave that we may apply ſome Part of the Proofs we have read to Day to the Fourth Article.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The other Article, I fear, will be longer than will be fit to trouble your Lordſhips with now; we ſhall be ready to proceed when it is your Lordſhips Pleaſure.

Then the LORDS Adjourned to their Houſe Above.

Tueſday, March 7. The Eighth Day.

THE Lords coming down into Weſtminſter-Hall, and being ſeated in the manner before-mentioned, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, ſave thee and thy Bail, elſe thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, you that are Council for the Priſoner may proceed in his Defence.

Mr. Dodd. IF your Lordſhips pleaſe, we will proceed to the Fourth Article. That Article contains ſeveral Heads: 1. That the Doctor ſuggeſts Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution. 2. That there are Men of Characters and Stations in Church and State, who are Falſe Brethren, who undermine and betray, and put it in the Power of others to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution. 3. That the Doctor charges her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under Her, with a general Male-Adminiſtration. 4. That he perſuades the Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Faction and Parties, inſtills Jealouſies, foments Diviſions, and ſtirs up the Subjects to Arms, and perverts ſeveral Texts of Scripture.

My Lords, As to the Firſt, the Doctor is ſo far from ſuggeſting that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution, that he has not, as we apprehend, ſaid any thing that can bear ſuch a Conſtruction. The Doctor denies, that he has made any Mention of Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration in Church or State in his Sermon: Therefore, How can he argue that it tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution? It has not been proved. But he takes all Opportunities to ſpeak of the Bleſſings we enjoy under her Majeſty's Government; prays for Her Preſervation; and that She may long Reign for the Comfort and Support of the Church; profeſſes what he ſpoke proceeded from a tender Concern for Her Majeſty and Her Government: So that we humbly apprehend there was little Occaſion for ſuch a Charge againſt him.

The Second Part of the Article is, That there are Falſe Brethren, that are Men of Character and Station in Church and State, who undermine and betray, and put it in the Power of others to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution. Now the Falſe Brethren by him deſcribed, are Perſons who propagate falſe Doctrines, who give up the Diſcipline and Worſhip of the Church, who are for Neutrality in Religion, or who wiſh well to the Church, but do not ſhew their Zeal in obeying her Precepts, and defending her Rights. Theſe are the Falſe Brethren intended; and this is very different from the Allegation in the Impeachment. As to that Part of the Charge, of putting it in the Power of others to deſtroy the Conſtitution, he does not mention Men of Characters and Stations in this Place; but, as I take it, in Pag. 15. where this Paſſage is ſuppoſed to be contained; and yet it is Twelve Pages after, before thoſe Words are mention'd. They are not joined together, as is ſuppoſed by the Article; and ſpeak nothing of that Matter. It is a Conjunction of Paſſages widely different from, and not relating to one another. The Betrayers of the Conſtitution, to whom the Doctor does refer, are ſuch as by Writing endeavour to ſubvert the Foundation of our Church and State; ſuch as are of a Latitudinarian rian Principle, who neither believe her Faith, own her Miſſion, ſubmit to her Diſcipline, or comply with her Liturgy. My Lords, Theſe are the Heads, and Perſons, that the Doctor refers to; and not ſuch Perſons or Things, as are pretended by the Article.

As to a General Male-Adminiſtration under Her Majeſty, he abhors the Charge; has no where ſaid it: Always, as a good Subject, mentioned Her Majeſty with the profoundeſt Duty and Reſpect; nor does he tax any in Authority with a Male-Adminiſtration. And ſurely it is not ſufficient to charge the Doctor, as if he had fallen foul on the Miniſtry, when there is no Proof of it, and when there is no Paſſage in his Sermon, as we apprehend, that tends to it. The Doctor has on all Occaſions, as a good Subject, juſtified Her Majeſty's Title; and particularly at the Beginning of this War, he preach'd a Sermon at Oxford, before the Univerſity, therein juſtifying Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown, and Her entring into the War againſt France and Spain; wherein he has very clearly demonſtrated theſe Two Points. And as to the Charge of endeavouring to keep up Diſtinction of Parties, he is ſo far from it, that he complains of thoſe that have divided us with a Diſtinction of High and Low Churchmen; They have villanouſly divided us with knaviſh Diſtinctions: And what could he mean by all this, but a Service to the Government; and that they which raiſe ſuch falſe Inſinuations, ſuch Fears and Jealouſies, are the People he intended, and complains of? And as he has done that, ſo he takes all Opportunities to pray, that we may be one Fold under one Shepherd, and that all invidious Diſtinctions might be laid aſide.

My Lords, The next Thing is, The raiſing theſe groundleſs Fears and Jealouſies, that are ſuggeſted. As to that, the Paſſage we read before is quite oppoſite: The Doctor rebukes them, that do it as ill Chriſtians, and ill Subjects; and earneſtly ſets forth the Miſchief of them. He is ſo far from encouraging it, that he has upon ſeveral Occaſions ſeverely cenſured it. And as to ſtirring up Her Majeſty's Subjects to Arms and Violence, he abhors it, and throughout his Sermon aſſerts the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance; which is quite contrary to this Part of the Charge, altho' he conceives it to be the Ground of the Impeachment. Sure there is not any one Paſſage, that tends to excite the Subjects to Arms, in his Sermons.

My Lords, There was Notice taken of a Paſſage (that has little in it) exciting Chriſtians to put on the whole Armour of God: But ſure that is diſtinguiſh'd from the Arms of Fleſh and Blood: It cannot be ſo miſinterpreted, as to be underſtood of any Earthly Power whatſoever; for as it is in the Scripture, ſo it is in the Doctor's Sermon, the whole Armour of God; Patience, Submiſſion, &c. This is the Armour he excites Chriſtians to put on; nothing of fleſhly Arms.

As to the Charge of perverting ſeveral Texts of Scripture, to make ill Impreſſions on the People; he denies it, and had no ill Impreſſion to make on any Perſon whatſoever: His Work was to do good, and make good and religious Impreſſions on his Hearers. But he thinks it hard, when he cites Texts of Scripture againſt Vice and Immorality, by a Conſtruction in Prejudice of the Preacher, thoſe Texts ſhould be ſaid to be applied to particular Perſons. The Story of the Prophet, in the Second Book of Kings, Chap. vi. as printed in the Doctor's Sermon, is miſtaken; but the Two Reflections made upon it, are very unnatural, and not credible. The firſt Inference was, That he had it by Hearſay, and that he had not read it. Sure your Lordſhips cannot think, but that he, that is a Doctor of Divinity, has read every Chapter in the Bible: He, that has been a Student in the Univerſity of Twenty Years ſtanding, and more, and conſtantly keeping to the Church, certainly none can think but he has read the Bible. But then it is turn'd the other way upon him; That, taking it to be ſo, then he repreſents himſelf to be the Prophet that could ſee the Danger, and makes the Lords and Commons the People that were blind.

My Lords, This, I ſuppoſe, was intended to be wittily ſaid; but if it be ſeriouſly (and without Raillery) conſider'd, there is no Wit or Senſe in it. He mentions not the Lords and Commons at all: But true it is, he, as a Preacher, warns the People to have their Eyes open, to ſee the Dangers of Sin and Vice; ſo that we apprehend, there is no Ground, from that Paſſage, to charge the Doctor with corrupting the Scripture.

My Lords, The next Text that is quoted againſt the Doctor upon this Head, is, Blow the Trumpet in Sion; ſound an Alarm. Now it is urged by the Gentlemen Managers, That this can be for nothing but for War; and this (it's pretended) was only to be done in Time of War, when the Prieſts with the Silver Trumpets were to ſound to Battel. But, my Lords, this cannot have that Conſtruction; for whoever looks into the Scripture, particularly into the Prophet Joel, and other Places, (where that Expreſſion is uſed) will find it is to proclaim a Faſt: They were to blow the Trumpet, to ſignify the Generality, and that all ſhould take notice of it. The Alluſion is carried by an Elegancy to the Trumpet, to ſhew the Generality of it, and that all the People ſhould humble themſelves before the Lord. Now, to make this Sedition, to infer it to be to excite the People to War and Rebellion, is not right Reaſoning, nor is there the leaſt Colour for it.

Another Quotation he makes is much preſſed upon the Doctor, where ſpeaking of the Church, he cites that Paſſage out of the Lamentations: Her Adverſaries are chief, and her Enemies at preſent proſper. This is preſs'd upon us, as if the Doctor had an Eye in it on the Miniſtry. But this, we think, is ſtraining the Words beyond their Senſe or Meaning: For, firſt, he does not ſay her Adverſaries are the chiefeſt, but in the loweſt Degree of Compariſon, her Adverſaries are chief; that is, that amongſt her Adverſaries there are ſome conſiderable Perſons, ſome Men of Eſtates and Figure. And this, I think, appeared Yeſterday in the Pamphlets that were read, ſome whereof are ſuppoſed to be wrote by no mean Perſons; the Doctor cites the Words of Scripture, and we think it can have no ill Conſtruction. As to the ſecond Part of the Expreſſion, Her Enemies at preſent proſper, they are the Words of the Prophet; and how true in the preſent Caſe, we muſt ſubmit to your Lordſhips, upon what has been already offered, whether any ill Conſtruction can, or ought to be made of them. Neither the firſt nor ſecond Part of theſe Words are determined to any particular Perſons; we cite the Words themſelves; they are not determined to any Perſon whatſoever; and ſo we hope no Offence can be taken at them, nor any ſuch Inference drawn from them, as hath been endeavoured to be repreſented to your Lordſhips. The Doctor declares in his Sermon, as we formerly mentioned, and read to your Lordſhips, that he hoped what he had ſpoken would be without any Offence, as it proceeded from an honeſt and good Intention, and a tender Concern for Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and an hearty Zeal for the Honour and Safety of our excellent Church and Conſtitution: And ſo we hope your Lordſhips will conſtrue and intend it. And ſo we ſubmit this Article, and the Doctor's Defence, with all Humility, to your Lordſhips. We ſhall read no more than two or three Proclamations: The firſt is againſt Vice and Immorality, and to ſtir up Magiſtrates to take care to execute the Laws. A ſecond takes Notice that Her Majeſty's Commands had not been obeyed nor the Laws executed to ſuppreſs Vice, and commands the Magiſtrates to be careful to do their Duty herein: And, thirdly, a Direction that this Proclamation ſhall be read to the People out of the Deſk. And ſure the reading them there, and preaching them, or the Subject-Matter of them in the Pulpit, are conſiſtent together.

Mr. Phipps. MY Lords, We are now humbly to offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration, our Anſwer to the fourth and laſt Article of the Impeachment, to which we think there is no Neceſſity of giving any Anſwer, becauſe we humbly apprehend there is not any Offence charg'd upon the Doctor in that Article, for the Article ſaith, that the Doctor doth falſely and maliciouſly ſuggeſt, &c. Now to ſuggeſt can amount to no more than to inſinuate, and is far ſhort of an Averment or Aſſertion; and whether a bare Suggeſtion or Inſinuation can be a ſufficient Foundation to ground an Impeachment, is humbly ſubmitted to your Lordſhips. But ſince 'tis made an Article againſt the Doctor, we humbly hope we ſhall give as full an Anſwer to the Suggeſtions and Inſinuations contain'd in that Article, as we have to the Offences charged in either of the other Articles.

The firſt Part of the Article ſaith, That the Doctor doth falſly and maliciouſly ſuggeſt that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution. In anſwer to which 'tis humbly offered, That the Doctor doth not any where mention Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, either in Eccleſiaſtical or Civil Affairs. He eſteems it one of the greateſt Bleſſings and Deliverances, That her Majeſty now happily ſits on the Throne of Her Anceſtors; he prays, that God would long preſerve Her, for the Comfort and Support of the Church; he profeſſeth, That what he ſpeaks proceeded from a tender Concern for Her Majeſty and Her Government, and an hearty Zeal for the Honour and Safety of our excellent Church and Conſtitution; he ſolemnly declares, That his only Aim and Intention was earneſtly to contend for the Safety, Rights and Eſtabliſhment of Her Majeſty, together with thoſe of the Church. And how after all this it can be inferred, he ſuggeſts that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution, I cannot imagine. I humbly ſubmit whether ſuch a Charge can be inferr'd from his Sermons, without carrying Innuendo's farther than ever hath been attempted.

As for that Part of the Fourth Article, which chargeth, that the Doctor doth ſuggeſt that there are Men of Characters and Stations in the Church and State, which do themſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and do encourage and put it into the Power of others, who are profeſſed Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment: The Doctor denies he ſuggeſteth any ſuch things concerning Men of Characters and Stations.

I can't but obſerve what Art hath been uſed to make up this Article, and I do not doubt but your Lordſhips will be of that Opinion; for the Doctor in Page 22, mentions Men of Character and Stations, but does not mention Men of Character and Station in Church or State; but ſays, there are Men of Character and Stations that ſhift and prevaricate with their Principles, and ſtart from their Religion upon any Occaſion of Difficulty. Which is a Charge upon them in their private Capacity, and does not charge them with any Miſbehaviour in their Stations, or in any thing relating to the Publick Adminiſtration; nor does he mention in that Place their weakning, undermining and betraying, or the encouraging or putting it in the Power of our profeſs'd Enemies to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment.

And in Page 15, where he mentions the weakning, undermining and betraying in themſelves, and the encouraging and putting it in the Power of our profeſſed Enemies to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment of both: There he does not mention Men of Character and Station, but chargeth the weakning, &c. on the Falſe Brethren in Church and State; ſo that he thinks it very hard that a Part of one Sentence in Page 22, ſhould be brought back ſeven Page, and coupled with Part of another Sentence, Page 15, and put together as one Sentence, to make an Article of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors; whereas one of the Sentences hath no manner of Relation to, or Dependance upon the other, and neither of the Sentences alone can amount to or be charged as a High Crime and Miſdemeanor.

By this Method they might have charged him with High Treaſon, or any other Crime. Nay, my Lords, by this tranſpoſing and altering of Sentences, by taking a Part of one Sentence and coupling it with Part of another, they may make the Scripture it ſelf ſpeak Blaſphemy.

But ſuppoſe it had been one entire Sentence, had this been a Ground for an Impeachment? By Men of Characters and Stations, muſt Men of the higheſt Characters and Stations be neceſſarily underſtood? No, my Lords: Are not inferior Officers, even Conſtables, Mayors, Juſtices of the Peace, Officers of the Militia, Deputy-Lieutenants, Officers of the Army, Officers of the Cuſtoms, and other Branches of the Revenues, all Men of Station? And are not ſome of the Stations very good ones? And are not many of the Perſons that enjoy them Men of Characters too? And if among all theſe there may be found ſome whoſe Conſciences are ſo tender, that they think it a Sin to communicate with the Church upon any other Account than to qualify themſelves for their Offices and Stations; and ſuch who vilify her Orders, calumniate, miſrepreſent and ridicule her Prieſts and Profeſſors: Is it a High Crime and Miſdemeanor in the Doctor to call ſuch Perſons Falſe Brethren, and to ſuggeſt that they are Enemies to our Conſtitution, and that they endeavour to weaken and undermine it? And yet this is all that can be inferr'd from theſe two Pieces of Sentences put together, to form this Article. And does this bring the leaſt Blemiſh or Reflection on the Miniſtry, or thoſe of the Higheſt Character and Stations in the Church? By no Means: For the Miniſtry preſumes that Men in thoſe inferior Stations are well-affected to our Conſtitution, when they qualify themſelves according to Law, by taking the Sacra-

it nt and Oaths; and if any of them are not ſo, mecannot be preſumed to fall under the Notice of the Miniſtry: And in many Caſes, if they did know it, yet it would not be in their Power to redreſs it. I remember one Inſtance, in an eminent Borough in this Kingdom. It was proved, at the Hearing of an Election for that Borough, that the Mayor declared that no Perſon ſhould be admitted into the Corporation, and qualified to Vote for Members of Parliament, but ſuch as were Diſſenters from the Teſt; ſo that there may be Mayor, Aldermen, and the whole Corporation who may take the Sacrament in the Church of England, and the Oaths, and yet every one Diſſenters: And they may elect Perſons into much higher Stations, if they pleaſe, which are equally diſaffected to our Church, and it is not in the Power of her Majeſty or the Miniſtry to help it. And when there are ſuch found among us, whether the Doctor, when he chargeth them for being Falſe Brethren, can be ſaid to reflect on the Miniſtry, can be ſaid to be guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

The Learne Gentleman who ſpoke firſt to this Article, ſeemed to allow that Men of the higheſt Characters and Stations were not intended; but he objected, that to charge the inferior Magiſtrates with a Neglect of their Duty, is charging the Government with Male-Adminiſtration; in which I cannot concur with him. But as this Caſe is, I take it to be plain, that to charge inferior Officers or Magiſtrates with a Neglect of their Duty, cannot reflect on Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; for there are Magiſtrates which Her Majeſty cannot remove; there are Neglects which Her Majeſty or Her Miniſtry cannot be preſumed to know, as I before mention'd. And to ſet this in a true Light, and to give a full Anſwer to this Objection, we have Her Majeſty's Authority to vindicate the Doctor in this Point; for Her Majeſty chargeth the Magiſtrates with a Neglect of their Duty, and carrieth the Charge higher than can be inferr'd from the Doctor's Sermon, I mean the ſeveral Proclamations that have been iſſued by Her Majeſty, by the Advice of Her Privy-Council (which are Her Miniſtry) for ſuppreſſing Prophaneneſs and Immorality. Thoſe Proclamations take Notice of the ſeveral Acts of Parliament againſt Prophaneneſs and Immorality, and charge the inferior Magiſtrates with a Neglect of their Duty, in not putting thoſe Laws in Execution. And is it an Offence for the Doctor to mention that in his Pulpit, which hath been ſo often repeated by Her Majeſty under Her Great Seal?

It has been objected, That the Doctor, ſpeaking of the Church, ſays, that Her Adverſaries are Chief. This is a Quotation out of Scripture, which ſignifies that they are Mighty; but that this reflects on the Miniſtry, or Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, I cannot apprehend.

But it is alſo objected, that the Doctor, Page 5, ſaith, That the Communion of the Church hath been rent and divided by Factious and Schiſmatical Impoſtors, &c. Is the ſaying this is done with Impunity, a Reflection on the Adminiſtration? That Blaſphemy, Atheiſm and Prophaneneſs have been juſtify'd in Print; that the Worſhip and Diſcipline of the Church hath been prophaned and abuſed, her Orders denied and vilified, her Prieſts and Profeſſors calumniated, miſrepreſented and ridicul'd; that Trumpets have been ſounded to Rebellion; that Her Majeſty and Her whole Adminiſtration have been reflected on, I think was ſufficiently proved to your Lordſhips Yeſterday; and that it hath been done with Impunity hitherto, I believe will not be denied, for I have not heard that any of theſe bold Offenders have yet been puniſh'd; and that the inferior Magiſtrates have neglected their Duty in that reſpect, we have Her Majeſty's Authority for it. But that this is a Reflection on Her Majeſty, or Her Miniſtry, is totally denied; for the Execution of the Laws againſt ſuch Offenders is within the Province of inferior Magiſtrates; and God forbid that the Faults of inferior Magiſtrates ſhould be charged upon Her Majeſty. The ſeveral Proclamations iſſued out by Her Majeſty, by the Advice of Her Privy-Council, ſhew, Her Majeſty and Her Miniſtry have done all that in them lies to ſuppreſs Blaſphemy, Prophaneneſs, and other Vices; and that the Fault and Neglect lies entirely at the Door of the inferior Magiſtrates: And this ſufficiently Anſwers the Objection, that what is charged upon inferior Magiſtrates cannot reflect on her Majeſty, or Her Miniſtry. And this is alſo a full Anſwer to that Part of the Fourth Article, which accuſeth the Doctor with charging her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority, both in Church and State, with a general Male-Adminiſtration; to which I would only add what the Doctor hath ſaid in his Anſwer to this Article, viz. "That he abhors the Thoughts of bringing any "Charge againſt Her Sacred Majeſty, whom he "never mentions but in Terms of the profoundeſt "Duty and Reſpect; that he doth not charge thoſe "in Authority with any Male-Adminiſtration; that "he doth not ſo much as mention the Word Male-Adminiſtration, nor any other Word Synonymous "with it, or from whence it can be inferr'd, or in "which it is or can be imply'd.

As to ſuch Part of the Fourth Article, which chargeth, that the Doctor, as a publick Incendiary, perſuades Her Majeſty's Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Factions and Parties; he invites the Diſſenters to leave their Schiſm, and come ſincerely into the Church: He complains of thoſe who have villanouſly divided us with the knaviſh Diſtinctions of High and Low Church. He wiſheth we were all one Fold under one Shepherd; and that all thoſe invidious Diſtinctions, that diſtract and confound us, were loſt.

If wiſhing that People would leave their Schiſm, and come ſincerely into the Church; that we were all one Fold under one Shepherd, makes a Man a publick Incendiary; if blackning thoſe that divide us with knaviſh Diſtinctions with the Character of Villanous; and wiſhing that all thoſe invidious Diſtinctions which diſtract and confound us were loſt, be to keep up Diſtinctions of Factions and Parties, the Doctor is Guilty; but if not, then he conceives there is nothing in his Sermons which can be a Foundation for the Charge in this Branch of the Fourth Article.

But it hath been objected, That tho' the Doctor invites the Diſſenters to come into the Church, yet he invites them upon his own Terms: And I hope, my Lords, they ſhall never come in upon any other Terms than their conforming to the Doctrine and Diſcipline of our Church. I hope I ſhall never ſee the Conſtitution of our Church weakned, and her Pales and Fences broken down, to let her Enemies into it.

As to the other Part of the Article, which chargeth the Doctor with inſtilling groundleſs Jealouſies, and fomenting deſtructive Diviſions among her Majeſty's Subjects, there is no Foundation for it; for, on the contrary, he rebukes and condemns thoſe who by falſe Inſinuations, and raiſing groundleſs Jealouſies and Fears, embroil and bring it into Confuſion.

As to that Part of the Fourth Article, which chargeth, That the Doctor excites and stirs up Her Majesty's Subjects to Arms and Violence; if Preaching up Passive Obedience be to stir up People to Rebellion; if Preaching up the Illegality of Resistance be to excite her Majesty's Subjects to take up Arms against Her, I own there is a sufficient Ground in his Sermon for this Charge; but otherwise, there is not one Passage in the Sermon to warrant this Accusation.

I do admit, the Doctor, in the last Page of his Sermon, hath this Exhortation of St. Paul's: Put on the whole Armour of God, that ye may be able to stand against the Wiles of the Devil; for we wrestle not only against Flesh and Blood, but against Principalities, against Powers, against the Rulers of the Darkness of this World, against Spiritual Wickednesses in high Places. I pray, my Lords, What is it that the Doctor in the Words of St. Paul advises his Auditors to resist? Is it not the Wiles of the Devil? With what Armour are they to resist? 'Tis with the Armour of God. What is the Armour of God? Are Guns, or Swords of Iron or Steel, the Armour of God?

The Learned Manager that spoke to this Point said, the Doctor could not mean the spiritual Armour, because he departed from the Apostle's Spiritual Meaning. And to make good this Charge, he useth the same Method that was taken to make up the first Part of this Article; for the Words cited by the Doctor are in the Eleventh and Twelfth Verses of the Sixth Chapter of St. Paul to the Ephesians; and to find out the Doctor's Meaning, he goes back to the Thirty first Verse of the Fourth Chapter, where St. Paul saith, Let all Bitterness, and Wrath, and Anger, and Clamour, and Evil-speaking be put away from you, with all Malice. And why this should be alledged to shew what the Doctor means, when in the Words of St. Paul he adviseth his Auditors to put on the Armour of God, I cannot imagine. If he had read but two Verses after those Words cited by the Doctor, he would have found the Armour of God to be The Sword of the Spirit, the Shield of Faith, the Breast-plate of Righteousness, and the Helmet of Salvation; and the Doctor could mean no other Armour: And how her Majesty, or those in Authority under Her, can be resisted by this Armour, or what Violence Her Majesty's Subjects can use with these Arms, I submit to your Lordships. 'Tis plain, that the Principalities, Powers and Rulers, here meant, are not Earthly Principalities, Powers and Rulers; but the Principalities, Powers, and Rulers of Darkness, against which Guns and Swords are but a very weak and feeble Defence. These Things being consider'd, I think there is nothing to be collected from this Paragraph, that can excite Her Majesty's Subjects to Arms and Violence; unless it be, to take the Armour of God, to resist the Devil and all his Works; which, I hope, is not a High Crime and Misdemeanor.

As a further Evidence that the Doctor excites Her Majesty's Subjects to Arms and Rebellion, it is objected, That the Doctor, in his Sermon, Pag. 26. says, Let us therefore, being well assured how much our Cause deserves, and how much at present it requires our bravest Resolutions, hold fast our Integrity and Religion without wavering, and earnestly contend for the Faith which was once delivered to the Saints. And is not this wholsome and religious Advice? The more strongly and openly the Cause is oppugned, the braver Resolution it requires to defend it. The Cause of Religion is attack'd by Atheists and Deists; the Cause of Monarchy, by Assertors of Republican and Seditious Principles; the Cause of the Church, by Papists and Sectaries of all sorts; and therefore it requires our bravest Resolutions to defend the Church, the Queen, and the Constitution, with the same Zeal they are attack'd, as the Doctor explains himself; Not doubting, if we shew the same Courage, and indefatigable Zeal and Labour to defend, as our Adversaries to reproach, divide, and ruin our Church; neither their united Malice nor Power, nor all the Plots and Machinations of Rome, nor the very Gates of Hell it self, shall ever be able to prevail against Her. And shall this be construed to excite Her Majesty's Subjects to Arms and Violence?

As to the last Part of the Article, which chargeth, That the Doctor doth wickedly wrest and pervert divers Texts of Holy Scripture: It seems, the Printer of the Second Edition mistook one Text. If the Doctor had perverted, or wickedly wrested the Text, he must have been subject to a Prosecution in another Place; but it would not have been a Ground for an Impeachment of High Crimes and Misdemeanors.

To conclude---- My Lords, If condemning the Dethroning and Murdering the Royal Martyr King Charles the First, be to cast black and odious Colours on his late Majesty and the Revolution; if the averring the utter Illegality of Resistance to the Supreme Power in all Things lawful; if Preaching the Doctrine of Passive Obedience and Non-Resistance, which hath been enjoined by our Church, and confirmed by the Legislature, and is the Doctrine of all Christian Churches, shall be construed to be a Reflection on the Revolution, and a greater Reflection on it now, than the Preaching of the same Doctrine was in the Reign of his late Majesty, who was the Happy Instrument of that Revolution: If the Doctor be a Criminal for Preaching that Doctrine which the Right Reverend Fathers of our Church, and other Eminent Divines, have preach'd, with the Approbation and Applause of the Crown, and both Houses of Parliament; then the Doctor is guilty of the High Crimes and Misdemeanors in the First Article.

And if to wish that Dissenters, who qualify themselves according to the Act, may enjoy the full Benefit of it; if to desire the Laws to be put in Execution against such who will not comply with the Terms prescribed by the Act, and against Atheists, Deists, and such who frequent no Religious Worship at all, and are particularly excepted out of the Act of Toleration; and if to assert, that a Sentence ratified in Heaven cannot be reversed on Earth, be to affirm the Toleration unreasonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable; then the Doctor is also guilty of the High Crimes in the Second Article.

And if to assert the Prejudice the Church receives by Schism and Occasional Conformity; if the shewing the heavy Judgments which may be brought down upon a Church and Nation, by Blasphemy, Atheism, Prophaneness and Immorality; if to shew the Danger the Queen and Church are in, by the rebellious Principles that are daily broach'd and publish'd, be to assert the Church is in Danger under Her Majesty's Administration; the Doctor is likewise guilty of the Crimes in the Third Article.

And laſtly, If to pray for Her Majeſty's long Continuance on the Throne, for the Comfort and Support of the Church and Nation; if to ſhew that the Laws againſt Atheiſm, Blaſphemy, Prophaneneſs and Irreligion, be not put in due Execution by inferior Magiſtrates; that is, if to aſſert in his Pulpit what Her Majeſty, by Advice of her Miniſtry, hath aſſerted in Four Proclamations, be to reflect on Her Majeſty and Her Miniſtry, and to charge Her Majeſty with Male-Adminiſtration in Church and State; and if exhorting the People to put on the Sword of the Spirit, the Shield of Faith, the Breaſt-plate of Righteouſneſs, and the Helmet of Salvation, to reſiſt the Devil, and all the Powers of Darkneſs, be to excite Her Majeſty's Subjects to Arms and Violence againſt Her Majeſty; and if Preaching up Paſſive Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance, is to ſtir up People to Rebellion; then the Doctor is guilty of the High Crimes and Miſdemeanors in the Fourth Article; eſpecially, if ſtrain'd, foreign and unnatural Inferences, Inſinuations and Innuendo's are to paſs for Proof. But otherwiſe I preſume to ſay, the Doctor is not guilty of any of the Offences charged in either of the Articles; and I humbly hope, your Lordſhips will be of that Opinion.

Mr. Dee. MY Lords, This Article is ſhort of the former Articles, in the manner of the Charge. The firſt Part of it is a Charge upon the Doctor, That he ſuggeſts only, That Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution. As to this Part of the Article, (as has been obſerved) there is no Paſſage in the Sermon mentioning Her Majeſty, but with the greateſt Reſpect, and with hearty Prayers for Her. The Words Miniſters, or Miniſtry, are not found in the whole Sermon: Therefore, to find any Charge on them by the Doctor, we muſt look to the Second Part of the Article, which charges the Doctor with ſuggeſting, That there are Men of Character and Stations, who are Falſe Brethren, and do undermine the Conſtitution, and endeavour to betray the Church; and conſequently charges Her Majeſty with a General Male-Adminiſtration.

My Lords, As to this Part of the Charge, viz. That the Doctor doth ſuggeſt, that Men of Character and Stations are Underminers of our Conſtitution, it is not to be found in any Part of the Sermon: But if he doth ſuggeſt, that Men of Characters and Stations (not ſaying of what Characters, or what Stations) are Falſe Brethren, (if your Lordſhips take notice what thoſe Men are, whom the Doctor calls Falſe Brethren) it will not be a ſufficient Ground for a Charge of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. There are Four Sorts of Perſons, that the Doctor charges as Falſe Brethren: Thoſe that propagate Falſe Doctrines; Thoſe that give up the Diſcipline of the Church; Thoſe that are for a Neutrality in Religion; and Thoſe that own themſelves to be of the Church, but live not according to her Rules. Now to ſay, that there are ſome Men of Character and Stations in the Nation that are Falſe Brethren, within ſome one or other of theſe Deſcriptions, I wiſh I could ſay it was not true. But when the Doctor comes to charge ſome Perſons as Underminers of the Church and Conſtitution, they are deſcribed to be either thoſe Perſons that ſubvert the Fundamentals of Religion, as Atheiſts, Deiſts, Socinians, and ſuch like; or Occaſional Conformiſts, Perſons that creep into the Church, only with a Deſign to do it a Miſchief. And I think theſe Perſons may be juſtly ſaid to be Underminers of the Church.

My Lords, There is a General Charge againſt the Doctor, That he excites the People to Rebellion. If this could be naturally inferr'd from his Words, he muſt be guilty of Self-Contradiction, and ought rather to be pitied as a weak, fooliſh Man, than puniſhed as a cunning Incendiary. For when he hath ſo poſitively affirmed the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power, if any Thing had dropp'd from him in the ſame Aſſembly tending to Rebellion, he would have expoſed himſelf to the utmoſt Ridicule.

My Lords, Some Things have been obſerved out of the Preface to his Sermon at St. Paul's: One Expreſſion is that of ſounding a Trumpet. I ſhould not have thought this worth taking notice of, but that ſome of the Gentlemen did lay ſome Streſs on it, as if this were ſounding an Alarm, exciting People to Arms: But I conceive, that the Words out of the Mouth of the Doctor, bear the ſame Senſe as out of the Mouth of the Prophet. But for fear that he ſhould be miſconſtrued, the Doctor explains himſelf by the Words immediately following, and ſhews, that ſuch Prohibition or Reſtraint laid on the Clergy, as are there ſuggeſted, are expreſly contrary to the Command of God. His Words are theſe: We are told by theſe Men, who would ſhut both our Eyes and our Mouths, in order the more effectually to undermine and deſtroy us, that the Pulpit is not a Place for Politicks; and that it is the Buſineſs of a Clergyman to preach Peace, and not ſound a Trumpet in Sion; ſo expreſly contrary to the Command of God, to cry aloud, and ſpare not. So that theſe Words do plainly interpret what the Doctor meant by ſounding a Trumpet.

My Lords, There was another Thing taken notice of from this Preface, and that was the Encouragement he gives to People to Arms and Violence, againſt ſuch as would deſtroy the Church, &c. The Words of the Doctor are theſe: If honeſt Men will ſit ſtill, and give up their Cauſe through want of Courage, or a juſt Senſe of the dangerous Attempts of our Enemies; we may, without the Spirit of Prophecy, foretel what will become of our Conſtitution, when it is ſo vigorouſly attacked from without, and ſo lazily defended from within. This was look'd upon as dividing the People, and exciting them to make Reſiſtance. But if the Gentlemen had look'd a little before, in the ſame Paragraph, they would have found who the Aſſailants he mentions were; and then they would not, I conceive, have blamed the Doctor, for encouraging the People to make a vigorous Defence. The Aſſailants are thoſe that make rebellious Appeals to the People, as the only Judges of Right and Wrong, and the Dernier Reſort of Juſtice and Dominion: Theſe, he ſays, are the faſhionable Methods now made uſe of to undermine the Church and Legiſlature, by breaking in upon the Prerogative of the Crown, by threatning them with imaginary Legions, and a Popular Tribunal, where their Authority is to be tried and determined. To put a ſtop to this Thing, is what he ſays is the Intent of his Diſcourſe. Now if theſe are the Perſons that attack the Conſtitution, that appeal to the People as the only Judges of Right and Wrong, if theſe are the Aſſailants, ſurely the Doctor may encourage the People vigorouſly to defend themſelves againſt them.

My Lords, There was one Thing more taken notice of by the Gentlemen Managers, That the Doctor had given great Offence to the Commons, by an Expreſſion he has made uſe of, by way of Exclamation, in the Cloſe of his Anſwer to the Articles; and that runs thus: Hard is the Lot of the Miniſters of the Goſpel, if when they cite the Word of God in their General Exhortations to Piety and Virtue, or in their Reproofs of Mens Tranſgreſſions, or where they are Lamenting the Difficulties and Conflicts with which the Church of Chriſt, whilſt Militant here on Earth, muſt always ſtruggle; the ſeveral Texts and Paſſages by them cited, ſhall be ſaid to have been by them meant of particular Perſons and Things, and ſhall be conſtrued in the moſt Criminal Senſe, and be made by ſuch Conſtruction one Ground of an Impeachment for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. If this Suppoſition, as the Doctor has put it, be turned into a Poſition, he hopes you will pardon him for his Exclamation. If Generals have not been tied to Particulars, to make up theſe Articles, then the Doctor had no Reaſon to make this Exclamation: But if the Doctor's Sermon hath been ſo treated, in order to frame the Articles againſt him, then he is not blameable for that Expreſſion.

My Lords, The Doctor has never before been charged with Diſloyalty to the Government: He hath always been a Man of that Probity, and of ſo blameleſs a Life and Converſation, that he hath not been ſo much as attack'd on that Account. And when a Man of his Character is brought before your Lordſhips, for a Sermon preach'd in a Publick Congregation, for a Doctrine that is the Doctrine of the Church of England, and for which he has the Authority of ſo many of the Fathers of that Church, as well as of many of her Learned Sons: For him, I ſay, to be brought before your Lordſhips (by an Impeachment) on that Account, ſurely he may be allowed to ſay this: His Lot (at leaſt) is hard, that he ſhould be made the firſt, and ſo ſolemn Example; when he only followed ſo many and great Examples, as have been ſet him from the Beginning of the Reformation down to this Time. And when your Lordſhips conſider the Circumſtances of the Doctor, I hope your Lordſhips will think, that the Defence of this Proſecution, muſt be a ſufficient Puniſhment for any Crimes he is charged with, and of which he can be ſuppoſed guilty: And ſo I ſubmit him, and his Cauſe, to your Lordſhips Juſtice.

Dr. Henchman. MY Lords, In the General Preamble to the Articles of Impeachment, Doctor Sacheverell is ſaid to have preached and publiſhed Two Diſcourſes, with an Intention to defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; and this laſt Article contains ſeveral particular Charges, of a very high Nature, and great Malignity, againſt Her Majeſty's Happy Adminiſtration.

For a General Anſwer to this Article, I muſt beg your Lordſhips Patience, to look back again upon thoſe Paſſages of this Sermon, which I humbly offer'd to your Lordſhips Conſideration under the Third Article, which will ſet the Doctor's Intentions in a clear Light. In one of them, he readily acknowledges the great Bleſſing we at preſent enjoy, by Her Majeſty's happily ſitting on the Throne of Her Anceſtors: And in the other Places, where he mentions Her Majeſty, it is with great Reſpect, and hearty Addreſſes to God, long to preſerve Her on that Throne; and at laſt concludes with this ſolemn Proteſtation; That what he had then ſpoken, proceeded from a good Intention, and tender Concern for Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and a hearty Zeal for the Honour and Safety of our Excellent Church and Conſtitution.

My Lords, Some Regard is to be had to the Declarations of every honeſt Man, in relation to his own Thoughts and Intentions, which are known only to God and his own Conſcience: And certainly, when a Prieſt of the Church of England does, in the Preſence of God, and Face of the Congregation, ſolemnly declare, That what he ſpeaks is with a tender Concern, and hearty Zeal for Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government; no looſe Words, or diſtant and unconnected Expreſſions, ought to be conſtrued to a direct contrary Senſe of ſo expreſs a Declaration. My Lords, The Senſe of theſe Words is plain and obvious to every Man's Underſtanding: But if a Paſſage in the Two and twentieth Page of this Sermon, in it ſelf, and as it ſtands in its proper Connection, (not Criminal,) muſt be conſtrued by what is ſaid in the Fifteenth Page, little relating to the ſame Purpoſes, and both theſe Paſſages explain'd by a Third ſtill farther diſtant; by ſuch a Method, the moſt inoffenſive Diſcourſe may be made blameable, and it will be very difficult to make any Defence.

My Lords, It has been objected by the Learned Managers, That the Doctor choſe an unſeaſonable Time, and an improper Place, to vent his Notions in. But how does it appear, that either the one or the other was of his own Choice? Does it not rather appear, that he was call'd to perform that Duty by the Publick Magiſtrate; and that both the Time and Place were of his Appointment? Or how can it, at this Time, be thought unſeaſonable, to maintain the Doctrine of our Church, when ſuch Swarms of infamous Libels are daily publiſh'd in Oppoſition to it? Or what Place can be more proper for this Purpoſe, than that in which ſuch Libels uſually firſt appear, and moſt prevail? Whether the Doctor performed his Duty, by Preaching that Doctrine there, which the Rubrick of our Liturgy expreſly commands him to teach on that Day, muſt be ſubmitted to your Lordſhips: And certainly it will always be thought proper, on that Day that our Church and State were deliver'd from a moſt horrid Conſpiracy, to preach againſt the Sin of Rebellion: Upon that Day that the whole Nation was deliver'd from a Popiſh Conſpiracy, it will always be proper to ſhew, that Reſiſtance of the Higher Powers is the Doctrine of Papiſts, and firſt proceeded from them. It is well known to your Lordſhips, what the General Duty of Miniſters obliges them to; but upon State-Days, when they are commanded by Supreme Authority, and directed by the Rubrick, what Subject to treat of; it would be Contempt in them not to obey the Commands of their Superiors, or not to inſiſt upon that Doctrine which they are peculiarly ordered to explain. And I humbly apprehend, that thoſe Reverend Prelates, ſome of whoſe Expreſſions were lately read to your Lordſhips, would not have received the Thanks of this Honourable Houſe, if they had not adapted their Diſcourſes to the Solemnity of that Day, which they then celebrated.

My Lords, Upon a general View of this and the other Articles, the whole Charge will appear to be ſupported, not by any one plain Propoſition, but by Inferences and ſuppos'd Conſtructions. It has been my Endeavour, under every Article, to lay before your Lordſhips one or more clear Paſſages of this Sermon, which ſufficiently declare the Author's Intention tention as to that Article; and I muſt leave it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, how far an Inſinuation or Inference will be outweigh'd by an expreſs Declaration. If there are any Words in this Diſcourſe which ſeem to bear a doubtful Meaning, your Lordſhips will in all Caſes incline to the moſt favourable Side; and in this Particular, the Character and Function of a Miniſter will deſerve ſome more than ordinary Allowance. My Lords, It is a known Rule in the Roman Law, In ambiguis orationibus maxime ſententia ſpectanda eſt ejus qui eas protuliſſet. Where-ever Words are capable of a double Conſtruction, there the Intention of the Speaker is chiefly to be look'd after, and attended to. Every Man has a Right to explain his own Intentions; and the darker and more obſcure Expreſſions of his Diſcourſe muſt be conſtrued by thoſe Paſſages which are more plain and explicit. This is a Rule in all Civil and common Caſes between Man and Man; but in Criminal Caſes, there that Law exacts a ſtricter and a nicer Proof: Where-ever the Life or Liberty of a Citizen is concern'd, there the Proofs ought to be Luce meridianâ clariora, as evident as the Sun at Noon-day, and ſuch as will convince every one at firſt Sight.

My Lords, I mention theſe Maxims of the Roman Law only as they are agreeable to the common Senſe and Underſtanding of Mankind, as Rules of Reaſon and Equity, which your Lordſhips have always govern'd your ſelves by, and always will. The laſt of 'em I mention with the greater Confidence, becauſe I find it has once already received the Sanction of this Honourable Houſe, in Sir Samuel Bernardiſton's Caſe; in which it is declared, That Innuendo's or ſuppos'd Conſtructions ought not to be allowed; for all Accuſations ſhould be plain, and the Crimes aſcertain'd. This, my Lords, has once been the Reſolution of this Honourable Houſe, and we humbly hope your Lordſhips will not depart from a Precedent ſo well eſtabliſhed. My Lords, one Part of this laſt Article is, That the Doctor has wreſted ſeveral Texts of Scripture to ſeditious Purpoſes; but it has not yet appeared that he ever harboured one ſeditious Thought: Whether he has perverted any Texts of Scripture will be beſt explain'd by himſelf, when your Lordſhips ſhall be pleaſed to hear him.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We deſire to read two or three Proclamations: The Firſt is to direct the Magiſtrates to put the Laws in Execution againſt Prophaneneſs and Immorality; and that not being duly obſerved, the Second Proclamation takes notice thereof, and directs the Magiſtrates to put the ſame in Execution: And there are Two ſubſequent Proclamations to the ſame Purpoſe.

'WHereas by an Act of Parliament made in 'the Third Year of the Reign of King 'Edward the Firſt, It is Enacted, That none be ſo 'hardy to tell or publiſh any falſe News or Tales, 'whereby Diſcord, or Occaſion of Diſcord or Slan'der may grow between the King and his People, 'or the great Men of the Realm; and that he that 'doth ſo, ſhall be taken and kept in Priſon until 'he hath brought him into Court which was firſt 'Author of the Tale. And by another Act made 'in the Second Year of the Reign of King Richard 'the Second, it is declared, That the deviſing, 'ſpeaking and telling ſuch falſe News and Tales, 'was likely to occaſion great Peril and Miſchief to, 'and the quick Subverſion and Deſtruction of this 'Realm: For the preventing whereof, it is thereby 'Enacted, That none be ſo hardy to deviſe, ſpeak 'or tell any falſe News, Lies, or other falſe Things, 'of Prelates, Noblemen, and Officers of the Crown, 'therein named, whereof Diſcord, or any Slander, 'might ariſe within this Realm, under the Pain or'dained by the ſaid Statute of King Edward the 'Firſt. And by another Act made in the Twelfth 'Year of the Reign of the ſaid King Richard the 'Second, it is Enacted, That when any ſuch ſhall 'be taken and impriſoned, and cannot find him by 'whom the Speech be moved, that he ſhall be 'puniſhed for ſuch his Offence. By the Queen, a Proclamation for the Encouragement of Piety and Virtue, and for the Preventing and Puniſhing of Vice, Prophaneneſs and Immorality.

ANNE R.

'WHereas on our Acceſſion to the Throne, we 'thought fit, by the Advice of our Privy-
'Council, to Iſſue out our Royal Proclamation for 'the Encouragement of Piety and Virtue, and for
'the Preventing and Puniſhing of Vice, Prophane-
'neſs and Immorality. And whereas we have been 'informed, That our Laws mentioned in the ſaid
'Proclamation have not been executed according to
'our juſt Expectation and Commands: We moſt ſe-
'rioufly and religiouſly conſidering, That it is an 'indiſpenſible Duty on us, to be careful, above all
'other things, to preſerve and advance the Honour
'and Service of Almighty God, and to diſcourage
'and ſuppreſs all Vice, Prophaneneſs, Debauchery
'and Immorality, which are ſo highly diſpleaſing
'to God, ſo great a Reproach to our Religion and 'Government, and (by Means of the frequent ill
'Examples of the Practicers thereof) have ſo fatal
'a Tendency to the Corruption of many of our 'loving Subjects, otherwiſe religiouſly and virtu-
'ouſly diſpoſed, and which (if not timely reme-
'died) may juſtly draw down the Divine Vengeance
'on us and our Kingdoms: We alſo humbly ac-
'knowledging, That we cannot expect the Bleſſing
'and Goodneſs of Almighty God, (by whom Kings
'and Queens reign, and on which we entirely rely)
'to make our Reign happy and proſperous to our
'ſelf and our People, nor hope for the Divine Aſſi-
'ſtance to deliver us from the great and imminent
'Dangers which our Kingdoms, and the true Pro-
'teſtant Religion eſtabliſhed among us, are in this
'preſent Juncture threatned with, without a religi'ous Obſervance of God's Holy Laws. To the In'tent therefore that Religion, Piety, and good 'Manners may (according to our moſt hearty De-
'ſire) flouriſh and increaſe under our Adminiſtra-
'tion and Government; We have thought fit (by 'the Advice of our Privy-Council) to iſſue this our 'Royal Proclamation; and do hereby declare our
'Royal Purpoſe and Reſolution to diſcountenance
'and puniſh all manner of Vice, Prophaneneſs and 'Immorality in all Perſons, of whatſoever Degree
'or Quality, within this our Realm; and particu'larly in ſuch as are employed near our Royal Per-
'ſon: And that for the greater Encouragement of 'Religion and Morality, we will, upon all Occaſi-
'ons, diſtinguiſh Perſons of Piety and Virtue by 'Marks of our Royal Favour. And we do expect
'and require, That all Perſons of Honour, or in 'Place of Authority, will give good Example by 'their own Virtue and Piety, and to their utmoſt
'contribute to the diſcountenancing Perſons of diſ-
'ſolute and debauched Lives; that they being by
'that Means reduced to Shame and Contempt, for 'their looſe and evil Actions and Behaviour, may 'be thereby alſo enforced the ſooner to reform their
'ill Habits and Practices; and that the viſible Diſ-
'pleaſure of good Men towards them, may (as far 'as it is poſſible) ſupply what the Laws (probably)
'cannot altogether prevent. And we do hereby
'ſtrictly enjoin and prohibit all our loving Subjects,
'of what Degree or Quality ſoever, from playing
'on the Lord's Day at Dice, Cards, or any other
'Game whatſoever, either in publick or private 'Houſes, or other Place or Places whatſoever; and
'do hereby require and command them, and every
'of them, decently and reverently to attend the 'Worſhip of God on every Lord's Day, on Pain
'of our higheſt Diſpleaſure, and of being proceed-
'ed againſt with the utmoſt Rigor that may be by 'Law. And for the more effectual reforming of 'all ſuch Perſons, who by Reaſon of their diſſolute
'Lives and Converſations are a Scandal to our King'dom; our further Pleaſure is, and we do hereby
'ſtrictly charge and command all our Judges,
'Mayors, Sheriffs, Juſtices of the Peace, and all
'other our Officers and Miniſters, both Eccleſiaſtical
'and Civil, and all other our Subjects, whom it
'may concern, to be very vigilant and ſtrict in the 'Diſcovery, and the effectual Proſecution and Pu-
'niſhment of all Perſons who ſhall be guilty of ex-
'ceſſive Drinking, Blaſphemy, prophane Swearing
'and Curſing, Lewdneſs, Prophanation of the 'Lord's Day, or other diſſolute, immoral or diſor-
'derly Practices; and that they take care alſo effe-
'ctually to ſuppreſs all Bawdy-Houſes, publick Ga-
'ming-Houſes and Places, and other diſorderly
'Houſes; and to put in Execution the Statute made 'in the Nine and Twentieth Year of the Reign of 'our late Royal Uncle King Charles the Second, En'titled, An Act for the better Obſervation of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday; and alſo an 'Act of Parliament made in the Ninth Year of the 'Reign of our late dear Brother King William the 'Third, Entitled, An Act for the more effectual ſuppreſſing of Blaſphemy and Prophaneneſs; and all 'other Laws now in Force for the puniſhing and
'ſuppreſſing any of the Vices aforeſaid; and alſo
'to ſuppreſs and prevent all Gaming whatſoever,
'in publick or private Houſes on the Lord's Day;
'and likewiſe that they take effectual Care to pre'vent all Perſons keeping Taverns, Chocolate-
'Houſes, Coffee-Houſes, or other Publick Houſes
'whatſoever, from ſelling Wine, Chocolate, Coffee,
'Ale, Beer, or other Liquors, or receiving or per'mitting Gueſts to be or remain in ſuch their 'Houſes on the Lord's Day, (except in Caſe of 'Neceſſity and Charity) as they will anſwer it to 'Almighty God, and upon Pain of our higheſt
'Diſpleaſure. And for the more effectual Proceed-
'ing herein, we do hereby direct and command all
'our Judges of Aſſize and Juſtices of the Peace, to 'give ſtrict Charges at their reſpective Aſſizes and
'Seſſions, for the due Proſecution and Puniſhment
'of all Perſons that ſhall preſume to offend in

'Aſſizes and Quarter-Seſſions of the Peace, cauſe this our Proclamation to be publickly read in open 'Court immediately before the Charge is given. 'And we do hereby further charge and command 'every Miniſter in his reſpective Pariſh-Church or 'Chapel, to read or cauſe to be read this our Pro'clamation, at leaſt Four Times in every Year, 'immediately after Divine Service, and to incite 'and ſtir up their reſpective Auditories to the Pra'ctice of Piety and Virtue, and avoiding of all Im'morality and Prophaneneſs. And to the End that all 'Vice and Debauchery may be prevented, and Re'ligion and Virtue practiſed by all Officers, private 'Soldiers, Mariners, and others, who are employ'ed in our Service by Sea or Land; We do hereby 'ſtrictly charge and command all our Commanders 'and Officers whatſoever, That they do take care 'to avoid all Prophaneneſs, Debauchery, and other 'Immoralities; and that by their own good and 'virtuous Lives and Converſations, they do ſet good 'Examples to all ſuch as are under their Care and 'Authority; and likewiſe take care of and inſpect 'the Behaviour of all ſuch as are under them, and 'to puniſh all thoſe who ſhall be guilty of any the 'Offences aforeſaid, as they will be anſwerable for 'the ill Conſequences of their Neglect herein.

GOD ſave the QUEEN.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, There are two ſubſequent Proclamations preſſing Magiſtrates to put the Laws in Execution in this Caſe; but they are to the ſame Purpoſe, therefore I think we need not ſpend your Lordſhips Time to read them: They are to the ſame Purpoſe with the laſt, taking notice that the Magiſtrates had not done their Duty as required.

My Lords, We have now done our Defence; only we have one Petition to make, That your Lordſhips would be pleaſed to hear the Doctor ſpeak for himſelf: There are ſome things more proper for him to give an Account of, than for his Council. We apprehend the moſt proper Time will be after the Gentlemen Managers for the Houſe of Commons have replied; but we thought it proper to mention it to your Lordſhips now, and humbly ſubmit it to your Lordſhips.

Mr. Phipps. My Lords, The Reaſon why we troubled your Lordſhips with reading thoſe Proclamations, was to ſhew your Lordſhips, that the inferior Magiſtrates being negligent of their Duty in putting the Laws in Execution againſt Prophaneneſs, her Majeſty put out another Proclamation to quicken them to it; therefore when the Doctor charges the Magiſtrates with a Neglect of their Duty, it cannot be underſtood to be a Reflection on the Queen or the Miniſtry, becauſe you ſee what great Care her Majeſty has taken: So that we think this laſt Article is ſufficiently clear'd by theſe Proclamations. One thing, my Lords, I think we have not troubled your Lordſhips with, and that is the Journal of your own Houſe in the Caſe of Sir Samuel Barnardiſton: If the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons think it is otherwiſe, we are ready to read it.

Sir Joſeph Jekyll. My Lords, I have the Commands of the Gentlemen employed in this Service with me, to mention to your Lordſhips, that they are under a great Surprize, that the Council for the Doctor ſhould take upon them to propoſe to your Lordſhips, that the Doctor might ſpeak after the Commons Reply: I have Inſtructions (ſince the Doctor's Council have referr'd ſome Part of the Defence to himſelf) to tell the Doctor, that if he has any thing to ſay for himſelf, now is his Time, before the Commons reply; the Commons claiming it as their Right to ſpeak laſt.

Mr. Dodd. My Lords, We ſubmit to it. Doctor, go on.

Dr. Sacheverell. MY Lords, The Defence made by my Council has been ſo full and particular, and the Tryal it ſelf drawn out into ſo great a Length, that I ſhould not add to your Lordſhips Trouble by ſaying any thing for my Self, did I not think that in ſuch a Cauſe as this, (wherein the Doctrine of our Church, the Dignity of that Holy Order to which I belong, and even the Common Intereſt of Chriſtianity it ſelf, are ſo nearly concern'd) it becomes me not to be altogether ſilent.

For, my Lords, it has been own'd by ſome of the Managers for the Honourable Houſe of Commons, that tho' I am the Perſon Impeach'd, yet my Condemnation is not the Thing principally aim'd at. I am, it ſeems, an inſignificant Tool of a Party, not worth regarding; the avow'd Deſign of my Impeachment is, by the means of it to procure an Eternal and Indelible Brand of Infamy to be fix'd, in a Parliamentary Way, on all thoſe who maintain the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, and to have the Clergy directed what Doctrines they are to Preach, and what not. And therefore, as Inſignificant as I am in my Self, yet the Conſequences of my Tryal (if rightly repreſented to your Lordſhips by ſome of thoſe Gentlemen) are of the higheſt Moment and Importance.

Since I am the unfortunate Occaſion of bringing theſe Matters in Judgment before your Lordſhips, it will behove me, I think, after what has been pleaded in my Behalf by my Council learned in the Law, to ſay ſomewhat alſo for my Self, in order to clear the Innocence of my Intentions, and remove that Load of Guilt and Infamy, which may be laid upon me, ſhould your Lordſhips determine, (as, I truſt in God, you will not) that the Articles of Impeachment Exhibited, have been made good againſt me.

With your Lordſhips Permiſſion then, I ſhall lay before you ſome few General Remarks, which in my humble Opinion may be added to what my Council have already obſerv'd, concerning the Methods taken by the Managers for the Honourable Houſe of Commons, to Prove and Support the Articles of their Charge. And ſhall then, with your Lordſhips leave, ſay ſomewhat ſeverally to the Articles themſelves, which may ſerve to remind your Lordſhips of what my Council before offer'd more at large, and with greater Advantage.

My Lords, The Charge brought againſt me in theſe Articles is of a very High, and Heinous Nature; and had it been as clearly made out, as it has been ſtrongly affirm'd, it would juſtly have expos'd me to a very ſevere Sentence. But the more heinous the Charge is, the more evident and undeniable, I ſhould think, the Proof ought to be. And how, my Lords, has this Charge been ſupported in the ſeveral Articles of it? By plain, direct, and expreſs Paſſages produc'd, and read to your Lordſhips out of my Sermons; or by Intendments, unneceſſary Implications, and ſtrain'd Conſtructions? By laying entire Sentences before your Lordſhips, and relying upon what was manifeſtly contain'd in them; or by piecing broken Sentences, and conjoining diſtant and independent Paſſages, in order to make me Speak, what I never thought of?

I am

I am unacquainted, my Lords, with the Methods of legal Proof, and little thought I ſhould have had this Occaſion of enquiring into them. But, as far as I am able to comprehend any Thing of this Nature, I ſhould think, that there cannot be a clearer Indication that I am not guilty of having aſſerted what I am charg'd by the ſeveral Articles to have ſaid, than that ſo many Hours Learning and Eloquence have been employ'd in proving me to have ſaid it. Had I really affirm'd thoſe Propoſitions for which I am accus'd, my Sermons being before your Lordſhips, the Places wherein ſuch Propoſitions were directly contain'd, might have been referr'd to, and read, with the ſame Eaſe as my Council referr'd to the Paſſages contain'd in the ſeveral Writings, and Sermons of the Reverend Fathers, and other Eminent Divines of our Church, wherein they Taught the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance in the ſame Extent as I maintain'd it, or in Terms much ſtronger.

Theſe Paſſages produc'd by my Council, were barely Read to your Lordſhips: No Argument, no Colours were us'd, becauſe none were neceſſary, to prove what Propoſitions were laid down in thoſe Paſſages. Whereas, to prove me guilty of having aſſerted what is laid to my Charge, after my Sermons and Prefaces were read to your Lordſhips, much Art and Induſtry were us'd to perſuade your Lordſhips, that ſuch Aſſertions were really contain'd in them.

My Lords, When my Words were capable of Two Senſes, the worſt and moſt invidious, though at the ſame Time the moſt ſtrain'd and unnatural Conſtruction, has been always made of them. Nay, when my Words were ſo plain and expreſs, that it was impoſſible to put any criminal Gloſſes or Colours upon them, I have been accus'd of meaning the direct contrary to what I have ſaid: And when I preſs'd the Duty of Allegiance to the Queen, your Lordſhips were told, that it was moſt certain, I meant the Pretender.

To Aggravate my Guilt, I have been accus'd not only for what I am ſuppos'd to have ſaid, but for what I am allow'd not to have ſaid: Not only for what I have taken notice of in my Sermons, but for what I have paſs'd by unobſerv'd: I have been charg'd with Negative Crimes; as if what I omitted to ſay, had been omitted with Deſign, and my Silence it ſelf were Criminal.

Theſe, my Lords, are the Methods, that have been made uſe of to prove me guilty of Crimes, which if prov'd, might affect my Liberty and Fortune; no favourable Allowances have been made to a Miniſter of the Goſpel, diſcharging the Duty of his Function, and rebuking Vice and Irreligion with an honeſt and well-meant Zeal, but ſometimes perhaps carrying him into Expreſſions too open, and unguarded. I could add, my Lords, if ſuch a Complaint might not be thought improper from one in my Circumſtances, that, in the courſe of my Accuſation, I have been ſtil'd a Criminal, and treated as ſuch by ſome of theſe Honourable Gentlemen, with a Degree of Scorn and Indignity, from which I hop'd my Sacred Profeſſion, my preſent unhappy Condition, and a Regard to this Solemn and Awful Judicature might have ſcreen'd me.

But, my Lords, I lay aſide all Complaints of this Nature, and with your Lordſhips Leave ſhall proceed to make ſome few, ſhort Obſervations upon the ſeveral Branches of the Charge Exhibited againſt me.

I am charg'd, my Lords, in the firſt Article, with having Maintain'd, That the neceſſary Means, us'd to bring about the late Happy Revolution, were Odious and Unjuſtifiable; in Proof of which it has been urg'd, that I have in General Terms aſſerted, the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power upon any Pretence whatſoever. My Lords, the Reſiſtance in that Paſſage by me condemn'd, is no where by me applied to the Revolution; nor is it applicable to the Caſe of the Revolution, the Supreme Power not being then reſiſted.

My Lords, I neither expreſly apply'd my Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance to the Caſe of the Revolution, nor had I the leaſt Thoughts of including the Revolution under my general Aſſertion. I expreſs'd this Doctrine in the ſame general Terms, in which I found it deliver'd by the Apoſtles of Chriſt. I taught it as I had learnt it, from the Homilies of our Church, and as I was enjoin'd to teach it, by the Articles of our Religion. I us'd no other Language, than what had been us'd by our firſt Reformers, by a continued Series of Right Reverend Prelates, and other Celebrated Divines now with God, and by many of thoſe Venerable Fathers, before whom I ſtand, and what is perfectly agreeable to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm. I had little Reaſon to apprehend that I could ever have been accus'd by the Gentlemen of the Houſe of Commons to your Lordſhips as a Criminal, or as an Aſperſer of the Memory of the late King, for preaching this Doctrine; when others, who preach'd the ſame Doctrine, in the ſame Terms, before their late Majeſties, before our preſent Gracious Sovereign, (whom I pray God long to Preſerve!) before each Houſe of Parliament, before this very Houſe of Commons, have met with publick Approbation: But ſince it is my ſingular Misfortune to be Accus'd, for what others have receiv'd Thanks, in ſome Inſtances convey'd to them by ſeveral of the Managers themſelves, I do with all humble Confidence rely upon your Lordſhips Juſtice; not doubting but that the Learned Judges, if thought neceſſary to be conſulted, will declare, what I have in this Caſe aſſerted, to be warranted by Law, and the Right Reverend the Biſhops will affirm it to be the Doctrine of the Goſpel.

The Doctrine I preach'd being the Doctrine of the Homilies of our Church, not expreſs'd only in a few particular Paſſages of thoſe Homilies, but perfectly agreeable to the whole Tenor, the main Scope and Deſign of them; and thoſe Homilies being eſtabliſhed by the Thirty Nine Articles, as containing godly and wholeſome Doctrine; and thoſe Articles being confirm'd by the 13th of Queen Elizabeth; and that Statute being made Perpetual and Fundamental to our Conſtitution by the late Act of Union; I leave it to your Lordſhips to conſider, how far the Condemnation of me, on the Account of that Doctrine, may affect, and ſhake the preſent Frame of the Britiſh Conſtitution, in Church and State, and tend to diſſolve the Union of the Two Kingdoms.

My Lords, Upon the ſecond Article, I would humbly pray your Lordſhips to conſider, that I have no where in my Sermon ſhewn any the leaſt Diſlike of the Indulgence granted by Law to Diſſenters; that, on the contrary, I have declar'd my Approbation of it in the moſt expreſs Terms imaginable, which I beg leave once more to repeat to your Lordſhips out of my Sermon preach'd at St. Paul's. I would not (I there ſay) be miſunderſtood, as as if I intended to caſt the leaſt invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence which the Government hath condeſcended to give them; which I am ſure, all thoſe, who wiſh well to our Church, are ready to grant to Conſciences truly Scrupulous; let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law hath preſcrib'd.

My Lords, This then was, and ſtill is my ſincere Opinion; nor am I conſcious that I have uttered one Word inconſiſtent with it. I have indeed blam'd, and perhaps with ſome Warmth and Earneſtneſs blam'd, the Abuſes, which Men of no Conſcience, have made, of the Legal Exemption, granted to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous: Nor could I think that thoſe Reprehenſions of mine, would have drawn upon me the Diſpleaſure of any ſincere Chriſtian, which were levell'd againſt Hypocrites, Socinians, Deiſts, and ſuch as, under the Umbrage of that Act, which permits Proteſtant Diſſenters, and thoſe only, to ſerve God, every Man in his own Way, think themſelves a Liberty to be of no Proteſtant Congregation, of no Religion at all. I will farther ingenuouſly own to your Lordſhips, that I had in my Eye ſome Abuſes made of that Act by the Diſſenters themſelves; who, I am told, do (both Paſtors and People) rarely obſerve the Qualifications preſcrib'd by that Act; and who erect Seminaries for educating Youth in Principles oppoſite to the Doctrine, Diſcipline, and Worſhip of our Church: Whereas that Act, was intended for the Eaſe of thoſe, whoſe Minds through the unhappy Prejudices of Education, were already eſtranged from the Church; not, as I humbly conceive, to indulge Men in taking the moſt effectual Methods to Propagate and Perpetuate their Schiſm.

My Lords, Of any Favours to Diſſenters granted, or intended by the Law, I have no where complain'd. Of Toleration, a Word unknown to our Laws, and implying, as I am inform'd, much more than our Lawgivers deſign'd, if I have ſaid any Thing Offenſive, I may, I hope, reaſonably preſume, that it will not be judg'd by your Lordſhips in any wiſe to reflect on that Act of Exemption, which I have ſpoken of in Terms, no ways, I think, misbecoming a good Subject, or betraying any want of Chriſtian Moderation. Nor is there, my Lords, any want of it, I conceive, in affirming that this Act, which relieves ſome Diſſenters from legal Puniſhments, to which they were before obnoxious, hath not any ways alter'd the Nature of Schiſm, or extinguiſh'd the Obligations to Church-Communion; which is an Evangelical Duty, incumbent on all Chriſtians, by the Rules of the Goſpel, Antecedent to all Secular Laws, and can by no human Power be Diſpens'd with. If the Church of England, my Lords, impoſes no unlawful Terms of Communion, as She certainly does not, then all Separatiſts from her Communion, will, notwithſtanding the Indulgence, continue to be Guilty of Schiſm; The Conſequence of which Guilt, may ſtill reſt upon their Souls, however it may ceaſe to Affect their Bodies or Eſtates. For as no human Law can render that Lawful which God hath forbidden, ſo neither can it make that Void, which God hath commanded.

My Lords, I am accus'd, under this Head, of maintaining, that it is the Duty of Superior Paſtors to Thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration; I hope, it hath evidently appear'd to your Lordſhips, that I advance no ſuch Poſition. Sure I am, that my Words do not in themſelves carry ſuch a Meaning, nor does the Connexion of my Diſcourſe require that Senſe, or eaſily admit it. Schiſmaticks, my Lords, are not the only Perſons againſt whom Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures may be denounced; the Works of Darkneſs, which I referr'd to, as fit to be reprov'd, in that Part of my Sermon, where I ſpeak of theſe Cenſures, are of the ſame Kind with thoſe mentioned by the Apoſtle, whoſe Words I produc'd, all lewd and immoral Practices; againſt theſe, my Lords, and againſt Hereſies, and Blaſphemies (a black Catalogue of which has been diſplay'd before your Lordſhips) I thought the Anathema's of the Church would be well employ'd; ſuch Anathema's, I doubt not, my Lords, would be ratified in Heaven, and would therefore, by any Power on Earth, be irreverſible.

As to Archbiſhop Grindal, though I may ſeem to have us'd ſome undue Aſperity of Expreſſion concerning him, yet I charg'd him with nothing but what I had good Grounds for, from our Hiſtorians: It hath been made appear to your Lordſhips, that, on the Account of his Remiſſneſs in Church-Government, he liv'd and dy'd under the High Diſpleaſure of Queen Elizabeth; and whether therefore he, or that glorious Queen, ſhall bear the Blame of his Diſgrace and Sufferings, is with all Humility ſubmitted to your Lordſhips.

I hope, my Lords, I ſtand clear in your Opinions, of the Charge advanc'd againſt me, in the two firſt Articles; and as my own Conſcience acquits, ſo I truſt your Lordſhips will acquit me, of whatever is laid to my Charge in the Third.

My Lords, I neither have ſuggeſted, nor do in my Conſcience believe, that the Church is in the leaſt Peril or Adverſity from Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration. So far am I from any ſuch Thoughts, that I am entirely ſatisfied of Her being a moſt affectionate Nurſing-Mother to it. But I hope I may ſay without Offence, that the Church may be in Peril from other Cauſes, without any Reflection upon Her Majeſty's Government, or any Contradiction to Her Royal Proclamation, and the Reſolution of both Houſes of Parliament, four Years ago. If the Church be in Danger, when the Chriſtian Religion is evidently ſo, I hope it will be thought no Crime to ſay, it has ſcarce ever been in greater Danger than it is now, ſince Chriſt had a Church upon Earth. For beſides that Deluge of Prophaneneſs and Immorality, which overſpreads the whole Kingdom; beſides the Variety, and growing Strength of thoſe Schiſms which weaken and divide us, and of thoſe Heterodox Opinions, and damnable Hereſies, which are daily publiſh'd and propagated among us; I verily believe, that never were the Miniſters of Chriſt ſo abus'd and viliſy'd, never was the divine Authority of the Holy Scriptures ſo arraign'd and ridicul'd, never were Infidelity and Atheiſm it ſelf ſo Impudent and Bareface'd, never were ſuch horrid Blaſphemies printed in any Chriſtian State, from the Foundation of Chriſtianity to this Day.

Out of the many Inſtances of this Kind, which, being ready at hand, I could have produc'd to your Lordſhips, I have Selected a few only; but thoſe ſuch, as I am perſuaded your Lordſhips could not hear without Horror and Aſtoniſhment. Pardon me, my Lords, if my Apprehenſion of the ſad Conſequences we may expect from ſuch crying Abominations, have forc'd from me ſome Expreſſions, which upon a leſs Occaſion might ſeem too harſh and vehement. A Man that dreads no Danger from ſuch unparallel'd Iniquities, that do as it were call down God's ſevereſt Judgments upon that poor Church and Nation, wherein they are openly and daringly committed, muſt be dead in his Love for his Coun- trey and Religion. If I have diſclos'd ſuch a frightful and deteſtable Scene of Impiety, which by reaſon of your Lordſhips high Stations and great Employments, might poſſibly lie undiſcover'd to your Sight before; I ſhall think my ſelf happy, whatever ſhall befal me, if I may by God's Grace become the mean Inſtrument, of putting a Stop to that overflowing of Ungodlineſs and Blaſphemy, which as yet no Laws, no Proclamations, how well ſoever deſign'd, and how often ſoever repeated, have been able to reſtrain.

Nor ought I, my Lords, to forget, tho' it was forgotten by the honourable Managers, another Ground of Danger ariſing to this Church from the Attempts of Popiſh Emiſſaries, by me mention'd, I hope without the leaſt Offence, in my Sermon at St. Paul's; where I ſay, It were highly to be wiſh'd that thoſe excellent Laws, made for the Defence and Security of the Church, were at preſent put ſtrictly in Execution; for the Roman Catholick Agents, and Miſſionaries, that ſwarm about this great City, as 'twere in Defiance and Contempt of them, were never more buſy in making Proſelytes to their Superſtition and Idolatry, and perverting and debauching Her Majeſty's Subjects in every Corner of our Streets. I have not, my Lords, been called upon to prove the Truth of this Paſſage, nor has it been reckon'd among the falſe Inſinuations I have made that the Church is in Danger. I pray God, the Church may be in no Danger, upon any of theſe Accounts! Her Majeſty, your Lordſhips, and the Commons, have indeed provided againſt theſe Dangers by wholeſome Laws, and I hope, I did not exceed the Limits of my Function, when, being call'd to Preach before Magiſtrates, I exhorted them to prevent theſe Dangers, by putting thoſe Laws ſtrictly in Execution.

Juſt had been the Indignation of the Honourable Houſe of Commons, Juſt would be your Lordſhips moſt ſevere Reſentments, if by any Parallel by me drawn, I had inſinuated that the Members of both Houſes, who paſs'd the Vote concerning the ſafe and flouriſhing Condition of the Church, had been then conſpiring its Ruin. I have already purg'd my ſelf from this Imputation, by obſerving, that the Parallel, aſcrib'd to me, implies, that they who Voted King Charles the Firſt to be out of Danger, and thoſe who Conſpir'd his Death, were the very ſame Perſons, whereas it is certain they were not; for, my Lords, the Vote about the King's Safety was paſs'd by Lords and Commons an Year and half before his execrable Murther, which had been contriv'd by the Army, and was perpetrated by a pretended Ordinance of a ſmall Remnant of the Houſe of Commons (not a tenth Part of the whole) after the reſt of the Members had been Impriſon'd or Secluded, and without the Concurrence of the Houſe of Peers, who totally rejected it. You have had, my Lords, a very different Repreſentation of this Fact made by one of the Learned Managers: But this, my Lords, is the real Truth, as recited in the Act of Parliament for the Attainder of the King's Murtherers; and is an Evidence, that I could not poſſibly mean by any odious Parallel to inſinuate, that the Members of both Houſes, who paſs'd the Vote concerning the Safety of the Church, were then conſpiring its Ruin.

I humbly crave your Lordſhips Patience yet a little farther, whilſt I ſpeak to what is alledg'd in the Fourth Article, which charges me with many Crimes of a very high and flagrant Nature; none of which have been endeavour'd to be prov'd upon me, otherwiſe than from ſuppos'd Suggeſtions, and undetermined Expreſſions; and I muſt ſtill, with your Lordſhips Leave, humbly inſiſt upon it, that where the Expreſſions are doubtful, there the favourable Senſe, is always to be preferr'd.

After all that has been ſaid by the Learned Managers for the Commons, What Miniſter of State, I beſeech your Lordſhips, have I been prov'd to Reflect upon, directly or indirectly? Where, and how do I, by any Suggeſtion, charge Her Majeſty, or thoſe in Authority under Her, with a general Male-Adminiſtration? How do I perſuade Her Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Parties and Factions, while I reprove thoſe who divide us by knaviſh Diſtinctions, and while I perſuade my Fellow-Subjects to loſe and forget them? How is it poſſible, I ſhould ſtir up the People to Arms and Violence, when I am endeavouring to convince them of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever? Theſe Things, my Lords, ſeem to be Inconſiſtent, unleſs a Man may be thought a Rebel for Recommending Loyalty, or Seditious for preaching againſt Sedition.

I remember, indeed, at the Opening of this Charge againſt me, that one of the Managers for the Houſe of Commons, vouchſaf'd to offer his charitable Aſſiſtance towards Reconciling this ſeeming Inconſiſtency; for he was pleaſed to ſuppoſe that, when I ſpake againſt reſiſting the Sovereign, I had not our gracious Queen, but ſome other Perſon in view; and that I might therefore agreeably to my Principles of Non-Reſiſtance, ſtir up the People to Arms and Violence againſt Her ſacred Majeſty. Your Lordſhips will once more pardon my Earneſtneſs, if I call God to witneſs, that I utterly deteſt any ſuch traiterous Intention; and I ſhould in my own Opinion be unworthy of the Name of a Chriſtian, if I could give my ſelf leave to caſt ſuch a black, and groundleſs Imputation upon any one in like Circumſtances with mine, who had given all poſſible Evidences of his Duty and Affection to the preſent Government. My Lords, I have taken the Oaths of Allegiance to Her Majeſty, and that of Abjuration againſt the Pretender: and when therefore I preach'd the Doctrine of Non Reſiſtance, it is moſt apparent, that the Government, which I perſuaded my Fellow-Subjects not to Reſiſt, is the preſent Government; and I humbly conceive, that the preſent Government can never be Overturn'd, if it be never Reſiſted.

How true a Zeal and Affection I have always born to her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, I leave to be judg'd by your Lordſhips, and the whole World, from thoſe publick Demonſtrations which I have given of it, at all Times, when I had occaſion to make mention of either. I hope your Lordſhips will pardon me, if I refer to ſome of my own printed Expreſſions, as an evident Proof of my unfeigned Duty and Allegiance. "If, to call it the "moſt ineſtimable Bleſſing this Nation could en- "joy, that Her Majeſty, the good and pious Relict "of the Royal Family, ſits now happily upon the "Throne of Her Anceſtors; If to Pray, that God "may long preſerve Her for the Comfort and Sup- "port of the Church, as the only Security, under "God, it has to depend upon; If, earneſtly to con- "tend for the Safety, Rights, and Eſtabliſhment of "Her Majeſty, together with thoſe of the Church; "If, to vindicate Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown "againſt the Uſurpations, Pretences, and Encroach- "ments of Her Adverſaries, and to aſſert Her "Right to the Throne to have been ſo clear, mani- "feſt, and undoubted, that even Her worſt Ene- "mies (could ſuch a pious Princeſs be ſuppos'd to "have

My Lords, I have always thought it my Duty, upon all publick Occaſions, to Aſſert theſe Principles of Loyalty and Subjection to the Supreme Power, whenever I had a proper Call ſo to do; of this there are numberleſs Witneſſes in thoſe ſeveral Places to which I have belong'd. One of theſe I beg leave of your Lordſhips particularly to mention, Magdalen College in Oxford, whereof I am at preſent an unworthy Member; and which by the known Sufferings of the whole Body for the Church and Conſtitution, contributed as much towards the late happy Revolution as any Society in the Kingdom: To which Honourable Society I humbly appeal for my Character and Behaviour. I could alſo appeal for the ſame to a Right Reverend Lord, that now ſits on the Bench of Biſhops.

Had it been fit to have troubled your Lordſhips with Evidences of my hearty Affection to the preſent Government, I could have produced them in great Abundance, from the Perſons with whom I have Convers'd, from the Gentlemen whom I have Bred up, and from the Congregations to which I have Preach'd. If my Principles had any Tendency towards Alienating the Affections of Her Majeſty's Subjects, ſurely ſome one Inſtance of my Diſloyalty to the QUEEN, ſome favourable Expreſſions toward the Pretender, ſome Indications of my Diſlike to the preſent Settlement, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, might have been pitch'd upon, and expos'd to your Lordſhips, in order to juſtifie the Charge of Sedition againſt me. But I cannot but with Pleaſure obſerve to your Lordſhips, that from the whole Courſe of my Actions, no one Inſtance of that kind is alledg'd, or ſo much as pretended.

My Lords, The Charge of wickedly wreſting divers Texts of Scripture lies very heavy upon me, as a Chriſtian, and Miniſter of Chriſt. If I am Guilty of it, there is another Tribunal, another Bar at which I am to appear, and where by that Scripture, which I have wreſted, I ſhall be Judg'd and Condemn'd. In the mean time, my Lords, I hope that thoſe, whoſe particular Profeſſion, and Studies qualify them to be the moſt competent Judges of ſuch Matters, will abſolve me in this Particular.

Upon the whole, therefore, my Lords, I hope it appears, that I am not guilty of any of the Crimes of which I am accus'd; that I have Tranſgreſs'd no Law of the Land, neither Statute, nor Common Law, relating either to Her Majeſty, or to my Fellow Subjects, to the Church, or to the State: And that I may with all Humility apply to my own Caſe, the Words of that bleſſed Apoſtle, whoſe Doctrine I defend, and whoſe Example I hope I ſhall have the Grace to follow, Neither againſt the Law, nor againſt the Temple, nor againſt Cæſar, have I offended any thing at all.

What I have hitherto humbly offered to your Lordſhips relates to my Words and Actions; and as to the Thoughts and Intentions of my Heart, which are known only to God, and my own Conſcience, and which are affirm'd in my Impeachment to be wicked, ſeditious and malicious; I call the Searcher of Hearts to witneſs in the moſt ſolemn, and religious Manner, as I expect to be acquitted before God, and his Holy Angels, at that Dreadful Tribunal, before which not only I, but all the World, even your Lordſhips, who now ſit in Judgment upon me, muſt appear, to be Acquitted or Condemn'd; that I had no ſuch wicked, ſeditious, or malicious Intentions; that there is nothing upon Earth, I more deteſt and abhor: That my Deſigns were, in every reſpect, directly contrary. I had no Intention to aſperſe the Memory of His late Majeſty, to traduce, or condemn the late Happy Revolution, or to arraign the Reſolu- tions of both Houſes of Parliament. So far was I from deſigning to undermine and ſubvert Her Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law Eſtabliſh'd, that it was my ſincere Intention to exert my beſt Endeavours for their Security. So far was I from intending, to perſuade Her Majeſty's Subjects to keep up a Diſtinction of Parties and Factions, from inſtilling groundleſs Jealouſies, fomenting deſtructive Diviſions among them, or exciting and ſtirring them up to Arms and Violence, that my Aim was to perſuade them to lay aſide all Diſtinctions, to unite in one, well-compacted Body, to be Obedient to their Governors, and to ſupport the preſent Eſtabliſhment. So far was I from deſigning to defame Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, or to infuſe any undutiful Thoughts of Her, that I not only pay Her all Honour and Obedience, but am from the bottom of my Soul zealouſly, and affectionately Loyal to Her; being entirely perſuaded, that the Church is ſo far from being in Danger from Her, that She is as heartily affected to its Eſtabliſhment, and Proſperity, as I hope I have always ſhew'd my ſelf to be to Her Sacred Perſon, and Government.

As to the Proteſtant Succeſſion by Law Eſtabliſh'd, tho' the Doctrine which I preach'd tends to the Security of it, (as I heartily deſire every thing by me ſpoken ſhould tend) yet having no Occaſion in either of my Sermons to take Notice of it, I do no where in thoſe Sermons mention it, nor ſay any thing that can be Interpreted to have any View towards it. Therefore tho' I cannot with my beſt Application apprehend, how it comes to be ſaid in the Preamble to my Impeachment, that I had deſign'd to undermine and ſubvert it, yet I ſhall gladly take this Opportunity, of declaring my ſelf before your Lordſhips upon that Subject. It is my ſincere and hearty Prayer, that God would prolong the Life of Her Moſt Sacred Majeſty, whoſe Exemplary Goodneſs and Piety, give us the beſt Hopes we have of averting that Vengeance, which is due to the Wickedneſs of the Age we live in; that He would bleſs Her Councils at Home, and Her Arms Abroad, and make Her Reign exceed that of Her Renown'd Predeceſſor Queen Elizabeth, in Length, as well as Glory. But when the Inheritrix of the Bleſſed Martyr's Crown, and Piety, when She, the Deſire of our Eyes, and the Breath of our Noſtrils, ſhall full of Years, and Honour, be Gather'd to Her Fathers, and exchange Her Temporal for an Immortal Crown; (ſince we are deprived of that Prince, Her Royal Off-ſpring, whoſe Loſs no true Lover of his Country, and of the Royal Family can reflect upon without a Bleeding Heart, and whom God in his Anger took from us, becauſe we were unworthy of ſo inеſtimable a Bleſſing,) I earneſtly beſeech God, in deſect of Future Iſſue from Her Majeſty, to Perpetuate the Succeſſion of the Crown, as it is Eſtabliſh'd in the moſt Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover, which I look upon as, next to his Providence, the beſt Guard we have againſt Popery and Arbitrary Power, the beſt Security of our Church, and of the Conſtitution of our Government, which is the Glory and Happineſs of our own Nation, and the Envy of all others. And I cannot yet apprehend, how the Doctrine, which I have taught, tends to weaken or undermine it; nor on the other ſide, how the Doctrine of Reſiſtance, which brought Her Majeſty's Royal Grand-Father to the Block, (ſuppoſing it a true Doctrine) comes to be mention'd, or thought of, much leſs to be induſtriouſly maintain'd, as a neceſſary and indenſpenſible Duty, under the moſt mild and gracious Adminiſtration of the beſt of Queens. Nothing ſeems more ſtrange than that Reſiſtance ſhould be ſo carefully taught under ſuch a Government, unleſs it be that Non-Reſiſtance ſhould overturn it.

So far was I therefore from having any of thoſe wicked, malicious, or ſeditious Deſigns, which are laid to my Charge, that my Intentions were, on the contrary, to inſtil the Principles of Loyalty and Obedience into my Fellow-Subjects, and withal to put a ſtop to that Torrent of Lewdneſs, Irreligion, and Atheiſm, of which I have given your Lordſhips ſo many flagrant Teſtimonies.

Thoſe outrageous Inſults upon God, and Goodneſs, are ſo Provoking, that they may excuſe ſome Heat, and Severity of Expreſſion in a Miniſter of Chriſt, who has a juſt Senſe of Religion, a due Concern for the Diſcharge of his Holy Function, or for the Honour of his Maker and Redeemer. And if any Objection be made againſt me, for Treating with an Unbecoming Bitterneſs ſuch Daring Rabſhekahs, who defy the Living God; I beg leave to Reply in the Words of a Reverend Father of our Church, Let them conſider what Moderation, and Temper, a Man had need be of, that in this Nation, and this Age, ſhall ſpeak againſt Faction, Rebellion (I add Deiſm, Tritheiſm, and all ſorts of Hereſy, Blaſphemy, and Atheiſm) without extraordinary Severity. Nay, it is our Duty in ſuch Caſes, to expreſs our ſelves with Warmth and Sharpneſs, according to the Example of our Bleſſed Saviour; who, tho' Meekneſs it ſelf, could not but ſhew the utmoſt Indignation at the Prophaning the Houſe of God. This is not, my Lords, to rail, but to rebuke; and thoſe, who ridicule, or cenſure us for it, either have not, I preſume, or will not own they have, a right Notion of the Dignity of our Office; will not conſider, that we are the Ambaſſadors of Chriſt, that we are commanded, in his Name, to exhort, and rebuke with all Authority; and that our Authority is deriv'd from thoſe to whom it was ſaid by our Bleſſed Saviour, He that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me, and he that deſpiſeth me, deſpiſeth him that ſent me: Whatever Expreſſions therefore in my Sermons may have ſlipt from me, which ſeem ſo far liable to Exception, as to carry a Senſe I never intended (as he muſt be an Happy Speaker indeed, whoſe Words are altogether unexceptionable) yet I humbly hope, the above-mention'd Provocations will plead my Excuſe, or that, at the very worſt, ſome haſty, or even violent Expreſſions, ſhall not be deem'd High Crimes and Miſdemeanors. I deſire it may be farther conſider'd by your Lordſhips, that I could have no Temporal Intereſts to ſerve by the Doctrines I advanc'd; and therefore could have no Deſign in view, but to diſcharge my Duty to God, as a Miniſter of Chriſt, and to my Sovereign, as a Faithful, and Loyal Subject.

My Lords, Theſe Things being humbly offer'd to the Conſideration of your Lordſhips, I hope, that what I have already ſuffer'd, as a ſuppoſed Criminal, will be thought ſufficient Puniſhment for one, who has offended againſt no Law yet in Being. It muſt be thought no little Grief, and Vexation to any ingenuous Man, to be brought to this Bar, under the leaſt Suſpicion of ſuch Crimes as are laid to my Charge; but for a Perſon of my Function to have an Accuſation of this Nature alledg'd againſt him, ſo heinouſly reflecting upon his Holy Character, is ſuch a foul Blot, as though his Innocence ſhould at laſt be clear'd by your Lordſhips, upon the moſt undeniable Evidence, muſt leave a Scar upon his good Name; which is to all Men dear, but much more ſo to thoſe, whoſe whole Capacity of doing good in the World principally depends upon it.

My Lords, As the Matter of my Charge was highly criminal, ſo the Form and Manner of it ran in ſuch general, and uncertain Terms, that 'twas impoſſible to know the Grounds of my Accuſation; or how to defend my ſelf, when I knew not where I ſhould be attack'd. So that after I had provided as particular an Anſwer as ſuch a general Accuſation would admit of, the Commons were pleaſed in their Replication to ſay, that there were ſeveral Things in it Foreign to the Charge. To the great Misfortune of falling under the Diſpleaſure of that Honourable Houſe, I might add, That of a long and cloſe Confinement, and of an Expence no ways proportion'd to my Circumſtances. Theſe, my Lords, are Afflictions which can be conceiv'd by no Body ſo well as by him, who has been ſo unhappy as to feel the Weight of them. And among theſe I reckon it not the leaſt of my Sufferings, that I have been for ſo long a time debarr'd, from taking heed to that Flock, over which the Holy Ghoſt hath made me an Overſeer. For even ſince I have had my Liberty, by the Favour of your Lordſhips admitting me to Bail, I have purpoſely avoided doing any Part of the Duty of my Function, or even appearing in Publick, leſt it ſhould occaſion any Tumult or Diſturbance; as my neceſſary Attendance on your Lordſhips from time to time, has ſince been thought unhappily to have done, without any Fault of mine, or the leaſt degree of Encouragement given by me, which I profeſs, in the Preſence of God, to abhor.

All theſe Circumſtances, my Lords, being conſider'd, together, with the Publick Manner, the Length and Solemnity of my Tryal, before ſo Auguſt a Court of Judicature, by which Means I am made a Gazing-ſtock, both by Reproaches, and Afflictions, and a Spectacle to the whole World; I have ſtood in this Place Day after Day, to hear my ſelf Accus'd of the blackeſt Crimes, and openly revil'd; I have been repreſented as a Papiſt in Diſguiſe, as a Rebel, as an Enemy to Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and a Favourer of the Pretender, tho' I have abjur'd him, (but not forgot him, as a Learned Perſon was pleas'd to ſay) that is, as the worſt of Perjur'd Villains: I have been call'd an inſignificant Tool of a Party on the one Hand, and a moſt dangerous Incendiary on the other, nay, an Angel, that is a Devil, detach'd from the Infernal Regions: All theſe things, I ſay, being conſider'd, (and your Lordſhips I am ſure, in tender Compaſſion to me, will conſider them,) it is moſt certain, that, whatever be your Lordſhips Determination concerning me, I cannot eſcape without being a very great Sufferer, and I ſhall have been abundantly puniſh'd, tho' I ſhould have the Happineſs to be by your Lordſhips at laſt Acquitted.

Yet I cannot Reflect without Comfort, (the greateſt of Comforts next to that of a good Cauſe, and a good Conſcience) that I Anſwer for my ſelf this Day before the moſt Illuſtrious Aſſembly in the World, the whole Body of the Nobility of Great Britain; whoſe Princely Extraction, and High Quality, whoſe Magnificent Titles, and Splendid Fortunes, whoſe Hereditary Candor and Generoſity, inherent in Noble Blood, inſeparable from the Birth and Education of Peers; in a word, whoſe Solid Judgment, and exact Skill in the Laws of this Realm, ſo eminently Qualify them for the final Determination of Juſtice; who are neither to be ſway'd by Hopes, over-rul'd by Fears, nor miſled by any Falſe Prejudice or Paſſion. If it muſt be a Man's Misfortune to labour under ſuch hard Circumſtances as mine, it is no ſmall Mitigation of them, that he Pleads his Cauſe before ſuch Judges, who, he knows, will Decide it with the ſtricteſt Impartiality, Equity, and Honour.

And when I conſider that I now ſtand, and am Judg'd for ſome of the Doctrines of that Goſpel, which God deliver'd unto our Fathers, and you; my Lords the Biſhops, their Succeſſors, have receiv'd from Chriſt and his Apoſtles, as the ſacred Depoſitum of the Church, to be Maintain'd inviolably in its Primitive Simplicity; when I conſider, what is the Cauſe for which I am this Day call'd in Queſtion; that it is One of thoſe Eternal Truths, which you are ſo Solemnly commiſſion'd to Teach, and earneſtly Contend for; when I conſider, that 'tis what our Bleſſed Lord and his Apoſtles ſeal'd with their precious Blood, and ſo many Primitive Martyrs maintain'd even in the midſt of Flames, ſo many Learned Biſhops, and Confeſſors recommended to Poſterity in their immortal Writings, as the diſtinguiſhing Badge, and Glory of our Reformation; nay, when I conſider, that 'tis what you your ſelves have already ſupported with inconteſtable Reaſon, and Authority; it is no ſmall Satisfaction to me to think, that as your Lordſhips are my Judges, ſo, I hope in God, you muſt be my Advocates. What a Guilt, as well as Diſgrace, would it juſtly devolve upon the Clergy, to recede from any Principle of our excellent Church, eſpecially from what has been ſo long retain'd, and boaſted of, as its peculiar Character! By abandoning which we muſt relapſe into ſome of the worſt Doctrines even of Popery it ſelf, and render our ſelves the moſt contemptible, as well as inconſiſtent Church in the World! I think, I may therefore with Confidence uſe the Words of the Great Apoſtle to his Accuſers; Having obtain'd Help from God, I continue unto this Day, witneſſing both to ſmall and great; ſaying none other Things than thoſe which the Prophets and Moſes (I may add, Chriſt and his Apoſtles,) did ſay.

For, my Lords, if I have committed any Faults or Errors in Expreſſion, yet as I inſiſt upon my Innocence with reſpect to all the High Crimes laid to my Charge, ſo I muſt ſtill inſiſt upon all the Doctrines which I have taught, as being agreeable to the Word of God, and to the Doctrine of our moſt excellent and truly Apoſtolical Church, and which we of the Clergy are oblig'd both by Subſcription, and Oath to acknowledge, and defend. And how hard are our Circumſtances, if we muſt be puniſh'd in this World for doing that, which if we do not, we ſhall be more heavily puniſh'd in the next! What a Condition are we in, if we are commanded to cry aloud and ſpare not, to exhort, rebuke, in Seaſon and out of Seaſon, on the one Hand, and proſecuted, impriſon'd, ruin'd on the other! If this be our Caſe, who indeed is ſufficient for theſe Things? Aud how truly may we of the Miniſtry above all Men living, apply to our ſelves thoſe Words of the Apoſtle, If in this Life only we have hope in Chriſt, we are of all Men moſt miſerable: But our Comfort is, that our Hope in Chriſt is not only in this Life. Juſtly might we be reproach'd, and deſerve ſome of thoſe Reflections, which in theſe Licentious Times are ſo plentifully pour'd upon us, were we not ready to Practiſe the Doctrines we preach, of Self-Denial, taking up our Croſs, and patient Submiſſion to Sufferings and Afflictions! For my own Part, it matters not what becomes of me, nor is my Deliverance, or Ruin, of any Moment to the World; or, if it be, I am not only ready to be bound, but to dye, could

I by

I by that do Service to my Queen, my Church, or my Country; neither count I my Life dear, so that I might finish my Course with Joy, and the Ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus. But may God so direct your Lordships, that through me a Wound may not be given to the Doctrines of the Scriptures, and of the Church, which Christ hath purchas'd with his own Blood.

And so, with all Humility and Resignation, I submit my self to your Lordships Judgment; be it what it will: One Thing I am sure it can never take from me, the Power of Wishing and Praying, and (whether in Prosperity or Adversity, whether I am Acquitted, or Condemn'd,) I shall always pray for the Queen my Sovereign, for your Lordships my Judges, and for the Commons my Accusers; most earnestly beseeching Almighty God, to deliver all Orders, and Degrees of Men amongst us, from all false Doctrine, Heresy, and Schism, from Hardness of Heart, from Contempt of his Word, and Commandment; from Envy, Hatred, and Malice, and all Uncharitableness.

Then the LORDS Adjourned to their House Above.

Thursday, March 9. The Ninth Day.

THE Lords coming down into Westminster-Hall, and being seated in the manner before-mentioned, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth strictly Charge and Command all manner of Persons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Imprisonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, save thee and thy Bail, else thou forfeitest thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, you that are Managers for the House of Commons may proceed to yonr Reply.

Sir Joseph Jekyll. MY Lords, Doctor Sacheverell and his Council having concluded what they had to offer to your Lordships, I shall enter upon the Province assign'd to me, in further Execution of the Commands of the House of Commons, which is, to Reply to the Defence made for the Doctor to the first Article of the Commons Charge.

My Lords, I shall take Notice, first, of the Concessions made by the Doctor's Council; secondly, of the Exposition they have put upon those Passages of the Sermon, which have been relied on by the Commons to maintain this Article; and, thirdly, of the Acts of Parliament, the Homilies, the Books, the Sermons, the Pamphlets and the Gazettes, which the Doctor's Council have call'd for to be read to your Lordships.

And if I shall satisfy your Lordships, that the Concessions made by the Doctor's Council are a Departure from the Defence made for him in his Answer, that they are extorted by Necessity, and are likely to be retracted when this Turn is serv'd; if I shall shew your Lordships, that their Exposition of the Passages in the Sermon, is contrary to the plain Meaning of those Passages; if I shall shew, that the Acts of Parliament, the Homilies, and the other Prints that have been produc'd, are either immaterial, or condemn the Doctrine laid down in the Sermon; and if I shall shew, that this Criminal, for so I must call him, since the House of Commons have call'd him so; (whether he will be so in the Event, I agree, rests only in your Lordships Judgment); if, I say, I shall shew he is guilty of a most heinous Offence, I shall not doubt of your Lordships Justice.

My Lords, The Concessions are these, That Necessity creates an Exception to the General Rule of Submission to the Prince: That such Exception is understood or implied in the Laws that require such Submission: And That the Case of the Revolution was a Case of Necessity.

These are Concessions so ample, and do so fully answer the Drift of the Commons in this Article, and are to the utmost Extent of their Meaning in it, that I can't forbear congratulating them upon this Success of their Impeachment; That in full Parliament this erroneous Doctrine of unlimited Non-Resistance is given up and disclaim'd. And may it not, in After-Ages, be an Addition to the Glories of this bright Reign, that so many of those who are honour'd with being in Her Majesty's Service, have been, at your Lordships Bar, thus successfully contending for the National Rights of Her People, and proving they are not precarious or remediless.

But to return to these Concessions; I must appeal to your Lordships, whether they are not a total Departure from the Doctor's Answer; whether there is one Word in the Answer which looks that Way.

In his Answer he takes Notice, that the general Assertion in his Sermon, of the utter Illegality of Resistance, is a colourable Pretence for the Article; but does he add the Restriction or Limitation to it, which hath been now thought necessary, and hath been insisted upon as most material for his Defence? No, my Lords, but the quite contrary; for these are the Words of his Answer, The said Henry Sacheverell doth with all Humility aver the Illegality of Resistance, on any Pretence whatsoever, to be the true Doctrine of the Church of England. Now, could any thing have been more material for him in his Answer, than adding these Restrictions to his general Assertion in his Sermon, which his Council now say he intended, tho' he did not express? Or if that was his Intention, could he possibly have forgot it, when the Frame of his Answer was under Consideration?

But now he sees the Resolution of the Commons, and the Endeavours of those who have their Commands to carry on this Prosecution, to bring him to Punishment; now he sees your Lordships daily Attendance upon this Trial, and your Atttention to the Charge against him; now he sees, if he had abided by his Answer, he must have been condemn'd, or the Revolution; these are the Motives which have prevail'd upon him to tolerate his Council to make these unwilling Concessions, and have extorted them from him.

And how little these Concessions ought to avail him, your Lordships will see, when you consider how likely it is he will retract them when this Turn is serv'd. May we not then expect he will use this very Argument of Necessity, the Coertion or Restraint he is under by this Prosecution, as an Excuse for these Concessions? And when your Lordships are told, that it is the Duty of Divines (whose Office it is to explain the Scripture to the People) to inculcate this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance in the moſt unconfin'd and unlimited Terms they are able, and mentally reſerve the Exception to themſelves; when Authorities have been produced for aſſerting this Doctrine in ſuch a manner as to exclude any Exception whatſoever, and the Doctor himſelf did not expreſly come into theſe Conceſſions, it is certain they ought not to be of any Avail to him.

to

Your Lordſhips will therefore give me Leave to conſider the Expoſition which hath been put on thoſe Paſſages, which the Commons relied on for Proof of their Firſt Article: And I ſhall ſhew that Expoſition to be contrary to the plain Meaning of thoſe Paſſages.

My Lords, I readily agree, that no ſtrain'd Innuendo's, or ſuppos'd and forc'd Conſtructions (which are the Words us'd in the Reaſon given for reverſing the Judgment in Sir Samuel Barnardiſton's Caſe) ought to be admitted, to explain the Meaning of the Doctor, in order to prove him Criminal. I think the Principles laid down upon the Reverſal of that Judgment are ſolid and juſt; and therefore nothing but expreſs Words, or a neceſſary Implication collected from a Man's Words, can make him an Offender. But I would not have it gone away with, that there muſt be expreſs Words of Scandal to make a Man Criminal; indirect or oblique Scandal has in all Times been met with and puniſh'd in the ordinary Courts of Juſtice; and if it were otherwiſe, that which aggravates the Crime (the Subtilty or Contrivance of it) would prevent the Puniſhment: And therefore it is, that Ironical Scandal, nay, even dumb Scandal (Scandal by Pictures, or by Signs) as is mention'd in the Caſe de Libellis Famoſis, in my Lord Chief Juſtice Coke's Fifth Report, is puniſhable by Law. The only Caution neceſſary in theſe Caſes is, that the Conſtruction or Interpretation be not ſtrain'd or forc'd. And, my Lords, in this Caſe we have not only a ſeditious Meaning plainly collected from the Doctor's Words, but expreſs Criminal Words, a falſe Suggeſtion, that his late Majeſty, in his Declaration, diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance, introduc'd for a malicious and ſeditious Purpoſe.

My Lords, The Firſt Article has been rightly divided into Three Parts. The Doctor is charg'd with ſuggeſting and maintaining, Firſt, That the neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the Revolution, were odious and unjuſtifiable. Secondly, That his late Majeſty in his Declaration diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance: And, Thirdly, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours on his late Majeſty and the Revolution.

The two laſt Branches, my Lords, are Particulars. The firſt is the General; and if the two laſt are proved, ſuch Proof makes out the firſt: But I ſhall conſider the Anſwer given by the Doctor's Council to the Proof of the two laſt Branches in their Order, and proceed to conſider the Anſwer that has been given to the proper Proofs of the firſt.

My Lords, The firſt Proof of this Branch was the general Aſſertion of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever. It hath been ſaid in Anſwer to this, that this is ſpoken of the Supreme Power, which is the Legiſlative Power, and then there ought to be no Exception whatſoever.

But, my Lords, that the Doctor did not mean the Supreme Legiſlative Power, but the Supreme Executive Power, is evident.

Firſt, From the Account he preſently gives of thoſe that oppoſe his Principle of Non-Reſiſtance, which runs all along upon the Perſon of the Prince only, as cancelling their Allegiance, calling their Sovereign to Account, Dethroning and Murthering him.

Secondly and Principally, From his bringing in the Caſe of the Revolution, as urg'd by thoſe who are Adverſaries to his Principle of Non-Reſiſtance. Now the Revolution is not, cannot be urg'd as an Inſtance of the Lawfulneſs of any thing, but of reſiſting the Supreme Executive Power acting in Oppoſition to the Laws; and this the Doctor himſelf admitted, when he told your Lordſhips that the Supreme Power was not then reſiſted. This is therefore the Supreme Power he affirms it is utterly unlawful to reſiſt.

But it was ſaid by one of the Doctor's Council, That the Non-Reſiſtance the Doctor preaches up, is the utter Illegality of Reſiſting the Supreme Power in all Things Lawful; for thoſe Words, in all Things Lawful, make part of that Sentence. My Lords, I admit they do; but thoſe Words are relative to his Aſſertion concerning Active Obedience, and not Paſſive, as will appear by reading the whole Sentence. The grand Security of our Government, and the very Pillar upon which it ſtands, is founded upon the ſteady Belief of the Subjects Obligation to an abſolute and unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power in all Things Lawful, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever. The one dividing Member of the Sentence is, the Obligation to Obedience in all Things Lawful; the other, the Illegality of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever; the one is reſtrain'd, the other unlimited. It muſt be taken therefore (notwithſtanding theſe Objections) That the Doctor aſſerts the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Executive Power, though acting not in Conformity, but in Contradiction to the Laws.

My Lords, I go on to the ſecond Proof of the firſt Branch of this Article, which is, the Doctor's Inſinuation that the Parliament diſown'd the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, by declaring that they ſet the Crown on the King's Head on no other Title than of the Vacancy of the Throne. One of the Council thought fit to ſtand to this Fact, becauſe the Vacancy of the Throne is mention'd in the Bill of Rights; and he ſays, there is no other Fact there ſtated. I beſeech your Lordſhips, Does not the ſame Act take Notice of the Male-Adminiſtration of King James, and his Abdicating the Government, as the Means by which the Throne became void? And I may appeal to your Lordſhips Journal, and the Journal of the Houſe of Commons, whether the Word Abdicated was not uſed rather than the Word Deſerted (after a Conference between the Two Houſes) for this Reaſon, inſiſted on by the Commons, that that Word Abdicate included in it Male-Adminiſtration, which the Word Deſert did not.

The ſame Council ſaid, the Act for preventing Vexatious Suits, urg'd by the Commons as a Parliamentary Declaration, juſtifying the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, was only for Indemnifying thoſe that acted at that Time, and was no more than was done in the Reign of Edward the Third, after Edward the Second was Dethroned. This ſurely is no manner of Anſwer to the Declaratory Part of that Law, which takes Notice of the King's undertaking a glorious Enterprize, for delivering the Kingdom from Popery and Arbitrary Power; and that divers Subjects, in Aid and Purſuance of that Enterprize, did ſeveral Acts of Violence and Reſiſtance; and this Law declares ſuch Acts were neceſſary, and ought to be juſtify'd. And I can't but obſerve this by the way, that the Parliament and the Doctor are of different Opinions; the Parliament thought that Reſiſtance ought to be juſtify'd; the Doctor thinks not; and if ſo, then Doctor Sacheverell doth ſuggeſt and maintain, that the neceſſary Means uſed to bring about the Revolution were odious and unjuſtifiable.

I come now, my Lords, to the ſecond Branch of the Firſt Article, the Doctor's Aſſertion, That his late Majeſty in his Declaration diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and the Doctor's Anſwer to it.

My Lords, His Council admit this Aſſertion is in the Sermon, and that this Aſſertion is not true; but they ſay it was a Miſtake only in the Doctor, that the Doctor has expreſs'd himſelf ſomewhat obſcurely, and now he has explain'd himſelf, that Explanation ought to be receiv'd. The Doctor meant, they ſay, Conqueſt; and ſo he had explain'd himſelf not only in the Marginal Note, but in the Sermon it ſelf. My Lords, if this were ſo, I admit it would be a good Defence; but that this was not a Miſtake, or rather was a wilful one in the Doctor, and that he thereby deſign'd to Traduce the Memory of his late Majeſty and the Revolution, I ſhall ſhew from what his own Council inſiſt on.

They ſay the Doctor muſt mean Conqueſt, becauſe the Prince of Orange, who was no Subject, but a Sovereign Prince, could not be ſaid to reſiſt according to the common underſtanding of that Word. Now, my Lords, it is true, the Prince of Orange could not be ſaid to reſiſt, and ſo could not diſclaim Reſiſtance for himſelf; but could he not be join'd and aſſiſted by the Subjects of the Realm, who might be ſaid to reſiſt, and were invited by him ſo to do? Doth not this appear by the whole Tenor of his Declaration, and even by the Paſſages quoted by the Doctor? And ſince his late Majeſty could not be ſaid to reſiſt, but the Subjects, who, upon his Invitation, join'd with him, could; and the Reſiſtance of Subjects is what the Doctor is ſpeaking againſt; it is plain, that the Doctor ſpeaks of the King's diſclaiming the Reſiſtance of thoſe who join'd with him, and not his own Reſiſtance. And therefore I cannot ſee that the Quotation of the Paſſage out of the Prince's Declaration, at the bottom of that Page, doth make out that he meant Conqueſt, by Reſiſtance in his Sermon; or if it did, Would it excuſe the Doctor's Preaching this Part of his Sermon, which was done without referring to that Paſſage?

But it is ſaid, he has explain'd that he meant Conqueſt by Reſiſtance in the Body of the Sermon, becauſe he ſays the Parliament burnt a Libel that would have pleaded the Title of Conqueſt, by which Reſiſtance was ſuppoſed. But that this Paſſage doth not make out that he meant Conqueſt by Reſiſtance, is evident, from his making Reſiſtance not to be Conqueſt, but only an Ingredient in it. And by repreſenting Reſiſtance and Conqueſt to be the ſame thing with the Doctor, he is made to ſay, that the Parliament burnt a Libel that would have pleaded the Title of Conqueſt, by which Conqueſt is ſuppos'd.

It is plain therefore that Doctor Sacheverell hath aſſerted, that his late Majeſty in his Declaration diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and diſclaim'd it at a Time, if you'll believe the Doctor, when he was exhorting the Subjects of King James to reſiſt, and was joining with them, and encouraging them in it; than which it is impoſſible there can be a greater Reflection on his late Majeſty, or the glorious Cauſe he then had in Hand.

My Lords, I come now to conſider the Proof of the Third Branch of the Firſt Article, and the Anſwer that has been given to it. The Third Branch is this, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution: The Proof is, that Part of the Sermon wherein the Doctor aſſerts, That the Adverſaries to the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, who urge the Revolution in their Defence, are the greateſt Enemies to that and his late Majeſty, and the moſt ungrateful for the Deliverance, in endeavouring to caſt ſuch black and odious Colours upon both: How often muſt they be told, &c. The Anſwer to this is, That the Perſons the Doctor deſcribes as caſting black and odious Colours on his late Majeſty and the Revolution, are not thoſe who impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, of whom he affirms nothing, but thoſe new Preachers and new Politicians, who teach Antimonarchical and wicked Doctrines, and who urge the Revolution in Defence of 'em.

My Lords, If the Doctor had meant theſe Perſons, he would have ſhewn them, which he certainly might have done, that what was acted at the Revolution, did not in the leaſt juſtify their Opinions; but he declining to do this, and placing the Defence of the Revolution on a falſe Fact, known to be ſo to himſelf and to the whole Nation; and this, taken together with his introducing theſe Men as defending their Principles by the Revolution, leaves the Load of theſe deteſtable Opinions on the Revolution, and not only condemns the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, but brands it.

But it is ſaid, my Lords, that the Clauſe, Our Adverſaries think they effectually ſtop our Mouths, &c. relates to the Defence of theſe Antimonarchical Principles, and not to the general Propoſition of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever; and if ſo, I agree there is no Foundation for this Branch of the Article; and whether he is guilty of this Branch or not, turns entirely on this Queſtion.

My Lords, I little thought ſuch a Conſtruction would have been endeavour'd, by a wrong Recital of this Clauſe in the Sermon, by the Doctor in his Anſwer; for there it is ſaid, as from the Words of the Sermon, That they, that is, ſays the Doctor, theſe new Preachers and new Politicians, urge the Revolution in defence of ſuch Principles; when your Lordſhips ſee the Words of the Sermon are, Our Adverſaries think they effectually ſtop our Mouths, and have us ſure and unanſwerable on this Point, when they urge the Revolution of this Day in their Defence. This therefore brings the Caſe of the Revolution, urg'd by theſe Adverſaries, to the Point or Propoſition he had before laid down, which was the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever; and not to the Defence of divers Antimonarchical Principles, taught by the new Preachers and new Politicians. And this is ſtill plainer, if your Lordſhips conſider that the Doctor's Reply to theſe Adverſaries, by denying there was any Reſiſtance at the Revolution, can only relate to the Point of Non-Reſiſtance he had before aſſerted; and which Reſiſtance, ſiſtance, if it were not denied, muſt ſtand condemn'd by the Doctor's Propoſition.

As little, my Lords, did I expect to hear from one of the Doctor's Council, that there are twenty or thirty Lines between the General Propoſition and this Clauſe; ſince if there be a Connection between this Clauſe and that Propoſition (which I have already ſhewn there is) it is not the Intervention of ſo many Lines will hinder it; and if there had been no Connection, their being cloſe together would not have made one. And by this manifeſt Connection, the Doctor hath brought this general Poſition, of the Unlawfulneſs of all Reſiſtance, to bear upon the Revolution. Which I hope may ſerve for an Anſwer to the ſame Gentleman, who ſays, It is one thing to lay down the General Rule without making the Exception, and another thing not to make the particular Exception out of that Rule; for the Doctor has mentioned the Revolution, but not in order to except it, but to include it.

Indeed, my Lords, the Learned Doctor who is of his Council pretends to have found out the Exception in the Sermon, Page the 10th, becauſe he finds the Word Neceſſity there: The Words are theſe, Only this Maxim in general I preſume may be eſtabliſh'd for the Safety, Tranquility and Support of all Governments; that no Innovation whatſoever ſhould be allowed in the Fundamental Conſtitution of any State, without a very preſſing, nay, unavoidable Neceſſity for it. But if the Doctor had but read to the End of the Sentence, he would have found Doctor Sacheverell condemns all that bore a Part in the Revolution, before a Law was made about it: The Words that follow are theſe, And whoſoever ſingly, or in a private Capacity ſhould attempt it, is guilty of the higheſt Miſdemeanor, and is an Enemy to that Politick Body of which he is a Member. And if that Sentence reſpects the Revolution, then Doctor Sacheverell condemns all, from the higheſt to the loweſt, who, in their private Capacity, joined with the Prince of Orange, or aſſiſted in bringing about the Revolution. This is the Thing he is now charged with; not condemning the Revolution as a Thing ſettled by Law, but the Neceſſary Means uſed to bring it about. But if the Doctor inſtructed his Council to inſinuate, that there was any Innovation in the Conſtitution wrought by the Revolution, it is an Addition to his Crime. The Revolution did not introduce any Innovation; it was a Reſtoration of the ancient Fundamental Conſtitution of the Kingdom, and giving it its proper Force and Energy.

Indeed, all the other Council differ'd from that Learned Civilian, and maintain'd, that Doctor Sacheverell did not, nay, ought not, to make any Exception; and one of 'em ſaid, if Clergymen, inſtead of preaching up the general Rule of Obedience, were permitted to ſtate the ſeveral excepted Caſes, ſuch Exceptions would in time devour all Allegiance. My Lords, If the Doctor had pretended to have ſtated the particular Bounds and Limits of Non-Reſiſtance, and told the People in what Caſes they might, or might not reſiſt, he would have been much to blame; nor was one Word ſaid in the Articles, or by the Managers, as if that was expected from him; but on the contrary, we have inſiſted, that in no Caſe can Reſiſtance be lawful, but in Caſe of extreme Neceſſity, and where the Conſtitution can't otherwiſe be preſerv'd, and ſuch Neceſſity ought to be plain and obvious to the Senſe and Judgment of the whole Nation; and this was the Caſe at the Revolution. And is there no Difference between a Divine's mooting and putting Caſes of lawful Reſiſtance, and excepting the Reſiſtance at the Revolution out of the general Rule of the Illegality of Reſiſtance, on a Day, when he was oblig'd not only to commemorate the Revolution, but the Reſiſtance, the neceſſary Means uſed to bring it about, as appears by the Service appointed for that Day?

And, my Lords, Is a Houſe of Commons, who are vindicating that Revolution only, to be repreſented as if we were calling upon Divines to ſtate the Caſes wherein Reſiſtance is lawful, and wherein not? A Taſk unfit for any one, and more eſpecially for them to meddle with; And are we, by ſuch Suggeſtions as theſe, to be defam'd and inſulted, and repreſented as promoting Anarchy and Confuſion?

My Lords, There can be no Order or Regularity, if the Conſtitution, the beautiful Frame of a Legal Monarchy, which this Nation hath ſo long enjoy'd and proſper'd withal, be deſtroy'd or given up. What Inclination has the preſent Age ſhewn to ſubmit to Arbitrary Power; or rather, what hath been wanting in it to ſhew the contrary?

But I go on, my Lords, to conſider an Argument made uſe of by another of the Doctor's Council, That it was needleſs for him to except the Caſe of the Revolution, for that was known to every body, and had often been approv'd by the Legiſlature. I beſeech your Lordſhips, Could the Doctor know this, and not only not except that Caſe, on a Day appointed to give ſolemn Thanks for it, but introduce it for no purpoſe but to leave it under the Condemnation of the General Rule of Non-Reſiſtance? And by this Method the Doctor has brought his General Rule to bear upon the particular Caſe of the Revolution. For he takes but one way of acquitting the Revolution, which is by laying down that for Truth, which every Man knows to be falſe; and they that aſſert this Truth, he ſays, caſt black and odious Colours on the late King and the Revolution: Which makes out, that Dr. Sacheverell doth ſuggeſt and maintain, that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt black and odious Colours on his late Majeſty and the Revolution.

I am ſenble how tedious I muſt have been in this nice tracing the Anſwers given by the Doctor's Council to our Proofs of this firſt Article; but becauſe the Judgment of the Caſe will depend very much upon it, I am ſure I ſhall have your Lordſhips Pardon.

And now, my Lords, What a Repreſentation is here of that Glorious Tranſaction, the late happy Revolution! The Part the Subject had in it is repreſented as contradicting the expreſs Command of God in Scripture, and deſtructive of all Governments: His late Majeſty is repreſented as encouraging this pernicious Wickedneſs, and diſowning it at the ſame time: Give me Leave therefore, on behalf of the Nation, and the Memory of his late Majeſty, its Deliverer, to ſtate this Affair ſhortly, and in another Light to your Lordſhips.

The Subjects reſiſted, the late King join'd his Army with the Arms of Reſiſtance; and if the Nation at that time had not had Recourſe to that Remedy, how abject and how miſerable muſt they have been! If we look into the Hiſtories of other Countries, Have not the beſt and happieſt Nations been moſt tenacious of their Liberties? And while they have continu'd ſo, and withſtood Abſolute Power, they have been proſperous at home, and conſiderable abroad: But when they have fallen from this Zeal and Induſtry, which is the Foundation of their Proſperity at home, and Magnanimity, which makes them conſiderable abroad, have deſerted them, and they have ſunk into Sloth and Effemihacy. Can any one therefore, with any Colour, ſay, That Reſiſtance, in Caſes of Extreme Neceſſity, has worſe Conſequences than Unlimited Subjection?

Let us now turn our Eyes a little on the Part our late King had in the Revolution. Did he not undertake a moſt hazardous Enterprize, to procure us Happineſs at home, and to give us that Weight abroad, which this Nation had long enjoy'd, but at that Time was depriv'd of? And with what Care and Anxiety, even to the laſt Moment of his Life, did he labour to ſecure theſe Bleſſings to us!

Let us look beyond his Time, and ſince, for the Senſe of the Nation upon this Point. What Satisfaction did the Nation take, in the Aſſiſtance his Renowned Predeceſſor (Queen Elizabeth) gave to the Oppreſſed Provinces, our then Good Neighbours, and our now Potent Allies? How zealouſly did the Nation promote the Aſſiſtance King James the Firſt gave to the injur'd Prince Palatine, againſt the Emperor his Superior Lord? And what Reſolution and tender Concern for the perſecuted Rochellers, did King Charles the Firſt ſhew and expreſs? And has not Her Majeſty aſſiſted the Spaniards, againſt a Prince acknowledg'd by them, and ſeated on the Throne? Nor did Her Goodneſs, which is as extenſive as Her Power, overlook the poor Eſtate of the People in the Cevennes, or neglect to give them all poſſible Aſſiſtance, againſt their King exerciſing a cruel Dominion over them. Theſe, and many more Inſtances which might be fetch'd from other Countries, are ſo many Authorities againſt this Doctrine of unlimited Non-Reſiſtance.

And now, my Lords, I come to conſider the Authority the Doctor pretends to have for it: His Council ſay, They have Acts of Parliament for this Doctrine; I ſhall not mention the particular Acts, becauſe they are well known, but conſider them under Three Heads. Firſt, Thoſe Acts that were before the Reſtoration. Secondly, Thoſe after the Reſtoration, and before the Revolution. And, Thirdly, Thoſe after the Revolution.

My Lords, As to thoſe before the Reſtoration, I readily admit they condemn Reſiſtance generally; they don't mention any Exception. The Council of the other Side have furniſh'd me with an Anſwer to 'em: They ſay, Theſe, and all other Laws, have an Exception imply'd in them. The Wiſdom of the Law, in not expreſſing the Exception, is plain: It is neither decent, nor probably would have a good Effect, to put odious Caſes, ſuch as a Prince's Overturning the Conſtitution. The Roman Law did not provide againſt Parricide, nor doth the Engliſh Law neither; ſince it hath no diſtinct Puniſhment for that kind of Murder, tho' it hath ſome for others, which are call'd Petty Treaſons. Laws are fram'd upon a View of ordinary and common Caſes: Ad ea quæ frequentius accidunt jura adaptantur, is a known Maxim, and of great uſe in the Expoſition of Laws. And if our Legiſlators had been ask'd the Queſtion, Whether they meant by thoſe Laws to make all other Laws, and even thoſe Laws themſelves, of no Validity? (Which, if Abſolute Power can't be withſtood, would be the certain Conſequence;) Would not they have anſwer'd, Nothing was farther from their Thoughts? And if it be Maledicta Expoſitio quæ corrumpit Textum, apply'd to any particular Law; what a curſed Expoſition muſt that be, which corrupts, or rather annuls the Text of all the Laws at once?

My Lords, The next Head of Acts, are thoſe after the Reſtoration, and before the Revolution. I do admit, thoſe Laws go farther than the former, and ſeem to condemn all Reſiſtance, and in ſuch Terms, as to exclude any Exception whatſoever. My Lords, What I have ſaid relating to the former Laws, may be apply'd to theſe. But further, I deſire it may be conſider'd, theſe Legiſlators were guarding againſt the Conſequences of thoſe Pernicious and Antimonarchical Principles, which had been broach'd a little before in this Nation; and thoſe large Declarations in Favour of Non-Reſiſtance, were made to encounter, or obviate the Miſchief of thoſe Principles; as appears by the Preamble to the fulleſt of thoſe Acts, which is the Militia-Act, in the 13th and 14th of King Charles the Second. The Words of that Act are theſe: And during the late Uſurped Governments, many Evil and Rebellious Principles have been inſtilled into the Minds of the People of this Kingdom, which may break forth, unleſs prevented, to the Diſturbance of the Peace and Quiet thereof: Be it therefore Enacted, &c. Here your Lordſhips may ſee the Reaſon that inclined thoſe Legiſlators to expreſs themſelves in ſuch a manner againſt Reſiſtance: They had ſeen the Regal Rights ſwallow'd up, under the Pretence of Popular ones; and it is no Imputation on them, that they did not then foreſee a quite different Caſe, as was that of the Revolution; where, under the Pretence of Regal Authority, a total Subverſion of the Rights of the Subject was advanc'd, and in a manner effected. And this may ſerve to ſhew, that it was not the Deſign of thoſe Legiſlators to condemn Reſiſtance, in a Caſe of Abſolute Neceſſity, for preſerving the Conſtitution, when they were guarding againſt Principles which had ſo lately deſtroy'd it.

But now, my Lords, let us ſee how the Laws run after the Revolution. Your Lordſhips will find, that the Reſiſtance at the Revolution is not only approv'd of in expreſs Terms, by the Act for preventing Vexatious Suits; and indeed, every Act paſs'd ſince the Revolution, is an implicit Approbation of it; but the Declaration of the Unlawfulneſs of taking Arms againſt the King on any Pretence whatſoever, (requir'd to be taken by the Corporation-Act, the Militia-Act, and the Act of Uniformity,) is now repeal'd. There was another Act mention'd by one of the Doctor's Council, the Act for Regulating Select Veſtries: That Act expir'd in King Charles the Second's Time, and was never continu'd. The firſt Gentleman that ſpoke for the Doctor, ſaid, in Anſwer to the Repeal of this Declaration, by a Clauſe in the Act of the Firſt of King William and Queen Mary, for abrogating the old Oaths, and appointing new ones; that it is a very tender Repeal, if it be one. I did not, my Lords, well underſtand his Meaning; but I am ſure, that is a very tender Anſwer, if it be any at all. My Lords, if it be thought that this Declaration, as it is enjoin'd by the Corporation-Act, is not repeal'd, becauſe the Corporation-Act is not particularly mention'd in the Clauſe of the Act of the Firſt of King William and Queen Mary, which repeals the Declaration; I anſwer, After the Militia-Act, and the Act of Uniformity are mentioned, there follow general Words, Any Law or Statute to the contrary notwithſtanding: And this repeals the Declaration as to that Act, as well as to the other

Two

Two Acts. And this Opinion has prevail'd univerſally; and if it were otherwiſe, there is ſcarce a Corporation in England, but would be diſſolv'd by the Incapacity of their Members.

But the ſame Council argu'd, That the Doctrine mention'd in that Declaration muſt be true Doctrine, or the Declaration would not have been enjoin'd and taken ſo long as it was; and the Repeal don't make the Propoſition falſe: And we might as well argue the Solemn League and Covenant to be a Lawful Oath. My Lords, As to the Declaration againſt the Covenant, that was conſider'd as a Temporary Thing only, and, by the Act of Uniformity, was to ceaſe upon the 25th of March, 1682. and therefore not at all to be compar'd with the other Declaration, which was intended to be perpetual. As to the Truth of the Doctrine in this Declaration which was repeal'd, I'll admit it to be as true as the Doctor's Council aſſert it; that is, with an Exception of Caſes of Neceſſity; and it was not repeal'd becauſe it was falſe, underſtanding it with that Reſtriction; but it was repeal'd, becauſe it might be interpreted in an unconfin'd Senſe, and excluſive of that Reſtriction; and being ſo underſtood, would reflect on the Juſtice of the Revolution: And this the Legiſlature had at Heart, and were very jealous of; and by this Repeal of that Declaration, gave a Parliamentary, or Legiſlative Admonition, againſt aſſerting this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance in an unlimited Senſe.

My Lords, I muſt confeſs, I did not expect to hear the Aſſociation and the Abjuration-Oath brought in as aſſerting this Doctrine; if they do, this may ſerve to account for their taking them who believe that Doctrine, which otherwiſe perhaps they would be at a Loſs to find an honeſt Reaſon for. But, my Lords, Doth engaging to ſtand by, and aſſiſt one another againſt all the King's Enemies, or ſwearing to defend the King or Queen againſt all Traiterous Conſpiracies, ſignify any more than what is implied in the old Oath of Allegiance? There is, my Lords, indeed ſomething more in the Aſſociation and Abjuration-Oath; for the Perſon taking them in his late Majeſty's Time, declar'd, That he believ'd in his Conſcience King William was Rightful and Lawful King of this Realm. This certainly put the Conſcientious Taker of 'em upon a Conſideration, of the Foundation on which that Right and Title was built. And ſince there was no Foundation for it but the Revolution, and that Revolution was founded on Reſiſtance; how thoſe could bring themſelves up to take that Aſſociation, or that Abjuration-Oath, who believ'd that Reſiſtance unlawful, I am at a Loſs to know.

My Lords, Upon this Head of theſe ſeveral Acts of Parliament that have been mention'd, I beg Leave to obſerve, That as it is not to be ſuppos'd it was the Original Intention of any Laws to enervate the Force of all the Laws, ſo your Lordſhips ſee, there are ſince the Revolution Laws that do exclude any ſuch Suppoſition, and do affirm that Indefeaſible Inheritance which the People have in the Laws.

My Lords, The next Part of the Evidence offer'd by the Doctor, was the Homilies; which are ſaid to be confirm'd by Act of Parliament, becauſe the Articles of the Church of England are ſo; and the Thirty fifth Article approves the Homilies, as containing godly and wholſome Doctrine; and the Clergy are oblig'd to read and ſubſcribe thoſe Articles.

My Lords, I believe it will be admitted, that no more is intended by that Subſcription, but that the Doctrine contain'd in the Homilies is right in the main, and not that every Sentence in 'em is ſo: For in this laſt Senſe, I believe, never any Divine ſubſcrib'd the Articles; and it will be hard to name any Preacher, or Writer of Note, who has not contradicted ſome Paſſage or other in them: Nay, as to one, the general and approved Practice of the Church is againſt it; I mean that Paſſage, which condemns the Uſe of Organs in Churches.

And ſurely, my Lords, the Senſe of the Homilies can't be found out, by reading ſelect Paſſages out of them, (as was done in the Doctor's Defence) but by obſerving the Frame and Tendency of the whole: And I may appeal to your Lordſhips, and eſpecially to my Lords the Biſhops, whether thoſe who compil'd the Homilies againſt Rebellion, ſeem'd to have had at all under their Conſideration the Caſe of a total Subverſion of the Conſtitution. It's plain, the main Deſign of thoſe Homilies was againſt the Riſings of the Popiſh Faction, and the plauſible and popular Pretences made uſe of by them for ſupporting their Rebellions. Did not that Great Queen, in whoſe Time the latter Book of Homilies was compiled, explain Her own Opinion on this Point, by the Aſſiſtance ſhe gave to the Hollanders againſt the Spaniſh King, their Sovereign? Did not the Parliament explain Themſelves, by the Supplies given to the Queen for that Purpoſe? And did not the Clergy explain Themſelves likewiſe, by the Supplies granted in Convocation, in Favour of that Aſſiſtance? Can it therefore be imagin'd, the Homilies intended to condemn that Reſiſtance, which the Queen and the whole Nation, nay, even the Clergy themſelves aſſembled in Convocation, approv'd of? And I dare ſay, if Doctor Sacheverell had read any of the Homilies againſt Rebellion, which he ſays he is commanded to do, if there be no Sermon on the Fifth of November; I ſay, if he had read any one of them to his Congregation at St. Paul's, not one of his Auditors would have thought the Revolution condemn'd by the Homily, whatever they might have thought of the Doctor.

My Lords, That which we accuſe him for, is, That he lays down this General Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, in Terms excluſive of any Exception; and, not content with that, points out the Revolution, for Men to compare it with, and condemn it by. How much better would it have become the Doctor, to have imitated that Zeal which appears in the Compilers of thoſe Homilies, for a Proteſtant Queen againſt a Popiſh Faction; than to arraign the Revolution, upon the defaming of which, the Hopes of a Popiſh Faction againſt a Proteſtant Queen are built?

My Lords, Let us now conſider the other Books, or Writings, the Doctor has produced to juſtify his Doctrine: Theſe are chiefly, if not all of them, the Labours of Divines; and I will place them in theſe Two Claſſes, Thoſe before the Revolution, and thoſe ſince. And, my Lords, I will ſay, If this Queſtion of Submiſſion were left by the Divines, to thoſe who make the Municipal Laws of their Country, or the Nature of Laws in general, their Study; and they would confine themſelves to the preſſing a Legal Submiſſion only, founded (as it is by the Law of England) on common Conſent, and common Good; it would be much more for the Honour of Religion, and the Peace and Felicity both of the Sovereign and the Subject.

And this will be very manifeſt, if your Lordſhips call to mind but Two of the Doctor's Quotations before the Revolution, which were read to your Lordſhips: The one is a Paſſage out of Biſhop Sanderſon, the other the Oxford Decree in 1683.

My Lords, Biſhop Sanderſon (and he only of all that have been quoted) has put the Caſe of Reſiſtance for the Preſervation of Church and State, which are but other Words for the Conſtitution; and has deliver'd this Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance in ſuch unlimited and bold Terms, as I ſhall not repeat, to create a Second Diſpleaſure in this Great Aſſembly. And I willingly admit, he was a very Learned, Judicious, and Pious Prelate: And if ſo great and good a Man fell into ſuch indiſcreet, indecent and ſhocking Expreſſions on that Subject, as did viſibly affect ſuch an Aſſembly as this, one would think it ſhould diſcourage others from delivering that Doctrine in ſuch a Latitude.

The next is the Oxford Decree, which condemns all Reſiſtance whatſoever: But, my Lords, it is obſervable, that in the ſame Decree, there is a Condemnation of this Propoſition that I am going to read to your Lordſhips; That it is Lawful to Preclude the next Heir from his Right and Succeſſion to the Crown: And yet at the ſame Time, the condemning this Propoſition, that is, the holding, affirming or maintaining the contrary Propoſition, was (by the 13th Eliz. Cap. 1.) made High Treaſon in her Time, and a Forfeiture of Goods and Chattels ever after. And how the Law now ſtands as to that Particular, by the Act for Securing Her Majeſty's Perſon and Government, and the Succeſſion of the Crown of Great Britain in the Proteſtant Line, every one knows. And, my Lords, when we find ſo Great and Learned a Body criminally erring in a Point ſo Fundamental, and upon which our Proſpect of Happineſs to future Ages doth, under God, depend; ought it not to diſcourage particular Divines, from pretending to determine Points of Law and Policy? For my own Part, I ſhould hope, that that Univerſity's having fall'n in at firſt ſo heartily with the Revolution, is as ſincere a Condemnation of the Doctrine of Unlimited Non-Reſiſtance, as their ſolemn taking the Abjuration-Oath is a publick Profeſſion, that a Parliamentary Excluſion is Lawful.

As for all the Paſſages which have been read to your Lordſhips out of the Books or Sermons of Divines before the Revolution, in Favour of Non-Reſiſtance, your Lordſhips may obſerve their Reaſons reach only ſo far, as when the Miſchief is not Univerſal; or if it be Univerſal, where it is tolerable, and not ſo miſchievous as a Civil War. I ſhall not mention any Paſſages in them, (which have not been read) to limit the Generality of the Expreſſions concerning Non-Reſiſtance; becauſe I avoid bringing in any Thing, which hath not been given in Evidence. But how candid the Doctor's Collections have been, your Lordſhips may judge by that Quotation out of my Lord Biſhop of Salisbury's Book, where there is an expreſs Exception of the Caſe of ſubverting Fundamentals: But your Lordſhips may ſee the ſame Candor ſhining out in ſeveral Paſſages of the Doctor's Sermon, with reſpect to that Reverend Prelate, whoſe Services, my Lords, (before, and at the Time of the Revolution,) will never be forgotten by one Part of the Nation, nor forgiven by another.

My Lords, I come now to the Sermons and Writings ſince the Revolution: And I may appeal to your Lordſhips, whether they don't moſt plainly condemn the Doctor; thoſe, I mean, where we had the Fortune to be ready to call for other Paſſages to be read out of the ſame Books. Does not my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln expreſly mention the Caſe of the Revolution, and juſtify the Reſiſtance then uſed? How carefully does his Grace the Archbiſhop of York limit this Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, which the Doctor ſays ought to be deliver'd in the moſt unconfin'd Terms? And it is by his Grace's Notion of this Doctrine, that the Commons deſire this Cauſe may be judged and determined. I beg Leave to read again to your Lordſhips his remarkable Words: Care muſt be taken, that this General Doctrine be not miſapplied in particular Countries. Tho' Non-Reſiſtance or Paſſive Obedience be a Duty to all Subjects, and under all Governments, yet it is not expreſs'd the ſame way in all Places; but both the Objects and the Inſtances of it do vary in different Nations, according to the different Models of their Government. To ſpeak this as plainly as I can: As the Laws of the Land are the Meaſures of our Active Obedience, ſo are alſo the ſame Laws the Meaſure of our Submiſſion. And as we are not bound to obey, but where the Laws and Conſtitution require our Obedience; ſo neither are we bound to ſubmit, but as the Laws and Conſtitution do require our Submiſſion.

This, my Lords, is the Doctrine the Commons are maintaining, and are calling this Criminal to an Account for contradicting. If our Obedience and Submiſſion is not to be extended to the Prejudice of the Conſtitution, the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, for preſerving the Conſtitution, ſtands juſtified, and the Doctor's unlimited Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance ſtands condemn'd.

How prudently does his Grace, my Lords, caution the Doctor, and the reſt of the Clergy, in another Part of his Sermon, by theſe Words? If, indeed, a Preacher ſhould in the Pulpit preſume to give his Judgment about the Management of Publick Affairs, or to lay down Doctrines (as from Chriſt) about the Forms and Models of Kingdoms or Commonwealths, or to adjuſt the Limits of the Prerogative of the Prince, or of the Liberties of the Subject in our preſent Government: I ſay, if a Divine ſhould meddle with ſuch Matters in his Sermon, I do not know how he can be excuſed from the juſt Cenſure of meddling with Things that nothing concern him. This is indeed a Practiſing in State Matters, and is Uſurping an Office that belongs to another Profeſſion, and to Men of another Character. And I ſhould account it every whit as undecent in a Clergyman, to take upon him to deal in theſe Points, as it would be for him to determine Titles of Lands in the Pulpit, which are in Diſpute in Weſtminſter-Hall. And how well the Doctor has obſerv'd this neceſſary Caution laid down by his Grace, I leave your Lordſhips to conſider.

My Lords, I have purpoſely omitted taking notice of any Writings, except ſuch as were produced by the Doctor, and I am ſatisfied how ſuperficially I have conſider'd them: But, in general, I may appeal to your Lordſhips, whether in the loweſt Ebb of Liberty, there have been wanting thoſe in this as well as other Countries, who have denied this ſlaviſh Doctrine of Unlimited Non-Reſiſtance; whether ſince the Revolution this Nation has been ſo ungrateful to their Deliverer, or unthankful for their Deliverance, as to want thoſe who have maintain'd the the Principles of the Revolution, and have ſhew'd them to be as agreeable to the Chriſtian Religion, as they are to the Nature of that Excellent Government we live under, which is that of Limited Monarchy.

And yet notwithſtanding the unanſwer'd Performances of divers, both of the Clergy and Laity, upon this Subject, the Doctor has the Boldneſs to affirm his Doctrine to be the Doctrine of our Bleſſed Saviour and his Apoſtles.

My Lords, I can't mention this, without the deepeſt Concern for the Honour of the Chriſtian Religion. I beſeech your Lordſhips, What is Liberty but Juſtice, and what is Juſtice, but doing to every one as we would be done by? And nothing, I think, is likelier to promote the Practice of this Chriſtian Precept, than ſpreading a true Senſe and Love of Liberty, that Principle which caſts out of us a narrow Regard to our ſelves, and introduces a diffuſive Benevolence to others.

And againſt this Principle is it, that the Doctor has offended.

My Lords, I have endeavour'd to ſhew that the Charge in the Firſt Article ſtands prov'd againſt the Doctor, and that this Proof remains unanſwer'd; and if ſo, his being a Miniſter of the Goſpel, his having taken the Oaths to the late King, and to Her preſent Majeſty, his being a Fellow of that College which was in a particular manner delivered by the Revolution, are all of them Aggravations of his Offence (if it can be aggravated;) and which, if prov'd, his own Council admit, brings a foul Imputation on Her Majeſty and Her Government, makes Her Government an Uſurpation, and Her Subjects Rebels; and that no Puniſhment can be too great for him.

My Lords, I never ſaw that Criminal for whom I had not a hearty Compaſſion, but there is both Compaſſion and Juſtice due to the injur'd Innocent. Your Lordſhips have before you on the one hand, the Care and Concern of Doctor Sacheverell; on the other, the Honour and Proſperity of a wiſe and brave Nation, who as they have thought nothing too much to give or hazard to defend their Liberties againſt a Foreign Enemy; ſo they hope your Lordſhips Juſtice on this Offender, will ſecure thoſe Liberties againſt Domeſtick ones.

Mr. Sollicitor General. MY Lords, I am commanded by the Commons to join with the Learned Gentleman who ſpoke laſt, in Replying to the Defence that has been made upon the Firſt Article of this Impeachment, which the Commons inſiſt upon to be well grounded, and fully prov'd, notwithſtanding the ſeveral Objections and Excuſes that have been offer'd by Doctor Sacheverell and his Council.

One of the Doctor's Council has agreed, That if he has aſſerted, that the Reſiſtance uſed to bring about the Revolution was Unlawful, no Puniſhment can be too great for him; But what they have offer'd to your Lordſhips in his Defence is, That no ſuch Poſition can be made out without the help of Innuendo's and forced Conſtructions, which infer a Meaning contrary to the Natural Senſe and Import of his Words; and this way of Charging a Man with a Crime, they truly ſay, is not agreeable to the Rules of Law, and would contradict one of the Reaſons given for the Judgment of the Houſe of Lords, in the Caſe of Sir Samuel Barnardiſton: And if this was the Caſe, it would not become the Commons of Great Britain, who have ſuch an Affectionate Regard to the Laws and Liberties of their Country, to proceed upon an Impeachment ſo ill grounded. But when the Commons had ſo fully and particularly proved the Aſſertions charged upon the Doctor by this Article, they little expected to have heard that his Words had been wreſted to wrong Meanings, and made to ſpeak what he never thought: And therefore, ſince the Queſtion depends altogether upon Conſtruction, and your Lordſhips have been told that the Paſſage upon which this Charge is grounded, has not been fully ſtated, the Commons muſt give you the trouble of Reading the Paſſage at large, as it ſtands in the Sermon; that your Lordſhips may judge, whether they have not taken his Words in the common and ordinary Senſe, and given them the only Meaning they can bear.

The Paſſage is in theſe Words.

" The grand Security of the Government, and " the very Pillar upon which it ſtands, is founded " upon the ſteady Belief of the Subjects Obligati- " on to an Abſolute and Unconditional Obedience to " the Supreme Power in all Things Lawful, and " the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pre- " tence whatſoever. But this Fundamental Do- " ctrine, notwithſtanding its Divine Sanction in " the expreſs Command of God in Scripture, and " without which, it is impoſſible any Government, " of any Kind or Denomination in the World, " ſhould ſubſiſt with Safety, and which has been ſo " long the Honourable and Diſtinguiſhing Chara- " cteriſtick of our Church, is now, it ſeems, quite " Exploded and Ridicul'd out of Countenance, as " an Uufaſhionable, Superannuated, nay (which is " more wonderful) as a dangerous Tenet, utterly " Inconſiſtent with the Right, Liberty, and Property " of the People; who, as our New Preachers, and " New Politicians teach us, (I ſuppoſe by a New " and Unheard-of Goſpel, as well as Laws) have, " in Contradiction to Both, the Power inveſted in " them, the Fountain and Original of it, to Cancel " their Allegiance at pleaſure, and call their Sove- " reign to Account for High Treaſon againſt his Su- " preme Subjects, forſooth! Nay, to Dethrone and " Murther him for a Criminal, as they did the Roy- " al Martyr, by a Judiciary Sentence. And, what " is almoſt Incredible, preſume to make their Court " to their Prince, by maintaining ſuch Antimonar- " chical Schemes. But God be thank'd! neither " the Conſtitution of our Church or State is ſo far " alter'd, but that by the Laws of both, (ſtill in " Force, and which I hope for ever will be) theſe " Damnable Poſitions, let them come from the " Pulpit or the Preſs, either from Rome or Geneva, " are condemned for Rebellion and High Treaſon. " Our Adverſaries think they effectually ſtop our " Mouths, and have us ſure and unanſwerable on " this Point, when they urge the Revolution of this " Day in their Defence. But certainly they are the " greateſt Enemies of that, and his late Majeſty, " and the moſt Ungrateful for the Deliverance, who " endeavour to caſt ſuch Black and Odious Colours " upon Both. How often muſt they be told, that " the King himſelf Diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation " of Reſiſtance in his Declaration; and that the " Parliament declar'd, That they ſet the Crown up- " on his Head, upon no other Title, but that of the " Vacancy of the Throne? And did they not Una- " nimouſly condemn to the Flames (as it juſtly de- " ſerv'd) that Infamous Libel that would have " pleaded the Title of Conqueſt, by which Reſiſt- " ance was ſuppos'd?

And the Queſtion now before your Lordſhips is, Whether by theſe words he has aſſerted, That his late Majeſty in his Declaration diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution; which are the Aſſertions charg'd upon him in this Article, as Suggeſting and Maintaining, that the neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the late happy Revolution were odious and unjuſtifiable: Now that there was Reſiſtance in the Revolution, and that ſuch Reſiſtance, in a caſe of that abſolute and unavoidable Neceſſity, is conſiſtent with the Doctrine of the Church, and the Fundamental Law of the Kingdom, is agreed by the Council; and they have endeavour'd to convince your Lordſhips, that the Doctor has aſſerted nothing to the contrary; for they ſay, "The Reſiſtance which the Doctor affirms "the King to have diſclaim'd, was only a Reſiſtance "which tended to Conqueſt; and that the Doctor "did well to wipe off this Imputation, for the Par-"liament had declared it injurious to his rightful "Title to the Crown, and had order'd a Treatiſe to "be burnt, which Suggeſted a Title by Conqueſt; "and that the Doctor having his Eye in that Ex-"preſſion on the matter of Conqueſt, expreſſed the "ſame by Reſiſtance, which was applicable to the "Subject-Matter before, and therefore ought not to "be wreſted to any other Purpoſe.

This, my Lords, is the Turn which the Council would give to the Doctor's Aſſertion, That the King diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance. And indeed the Words of the Sermon are ſo plain and particular, that they are forced to have Recourſe to this Evaſion of a Reſiſtance by Conqueſt: But I wonder Gentlemen can argue in this manner, and at the ſame time ſpeak of reading the Words with Candor and Ingenuity; when 'tis moſt apparent that there is no previous Diſcourſe of a Title by Conqueſt, or of any Treatiſe in which it had been aſſerted, that could give occaſion for his vindicating the late King from any ſuch Imputation, or to which theſe Words can in any Conſtruction by applied; for the Doctor ſays nothing of Conqueſt 'till after he had Aſſerted that the King diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and then he goes on and lays another Foundation for the Settlement upon the Revolution, by grounding it upon the Vacancy of the Throne, before he ſays any thing about Conqueſt, or mentions the Book which had pleaded that Title; and even then he condemns that Title for no other Reaſon but becauſe it implied Reſiſtance; which plainly ſhews, that his Argument was carried on upon the Subject of Reſiſtance, and not upon that of Conqueſt.

And the Anſwer which they have given to that part of the Article, whereby he is charg'd with Aſſerting, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution, is equally evaſive.

What they have offer'd to your Lordſhips upon this Head is, That the Doctor is not ſpeaking of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, when he introduceth his Diſcouſe about caſting Black and Odious Colours, by ſaying, Our Adverſaries think they have us ſure and unanſwerable on this Point, when they urge the Revolution of this Day in their Defence; but of the damnable Poſitions with which the Doctor charges the new Preachers and new Politicians, in the Words immediately preceding: And in this place it is, that the Manager appointed to maintain this Article is charg'd with omitting about twenty or thirty Lines between the General Doctrine and the Paſſage concerning the Revolution, in which ſeveral diſtinct and entire Sentences are contain'd, concerning thoſe Perſons and their Principles, to which that Paſſage entirely relates: And your Lordſhips are told, that to apply the Inſtance of the Revolution to juſtify ſuch wicked Principles, is what the Doctor calls caſting Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution.

But the Commons take it to be very clear, That upon ſtating of the whole Paragraph, and all the Words in the order in which they lye, and upon comparing the ſeveral Paſſages, it will manifeſtly appear, that what the Doctor ſaid about caſting Black and Odious Colours upon the Revolution, can be applied only to thoſe who maintain, that the Reſiſtance us'd to bring about the Revolution was lawful and juſt, and that the Perſons he calls our Adverſaries are ſuch as urg'd the Revolution in oppoſition to his general Doctrine of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever; and not to thoſe who urge the Revolution in Defence of thoſe damnable Poſitions, which, he ſays, the new Preachers and new Politicians had laid down.

This the Commons apprehend to be the only Meaning that his Words in any Conſtruction can bear; for the Point he is ſpeaking of, and which he ſays his Adverſaries thought they had him ſure and unanſwerable upon, muſt be ſome certain ſingle Poſition which was mentioned before, ſome one Poſition or Principle, and not many; for 'tis this Point, not theſe Principles; and that ſingle Point could be no other, than the Point of Reſiſtance: And the Perſons he calls his Adverſaries, who think they have him ſo ſure, can be no other than thoſe who deny his general Doctrine, and not thoſe new Preachers and new Politicians, who ſay the People have a Power veſted in them to cancel their Allegiance at pleaſure; becauſe thoſe who deny this General Poſition of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance, as applied to any one particular Caſe, are certainly his Adverſaries, and Enemies to his Fundamental Doctrine: For whoever can find an excepted Caſe, or ſhew an Inſtance in which Reſiſtance is lawful, deſtroys his general Aſſertion. And he ſufficiently ſhews, that he meant thoſe who oppos'd his general Doctrine of abſolute Non-Reſiſtance, by our Adverſaries, when he ſays that they urg'd the Revolution of that Day in their Defence; becauſe the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, which was founded in Unavoidable Neceſſity, could be no Defence to a Man that was attack'd for aſſerting that the People might cancel their Allegiance at Pleaſure, or Dethrone and Murther their Sovereign by a Judiciary Sentence. For it can never be inferr'd from the Lawfulneſs of Reſiſtance at a Time when a Total Subverſion of the Government both in Church and State was intended, that a People may take up Arms and call their Sovereign to account at pleaſure; and therefore, ſince the Revolution could be of no Service in giving the leaſt colour for aſſerting any ſuch wicked Principle; the Doctor could never intend to put it into the Mouths of thoſe new Preachers and new Politicians for a Defence; unleſs it be his Opinion, that the Reſiſtance at the Revolution can bear any Parallel with the Execrable Murther of the Royal Martyr, ſo juſtly deteſted by the whole Nation; or that there was no other Difference between the two Caſes, than what the Learned Gentleman, who firſt ſpoke for him, was pleas'd to mention in the Concluſion of his Argument, by quoting an odious Expreſſion which I forbear to repeat: But it was very proper proper to take notice of the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, as an Objection to his general Doctrine, for it really is ſo; and 'tis impoſſible that Doctrine can be true in its full Extent, if the Reſiſtance at the Revolution was lawful; for 'tis moſt apparent, that the Juſtice of a Revolution, founded in Reſiſtance, and the Principle of Non-Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever, can never ſtand together.

And therefore he could mean nothing by the Point his Adverſaries thought they had him ſo ſure upon, but the general Poſition of Non-Reſiſtance, which was the only Point contended for in that Place; and he muſt mean thoſe only who denied his Doctrine of abſolute Non-Reſiſtance, by our Adverſaries: And having no other way of maintaining the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever, and of anſwering the Caſe of the Revolution, which, from the Reſiſtance that was in it, was made an Objection; he goes on and denies the Reſiſtance, by ſaying, That the King ſolemnly diſclaim'd the leaſt Imputation of Reſiſtance; and calls thoſe who ſay that there was any Reſiſtance in the Revolution, the greateſt Enemies of that and his late Majeſty, and the moſt ungrateful for the Deliverance, who endeavour to caſt ſuch Black and Odious Colours upon both.

This, my Lords, is plainly Aſſerting, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to repreſent it as Black and Odious; and this Aſſertion is fairly collected from the plain Courſe and Tendency of his Argument, not from ſtrain'd Inferences and Innuendo's, not from ſuppos'd or forc'd Conſtructions, but from his own Words, as they lye together, taken in their natural and genuine Senſe, and is the only Conſtruction that can give them any reaſonable Meaning or Coherence.

And therefore the Commons apprehend, That the Charge againſt the Doctor, for aſſerting, That to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution, is to caſt Black and Odious Colours upon his late Majeſty and the Revolution, is fully prov'd, and ſtands unanſwer'd.

But tho' the Charge, and the Paſſages produc'd for the Proof of it, are ſo very particular, and directly pointed at the Reſiſtance us'd to bring about the late happy Revolution, yet the Doctor and his Council are pleas'd to ſay, " That he has only Aſ-
" ſerted the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance in general
" Terms, as it has been taught by the Apoſtles,
" the Homilies, and the Fathers of the Church in " all Ages: That in this Caſe, as in all other gene" ral Propoſitions, Caſes of unavoidable Neceſſity,
" as the Revolution undoubtedly was, are always un-
" derſtood to be excepted; and that there is no
" other Difference between the Gentlemen of the " Houſe of Commons and the Doctor, but Whe" ther when the general Rule of Obedience is " taught, the particular Exceptions which may be " made out of that Rule are always to be expreſs'd;
" or, Whether when the general Rule is laid down,
" the particular Exceptions are not more properly
" to be underſtood or implied: And upon this ground they have been very Elaborate, and have produc'd many Proofs to ſatisfy your Lordſhips, that the Doctor's general Aſſertion of the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power upon any Pretence whatſoever, without mentioning any Exception, is warranted by the Doctrine of the Church, and by the Law of the Land.

But, with great Submiſſion, all this Pains might have been ſpar'd; for 'tis plain that the Doctor is not Impeach'd for preaching a general Doctrine, and enforcing the general Duty of Obedience, but for preaching againſt an Excepted Caſe, after he has ſtated the Exception. He is not Impeach'd for preaching the general Doctrine of Obedience, and the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance upon any Pretence whatſoever; but becauſe, having firſt laid down the general Doctrine as true, without any Exception, he ſtates the excepted Caſe, the Revolution in expreſs Terms, as an Objection; and then aſſumes the Conſideration of that excepted Caſe, denies there was any Reſiſtance in the Revolution; and aſſerts, that to impute Reſiſtance to the Revolution would caſt Black and Odious Colours upon it. This, my Lords, is not preaching the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance in the general Terms us'd by the Homilies, and the Fathers of the Church, where Caſes of Neceſſity may be underſtood to be excepted by a Tacit Implication, as the Council have allow'd; but is preaching directly againſt the Reſiſtance at the Revolution, which in the Courſe of this Debate has been all along admitted to be neceſſary and juſt, and can have no other Meaning, than to bring a Diſhonour upon the Revolution, and an Odium upon thoſe great and illuſtrious Perſons, thoſe Friends to the Monarchy and the Church, that aſſiſted in bringing it about. For had the Doctor intended any thing elſe, he would have treated the Caſe of the Revolution in a different manner, and have given it the true and fair Anſwer; he would have ſaid, that the Reſiſtance at the Revolution was of Abſolute Neceſſity, and the only Means left to revive the Conſtitution; and muſt be therefore taken as an excepted Caſe, and could never come within the Reach or Intention of the general Doctrine of the Church. But inſtead of this, he denies that there was any Reſiſtance in the Revolution, and repreſents it as a Scandal upon the Revolution to ſay there was any Reſiſtance in it; Thoſe, ſays he, are the greateſt Enemies to it, who caſt ſuch Black and Odious Colours upon it.

My Lords, If extraordinary Caſes, if Caſes of Neceſſity, which are implicitly Excepted, are not to be ſtated at the Time when the general Prohibition is inculcated, and it would be of dangerous Conſequence in this particular Inſtance of the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, " by picking Holes for " the Subject to creep out of his Allegiance"; I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips Conſideration, whether ſtating an Excepted Caſe, and then bringing it within the general Prohibition, particularly in this Inſtance of the Revolution, muſt not have the ſame pernicious Conſequence: " Does not this plainly ſhew what " Spirit the Doctor is of, and what he aims at?

But your Lordſhips have been told, that " What
" the Doctor aſſerts concerning the utter Illegality
" of Reſiſtance to the Supreme Power, can never
" be applied to the Revolution; for the Legiſlative,
" the King, Lords and Commons, is the Su" preme Power; and there was no Reſiſtance to
" the Lords and Commons, for they join'd
" with his late Majeſty in bringing about the Re" volution; the Reſiſtance was made only to that " unfortunate Prince who was then upon the " Throne. But 'tis plain from his applying the Illegality of Reſiſting the Supreme Power to the Caſe of the Revolution, that he meant the Executive Power, which was then Reſiſted; and he uſes Sovereign, and Prince, as Synonimous Terms with the Supreme Power in other parts of the ſame Paragraph of the Sermon; for he ſpeaks of calling ing the Sovereign to Account, and of Cancelling Allegiance at Pleaſure, which can be due only to the Prince; which ſhews, that the Prince only, and not the Legiſlature, can be underſtood by His Supreme Power.

I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips, to ſhew that the Reſiſtance us'd at the Revolution was conſiſtent with the Doctrine of the Church, and with the Law and Conſtitution of England: This is no Part of the Controverſy, and is not diſputed by the Council; for they agree ſuch Caſes to be excepted out of the General Rule, and profeſs to uſe the ſeveral Paſſages that have been read to your Lordſhips, only to excuſe or extenuate the Doctor's Offence, and not to arraign the Juſtice of the Revolution; and therefore I ſhall not enter into a particular Examination of them, but only obſerve, That if the Books, out of which theſe Paſſages were taken, were narrowly examined, 'tis poſſible ſome Expreſſions might be found, to ſhew that the Authors never intended that their General Rule ſhould extend to Caſes where the total Subverſion of a Government was aim'd at. For your Lordſhips muſt needs have obſerv'd, from the Uſe that has been made of the Book of a Learned Prelate, call'd, A Vindication of the Authority, Conſtitution and Laws of the Church and State of Scotland; Printed in 1673. that a perfect State of Truth is not altogether to be depended upon, from the Proofs that have been collected out of ſeveral Authors, and read to your Lordſhips; and that the Sincerity of the Collector is very much to be queſtion'd: For that Book was produced to prove the Duty of Abſolute Submiſſion, and a Paſſage was read for that Purpoſe; but when the Managers look'd into the Book, they found another Paſſage, where the Author ſtating the Caſe of Abuſes tending to a total Subverſion, allows, That in ſuch a Caſe, the Supreme Power may be adminiſtred by another: Which ſhews, That this Reverend Prelate, who was ſo inſtrumental in the Revolution, did not act in Contradiction to his former Sentiments, (as was inſinuated, by citing this Treatiſe;) but was firm and conſtant to himſelf, when he embark'd in that Glorious Enterprize.

Several Sermons that have been preach'd ſince the Revolution, have been likewiſe offer'd to your Lordſhips, to ſhew that the Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance has been deliver'd in general Terms; but theſe can be of no Service in his Defence, for the Reaſons that have been given. Beſides, the Commons don't think themſelves concern'd to enter into the Examination of private Opinions. And for thoſe that have been preach'd by the Right Reverend Fathers of the Church now living, they are the beſt Expoſitors of their own Meaning; and I ſhould miſ-ſpend your Lordſhips Time, to enter into any Explication of them. The Doctor has appeal'd to the Right Reverend Fathers of the Church; to theſe Right Reverend Fathers we leave him; not doubting but the Nation will be ſatisfied how much they are concern'd for the Honour of the Revolution, and the Security of the preſent Happy Eſtabliſhment under Her Majeſty, by the juſt Judgment they will give upon this Occaſion.

And as to the Laws of the Kingdom, there needs little to be ſaid, after what the Learned Gentleman who ſpoke laſt, has offer'd to your Lordſhips; eſpecially ſince the Council for the Doctor have all of them own'd, That the General Expreſſions in the Laws don't extend to any ſuch Caſe as that of the Revolution, which no Municipal Law can be ſuppos'd to include. And if Doctor Sacheverell had been ſatisfied with laying down the General Doctrines of Obedience and Non-Reſiſtance, in the manner the Laws have done, the Commons had never given your Lordſhips this Trouble. 'Tis his entring into the Debate of what is agreed by his own Council to be an Excepted Caſe, and his arraigning the Juſtice of the Revolution, (which has been already ſtated at large to your Lordſhips) that has given Occaſion for the Proſecution upon this Article.

Beſides this, there have been other Things ſaid in the Doctor's Behalf.

The Commons had alledg'd, That to ſhake the Juſtice of the Revolution, and the Validity of thoſe Acts of Parliament, by which Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown was declared, and the Succeſſion ſettled in the Proteſtant Line, was a Matter of the greateſt Conſequence, at a Time when the Hereditary Right to the Crown was conteſted; and that the Friends of the Pretender could advance his Intereſt upon no other Ground. But it has been urg'd for the Doctor, That he could never mean any Service to the Pretender; for he aſſerts the Hereditary Right to be in the Queen; and that thoſe who deny Her Hereditary Right, are moſt like to bring in the Pretender. And by this Anſwer, they inſinuate, That the Doctor has aſſerted an Hereditary Right in Her Majeſty; and that thoſe who defend Her Parliamentary Title, deny Her Hereditary Right. The Paſſage they cite for his aſſerting an Hereditary Right in Her Majeſty, is Pag. 2. where he calls Her Majeſty, The Good and Pious Relict of the Royal Family: And they argue, That if Her Majeſty be the Relict, and the only Prince of that Family left, ſhe muſt have the Hereditary Right of Courſe.

This Paſſage, your Lordſhips cannot but obſerve, requires ſome Straining, to give it any Appearance of anſwering the Purpoſe to which they would apply it; and after all, it can carry no ſuch Meaning: Her Majeſty is not the only Deſcendant of the Royal Family now in being; there are ſeveral Branches of it yet remaining; and I can't believe, that the Gentlemen who uſe this Argument, intend to exclude the Illuſtrious Houſe of Hanover from being Part of it. In the next Place, they turn it upon the Commons, as if they denied the Hereditary Right (which they ſhall ever avow) when they aſſerted the Title by Act of Parliament. I ſubmit it to your Lordſhips, Whether any thing more was ſaid, than that the Hereditary Right was conteſted? And this is notorious to all the World - - - - is taken notice of in our Oath of Abjuration, and was claim'd Two Years ago, by the Pretender's Attempting an Invaſion. And in ſuch a Caſe, 'tis certainly the Duty of every Subject, to make good all the Fences which guard Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown. And, my Lords, We have Reaſon to lay ſome Weight upon a Parliamentary Title, ſince the Proteſtant Succeſſion entirely depends upon it; and to defend the Power of Parliament, to limit the Succeſſion of the Crown, ſince the Doctor has offer'd to your Lordſhips in Evidence a Decree of the Univerſity of Oxford, in the Year 1683. where this Propoſition, viz. "That it is Lawful to Preclude "the next Heir from his Right and Succeſſion to "the Crown, was ſolemnly condemned, as Falſe, "Seditious and Impious:" Which I the rather take notice of, becauſe the Doctor relies ſo much upon the Authority of that Univerſity. But I muſt take Leave to ſay, That if the ſame Principle ſhould ſtill continue to be taught, or to be believ'd in that Univerſity, where ſo many of our Gentlemen receive their firſt Impreſſions, it muſt one Time or other involve us in Blood, and leave Poſterity in endleſs Diſputes about the Title to the Crown. And therefore 'tis of the greateſt Conſequence to Her Majeſty, and the Security of Her Perſon and Government, the Continuance of the Succeſſion in the Proteſtant Line, and the Peace and Happineſs of this Kingdom, to maintain the Power of Parliament to ſettle the Succeſſion to the Crown; which has been exercis'd in all Times, and frequently reſorted to by Her Majeſty's greateſt and wiſeſt Predeceſſors. This is not to make way for the Pretender, but to ſhew that he is effectually and legally excluded; and that Her Majeſty has not only the Hereditary Right, but the Sanction of an Act of Parliament, which has been always thought ſufficient to bind the Succeſſion to the Crown, and is the plain way to eſtabliſh Her Majeſty's Throne againſt all Attempts whatſoever.

But your Lordſhips are told, That theſe Sermons were not preach'd with a Seditious Intention; and that the Doctor can never be ſuppos'd to have a Deſign to undermine the Government, by Preaching up the utter Illegality of Reſiſtance.

This, my Lords, has indeed ſome Shew of an Excuſe; but if your Lordſhips conſider in what manner he has applied his Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, and the Uſe he has made of it, together with the General Deſign of the Sermon, which is a virulent Invective throughout; it will appear, that he could not take a more proper Courſe to incite the People to Sedition, and to create Jealouſies and Diſcontents in the Kingdom. For, Firſt, He endeavours to ſhew, That if there was any Reſiſtance in the Revolution, the Foundations of our preſent Happy Settlement were laid in an unlawful Force; becauſe ſuch Reſiſtance was, as he ſays, utterly Illegal, Odious, and Unjuſtifiable. And having laid this Ground, he charges Her Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under Her, with a General Male-Adminiſtration: And what Inference can the People make from ſuch Poſitions as theſe; but that the Government they are under is ill founded, and therefore no Obedience is due to it; and ſince there is a General Miſmanagement in the whole Adminiſtration of the Executive Power, 'tis their Intereſt to get rid of it as ſoon as they can?

This, my Lords, is the plain Tendency of his whole Diſcourſe; and whoſe Intereſt is beſt ſerv'd by ſuch Diſcourſes as theſe, whether that of Her Majeſty, our moſt Gracious Queen, or that of the Pretender, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips impartial Conſideration.

My Lords, The Doctor will have no Reaſon to complain of being hardly us'd, in having his Intentions cenſur'd as ſeditious, if he conſiders what that Great Prelate, my Lord Archbiſhop of York, has ſaid in the Sermon that has been produc'd in Evidence before your Lordſhips; in which there is this Paragraph, viz.

" They are the Factious, they are the Setters up " or Abettors of Parties, who endeavour to deſtroy, " or unſettle, or diſparage, or at leaſt to hurt and " weaken the Government and the Laws, as they " are eſtabliſh'd; let the Principles upon which " they go, or the Pretences they make, be what " they will.

And if his Seditious Intentions be apparent from the Sermon, his having taken the Oaths of Allegiance, his Signing the Aſſociation, and his taking the Abjuration, are ſo many Aggravations of his Guilt.

I have troubled your Lordſhips a great while; but I can't forbear taking notice of one Thing, which the Doctor has complain'd of as a Hardſhip; I mean, that he has been proſecuted in this Publick Manner by an Impeachment, by which, he ſays, he ſhall have been abundantly puniſh'd, tho' he ſhould have the Happineſs to be at laſt acquitted. But this Complaint is anſwer'd by his own Council, who acknowledge his Caſe to be a Cauſe of very great Moment; and that the Points now under your Lordſhips Conſideration, are proper only to be ſettled in Parliament. And certainly, no other Courſe could have been ſo proper: For when the Foundations of the Government in Church and State are apparently ſtruck at, and undermin'd, under Pretence of Zeal for the Conſtitution; when Her Majeſty's Title to the Crown is endeavour'd to be weaken'd, under the Colours of Obedience and Loyalty; when the Quiet and Repoſe of Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects is diſturb'd, under a pretended Zeal for the Good of the Church; when the Safety of the Church is in the greateſt Danger, from thoſe who declare the moſt affectionate Concern for her Welfare and Proſperity; when the Fathers of the Church are defam'd, by thoſe who pretend the greateſt Reverence for the Epiſcopal Order; and when Her Majeſty's Happy Adminiſtration is publickly vilified and expos'd, in the moſt audacious and inſolent manner; where ſhould the Commons apply for Juſtice, but to this Supreme Judicature? Or where could they expect an adequate Remedy to theſe great and growing Evils, but in full Parliament?

They have therefore brought this great Offender before your Lordſhips; and have the higheſt Satisfaction, in a full Aſſurance of your Lordſhips Impartial Judgment.

Mr. Lechmere. MY Lords, The Gentlemen who have now ſpoke before me, have gone thro' the Subſtance of the Reply to this Firſt Article: They have ſhewn to your Lordſhips the Weakneſs and Vanity of the Defence, which has been made to it; and have fully reaſſerted this Part of our Charge, by which Doctor Sacheverell ſtands accus'd, in the Name of the Commons of Great Britain, of Condemning the Neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the Happy Revolution.

Your Lordſhips Conſideration of this Branch of our Impeachment, and of what has been offer'd to you in Maintenance of it, has, doubtleſs, created in your Minds an Impreſſion equal to its Weight, and to the many great Conſequences which depend upon it: But we perſuade our ſelves, that when you reflect on the Nature and Method of the Defence, 'twill more clearly diſcover to your Lordſhips and the World, how neceſſary a Task the Commons have taken on themſelves in this Proſecution; of what high Concern it is to Her Majeſty and Her Government, and to our common Security, that this Fundamental Queſtion ſhould receive this Publick and Solemn Diſcuſſion; That the falſe Zeal, which the diſguis'd Enemies of Her Majeſty's Title have the Confidence to put on, by endeavouring to cover the worſt Deſigns, under the Sacred Names of God and Religion, and the ſtrongeſt Profeſſions of Loyalty and Allegiance, may be brought to the Teſt, and the true Foundations of the Safety of the Kingdom be underſtood and aſſerted.

The Part assigned me in opening the Charge, leads me to take Notice of some Passages which have fall'n from the Council; and tho' what I shall first mention, has been already observed and fully refuted, yet I must beg your Patience to resume it a little. The Gentleman who began the Defence said, That 'twas insisted on the first Day of the Trial, That the Doctor had not only asserted the utter Illegality of Resistance on any Pretence whatsoever; ☞ but that he had likewise declared himself, That the Revolution was not such a Case as ought to be excepted out of his General Rule, and this he said, he denied; and if such an Expression could be found in the Doctor's Sermon, he should think no Punishment too great for him. Your Lordships could not but observe the Argument which immediately followed: 'Tis one thing, says he, expresly to affirm the Revolution is such a Case as ought not to be excepted, and another thing not to make that Exception. You were told, indeed, in the Beginning of the same Discourse, and afterwards by the Doctor himself, That his general Assertion of the utter Illegality of Resistance on any Pretence whatsoever, did not relate to the Resistance used to bring about the Revolution, it being applied to the Supreme Legislative Power, to which no Resistance was then made, the Lords and Commons joining in it. This, my Lords, is a Meaning which the Doctor had not in view when he preach'd the Sermon; for, by observing the Passages, you will find that the Words Supreme Power, are no Part of the Assertion of the utter Illegality of Resistance on any Pretence whatsoever. He doth, indeed, affirm unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power in all things lawful, but the Illegality of Resistance is indefinitely and universally affirm'd, and not restrain'd to the Supreme Power. 'Tis likewise evident, not only from his mentioning the Case of the Revolution, which was the Case of Resistance to the King, as an Objection to his general Rule of the utter Illegality of Resistance, but likewise from the subsequent Parts of the same Paragraph, that the Non-Resistance which he preach'd up, was Non-Resistance to the Supreme Executive Power; and, indeed, this is still more evident from the Fallacy of that, which is offer'd to induce your Lordships to think otherwise, it being undeniable, that the Lords and Commons did not join in that Resistance, as part of the Legislative and Supreme Power, but as part of the collective Body of the Nation. This Subterfuge, frivolous as it is, being soon departed from, the Argument proceeded upon the Supposition, that the general Assertion in the Sermon was to be understood of the Supreme Executive Power. I return therefore to the Objection as stated before, which being deliver'd with uncommon Ostentation, your Lordships will allow me to enter into the Examination of it. The Subjects Obligation to an unconditional Obedience to the Supreme Power in all things Lawful, and the utter Illegality of Resistance on any Pretence whatsoever, is the Doctor's general Rule, which he affirms to be the Security of our Government, and the Belief of this the very Pillar on which it stands. Your Lordships may here observe, that the Doctor, in delivering his general Rule, has gone pretty much beyond that Apostle he would be thought to imitate: The Apostle in general Terms enjoins the Duties of Obedience and Subjection to the higher Powers, not mentioning any Exception, when he lays down those Precepts. The Doctor goes on, and his next Sentences contain a general Observation, That tho' his fundamental Doctrine was now become unfashionable and exploded, as a dangerous Tenet, inconsistent with the Rights, Liberties and Property of the People; yet, God be thanked, it still continued to be the Doctrine both of Church and State: And then follow these Words, Our Adversaries think they effectually stop our Mouths, and have us sure and unanswerable on this Point, when they urge the Revolution of this Day in their Defence. No Body can doubt what Revolution the Doctor means, nor, that under the Term Revolution, by which he expresses the Objection made to the general Rule of Non-Resistance, he meant the Resistance suppos'd to be made at that Revolution. This he states, as the unanswerable Objection made by his Adversaries to his Point, to his Rule of Non-Resistance on any Pretence whatsoever.

If your Lordships collect the Sense of the Paragraph thus far, it will stand thus. Those Persons who explode absolute Non-Resistance to the Prince as a Tenet dangerous to Liberty; in Defence of that their Opinion, object to us, who avow this Tenet as the honourable and distinguishing Characteristick of our Church, the Resistance us'd to bring about the late happy Revolution, as an Exception out of our general Rule of Non-Resistance. The Doctor having thus laid down his Rule in universal Terms, and expresly taken Notice of the Case of the Revolution as an Objection raised against it by other People; your Lordships are next to consider what becomes of this Objection; in what manner is it treated by him, and what Judgment does he pass upon it? My Lords, The Doctor does not drop the Objection without considering it further; he is not silent in the Matter; he doth not leave this as an Exception implied, and to be suppos'd by the general Rule; he proceeds and argues expresly upon it for two or three Sentences together: The Doctor's Expressions in this respect also are not entirely agreeable to those of the Apostle. In the next place, Doth the Doctor yield the Objection to his Adversaries? Doth he allow the Resistance used to bring about the late happy Revolution to have been a lawful Resistance, and to be an Exception out of his general Rule? No, my Lords, just the contrary: He is so far from agreeing with his Adversaries in this Point, or giving way to the Exception, that in Vindication of the Revolution, as he would be thought to speak, he pronounces those who make the Exception, and contend for the Lawfulness of that Resistance, to be Enemies to the Revolution; and that Resistance, which the Commons assert to be the necessary Means by which it was brought about, he describes to be odious Colours cast upon the Revolution. In his next Sentence he insinuates, That there was no Resistance at the Revolution, and to that End, misrepresents his late Majesty as having disclaim'd it; and with the same Intent likewise, that the Parliament set the Crown on his Head on no other Title than of the Vacancy of the Throne; and still the more effectually to delude his Hearers into the Belief of his general Assertion, grosly and ridiculously perverts the Censure past by a future Parliament upon the Notion of Conquest, as a Condemnation of that Resistance. Having thus consider'd this Objection of the Revolution, and the following Parts of his Paragraph being Expressions of Triumph over his Adversaries, whose Objection he would be supposed to have confuted, towards the Close of it he uses these Words, as his Conclusion and Judgment upon it: In short, as the English Government can never be secure on any other Principles but strictly those thoſe of the Church of England, ſo he will be bold to ſay, &c. His general Rule of Non-Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever he had before laid down as the Doctrine and Principle of the Church; which, after having conſider'd the Caſe of the Revolution as an imaginary Exception to it, he reaſſerts in thoſe Words. And what clearer Indication can your Lordſhips receive of the Doctor's Intention in his general Aſſertion? Can your Lordſhips, or any Body that ſhall conſider the Tenor of that Part of his Diſcourſe, retain any Doubt whether he has plainly and fully declared himſelf, That the Reſiſtance uſed to bring about the late happy Revolution was odious and unjuſtifiable, and not to be excepted out of his Fundamental Rule of the Illegality of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever? And, my Lords, Can it be ſaid that this Interpretation of his Diſcourſe is ſtrain'd and unnatural? Is this Part of our Charge maintain'd by conjoining diſtant and independent Paſſages? Or is not the Connexion clear and neceſſary, and the Senſe we contend for, the only Senſe the Words can properly bear, in the moſt candid and genuine Interpretation of them? The Gentleman, whoſe Objection from the Bar I have been conſidering, ſaid, That tis one thing expreſly to affirm that the Revolution is not to be excepted, and another thing not to make that Exception. But tho' the Words of the Sermon are not an expreſs and literal Affirmation, yet if this Conſtruction appears to your Lordſhips to be neceſſary and certain, they will be taken by you to be an ample and undeniable Declaration of his Mind; and this poor Shift, thus emphatically inſiſted on at the Bar, will amount to no more than what the Doctor had before ſaid in his Anſwer in plainer Words, That he had not maintain'd the Neceſſary Means to be Odious and Unjuſtifiable, becauſe he had not made uſe of thoſe very Words.

The next Paſſage which I ſhall obſerve to your Lordſhips, fell from the Gentleman who ſpoke third in Defence of this Article; his Words were theſe: I have been careful and exact in collecting them, "One Learned Gentleman, "ſays he, did obſerve, that there was an Original "Contract; and that by that Contract, if the Executive Power invaded the reſt, that Contract was "broke, and the People diſcharged from their Allegiance; but he did not think fit to take Notice "when that Contract was made. I would fain "know, whether it was before Magna Charta, or "ſince; if it was before, it is much no Mention "was made of it there, for that has been always "look'd upon as the Great Charter of the Rights of "the People. Was it before 25 Ed. 3.? Then I "would know, Whether that Contract, made before "the 25. Ed. 3. could ever diſcharge that Act which "was made after it? If it doth diſcharge the Subject "of their Allegiance, I have never yet known it pleaded to any Indictment for High Treaſon upon that "Act; and therefore, Till the Legiſlature ſhall determine what that Contract is, and what Breach of it "ſhall diſcharge the Subjects of their Allegiance, I "muſt take Leave to ſay, that Reſiſtance ſtands ſtill "upon the Foot of the Statute of 25 Ed. 3.

My Lords, The Nature and Conſequence of this Paſſage would bear a much more ample Conſideration, than my Time has allowed me to give it, or than may be fit to trouble your Lordſhips with on this Reply; but I conceive a ſhort Notice of it, and of the near Relation it bears to the Matter now before you in Judgment, may yield a pretty clear Diſcovery and Explanation of the whole. But the Diſtance of Time ſince the opening of the Charge, and the many palpable Miſconſtructions which ſome of the Council have allow'd to themſelves, of what has been offer'd by ſome of us in behalf of the Commons, makes it neceſſary for me, even in this Particular, to remind your Lordſhips of the Connexion of the Diſcourſe, out of which this Obſervation was rais'd. Your Lordſhips were acquainted, in opening the Charge, with how great Caution, and with what unfeigned Regard to Her Majeſty and Her Government, and to the Duty and Allegiance of Her Subjects, the Commons made choice of the Words Neceſſary Means, to expreſs the Reſiſtance that was made uſe of to bring about the Revolution, and with the condemning of which the Doctor is charged by this Article; not doubting, but that the Honour and Juſtice of that Reſiſtance, from the Neceſſity of that Caſe, and to which alone we have ſtrictly confin'd our ſelves, when duly conſider'd, would confirm and ſtrengthen, and be underſtood to be, an effectual Security of the Allegiance of the Subject to the Crown of this Realm in every other Caſe, where there is not the ſame Neceſſity; and that the Right of the People to Self-defence, and Preſervation of their Liberties by Reſiſtance, as their laſt Remedy, is the Reſult of a Caſe of ſuch Neceſſity only, and by which the Original Contract between King and People is broke. This was the Principle laid down and carried thro' all that was ſaid with reſpect to Allegiance, and on which Foundation, in the Name, and on the Behalf of all the Commons of Great Britain, We aſſert and juſtify that Reſiſtance by which the late happy Revolution was brought about. When the Gentleman from the Bar endeavour'd thus, in a ludicrous manner, to explode the Original Contract between the King and People, he muſt not be ſuppoſed to be ignorant, that thoſe very Words are part of the Vote of the Abdication, the Vote of both Houſes of Parliament, at the Time of the Revolution, antecedent to that Settlement of the Crown, on which Her Majeſty's Parliamentary Title and our preſent Eſtabliſhment is founded. I have thought it neceſſary to tranſcribe that Proceeding from your Lordſhips Journals, now lying on your Table, and will ſtate it to you as I have taken it from thence.

Upon the Twenty Ninth of January, 1688. A Meſſage was brought from the Commons by Mr. Hambden and others, who ſaid, The Commons taking into their Conſideration the State of this Kingdom, had paſs'd a Vote, to which they deſired your Lordſhips Concurrence; which Vote was as follows: Reſolved, That King James the Second having endeavoured to ſubvert the Conſtitution of the Kingdom, by breaking the Original Contract between King and People; and by Advice of Jeſuits and other wicked Perſons, having violated the Fundamental Laws of this Kingdom; and having withdrawn himſelf out of this Kingdom, has abdicated the Government, and the Throne is thereby become Vacant. Your Lordſhips Houſe Reſolved it ſelf into a Committee of the whole Houſe, and the Vote, containing in it divers Particulars, upon the 30th Day of January, was conſidered by Paragraphs; the firſt of which was, That King James the Second having endeavoured to ſubvert the Conſtitution of the Kingdom, by breaking the Original Contract between King and People: To which the Committee, and the Houſe afterwards, agreed without any Amendment. Now, when it appears to your Lordſhips and the World, that breaking the Original Contract between King and People, were the Words made Choice of by that Houſe of Commons, with the greateſt Deliberation and Judgment, and approv'd of by your Lordſhips, in that firſt and fundamental Step made towards the Re-eſtabliſhment of the Government, which had receiv'd ſo great a Shock from the evil Councils which had been given to that unfortunate Prince, and that they are ſtated in that Vote as a Conſequence of his endeavouring to ſubvert the Conſtitution of the Kingdom; I need not ſay how much the Lawfulneſs of that Reſiſtance, which had been before made by the People, and which is now the immediate Queſtion, nay, how much the Juſtice of the Revolution it ſelf would be affected by a Condemnation of that Poſition: And what Light doth it give to the Queſtion now before your Lordſhips, when at your Bar, in Defence of a Perſon accus'd by the Commons, for condemning the Neceſſary Means which brought about the Revolution, you have heard that Original Contract, at that Time ſo ſolemnly declar'd to be a Fundamental Principle, publickly deny'd, ridicul'd, and endeavour'd (in what Manner 'tis eaſy to judge) to have been exploded?

My Lords, The Truth of that Poſition has its Foundation in the Nature and Eſſence of the Conſtitution of our Government, and it will ſtand ſo long as this remains; and the Sanction it has receiv'd from your Lordſhips, and from that Houſe of Commons, who had with ſo much Wiſdom and Bravery aſſerted the Rights of the Kingdom in that extraordinary Juncture, and who, purſuant to that Reſolution, ſettl'd the Crown upon Her Sacred Majeſty, ought to render it indiſputable, ſo long at leaſt as that Eſtabliſhment is preſerv'd to us. But yet, could I think it ſeaſonable to enter into it, to conſider more particularly the Nature of our Government, to draw together ſome of the many inconteſtible Evidences of its Original Freedom, to conſider the Nature, Antiquity and Hiſtory, of the Coronation-Oath, and the Oath of Allegiance, and the mutual Obligations and Conſequences ariſing from them to the Prince and People: Was I to go over the ſeveral Branches that make up the ancient Frame of our Government, and which ſpeak and expreſs a Conſent and Compact between the Prince and People in their Inſtitution; and was I to obſerve that inſeparable Relation and equal Security which they import between the Crown and the Subject, and which are ſo many infallible Tokens of Original Conſent ſtampt upon them; the Truth and Certainty of that Poſition of an Original Contract between the King and People, might be laid down to your Lordſhips in demonſtrative Terms. The Gentleman that rais'd this Obſervation, ſoon afterwards, in the ſame Diſcourſe, ſuppos'd, That by the Original Contract, the Original Conſtitution was meant; how ſtrictly proper that Manner of ſpeaking might be found to be, I will not now determine; yet thus much may with Certainty be concluded, That the denying the Original Contract, is not only to diſavow the whole Proceeding at the Time of the Revolution, but to renounce the Conſtitution it ſelf, to diſclaim thoſe many and undeniable Proofs and Teſtimonies of it, which almoſt every Part of our Hiſtory, our Records, and Memorials of Antiquity, will furniſh: To deny the Original Contract of Government, is to contradict and condemn the Voice and Tenor of all our Laws, of every Act of the Supreme Legiſlative Power, the Force and Efficacy of which exiſts upon the Conſent of the Crown, Lords, and Commons, and are therefore ſo many laſting and unerring Proofs of that, as the Original Foundation of that Supreme Power; 'tis not only to oppoſe the conſtant Judgment of all learned Men, who have underſtood and wrote impartially of our Government, but even the Senſe of many of thoſe Writings which have been produc'd and read to you in the Doctor's Defence, and more particularly that of the judicious Mr. Hooker: To deny and condemn the Original Contract between King and People, what other Conſequences could it produce, than to unhinge the Government, and to deſtroy that excellent Balance of Power, which is ſecur'd by it, and by which it has been ſo long preſerv'd? It muſt weaken the ancient and juſt Prerogatives of the Crown, ſubvert the Foundations of your Lordſhips Legiſlative and Judicial Powers, render the Parliamentary Rights of the Commons precarious and uncertain, and terminate at length in that abſurd, yet dangerous Opinion, of the Patriarchal Right, which, when joined together with the Doctrines of abſolute and unlimited Non-Reſiſtance, and unconditional Obedience of the Subject to their Prince, compleats that fatal Syſtem, which has been, of late, ſo much contended for, towards the enſlaving Mankind.

But your Lordſhips will conſider further, what Uſe and Application was made of this Paſſage by the Council; his Concluſion was, That till the Legiſlature had determin'd what the Contract was, and what Breach of it ſhall diſcharge the Subjects of their Allegiance, he took leave to ſay, that Reſiſtance ſtill ſtood upon the Foot of 25. E. 3.

My Lords, We ſtand here entruſted to maintain the Charge contain'd in our Article, to aſſert the Juſtice of that Reſiſtance only, which brought about the late happy Revolution; and that being the Reſiſtance in Queſtion, and to which alone we have apply'd our ſelves, and in Support of which the Original Contract was mention'd; what is the plain Engliſh of this Inference drawn from the denial of it? Does it not amount to an open and poſitive Declaration from the Mouth of Dr. Sacheverell's Council, That that Reſiſtance which was the neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the late happy Revolution, inſtead of being an Honourable and Lawful Reſiſtance, was an Act of Rebellion and High-Treaſon?

Having conſider'd theſe Particulars, I beg your Indulgence to make a few Obſervations on the Nature and Method of the Defence to this Article: Your Lordſhips will remember, tho' it ſeems to have been totally forgot on the Priſoner's Part, that the Maintenance of this Article has not reſted on the Doctor's general Aſſertion alone, but upon the following Paſſages, now ſtated to you; from whence we have undertaken to convince your Lordſhips, that Dr. Sacheverell has apply'd that general Rule of Non-Reſiſtance to the particular Caſe of the Revolution; and this having render'd the Independant Conſideration of the general Aſſertion wholly immaterial, when you afterwards heard the Admiſſions that were made by the Council, of the Legality of the Reſiſtance us'd to bring about the Revolution, your Lordſhips might reaſonably have expected, that the only Queſtion remaining on this Article would have been, How far thoſe ſubſequent Paſſages of the Sermon did evince the Intent of the general Aſſertion? But, tho' the Queſtion has been thus plainly ſtated and maintain'd, and the Method of the Doctor's Vindication thus clearly pointed out to him, yet how little has been ſaid? How little Notice has been taken of this, which was his proper Defence? The Gentleman who began the Defence has, indeed, denied the Charge of this Article; the Force of that, and of his Argument which followed, have been conſidered; but if your Lordſhips ſhall not think fit to accept that ſingle Attempt as ſufficient to acquit the Priſoner, (together with a nervous Obſervation of the Interpoſition of ſome Lines between the general Aſſertion, and that Sentence wherein the Revolution is named) how much will your Lordſhips find, throughout that long and labour'd Harangue, that can be judged by you at all material to the true Queſtion before you? For tho' the general Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, the Doctrine of the Church of England, as ſtated in her Homilies, or elſewhere deliver'd, by which the general Duty of Subjects to the Higher Powers is taught, be owned to be, as unqueſtionably it is, a godly and wholſome Doctrine; tho' this general Doctrine has been conſtantly inculcated by the Reverend Fathers of the Church, dead and living, and preach'd by them as a Preſervative againſt the Popiſh Doctrine of depoſing Princes, and as the ordinary Rule of Obedience; and, tho' the ſame Doctrine has been preach'd, maintain'd and avow'd by our moſt Orthodox and able Divines from the Time of the Reformation; and, how Innocent a Man ſoever Doctor Sacheverell had been, if, with an honeſt and well-meant Zeal, he had preach'd the ſame Doctrine, in the ſame general Terms, in which he found it deliver'd by the Apoſtles of Chriſt, as taught by the Homilies, and the Reverend Fathers of our Church, and, in Imitation of thoſe great Examples, had only preſs'd the General Duty of Obedience, and the Illegality of Reſiſtance, without taking Notice of any Exception; yet, what Excuſe can be derived, to the Matter now in Queſtion, from ſuch Conſiderations as theſe, in Favour of the Doctor, who has not only aſſerted the general Rule in Terms of the greateſt Latitude, but has expreſly mention'd and diſallow'd the Exception of the Reſiſtance, which brought about the Revolution? And whatever is the Language of our Laws, Repealed or in Force, wherein the ſame general Duty of Subjects is ſtated, and the Rule laid down to them, as Neceſſary and Fundamental for the Safety of the Crown and Government, and the Peace of the Kingdom, and which are meant to enforce and ſecure their Civil Obedience in ordinary Caſes, (but which no Body will ſay can be conſtrued to extend to the Caſe of a People threatned by their Prince with total Deſtruction, the utter Subverſion of their Laws, and the Loſs of their Religion and Liberties, to a Caſe of the laſt Neceſſity, (ſuch a Caſe as the Revolution was,) yet no Uſe can poſſibly be made of ſuch Declarations in our Acts of Parliament to juſtify the Doctor, who by his general Aſſertion, has not only out-gone even thoſe general Declarations, but has undeniably applied it in Condemnation of the Caſe of the Revolution, which is the Charge of this Article.

Your Lordſhips will allow me to obſerve yet a little farther; The Nature of this Article appearing to every Body to be of that near Concern to Her Majeſty and Her Government, you have, indeed, heard very warm and pathetick Expreſſions of Loyalty, of very tender and dutiful Regard to Her Majeſty's Title, and much Labour and Vehemence was uſed to perſuade your Lordſhips into a Belief of this: But yet, your Lordſhips could not but obſerve, where the real Streſs and Force of the Argument was placed, and where it center'd at laſt; your Lordſhips will find, the great Effort was made to eſtabliſh the general Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance, to inculcate this, in Terms of the largeſt Extent, in the ſame univerſal Terms, wherein the Doctor has deliver'd it, and than which I am at a Loſs to find Words that can extend it further: If your Lordſhips ſhould think fit to look back, with particular Exactneſs, upon the ſeveral Diſcourſes which have been made from the Bar on this Article, and, for your more accurate Judgment, ſhall think proper to lay them together, and obſerve their Conſiſtency; and if, from ſuch an Examination, you ſhould ſee Cauſe to compare that which was firſt deliver'd, with that which was afterwards ſpoke by the Doctor himſelf, (for, my Lords, between them the Reſemblance ſeems to be the neareſt, and the Difference between them in the Notions of Allegiance but very ſmall,) your Lordſhips may perhaps, in a great Meaſure, collect from thence the true Genius of this Defence. Your Lordſhips will obſerve, in how different a Manner, with what different Zeal, the main Points in Agitation have been handled by them; I mean, the Juſtice of the Reſiſtance, which brought about the Revolution, and the general Doctrine of Non-Reſiſtance. It has already been obſerved to you, that the Doctor himſelf made no Admiſſions concerning the Lawfulneſs of that Reſiſtance, but has us'd Expreſſions of due Regard to the Proteſtant Succeſſion; The Gentleman, who open'd the Defence, it being, it ſeems, of no Conſequence to the preſent Occaſion, came to no Declaration in this Point of the Proteſtant Succeſſion; But, as to the Honour and Juſtice of the Revolution, his Approaches are nearer: He has acquainted your Lordſhips, That there is nothing further from our Hearts, nor any Thing leſs Neceſſary for our Defence, than for us to call in Queſtion the Juſtice of the Revolution. At another Time, he delivered himſelf in general Terms: Such a Caſe, (that is a Caſe of Neceſſity, a Caſe never to be mentioned, but to be ſuppoſed and implied) the Revolution was: But, in other Parts of the ſame Diſcourſe, the Expreſſions even concerning the Revolution will be found to be more reſerv'd and wary, and always ſoften'd with ſome ſaving Particle: Thus ſhy and tender at the beſt, have the Admiſſions been from thoſe Two Diſcourſes, of the Lawfulneſs of that Reſiſtance which brought about the late Happy Revolution: But as for the Doctrine of Abſolute, Unlimited Non-Reſiſtance, by which, if it be not an Erroneous Doctrine, the Juſtice of the Reſiſtance, which was the neceſſary Means that brought about the Revolution, (and in purſuance of which, the Crown was ſettled on Her Majeſty and the Proteſtant Line) muſt for ever remain condemn'd. What Fervency and Copiouſneſs of Expreſſion was uſed to eſtabliſh that? What Cautions have appear'd to guard and ſecure this Doctrine as inviolable? How often, and with what Zeal was it inculcated, that the general Doctrine, was that Doctrine which alone was to be preach'd and preſs'd? The Exception, The Caſe of Neceſſity, the Caſe of the Revolution, the only Caſe contended for, was not fit to be mention'd: The Doctor's general Rule was that alone, which was proper to be inculcated and believ'd; the excepted Caſe never to be ſtated, but to be ſuppos'd or imply'd, and to be left to juſtify it ſelf.

My Lords, How comes it to paſs, that ſo little Concern has been ſhewn, in the Courſe of this Debate from the Bar, to that which was the proper Defence of the Criminal, to clear the Paſſages of his Sermon from the noxious Meaning they had been ſhewn to bear? How comes it to paſs, that the Honour and Juſtice of the Revolution is thus tenderly acknowledged; but yet all that has been ſaid to ſupport it, has by this Gentleman been endeavour'd to be enervated, and at the ſame Time the extremeſt Zeal ſhewn to eſtabliſh the general Poſition, tho' altogether immaterial? I'll once more venture at a charitable Reconciliation of thoſe ſeeming Inconſiſtencies: Upon a very ſtrict and minute Recollection, your Lordſhips will find that the Reſiſtance, the Neceſſary Means us'd to bring about the Revolution, is never once acknowledg'd in that firſt Diſcourſe, in plain and expreſs Terms: The Caſe of Neceſſity in general, the Caſe of the Revolution, was ſo ambiguoſly ſpoke of, and ſo skilfully given up, that, by the kind Help of ſome happy Diſtinction, when the Seaſon is proper, 'twill be eaſy to retrieve it. Tho' your Lordſhips may remember ſome plauſible Expreſſions concerning the Juſtice of the Revolution, yet you will find the real Concluſions of the Diſcourſe tend to condemn it; and ſuch remarkable Inſtances choſen, ſuch as the Caſe of the Two Spencers, which, being applied to the Caſe of the Revolution, repreſent its Principles damnable, its Conſequences deteſtable, and the Aſſertors of it deſerving Baniſhment; Your Lordſhips will find the Argument ſo well adjuſted to the main Point in view, to eſtabliſh the ſlaviſh Doctrine of Abſolute, Unlimited Non-Reſiſtance, that, if the worſt ſhould happen, even that againſt which we are now contending, the judicious Reſerves that Gentleman has uſed on the Point in Queſtion, and the real Service he may be thought to have done to that ſlaviſh Doctrine, may, in due Time, raiſe a Merit in Favour of all its Conſequences.

But, as an undeniable Evidence of a ſincere Affection to the Caſe of Neceſſity, the Caſe of the Revolution, let me put your Lordſhips in mind of the Paſſage quoted from Mr. Pym in his Declaration againſt Doctor Manwaring: The Doctrine preach'd in thoſe Days, and for which he was impeach'd by the Commons, was, The attributing an Abſolute Power to the King over the Property of the Subject, tho' with ſome deceitful Limitations, as that of extreme and urgent Neceſſity. Mr. Pym had ſhewn the Vanity and Fruitleſsneſs of that Limitation, it being left to the Prince to determine what is an urgent and preſſing Neceſſity: And to repreſent the Danger of ſuch a Caſe, of allowing any Exception upon any Pretence, even that of extreme Neceſſity, he cites the Charter of Lewis 10. of France to the Dutchy of Normandy, wherein that Prince having acknowledged the Franchiſes of the Dutchy, and granted to them, that for ever afterwards they ſhould be free from all Exactions from him and his Succeſſors, theſe Words followed, unleſs great Neceſſity required; which ſmall Exception, Mr. Pym obſerved, had in Time devoured all their Immunities. Mr. Pym, in that Speech, arguing againſt the Poſition advanc'd by Doctor Manwaring, condemns the leaſt Pretence of any Exception: The Gentleman, who quoted this Paſſage from him, having endeavoured to eſtabliſh his general Doctrine of Abſolute Non-Reſiſtance, the Doctrine preach'd by Dr. Sacheverell, and having ſhewn the Danger of mentioning any Exception to it, even that of the Caſe of Neceſſity, and ſuch a Caſe, he had before told your Lordſhips, the Revolution was, concludes from that Inſtance, that ſuch Exceptions wou'd in Time devour all Allegiance. This, my Lords, hath been the Method, theſe have been the Arguments us'd to acquit the Doctor, to ſhew the Innocence of his Intention, and that there was no Deſign either in his Sermon, or his Defence, to condemn the Reſiſtance, the neceſſary Means which brought about the late Happy Revolution; And from theſe Obſervations you may poſſibly diſcern the Conſiſtency of the whole Defence. I beg leave only to turn the Caſe, to ſuppoſe a Caſe of a real Deſign to condemn the late glorious Revolution, and all the happy Conſequences of it: At a Time, when expreſs Declarations of ſuch a wicked and traiterous Intention may not be judged proper; at a Time, when ſome plauſible Expreſſions of the Juſtice of it, may be thought Uſeful and Neceſſary; and, at ſuch a Time, let the Illegality of Reſiſtance on any Pretence whatſoever, be laid down and enforc'd in its utmoſt Extent; let the Danger of ſtating or mentioning any Exception to it, be ſtrongly inculcated; let the Juſtice of the Exception, even of the Caſe of Neceſſity, ſuch a Caſe as the Revolution was, be illuſtrated by an Inſtance, wherein 'tis expreſly condemned; and, May it not be ſaid, 'Tis eaſy to diſcern what Spirit ſuch a Perſon is of, of what Party he is, what he aims at, and what he intends; that he has not been ſpeaking in Defence of the late Revolution, can't be look'd upon to have been arguing for it, and to ſhew the Juſtice of it, but was covering the Treaſon of his Heart, and under Pretence of juſtifying one Revolution, was labouring to bring about another: But, what vain Imaginations muſt poſſeſs thoſe Minds, which can flatter themſelves into a Belief, that, even whilſt they are maintaining Principles that tend moſt certainly to undermine the Foundation of Her Majeſty's Government, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, the moſt ſolemn Proteſtations out of the ſame Mouth, and in the ſame Breath, ſhould paſs for an Atonement with your Lordſhips, or give Satisfaction to any that hear them.

My Lords, Your Lordſhips will conſider the evident and neceſſary Tendency of the Doctrines, which have been preach'd by the Priſoner, and have been again aſſerted, though not openly avow'd, in their full Extent and Conſequence, in Defence of this Article. The Doctrine of Abſolute Non-Reſiſtance, the condemning the Original Contract, renouncing the Ancient Legal Conſtitution of the Government, which is our Title to our Liberties, are Poſitions, which can have no better Tendency, than to ſhake the preſent Settlement of the Crown, and our preſent Eſtabliſhment, and to make way for the Pretence of a Natural and Divine Right of Succeſſion: Are not thoſe the Principles taught, and avow'd by Papiſts and Nonjurors, and whereon their Hopes are founded? And are they more Wholeſome, or leſs Dangerous, when they fall from the Mouth, or drop from the Pen of the Priſoner, or are aſſerted in his Defence, tho' gilded over with ſpecious Pretences, and under the Umbrage of a true Son of the Church? If theſe Doctrines of Unlimited Non-Reſiſtance, of a ſole Hereditary and Divine Right of Succeſſion to the Crown, are the very Doctrines, on the Belief of which, the profeſſed Enemies of Her Majeſty and Her Government, inviolably engage themſelves againſt Her Title, and againſt the Proteſtant Succeſſion; If theſe are the Tenets, by which they openly condemn the late Glorious Revolution, and all its Conſequences; From which Part of this Defence can your Lordſhips collect the Innocence of the Priſoner? By what way of Reaſoning can it be concluded, that the ſame Opinions, embrac'd by this Gentleman, do not inevitably engage him in the ſame Intereſt?

Sir Peter King. MY Lords, It is my Part to Reply to the Anſwer that has been given by the Doctor, to the Charge of the Com-

Commons of Great Britain, with Relation to the Second Article. When I was entruſted by the Commons to manage this Part of the Charge, I both quoted and read the Paſſages of the Sermon, to make good that Charge; I did not deſire that any Thing ſhould be taken upon Truſt, nor any Thing receiv'd againſt him, but what appear'd from his plain expreſs Words, or by clear, neceſſary and unavoidable Conſequence. Indeed, after the whole Sermon had been read by the Clerk, I thought it too great a Trouble to your Lordſhips, to have the Clerk read over the particular Paſſages again at the Table, and therefore I read them my ſelf, truly and fairly, as they were in his Sermon; and if I had done otherwiſe, the Doctor and his Council would have ſet me right. I agree with the Doctor and his Council, that in a Caſe of this Nature, and I will ſay further, in all Caſes whatſoever relating to Crimes, the Charge muſt be maintain'd by poſitive plain Words, or neceſſary and unavoidable Inference, ſuch as no reaſonable Man can withſtand the Light of. And therefore, if there was nothing in this Caſe but dark Hints, ſtrain'd Innuendo's, and forc'd Conſtructions, I am ſure, neither the Commons of Great Britain, nor my ſelf, would appear before your Lordſhips with an Attempt to make out a Charge of this Nature; if it is not prov'd by plain, poſitive and expreſs Words, or neceſſary and unavoidable Inference, I am ſure your Lordſhips will never convict him; becauſe it would not be juſt and right ſo to do. It is a perverting of Common Juſtice to condemn a Perſon without plain and direct Proof; therefore what we repreſent to your Lordſhips is, that by plain and clear Paſſages in his Sermon, he is guilty of the Charge in the Second Article, of maintaining, That the Toleration granted by Law is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable; and that he is a falſe Brother with Relation to God, Religion, or the Church, who defends Toleration, and Liberty of Conſcience.

When the Doctor put in his Anſwer to this Article, he had not found out that there was a Toleration granted by Law to the Diſſenters; but his Council have now found it out, and they do agree, that there is a Toleration granted by Law, and that it is that Indulgence which is contain'd in the Act made in the Time of the late King and Queen; but they inſiſt at the ſame Time, that the Doctor in his Sermon has not condemn'd or cenſur'd that Toleration; they ſay he has condemn'd a Toleration, but they inſinuate there are Two Tolerations mention'd in his Sermon, the one a Toleration granted by Law, which he allows and approves of; and the other a general unlimited Toleration, which they admit he does condemn; ſo that we are now agreed upon the Word Toleration, and they do admit that he doth in his Sermon Cenſure and Condemn a Toleration: But, ſay they, it is not the Toleration granted by Law, becauſe he took Care in his Sermon that his general Expreſſions ſhould not be miſconſtru'd, and put in this expreſs Caution in the 20th Page: I would not be here miſunderſtood, as if I intended to caſt the leaſt invidious Reflection upon that Indulgence the Government has condeſcended to give 'em, which I am ſure all thoſe that wiſh well to our Church, are ready to grant to Conſciences truly ſcrupulous; let them enjoy it in the full Limits the Law has preſcrib'd. This, they ſay, is an expreſs and full Declaration of his Meaning, that he is not againſt the particular Toleration granted by Law; and therefore all thoſe other Paſſages in his Sermon condemning Toleration, are to be applied to a general Toleration, and not to the particular Legal one.

When I made out this Charge, I mention'd this Caution of the Doctor's, but at the ſame Time ſubmitted it, whether ſuch a general Expreſſion as that is, could ſcreen him from other plain Paſſages in which he has condemn'd the Toleration; if in other Places he has condemn'd it, this Caution is but Proteſtatio contra factum; an oblique Defamation may be as Criminal as a direct one: In the common Caſes of Scandal, if I obliquely defame another, and deſcribe him ſo, that it is impoſſible but every one muſt know him, it is no Excuſe that I do not poſitively accuſe him; ſo that the Queſtion will be, whether the Doctor has not in the other Paſſages cited againſt him, plainly cenſur'd and condemn'd the Toleration granted by Law.

The firſt Paſſage cited out of his Sermon, to prove this Charge upon him, was in the 10th Page; I trouble your Lordſhips with reading it again, that I may be ſure to do him no Injury; the Words are, So that in all thoſe Caſes before-mention'd, whoſoever preſumes to innovate, alter, or miſrepreſent any Point in the Articles of the Faith of our Church, ought to be arraign'd as a Traytor to our State; Heterodoxy in the Doctrines of the one, naturally producing, and almoſt neceſſarily inferring Rebellion and High Treaſon in the other, and conſequently a Crime that concerns the Civil Magiſtrate as much to puniſh and reſtrain, as the Eccleſiaſtical.

The former Part is relative to what went before; the latter Part is a general Aſſertion, that Heterodoxy in the Doctrines of the Church infers Rebellion and High Treaſon in the State.

The relative Part of this Clauſe has Relation to the ſeveral Doctrines mention'd before; among which, one of the Caſes and Inſtances of falſe Brotherhood is, the affirming that the Divine Apoſtolical Inſtitution of Epiſcopacy is a Novel Doctrine, not ſufficiently warranted by Scripture; whoever affirms this, is guilty of an Innovation or Alteration of the Articles of our Church. Now the Diſſenters of all Sorts univerſally hold this Propoſition, and they are exempted from ſubſcribing the 36th Article, which aſſerts Epiſcopacy: But, ſaith the Doctor, though they are exempted, yet whoſoever aſſerts this Propoſition, is to be puniſh'd as a Traytor to the State, as well as an Enemy to the Church.

The Learned Civilian of Council for the Doctor ſays, that the reading the whole Paſſage will ſhow, that it was not intended for the Diſſenters, but for one in Holy Orders; that if ſuch an one ſhould maintain this Doctrine, he would be an Apoſtate from his own Order; now this Allegation is true, as it ſtands in Page 8.; abſolutely conſider'd in its ſelf, it is there applied to one in Holy Orders; but as it ſtands in Relation to this Clauſe, in Page 10. it is a general Aſſertion, that whoſoever innovates, or alters that Article of the Church, which the Diſſenters do, ought to be arraign'd as a Traytor to the State.

Another Anſwer that hath been given hereto, is, That the Doctor there means thoſe who are for Innovations and Alterations in Matters of Faith, which can't reſpect the Diſſenters or their Toleration, becauſe the Diſſenters agree with the Church in Matters of Faith, and differ only in Matters of Diſcipline. But if you give this Turn to it, it alters the Senſe and Meaning of the Doctor; for he is not ſpeaking here of Matters of Faith, in Contradiſtinction tradiſtinction to Matters of Diſcipline, but he is ſpeaking in general of the Articles of Faith of our Church; whoever preſumes in any of the Caſes before-mentioned to innovate, alter, or miſrepreſent any Point in the Articles of the Faith of our Church, ought to be arraign'd as a Traytor to the State. Now what are the Articles of Faith of our Church? Are they not the Thirty Nine Articles? Are not they the Articles of the Faith and Religion of the Church? Doth not the Thirty Sixth Canon expreſly require the Clergy to ſubſcribe willingly, and ex animo, that all and every the Articles of Religion, being in Number Thirty Nine, are agreeable to the Word of God? Now if the Thirty Nine Articles be the Articles of Faith of our Church, and the Diſſenters disbelieve the Thirty Sixth Article; and if for that Innovation or Alteration they are to be arraign'd as Traytors to the State, what then is become of the Toleration, that exempts them from the Penalties, and from ſubſcribing the ſaid Thirty Sixth Article?

As to the general Propoſition immediately following in the ſame Clauſe, viz. Heterodoxy in the Doctrine of the one, naturally producing, and almoſt neceſſarily inferring Rebellion and High Treaſon in the other, and conſequently a Crime that concerns the Civil Magiſtrate as much to puniſh and reſtrain, as the Eccleſiaſtical; I don't remember that any Anſwer whatſoever was given to it by the Doctor or his Council. And I pray your Lordſhips caſt your Eyes on this, and ſee here is an Affirmation, that any different Opinion in any of the Articles of the Church, is a Crime againſt the State. Now all the Diſſenters are exempted by the Act of Toleration from ſubſcribing Three Articles and an half, others from Four and an half, and others from all. And when this Act grants them all theſe Exemptions, ſhall it be affirm'd that this Heterodoxy allow'd by that Act is High Treaſon and Rebellion, and that they ought to be arraign'd as Traytors? I ſubmit to every ones Judgment, whether any Thing can be more plain againſt the Toleration than this.

The next Paſſage cited out of his Sermon, to prove the Charge of the Second Article, is in the 16th and 17th Pages: What could not be gain'd by Comprehenſion and Toleration, muſt be brought about by Moderation and Occaſional Conformity; that is, what they could not do by open Violence, they will not fail by ſecret Treachery to accompliſh. If the Church can't be pull'd down, it may be blown up; and no Matter with theſe Men how 'tis deſtroy'd, ſo that it is deſtroy'd.

My Lords, Here is an Affirmation, that Toleration was doing open Violence to the Church, that the Falſe Brethren had a Deſign by Toleration to pull down the Church. Now the Anſwer given to this by one of the Council, is what one can ſcarce imagine he was ſerious in, viz. That this doth not ſuggeſt the Toleration to be unreaſonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable, but that it is rather a Commendation of the Toleration, becauſe it ſhews that it could not do the Church any Hurt, it could not pull down the Church, and therefore they have found out a more peſtilent Way, of Occaſional Conformity and Moderation. But all that can be collected from hence, is, that Toleration is a leſs ſucceſsful Evil than Moderation: Toleration was a ſtorming the Church by Violence, and an endeavouring to pull it down; but though, by the good Providence of God, it hath not been ſo ſucceſsful an Evil as Moderation, which is a Secret Treachery to undermine the Church, and blow it up, yet it is an Evil: And to ſuppoſe the Church to be either pull'd down, or blown up, which way ſoever it be done, it is ſo great an Evil, that every Member of the Church muſt be for preventing it, and uſing all his Endeavours to prevent both thoſe Evils; and therefore to repreſent Toleration to be ſuch an Evil to the Church, as to be doing open Violence to the Church, and pulling it down, is an undue Reflection on the Fathers of the Church, and on that Parliament that granted that Toleration, as if they concurr'd in Endeavours to pull down the Church, and deſtroy it.

Another Paſſage, in Page 14. of the Sermon, was cited by the Council of the other Side, as a Paſſage cited by me to make out the Charge againſt the Doctor; but herein they miſtook me, it was not cited by me for that Purpoſe, but to ſhew that the Doctor underſtood the Act of Indulgence to be a Toleration; and the Paſſage was this, Certainly the Toleration was never intended to indulge, and cheriſh ſuch Monſters and Vipers in our Boſom, that ſcatter their Peſtilence at Noon-day, and will rend, diſtract and confound the firmeſt and beſt ſettled Conſtitution in the World.

I cited this Paſſage to ſhew, that the Doctor himſelf, at the Time he preach'd this Sermon, knew what was meant by the Toleration; and it plainly proves it, and the Doctor himſelf doth not now diſown it. But as to the Propoſition it ſelf contain'd in that Part of his Sermon, I agree with him that the Toleration was not intended, and I hope will never be made uſe of, to ſupport Atheiſm, Deiſm, Tritheiſm, or any ſuch Monſters and Vipers, but only diſſenting Proteſtants.

The next Paſſage I cited was in the 8th Page. If upon all Occaſions to comply with the Diſſenters, both in publick and private Affairs, as Perſons of tender Conſcience and Piety, to promote their Intereſts in Elections, to ſneak to them for Places, and Preferments, to defend Toleration, and Liberty of Conſcience; and under the Pretence of Moderation, to excuſe their Separation, and lay the Fault upon the true Sons of the Church, for carrying Matters too high; if to court the Fanaticks in private, and to hear 'em with Patience, if not Approbation, rail at and blaſpheme the Church, and upon Occaſion to juſtify the King's Murder; if to flatter both Dead and Living in their Vices, and to tell the World, that if they had Wit, and Money enough, they need no Repentance, and that only Fools and Beggars can be damn'd; if theſe, I ſay, are the modiſh and faſhionable Criterions of a true Church-man, God deliver us all from ſuch Falſe Brethren. So that here the Doctor makes it one of the Characters of a Falſe Brother to defend Toleration, and Liberty of Conſcience.

The Anſwer given to it is this, That where the Doctor blames thoſe that defend Toleration, it is not thoſe that defend that only and ſingly, and do no other Thing, but they muſt at the ſame Time not only defend Toleration, but excuſe the Separation, not by Reaſon of the Toleration, but by laying the Fault on the Sons of the Church for carrying Things too high: He don't blame them that barely juſtify Toleration, unleſs they fall too on the Sons of the Church for carrying Things too high. But whether or no that Place is capable of ſuch an Interpretation, your Lordſhips will be the beſt Judges, by looking on the Place, and conſidering whether any Two of thoſe Characters are to be united in any one Perſon to make him a Falſe Brother. Whether theſe ſeveral Characters are not ſo many different Criterions of False Brotherhood; if he does defend Toleration and Liberty of Conscience; if he does excuse their Separation, and lay the Fault upon the True Sons of the Church, for carrying Matters too high, &c. They are all different Marks of False Brotherhood; so that whosoever defends Liberty of Conscience, and the Toleration, is a False Brother.

It was also answer'd, That in the Act of Indulgence there are a great many Restrictions; and therefore this Passage must be understood of a Toleration of such as are not qualified by the Act to receive it: And for that end the Act was read, in which are several Restrictions; and the Toleration is not unlimited, but to Persons under such and such Qualifications, conforming themselves to the Rules there laid down. But what Foundation is there for this Answer in the Passage it self? Doth not he there condemn Toleration generally? Doth not an Universal Indefinite Proposition include all manner of Toleration, whether General or Special? If he had meant it in this restrained Sense, he should then have express'd himself, That he that defends Toleration, except such Toleration as is allow'd by Law, is a False Brother; but not doing so, but expressing it generally, it is plain, that he has condemn'd that Toleration that is granted by Law: And it is submitted to your Lordships, that this is a plain Proof against him of this Article.

The next Passage, is that relating to the Perfidiousness of Archbishop Grindall, in deluding Queen Elizabeth to the Toleration of the Genevian Discipline: The Doctor, in his Answer, did conceive he had good Authority from History to make out that Assertion; but whether he had or no, he did apprehend that such Assertion was no Proof of his maintaining or suggesting, that the present Legal Toleration was unreasonable, or the Allowance of it unwarrantable.

I did, in making out the Charge, agree with the Doctor, That whether he was, or was not mistaken in that Fact, was not the material Point in Question; but that he had put it on the right Question, Whether that Assertion (true or false) relating to Archbishop Grindall, was a Condemnation of the Toleration now granted by Law? To that I principally applied my self, to shew that that Fact, as stated by the Doctor, was a Censure of the Toleration; not forgetting, at the same Time, to say something in Vindication of the Memory of that Great Prelate.

But now, the Doctor's Council (in their Defence) have in a great measure quitted the true Point that the Doctor rightly put it upon in his Answer, and instead of endeavouring to shew that this is no Reflection on the Toleration, have rather endeavoured to shew, that this Fact of the Archbishop is true; That the Reason of his Disgrace was, for deluding the Queen to the Toleration of the Genevian Discipline, and for giving up the Discipline of the Church: That at that Time, there was no Law to indulge any Separation from the Church; and therefore for the Head of the Church, under the Queen, to give up the Discipline of the Church, was an High Crime in him; and tho' it be a harsh Term, yet it was true to call him a Perfidious Prelate, and False Son of the Church.

For this End, they did produce and read Two Letters; the one from Queen Elizabeth, to the Bishops throughout England, for suppressing the Exercise called Prophesying, and the other of the Archbishop to the Council; and out of these Two, they say, there is Proof out of the Archbishop's own Mouth, That the Reason why he was under a Suspension, was for deluding Her Majesty to permit a Toleration of the Genevian Discipline; and that he acknowledg'd the Justice of his Punishment for that Crime. And they farther aggravate it, That it would be an invidious Reflection on the Character of that Glorious Queen, that she should cause an Archbishop to be suspended, for prosecuting Julio the Italian for having Two Wives, or for not giving up the Palace at Lambeth to the Earl of Leicester: As if I had insinuated, or could have imagined, that the apparent visible Reason of the Disgrace of the Archbishop, were these Things! No; it can't be thought I meant so. The apparent visible Cause of Grindall's Disgrace was, no doubt, the Encouraging of the Exercise called Prophesying; and Queen Elizabeth knew no other: But yet the real Spring, the secret History, and true Reason, was the Artifice of the Earl of Leicester, who had the greatest Power and Credit at that Time with the Queen. The good Archbishop had, by his Prosecution of Julio the Italian Physician, and by his Refusal to alienate Lambeth, offended this Great Earl, who thereupon meditates Revenge against him: And knowing the Archbishop to be a great Favourer and Promoter of the Exercises called Prophesyings, which were far from being Conventicles, or Parts of the Genevian Discipline; he misrepresents these to the Queen, and by those Means incens'd the Queen; and the Queen was angry with the Archbishop, only upon the Account of these Prophesyings. But these Misrepresentations, that incens'd the Queen, had not been, if the Archbishop had not first incens'd Leicester in the forementioned Two Particulars. To make this out to be the Fact, I desire your Lordships Patience, whilst I refer to One or Two Histories of good Credit. Fuller, in the Ninth Book of his Ecclesiastical History, p. 130. after he hath recited a long Letter of Grindall's to the Queen about this Matter, thus concludes: Alas! all in vain: Leicester had so fill'd Her Majesty's Ears with Complaints against him, there was no Room to receive his Petition. Indeed Leicester cast a Covetous Eye on Lambeth-House, alledging as good Arguments for his obtaining thereof, as ever were urg'd by Ahab for Naboth's Vineyard. Now Grindall, tho' generally condemn'd for Remissness in this kind, (parting with more from his See, than ever his Successors thank'd him for) stoutly oppos'd the Alienating of this his Principal Palace, and made the Leicestrian Party to malice him.

This is as express an Account as can be, that this was one of the secret Springs of that Prosecution: And as for the other, That he carried on the Prosecution against Julio, that is taken notice of by the same Author, in Page 163. and by Cambden, in his History of Queen Elizabeth, and other Authors: So that the true secret Reason of Grindall's Disgrace, was not for Tolerating the Genevian Discipline. And indeed it would be a Paradox, that the Earl of Leicester, who was the Great Patron and Support of the Puritans, should run down this Archbishop for encouraging of Puritanism. Can that be thought? No: It shews plainly, there was some other Reason. And it is no Reflection on Queen Elizabeth, that she was deceiv'd by the Misrepresentation of a Person on whom she entirely relied. Princes are not exempt from the common Frailties of Human Nature, and may be impos'd on by those whom they most trust.

But, my Lords, without conſidering the latent Cauſes of his Diſgrace, let us conſider the viſible Cauſe, which was known only to Queen Elizabeth. Do the Letters (which they have produc'd) prove, that the Archbiſhop ſuffer'd for deluding the Queen to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline? It appears thereby, that Queen Elizabeth was diſpleaſed at thoſe Exerciſes called Propheſyings, which the Archbiſhop encouraged and favoured; but it is a great Miſtake, to think, that thoſe Propheſyings were Conventicles, or Aſſemblies of Puritans: They were really Meetings of the Parochial Clergy of the Church of England, (which ſince have been called Conferences,) to improve one another in the Expounding of the Scriptures. The Manner of theſe Propheſyings was this: The Miniſter within each Archdeaconry, or ſome other Precinct, met on ſome Week-Day, in the moſt noted Place in that Precinct; ſome Ancient Grave Miniſter, appointed by the Biſhop, did preſide: Then every Miniſter ſucceſſively (the youngeſt ſtill beginning) did handle ſome Text of Scripture, ſhewing the Senſe of the Place, the Propriety of the Words, the Diverſity of Interpretation, the Virtues enjoined, and the Vices prohibited. No Layman was ever ſuffer'd to ſpeak, nor any Clergyman, unleſs firſt Licenſed by the Biſhop. This was that which they call'd Propheſying, and continued about Two Hours; and then the Concluſion was with a Prayer for the Queen and all Eſtates, as is appointed by the Book of Common-Prayer, and a Pſalm. Now can any one think, this was an Encouragement of the Genevian Diſcipline?

The Parochial Clergy met by Conſent of the Biſhop, and diſcourſed about the Meaning of ſome Text of Scripture, and cloſed with a Prayer, as is appointed in the Common-Prayer-Book, and with a Pſalm: And can this be ſaid to be Encouraging the Genevian Diſcipline? Can this be called the Holding of Conventicles; or Receding from the Diſcipline of the Church? Nothing like it: Tho', if it were, it appears by the Letters, that he did not delude the Queen to encourage the Genevian Diſcipline. No; if this was the Genevian Diſcipline, the Queen would not be deluded by him; and becauſe he would not obey the Queen in ſuppreſſing theſe Propheſyings, this was the apparent Cauſe of his Diſgrace.

As to the Letter, becauſe it is ſaid the Archbiſhop owns his Crime; how does he do it? I can't deny, ſays he, but that I have been Commanded, both by the Queen's Majeſty Her ſelf, and alſo by divers of your Honourable Lordſhips in her Name, to ſuppreſs all thoſe Exerciſes within my Province, that are commonly called Propheſyings. He did not deny the Queen had given him that Command, or that he did not comply with it: But, ſaith he, I do proteſt before God, the Judge of all Hearts, that I did not of any Stubbornneſs or Wilfulneſs refuſe to accompliſh the ſame, but only upon Conſcience: And goes on and ſhews the Reaſons on which that Conſcience was founded. He denied it not out of Stubbornneſs or Diſobedience, but out of a Perſwaſion of Conſcience, becauſe he found it profitable and uſeful to the Church. Well, how did he behave himſelf under this? And whereas ſays he, I have ſuſtained the Reſtraint of my Liberty, and Sequeſtration of my Juriſdiction, now by the Space of Six Months; I am ſo far from repining thereat, or thinking my ſelf injuriouſly or hardly dealt withal therein at Her Majeſty's Hands, that I do thankfully embrace, and frankly, with all Humility, acknowledge her Princely, Gracious, and Rare Clemency toward me; who having Authority and Power to have uſed greater and ſharper Severity againſt me, and for good Policy and Example thinking it ſo expedient, hath notwithſtanding dealt ſo mercifully, mildly and gently with me.

What Language more becoming a Grave Prelate could be uſed? He patiently ſubmits to Her Majeſty's Authority, neither murmuring, nor obſtinate: But there being a ſuperior Obligation of Conſcience, which it was not in the Power of any Man to diſpenſe with, he thinks himſelf obliged, as a true Example to all Clergymen and others, to ſubmit to the Dictates of his Conſcience; but ſtill with Patience, Calmneſs and Obedience.

Is there any Thing in this, that looks like giving up the Intereſts of the Church? Not only this good Archbiſhop, but ſeveral others of the beſt Biſhops of thoſe Times, had thoſe Exerciſes in their Dioceſes, and concurr'd with him in the Encouragement of them. And can it be thought, that thoſe Biſhops, who were Exiles in Queen Mary's Time, and were afterwards the Happy and Glorious Inſtruments, under God, in ſettling the Liturgy and the Articles of the Church, were for giving up the Eſtabliſhment of the Church, by introducing that which is now inſinuated to be the Genevian Diſcipline? But thoſe Biſhops then thought, it was a likely way to make an Honeſt, Learned, and Laborious Clergy. Is there any thing in this, to occaſion the calling him a perfidious Prelate? A perfidious Man, is he that violates his Conſcience, to obtain a Temporal End; but he choſe to loſe the Queen's Favour, rather than part with a good Conſcience.

I never found, that Archbiſhop Grindall was ever ſpoke hardly of by any Engliſh Divine of Credit, till the Time of Archbiſhop Laud; and then, to extol Archbiſhop Laud for an active, zealous Prelate, it became the Faſhion to run down his Predeceſſor, Abbot, as a remiſs Man; to court the preſent Archbiſhop, by detracting from the Memory of the laſt. And, to carry on the Compliment, a Parallel was made between Archbiſhop Grindall, and his Succeſſor Whitgift. I only mention this, to ſhew that for a long Time the Memory of that good Archbiſhop was had in Eſteem; and he was always look'd upon as a principal Father of the Reformation of the Church, before this Time.

But, my Lords, it is now Time to come to the main Point; and that is, Whether or no the Doctor's Repreſentation of Archbiſhop Grindall, as a Falſe Son of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate, for doing what he lays to his Charge; and, Whether his Commendation of Queen Elizabeth, for the Reſolution ſhe took to ſuppreſs the Diſſenters, and for her Prudence in Exerciſing Wholeſome Severities on them, whereby the Crown ſat eaſy on her Head, be a Cenſure or Condemnation of the preſent Toleration?

As to this, the Council for the Doctor firſt ſay, That in Queen Elizabeth's Time, Schiſm was in its Infancy; the Number of Diſſenters were but few, and therefore the Exerciſing of Severities at that Time was wholeſome, becauſe it might have cruſh'd them in their Beginning, and prevented the growing Encroachments of thoſe Perſons: But at the Time when the Act of Toleration was made, the Diſſenters were increaſed, and were Poſſeſſors of great Property, and it was reaſonable to grant them a Toleration; for it might be a Diſturbance to the State, to exerciſe thoſe Severities upon them, which might might have been ſafely done in the Time of Queen Elizabeth, when Schiſm was in its Infancy, and their Numbers few: And thence they infer, that what was ſpoken of the Toleration then, can't be applied to the Toleration now.

My Lords, Suppoſing the Fact to be true, then it follows, that the Juſtice and Reaſonableneſs of the preſent Toleration depends only on the Strength and Number of the Diſſenters: When they are Strong and Numerous, then they are to be Tolerated and Permitted; but when their Numbers decreaſe, and it ſhall be alledg'd that they are but few, then they are to be cruſh'd, and the wholeſome Severities are to be renew'd upon them again; notwithſtanding the Preamble of the Bill to prevent Occaſional Conformity, which ſays, "That "Perſecution for Conſcience only, is directly con- "trary to the Profeſſion of the Chriſtian Religion, "and particularly to the Doctrine of the Church "of England, and that the Act of Toleration "ought to be inviolably preſerved". If it ought to be inviolably preſerved, then, whether the Diſſenters in England be more or leſs, they ought to be Tolerated.

This brings to my Mind the memorable Edict that was Publiſh'd by the French King for reverſing the Edict of Nants, in October 1685. the Preamble of which Edict recites, "That by reaſon of "the great Troubles and Wars occaſion'd by thoſe "of the Reformed Religion, his Grandfather Henry "the Fourth had given them Liberty by the Edict "of Nants, retaining notwithſtanding a Deſign of "bringing all back again to the Romiſh Church; "and his Father and himſelf had had all along the "ſame Deſign; and that in his Time the beſt and "greateſt Part of the Proteſtants were Converted "to the Catholick Faith, and that by reaſon there- "of the Execution of that Edict was become of "no uſe; and therefore, entirely to wipe out the "Memory of thoſe Troubles and Confuſions which "the Proteſtants had occaſion'd, he thereby Re- "vok'd that Edict.

May it not be ſaid in this Caſe, That in Queen Elizabeth's Time, becauſe the Number of Diſſenters were few, therefore thoſe Severities were good; and that when the Toleration-Act was made, there were greater Numbers, and therefore thoſe Severities were then fit to be taken away; but now the Diſſenters are but few again, therefore it may be fit to return to thoſe Severities again.

Another Anſwer that hath been given is, That in Queen Elizabeth's Time there was no Toleration eſtabliſh'd by Law, and all the Doctor aim'd at was to Excite the Magiſtrates to put the Laws in Execution againſt ſuch Offenders as are not Exempted by the Toleration Act. But I ſubmit to your Lordſhips, whether the Words are capable of that Interpretation. Here is a Commendation of the Piety and Zeal of Queen Elizabeth, who reſolv'd entirely to ſuppreſs the Diſſenters, and ſhe in her Prudence put thoſe wholeſome Severities in Execution. What thoſe wholeſome Severities were, your Lordſhips have been told; they were Hanging, Burning, Abjuration, Confiſcation, Impriſonment, Loſs of Eſtate, Liberty and Life; I ſay no more of them; but I believe there is not one Perſon here, but if theſe Severities were to be inflicted on him, would be far from thinking them wholeſome, and deſire to be excus'd from them. I would not be thought in any thing to reflect on the Memory of that glorious Queen, who was ſo eminent an Inſtrument of God, to deliver this Kingdom from Popery, from the Power of Spain, and to ſettle the Proteſtant Religion among us; but it muſt be confeſs'd, there were theſe Spots and Blemiſhes in her Reign, permitted by God's Providence for wiſe Ends and Purpoſes; and this ſhould raiſe our Gratitude to Almighty God, and our Thanks to Her preſent Majeſty, whoſe Reign hath exceeded Her Predeceſſor's, Queen Elizabeth, without being chequer'd with any of thoſe Spots or Stains. And as Queen Elizabeth preſerv'd this Kingdom from the Monarchy of Spain, ſo Her Majeſty has preſerved us from the united Power of France and Spain, been the Terror of Her Enemies abroad, whilſt at the ſame time She has, with univerſal Clemency and Juſtice, cheriſh'd and protected all Her Subjects at Home; and as by theſe Means She has engag'd in the ſtrongeſt Affection the Hearts of all Her People, ſo no doubt they will always continue to retain the ſtricteſt Duty to a Queen, who hath been ſo univerſally good to all Her Subjects.

The laſt part of the Charge is, That the Doctor aſſerts it is the Duty of ſuperior Paſtors to thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration; and inſolently dares or defies any Power on Earth to reverſe ſuch Sentences. One of the Council ſaid, that the thundring out thoſe Anathema's, is no more than declaring the Judgments of God denounc'd in Scripture againſt the Wickedneſs of Men; and that he deſires the Superior Paſtors to denounce them, becauſe the greater the Authority of the Perſon denouncing them is, the greater Influence they will have on the Minds of the People. But the Anathema's he excites them to, are Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's, which are plainly Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures and Excommunications; it is a plain exciting the Superior Paſtors to denounce Excommunications and other Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures. It is ſaid, that this Expreſſion is ty'd up only to thoſe Anathema's and Sentences that are ratify'd in Heaven, and thoſe, they ſay, no Power on Earth can reverſe. I ſhall not enter into that Queſtion, whether this is a Propoſition ſtrictly juſt in Divinity: All I ſhall ſay as to that, is this, That all who have wrote the higheſt of the Power of the Keys, allow and maintain that there is a double Power, a Power of remitting as well as retaining, of looſing as well as of binding, of opening as well as of ſhutting, both exercis'd by the Church on Earth. If the Superior Paſtor has for good Cauſe bound or ſhut any Perſon out of the Church, that Sentence is ratify'd in Heaven; but yet notwithſtanding, if that Perſon, ſo cenſur'd, reforms and amends, and the Church on Earth reſtore him again, the firſt Sentence, tho' ratify'd in Heaven, is vacated and done away by the Church's Power on Earth.

But this is not the Matter now before your Lordſhips; the Queſtion is, Whether he excites the Superior Paſtors of the Church to thunder out their Anathema's againſt Perſons that are entitled to the Toleration; and I think, that he does ſo, is own'd by his Council; for they ſay, that Schiſm doth expoſe a Man to the Cenſures of the Church; that the Diſſenters were Schiſmaticks before the Act of Toleration, and that that Act don't excuſe the Schiſm; and therefore remaining Schiſmaticks ſtill, they are ſtill liable to the Cenſures of the Church: Now I do agree with the Doctor, that the Act of Toleration hath made no Alteration as to the Sin of Schiſm; if the Diſſenters were Schiſmaticks before the Toleration, they are Schiſmaticks ſtill; and taking that for granted, then here is the Force of the Doctor's Argument: The Diſſenters were Schiſmaticks before the Act of Toleration; as they were Schiſmaticks before, ſo they are Schiſmaticks ſtill; it is the Duty of all Superior Paſtors to thunder out their Anathema's againſt Schiſmaticks; when they thunder out thoſe Anathema's they are ratify'd in Heaven; whatever is ratified in Heaven, no Power on Earth can reverſe; therefore, tho' the Diſſenters be exempted from Human Penalties by the Toleration Act, and are thereby preſerv'd in the free Exerciſe of their Religion and Conſciences; yet notwithſtanding that, Let the Superior Paſtors do their Duty, and thunder out their Anathema's againſt them, and let any Power on Earth reverſe thoſe Anathema's if they can. Now can there be a more plain, poſitive and direct Proof of this part of the Article, than this is? Can any thing be a clearer Evidence to prove this laſt part of the Charge againſt him, That he Suggeſts and Maintains that it is the Duty of Superior Paſtors to Thunder out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's againſt Perſons entitled to the Benefit of the Toleration Act, and that he inſolently Dares or Defies any Power on Earth to Reverſe ſuch Sentences?

My Lords, This is what I have to offer by way of Reply: There is a Gentleman to come after me, who will amply ſupply what I have omitted, and therefore I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips any further.

Then the LORDS Adjourned to their Houſe Above.

Friday, March 10. The Tenth Day.

THE Lords coming down into Weſtminſter-Hall, and being ſeated in the manner before-mentioned, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, ſave thee and thy Bail, elſe thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Gentlemen, you that are Managers for the Houſe of Commons may proceed in your Reply.

Mr. Cowper. MY Lords, When by Command of the Commons, I ſpoke to your Lordſhips a few Days ſince, in Maintenance of the Second Article, towards the Concluſion of what I then ſaid, I preſented to your Lordſhips a ſhort View of what I apprehended we might reaſonably expect would be the Conſequence of the Doctor's bitter Invectives againſt the Act of Toleration, and the Perſons intended to be protected by it. I likewiſe took Notice of thoſe Heats and Diſputes, of the Feuds and Animoſities, which were then apparently ſtirred up throughout the Kingdom.

I am ſorry to have ſo early an Occaſion to ſay, that my Apprehenſions in this Particular were ſo well grounded: Your Lordſhips have ſeen, that this ſeditious Libel, under the ſpecious Title of a Sermon, calculated to ſeduce and delude the Rabble, has, even during the Continuance of the Tryal, produced an actual Rebellion; in which ſeveral Places of Religious Worſhip (appointed for thoſe Perſons, who are by Law tolerated and allowed, but have the Misfortune nevertheleſs to be repreſented by Doctor Sacheverell as neceſſary to be deſtroyed) have been accordingly pulled down, and burnt, in Defiance of the Supreme Power of the Kingdom; and this, my Lords, at the Inſtigation of one who would be thought an Advocate for Paſſive Obedience.

I could wiſh the Priſoner's indiſcreet Behaviour (which ſeems to have abuſed the Liberty with which your Lordſhips have indulged him) may not unhappily have given ſome Occaſion to the Outrage and Violence of late committed, notwithſtanding the Apology he has made in this Particular.

Sure I am, that Diſcord which flames in the Kingdom was unheard-of among us, until the Toleration was thus publickly and ſeditiouſly branded, until Doctor Sacheverell had preſumed to repreſent it to the People, it's impoſſible to ſay how! without referring to his whole Libel.

His Council have obſerved, that the Second Article contains ſeveral Charges, and have inſiſted that the Paſſages given in Evidence by the Commons, are not ſufficient to maintain the firſt and ſecond; and as to the third and fourth, they ſeem rather to juſtify than deny thoſe Branches of the Charge.

My Lords, The Commons apprehend, notwithſtanding what has been ſaid, Firſt,

That Doctor Sacheverell has plainly ſuggeſted and maintain'd, That the Toleration granted to Diſſenters is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable.

This, my Lords, we inſiſt he has done, not in ambiguous or doubtful Words, not in uncertain Expreſſions, but in direct and poſitive Aſſertions.

The Council admit, That to ſpeak againſt a Law in Being cannot be juſtified. The Act of Toleration is not only a Law in Being, but is a Law which has viſibly attained the End for which it was made; that is to ſay, by giving Eaſe to ſcrupulous Conſciences in the Exerciſe of Religion, it has proved an effectual Means to unite Her Majeſty's Proteſtant Subjects in Intereſt and Affection.

Yet, my Lords, this Law, which, by the Experience of more than Twenty Years, has been found ſo uſeful and neceſſary, hath been traduced and arraigned by the Priſoner, both from the Pulpit, and the Preſs, with a malicious and ſeditious Purpoſe, to deſtroy the Publick Peace, and Security of the Kingdom.

This Offence, it ſeems, is of too high a Nature to be juſtified by the Priſoner and his Council, and therefore it is thought more expedient to deny it. The Turn that's given is this; ſay they, Doctor Sacheverell affirms nothing touching Legal Indulgence or Toleration, but all that he has ſaid reſpects only Univerſal Toleration.

My Lords, I thought I had obviated this Excuſe, by obſerving that this Notion of Univerſal Toleration has been conceived and brought forth ſince the Impeachment.

However I am willing to enter into the Queſtion: Whether the Toleration mentioned in the Libel, is intended or can be underſtood of Univerſal Toleration.

Fol. 24. Your Lordſhips will find theſe Words: Nay, now they have advanced themſelves, from the Religious Liberty our Gracious Sovereign has indulged them, to claim a Civil Right, as they term it, and to juſtle the Church out of her Eſtabliſhment, by bringing their Toleration into its Place. Vide Sermon. My

My Lords, Will any Man deviate ſo far from Senſe, as to ſay, that the Doctor here meant Univerſal Toleration, in the Senſe the Doctor and his Council have defined it? Is Univerſal Toleration a Religious Liberty, with which our Gracious Sovereign hath indulged her Subjects? Nay, my Lords, Have not every one of them argued, and that rightly, that the Doctor's Univerſal Toleration is not tolerated by Law? That Atheiſts, Deiſts, Tritheiſts, Socinianiſts, and thoſe who go to no Religious Place of Worſhip, are not exempted from the former Penalties? How then is it poſſible the Doctor ſhould be underſtood, as ſpeaking of Univerſal Toleration in this Paſſage? Is not this directly and poſitively affirmed of the Toleration, with which the Diſſenters are indulged by our Gracious Sovereign? Can your Lordſhips conceive the Diſſenters are not the Perſons intended, when he ſays, They claim a Civil Right, as they term it, to juſtle the Church out of her Eſtabliſhment, by hoiſting their Toleration into its Place?

Again, Folio 25. They thrive upon Conceſſions, take Permiſſion for Power, and advance Toleration into an Eſtabliſhment. ---- Pray, my Lords, What Conceſſions have been made to Perſons not within the Benefit of the Act of Toleration? What Permiſſion is it they can be ſaid to take for Power? What Toleration have they to advance into an Eſtabliſhment.

My Lords, Folio 14, and in many other Places, your Lordſhips cannot but ſee that all the Doctor's Spleen is levell'd at the Legal Indulgence or Toleration. But it is miſpending your Time, to prove what it is impoſſible not to know and be convinc'd of, upon reading every Paſſage in the Libel where Toleration is but ſo much as mention'd.

The next Thing they urge in the Doctor's Defence is, That if his Expreſſions do relate to the Legal Indulgence or Toleration, they are ſo dubious and uncertain, that nothing can be inferr'd from them without Innuendo's and forc'd Conſtructions.

My Lords, Now the Queſtion is, Whether Doctor Sacheverell's Expreſſions relating to the Toleration, and the Perſons indulged, are dubious and uncertain? Whether any Innuendo or forc'd Conſtruction is neceſſary to demonſtrate their Malignity?

Your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to remember, that the Council, from the firſt to the laſt, maintained very ſtrenuouſly (as did the Doctor likewiſe in his Speech) that altho' the Act of Toleration exempts the Diſſenters from Penalties, yet they remain Schiſmaticks notwithſtanding; for, ſay they, Diſſention was Schiſm before the Statute, and a bare Exemption from a Penalty has not alter'd the Caſe, but the ſame remains Schiſm ſtill; and this Poſition, I find, is agreeable to the Doctor's Opinion as deliver'd in his Sermon, with this Addition only, that all Schiſm and Separation is damnable Sin, without making any Allowance for Ignorance, or Prejudice of Education.

His Words are theſe, Folio 8. Is this the Spirit and Doctrine of our Holy Mother? To aſſert Separation from her Communion to be no Schiſm; or if it is, that Schiſm is no damnable Sin.

My Lords, When I obſerve in this and other Paſſages what Spirit this Man is of, I wonder not to find, that the moſt Chriſtian Virtues of Charity and Moderation are mention'd by him with Slight and Contempt. Folio 25, you will find him citing a Paſſage from St. Paul's Epiſtle to the Galatians, Chap. 2. after which he adds theſe Words: If our Diſſenters, ſays he, had lived in thoſe Times, they would have branded him (i. e. St. Paul,) for an intemperate, hot, furious Zealot, that wanted to be ſweetned by the gentle Spirit of Charity and Moderation, forſooth! My Lords, If our Diſſenters had lived in thoſe Days, they would have been highly to blame, if they had branded the Apoſtle with thoſe opprobrious Names; whoever peruſes that Chapter, will find there is not the leaſt Occaſion for it. But Doctor Sacheverell would willingly have St. Paul thought like himſelf.

My Lords, I cannot take upon me to ſay what the Diſſenters would have ſaid, had they lived in St. Paul's Days: But for my own part, I cannot forbear ſaying now, That ſince it appears to be the Doctor's Opinion that all Separatiſts are Schiſmaticks, and that all Schiſmaticks are damned, I cannot but think that Doctor Sacheverell wants to be ſweetned by that ridicul'd Spirit of Charity and Moderation. I own, my Lords, I was amazed to hear this Gentleman in his Speech affirm, that he had not betrayed any want of Chriſtian Moderation in his Sermon: I wiſh he has not been unmindful even of Chriſtianity it ſelf; when it is ſo apparent that in this ſhort Sentence, and in the Paſſage (Folio 24.) which I formerly cited at large, he has ſentenc'd to Eternal Damnation, not only the Diſſenters of whatſoever Denomination, but thoſe alſo who defend the Toleration.

It is to be hoped, ſome Things which he has vowed and ſaid for himſelf in his Defence, may have more of Truth in them than this has.

But, my Lords, to return: The Doctor and his Council are agreed that all Diſſenters are Schiſmaticks; conſequently when he ſpeaks of Schiſm and Schiſmaticks, he muſt mean the Diſſenters; and then be pleaſed, my Lords, to judge if the Doctor's Expreſſions touching the Toleration, and the Diſſenters, can be ſaid to be dubious; on the contrary, whether they are not plain, poſitive and certain.

Before I enter into this Matter, I cannot but take Notice again of that remarkable Paſſage, (Fol. 16, and 17.) What could not be gained by Toleration, muſt be brought about by Occaſional Conformity; that is, what they could not do by open Violence, they will not fail by ſecret Treachery to accompliſh. If the Church can't be pull'd down, it may be blown up; and no matter with theſe Men how it is deſtroyed, ſo it is deſtroyed. My Lords, Is not here a direct Aſſertion that the Toleration is downright open Violence, and Occaſional Conformity ſecret Treachery? Is not here an Aſſertion, that altho' the Toleration has not been able to anſwer the End for which it was deſigned, (i. e.) to pull down the Church, yet Occaſional Conformity may blow it up? Pray, my Lords, What Conſtruction can theſe Words admit of, No Matter with theſe Men how it is deſtroyed, ſo it is deſtroyed? What Men are here intended? Even Diſſenters and Occaſional Conformiſts.

Is this Paſſage doubtful and ambiguous? Is here any Occaſion for a forc'd Conſtruction, or an Innuendo? My Lords, 'tis moſt ſcandalouſly plain, and as plainly ſeditious.

Your Lordſhips have obſerved, that neither the Doctor, or any of his Council, (one only excepted) have taken the leaſt Notice, in their Anſwer of this Paſſage: It was produced and given in Evidence againſt him, and Twice at leaſt mentioned by the Managers. I wonder the Author wou'd not vouchſafe to explain it, Is not this Silence a Confeſſion of his Guilt?

The Council that did mention it, was pleaſed to ſay, that it rather commended the Toleration, than found Fault with it; as if it was ſome Credit to the Toleration, which was intended to pull down and deſtroy the Church, that it had not done it. In what Humour, my Lords, that Anſwer was made, to ſo high and Criminal a Charge, I know not; the Commons might reaſonably have expected a more ſerious Anſwer. But, my Lords, from hence we conclude that no Anſwer can be given to it.

Again (Folio 10.) the Doctor affirms, That whoever preſumes to alter or innovate any Point in the Articles of the Faith of our Church, ought to be arraign'd as a Traytor to the State; Heterodoxy in the Doctrines of the one, naturally producing, and almoſt neceſſarily inferring Rebellion and High Treaſon in the other, and conſequently a Crime that concerns as much the Civil Magiſtrate to puniſh and reſtrain, as the Eccleſiaſtical. Then he goes on, and adds, This Aſſertion at firſt View, may look look like an high flown Paradox. ------I own, at firſt View it look'd to me ſomething like it, and I am not yet convinc'd but it is ſo.

Are not the Diſſenters Heterodox in Opinion? Conſequently they are Rebels and Traytors, according to Doctor Sacheverell, and ought to be puniſhed by the Civil Magiſtrate as ſuch: That is to ſay, they are to be hang'd as Rebels, and damn'd as Diſſenters.

Still, my Lords, we have the Doctor's Word for it, he has not betray'd the leaſt Want of Chriſtian Charity or Moderation.

Many are the Paragraphs in this Libel equally obnoxious, and which, like theſe, are too plain to admit of any Anſwer.

My Lords, I ſhall not loſe Time as to the Second Head, or Charge, in this Article. Folio 8. you will find it aſſerted, as plain as Words can ſpeak, that to defend Toleration is the Mark or Characteriſtick of a Falſe Brother; and (Folio 24.) you will find his Portion aſſigned him, with all the reſt of the Falſe Brethren, with Hypocrites and Unbelievers, with all Lyars, in the Lake which burns with Fire and Brimſtone, with the Grand Father of Falſhood, the Devil and his Angels.

My Lords, The Charge which relates to Archbiſhop Grindall is, That Doctor Sacheverell aſſerts, Queen Elizabeth was deluded by him to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline; and that, to ſhew his Reſentment againſt the Archbiſhop for favouring Toleration, he calls him a falſe Son of the Church, and a perfidious Prelate.

The Doctor, throughout his Sermon, is arguing with a furious and intemperate Zeal againſt the preſent Toleration; he is repreſenting it as a Law that gives Encouragement and Protection to Schiſmatical Impoſtors, Enthuſiaſts, Hypocrites, to a Mungril Union of Sects, to Fanaticks, Rebels, Traytors, Atheiſts, Deiſts, Tritheiſts, Socinianiſts, to the Principles of Fanaticiſm, Regicide, and Anarchy, to Monſters and Vipers, that ſcatter their Peſtilence at Noon-day, to Jews, Quakers, and Mahometans; in a word, to all falſe Brethren; and after a great deal more of this unpreſidented Language, he breaks out, (Folio 19.) Theſe Charges are ſo flagrant and undeniable, that a Man muſt be very weak, or ſomething worſe, that thinks or pretends the Diſſenters are to be gained, or won over, by any other Grants or Indulgence, than giving up our whole Conſtitution.

Have they not, ſays he, ever ſince their unhappy Plantation in this Kingdom, by the Interceſſion of that falſe Son of the Church, Biſhop Grindall, always improved, and riſe upon their Demands in the Permiſſion of the Government.

My Lords, I would fain know whether Doctor Sacheverell, by theſe Words, A Man muſt be weak, or worſe, that thinks the Diſſenters are to be won by any other Indulgence than giving up our whole Conſtitution, could mean any other than the preſent Diſſenters, and that Indulgence which is at preſent afforded them.

In the very Line following he calls them Clamorous, Inſatiable, and Church-devouring Malignants; and then proceeds in the Words I have mentioned: Have they not, (i. e.) the Diſſenters, ever ſince their unhappy Plantation in this Kingdom, by the Interceſſion of that falſe Son of the Church, Archbiſhop Grindall, improved and riſen upon their Demands in the Permiſſion of the Government.

The Priſoner's Defence has explained this Paſſage; they were barely permitted or ſuffered, he ſays, for a Time by Queen Elizabeth, but they have improved and riſen upon their Demands, 'till in this Age they have obtained an Indulgence by Act of Parliament, and this Act of Parliament is manifeſtly what the Doctor has taken Offence at.

Then he goes on------Inſomuch, ſays he, that Queen Elizabeth, who was deluded by that perfidious Prelate, to the Toleration of the Genevian Diſcipline, found it ſuch an headſtrong, encroaching Monſter, that in Eight Years ſhe found it would endanger the Monarchy, as well as the Hierarchy: And, like a Queen of true Reſolution, and pious Zeal for both, pronounced them Factious, and ſuppreſs'd them by wholeſome Severities.

My Lords, I think we ſhould have been wanting in that Duty we owe to the Memory of that great Prelate and Father of the Church, who was ſo conſiderable in eſtabliſhing the Reformed Religion, had we not taken Notice of theſe harſh and unjuſtifiable Expreſſions.

Doctor Sacheverell ſpeaks of them as carrying an undue Aſperity, but ſuch as he hopes may be forgiven, ſince it was neceſſary, he pretends, that either Queen Elizabeth, or that Archbiſhop, muſt bear the Blame; and he rather thought it reaſonable to charge it on the Archbiſhop, than to ſuffer it to lye at the Queen's Door.

My Lords, Your Lordſhips will obſerve, that all the Anſwer he has given to this Part of the Charge, is, as if the Commons had impeached him for being too free with Archbiſhop Grindall, for uſing, as he calls it, an undue Aſperity of Expreſſion towards him.

But your Lordſhips will diſcern that this Paſſage is made uſe of in our Charge, to ſhew that the Diſſenters are repreſented as headſtrong and encroaching Monſters, dangerous to the Monarchy, as well as the Hierarchy; and the Example of Queen Elizabeth is produced, to ſhew how neceſſary it is by wholeſome Severities to ſuppreſs them.

Are any ſtrain'd Conſtructions or Innuendo's neceſſary to apply this Evidence to the firſt and main Head of the Charge, which is, That Doctor Sacheverell aſſerts and maintains, that the Toleration is unreaſonable, and the Allowance of it unwarrantable?

My

My Lords, Before I take my Leave of this Head, I cannot forbear ſaying upon this Occaſion, that ſure I am the Toleration is not ſo dangerous to the Monarchy, as is this late Notion of an Hierarchy to the Supremacy of the Queen's Majeſty; which however I hope ſhall be continued and preſerved in the Crown of England, for the Peace and Safety of the Church as by Law eſtabliſhed, to all Poſterity.

My Lords, To the next and laſt Part, which relates to the Thundring out Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's, the Defence is, That thoſe Anathema's are not intended againſt the Perſons intitled to the Toleration.

To this I anſwer: He is particularly ſpeaking, in this Part of the Libel, of the Schiſmaticks and Diſſenters, and expreſly names them in theſe Words, (Fol. 25.)

And yet if our Diſſenters had lived in thoſe Times, they would have branded him as an intemperate, hot and furious Zealot. —— Schiſm and Faction are Things of impudent and encroaching Natures, they thrive upon Conceſſions, take Permiſſion for Power, and advance a Toleration immediately into an Eſtabliſhment. ——— Are not the Diſſenters here expreſly named? Are we not to underſtand the Words Schiſm and Faction, as coupled with Toleration, to be meant of the Diſſenters, and of them only? Sure this is too plain to admit of any Doubt.

Then, my Lords, he proceeds; And are therefore to be treated like growing Miſchiefs, or infectious Plagues, kept at a Diſtance, leſt their deadly Contagion ſpread. Let us therefore have no Fellowſhip with theſe Works of Darkneſs, but rather reprove them: Let our Superior Paſtors do their Duty, in Thundring out their Eccleſiaſtical Anathema's, and let any Power on Earth dare reverſe a Sentence ratified in Heaven.

My Lords, Is here one Word of Hereſies, Blaſphemies, and the reſt of thoſe enormous Offences, to which the Doctor would have theſe Anathema's relate? No, there is nothing to be found here but Diſſenters, Schiſm, and Toleration.

If theſe Anathema's are to be underſtood (as certainly they are) to extend to Perſons entitled to Toleration; then, my Lords, that Air of Inſolence that concludes the Period is explained.

Let our Superior Paſtors do their Duty; that is to ſay, let them exert themſelves, and Thunder out their Anathema's, and let any Power on Earth dare reverſe them.

Theſe Words, my Lords, ſeem too big and mighty, to mean any little or ſubordinate Power.

Thus have we ſupported, and made good the ſeveral Charges contained in the Second Article.

My Lords, As the Commons are fully ſenſible how neceſſary it is to ſupport the Honour and Juſtice of the Revolution, to which we owe no leſs than the ineſtimable Bleſſing of Her preſent Majeſty, the Guardian Angel of this Church and State, the future Expectation of a Proteſtant Succeſſion, the Religion, Laws, Rights, and Liberties of the Britiſh Nation; ſo are they thoroughly convinced that the Peace and Welfare, the Security and Strength of the Kingdom in great meaſure depend upon the inviolable Preſervation of the Act of Toleration, which has been moſt maliciouſly and ſeditiouſly traduced and miſrepreſented by Dr. Sacheverell.

Mr. Thompſon. MY Lords, It is my Part to trouble your Lordſhips with a Reply to ſuch Anſwers as have been offered to the Third Article of this Impeachment; and notwithſtanding what has been ſaid by the Council, what has been produced in Evidence; and what has been alledged by the Doctor himſelf to move your Lordſhips Compaſſion, I am concerned, even for his Sake, that I can obſerve it to your Lordſhips, That the Charge in this Article remains entirely unanſwered.

Before I enter into the Particulars, I muſt obſerve to your Lordſhips, that if there were any doubtful, or any the leaſt favourable Conſtruction to be made of ſome Paſſages in this Sermon, the Commons would not have given your Lordſhips this Trouble, nor the Doctor an Opportunity of cenſuring their Impeachment as a hard-hearted and uncharitable Proſecution.

My Lords, I cannot but think it very ungenerous to inſult any Man in Misfortunes, or to treat one in his Condition with Scorn and Indignity; neither have I, or ſhall I be guilty of it; but I muſt take leave to ſay, that no other Interpretation can be made of ſome Paſſages applicable to this Head, but what is Criminal, ſince ſo many Learned Council, ſince ſo many Able Heads who have aſſiſted the Doctor in his Defence; nay, ſince he himſelf, who ſhould know beſt his own Meaning, has not been capable of giving the leaſt Colour or Pretence of any Conſtruction of them in his Favour.

Whatever Pity your Lordſhips may be inclined to in your private Capacities, for any one who has (I cannot ſay through Inadvertency) brought himſelf into Affliction, whatever Diſpoſitions you may have to Mercy, yet I need not ſay, that there is a Compaſſion, a tender Regard due to the Welfare of your Countrey, a Care incumbent on you to ſuppreſs what has the leaſt Tendency to Sedition, and the Diſturbance of the publick Peace of the Kingdom, and that theſe important Truſts have a Claim to your Lordſhips Juſtice, preferable to any private Concern whatſoever.

Not to detain your Lordſhips any longer in Generals, I ſhall proceed to ſtate the Charge and Defence, that your Lordſhips may have a View of the Inſufficiency of the latter. My Lords, the Charge is, " That the Doctor ſuggeſts and maintains, that the " Church of England is in a Condition of great Pe- " ril and Adverſity under Her Majeſty's Admini- " ſtration: " He denies that he ſuggeſts any Danger to the Church, only from Vice, Infidelity, Blaſphemy and Hereſy, but not at all from or under any Part of Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration.

The firſt Paſſage I produced to your Lordſhips, to prove the Charge, was in Page the 5th; I muſt beg leave to trouble your Lordſhips with reading it again, becauſe it may be neceſſary; " Tho' it were " very obvious to draw a Parallel here betwixt the " ſad Circumſtances of the Church of Corinth for- " merly, and the Church of England at preſent, " wherein our Holy Communion has been rent and " divided by Factious and Schiſmatical Impoſtors; " her pure Doctrine has been corrupted and defiled, " her Primitive Worſhip and Diſcipline prophaned " and abuſed, her Sacred Orders denied and vilified, " her Prieſts and Profeſſors (like St. Paul) calum- " niated, miſrepreſented and ridiculed, her Altars " and Sacraments proſtituted to Hypocrites, Deiſts, " Socinians and Atheiſts; and this done, I wiſh I " could not ſay without Diſcouragement, I am ſure " with Impunity, not only by our profeſſed Ene- " mies, but, which is worſe, by our pretended " Friends and falſe Brethren.

The

The learned Council pretended to ſhew, that moſt of theſe Calamities attending the Church, proceeded from the Blaſphemous and Heretical Books and Pamphlets produced to your Lordſhips, and that the Doctor meant them to be the Cauſe of the Danger he ſuggeſts: Now, pray my Lords, how can that Conſtruction be made? How can this be conſiſtent with the Doctor's Aſſertion, that all this is done, not only by profeſſed Enemies (which every Body will agree takes in the Infidels, Blaſphemers and Hereticks) but by pretended Friends and falſe Brethren? When I took the Liberty to obſerve on this Paſſage, I ſtated it thus; Who could proſtitute Altars and Sacraments to Hypocrites, Deiſts, Socinians and Atheiſts, but ſome of the Doctor's own Order? And who were to puniſh thoſe Crimes? Who could they be that did not diſcourage them, but ſuffered them to be committed with Impunity, but his Eccleſiaſtical Superiors? And that they were Part of Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, no Body could deny.

Now what Anſwer, my Lords, was given to this? To the firſt Part of this Paragraph, about rending the Communion by Schiſmatical Impoſtors, and ſo to the other Particulars, 'till the laſt, it was ſhifted off to the profeſſed Enemies, the Infidels, Blaſphemers and Hereticks, Diſſenting Teachers, and Popiſh Prieſts, but nothing laid to the falſe Brethren, who, the Doctor ſays, neither Puniſh nor Diſcourage. But when the learned Council came to the laſt Calamity of the Church, that of proſtituting the Altars and Sacraments, &c. they are pleas'd to make Occaſional Conformiſts their Atheiſts, &c. that receive the Sacraments; but as to the Charge of arraigning the Perſons that do not diſcourage or puniſh thoſe who proſtitute Altars to Atheiſts, &c. they thought fit to ſlide it over, and not ſay one Syllable to it; they did not ſo much as mumble this Thiſtle, and the others but very tenderly. Pray, my Lords, in the Interpretation I make, where is there any foreign Intendment, any forced Conſtruction, or ſtrained Inference againſt the Doctor's expreſs Words, and poſitive Aſſertions? Let every candid Reader, without Prejudice, impartially conſider the Meaning of this Paſſage; Is this a Danger ſuggeſted from Books or Pamphlets? Or is it not a plain and direct Invective againſt thoſe Perſons in the Church, who are charged with being the Occaſion of theſe Dangers to the Church by their Remiſsneſs in their Duty, not only in not puniſhing, but not ſo much as diſcouraging thoſe Crimes: And to whom can his lazy Defenders within relate, but to the ſame Perſons, thoſe that are within the Church, and are to protect it?

But if it were true, that Altars and Sacraments were thus proſtituted, why muſt the World be told in this Manner of it? Tho' it is the Duty of a Clergyman at all Seaſons, and in all Places, as one of the Doctor's Council was pleaſed to ſay, to preach againſt Vice and Infidelity, Immorality and Prophaneneſs; yet ſure none will ſay, that he is to revile his Superiors, and charge them in this Method with their want of Duty, and Care for the Church: What other End muſt ſuch licentious Reproaches produce, but a Contempt of their Perſons, a leſſening the Dignity of their Order, and a Diminution of that Character which gives them the Capacity of doing Good in the World whilſt they preſerve a Veneration and Eſteem, but which muſt ceaſe when they meet with the contrary: The Doctor was ſo ſenſible of this, when he mentioned it as his own Caſe, that he thought the very Imputation of a Crime to any of his Function, tho' acquitted of it, muſt leave a Scar ſo as to blemiſh his Character; ſure then he ought to have uſed the utmoſt Caution, before he preached or publiſhed this Sermon, and to have conſidered the pernicious Conſequences of reviling thoſe in Authority. If, as he was pleaſed to ſay, ill treating of him, who was an Ambaſſador of Chriſt, was deſpiſing Chriſt himſelf; ſure it cannot be thought an unnatural Inference, if Her Majeſty is ſaid to be reviled, by reflecting on thoſe who act under Her Commiſſion, and are Part of Her Adminiſtration.

The ſecond Paſſage I troubled your Lordſhips with, is in Page 16; he had been talking of the Comprehenſion and Union of the Church and Diſſenters, and giving a great many hard Names to it; which Deſign your Lordſhips know had its Riſe from a Commiſſion under the Great Seal from his late Majeſty to ſeveral Lords, Biſhops, and other learned Divines, who were to conſider of proper Methods to accompliſh it: "But he thanks God, that "Providence had blaſted the long projected Scheme "of theſe Eccleſiaſtical Achitophels"; with other ſcurrilous Reflections on the Deſign, and thoſe concerned in it; and then he ſays, "That ſince this "Model of univerſal Liberty and Coalition failed, "and theſe falſe Brethren could not carry the Con-"venticle into the Church, they are now reſolved "to bring the Church into the Conventicle, which "will more plauſibly and ſlily effect her Ruin; what "could not be gained by Comprehenſion and To-"leration, muſt be brought about by Moderation "and Occaſional Conformity; that is, what they "could not do by open Violence, they will not fail "by ſecret Treachery to accompliſh. If the Church "can't be pulled down, it may be blown up; and "no Matter with theſe Men how 'tis deſtroyed, ſo "that it is deſtroyed.

Now pray, my Lords, where is the forced Conſtruction to make the Doctor in this Paſſage ſpeak of Perſons in Church and State who endanger the Church, and not of Books and Pamphlets, Vice, Infidelity, &c.?

He is on his ſecond general Head of the Perils of Falſe Brethren in Church and State, and of thoſe Perſons who could not accompliſh the Deſtruction of the Church by the Comprehenſion, but were doing it another Way, by Occaſional Conformity and Moderation; I do not know that either of theſe are condemned by the Law for Vice, Infidelity, Blaſphemy, Hereſy or Prophaneneſs; be that as it will, 'tis from the Perſons in Church and State the Danger is ſuggeſted to ariſe, and who, as he is pleaſed to ſay, make uſe of theſe only as means to blow up and deſtroy the Church: But then I ſuppoſe theſe Perſons in the Church muſt be interpreted to be only the moſt inferior, and ſo no Reflection on the Adminiſtration: As Men of Characters and Stations in the State were conſtrued to be Conſtables, Exciſe-Men and Cuſtom-Houſe Officers, ſo theſe Perſons who were to bring about the Comprehenſion, and are now blowing up and undermining the Church in another Manner, muſt be Church-Wardens, Pariſh-Clerks and Sextons. Theſe Sort of Conſtructions by the Doctor's Learned Council, are ſo eaſy and natural, that I muſt agree with his Obſervation, that they have not much Argument, Learning or Eloquence to ſupport them.

And I cannot but obſerve a very extraordinary Method of anſwering this Paſſage and the next, by one of the Learned Council; he is pleaſed to cite Two other Paſſages in the Sermon, which were never ver mentioned by me, or any of the Managers of this Article; and with very ſtrenuous Zeal he explains thoſe Paſſages by chiming in with the Doctor, in charging Occaſional Conformiſts with Atheiſm, Deiſm, and the worſt of Crimes; and then he concludes, that the Doctor, in thoſe Paſſages he cited, has not aſſerted the Church to be in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; but not one Syllable to this Paſſage, which I cited in Page the 16th.

The third Place I troubled your Lordſhips with, was in the 18th Page; his Words are, "Falſhood "always implies Treachery; and whether that is "a Qualification for any one to be truſted, eſpeci- "ally with the Guardianſhip of our Church or "Crown, let our Governors conſider": Theſe Words ſpeak ſo plainly, they need no Comment, nor have they offer'd at any Explanation of them; they muſt relate to Perſons, and can have no Reference to Books or Pamphlets, Blaſphemies or Hereſies, &c. by any Conſtruction whatever.

The Fourth Paſſage, my Lords, was in Page the 20th; he is talking of Dangers from National Sins, which are occaſioned by Diſſenters and Falſe Brethren; and then he ſays, "And now are we un- "der no Danger in theſe deplorable Circumſtances? "Muſt we lull our ſelves under this ſad Repoſe, "and in ſuch a ſtupid lethargick Security embrace our "Ruin? I pray God we may be out of Danger; "but we may remember the King's Perſon was "voted to be ſo, at the ſame Time that his Murde- "rers were conſpiring his Death.

The Subſtance of the Charge in this Paſſage, is an Intention to reflect on the Members who voted the Church to be out of Danger, by the Compariſon and Alluſion to the Vote relating to the King. The Meaning ſeems evidently, that though the King was voted to be out of Danger, yet he was not out of Danger; and ſo, though the Church was voted out of Danger, yet the Church was then, and is ſtill in Danger: But whether he meant it of the Members that paſſed that Vote, is the Queſtion; he ſays he only meant it according to his Notion of that Vote of the King, that thoſe not privy to the Deſign againſt him voted him ſafe, whilſt others conſpired his Murther; ſo when the Members voted the Church of England to be in no Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, it was none of them, but others that were conſpiring her Ruin.

The Doctor was pleaſed to ſay too, That that Vote was a Year and half before the King's Death, and that there were not a Tenth Part of thoſe Members who voted the King ſafe, the reſt being turned out, and no Houſe of Lords: Be that as it will, they were the ſame Parliament that voted the King out of Danger; and they that conſpired his Death, were Part of thoſe who voted him ſafe, and who turned out the reſt to accompliſh their Deſigns: And though the Parallel ſhould not run ſo as to reflect on both Houſes of Parliament, and all the Members, yet if it glances at ſome of them, and was ſo intended, it is a Circumſtance of Aggravation, and that is the only Intent of its being Part of the Article; and I can't but think the Doctor was apprehenſive of ſome Reflection of that Kind, for he ſays immediately the very next Words, "That he hopes what he has "ſo freely ſpoken will not give Offence: If he had not a View to that Vote of the Danger of the Church, there was no Occaſion for that Apology.

The fifth and laſt Place I troubled your Lordſhips with, was in the laſt Page, where there were ſome Pathetical Expreſſions which the Doctor choſe out of the Scripture, and managed them with others of his own, ſo as to repreſent the Church to be in the utmoſt Peril; he mentions nothing of Vice, Blaſphemy or Infidelity, "But that "ſhe lies bleeding of the Wounds ſhe has received "in the Houſe of her Friends": He cited the Lamentations for it, but there being no ſuch Text there, I took the Liberty of ſaying it was a Lamentation of his own making.

I ſhould not trouble your Lordſhips any more as to this Particular, but that I am in ſome meaſure oblig'd to vindicate my ſelf from what one of the Learned Council hinted upon this Occaſion; he was pleaſed to ſay in the Defence to the Firſt Article, he was as much at a Loſs to find out a Paſſage in the Sermon, as one of the Managers was to find the Text in the Lamentations. Though, my Lords, this is but a Trifle to the Thing in Queſtion before your Lordſhips, yet ſince that Learned Gentleman was pleaſed to triumph, as if he had me ſure and unanſwerable on this Point, I beg your Lordſhips Indulgence that it may appear which of us is in the right.

The Doctor cited that Text to be in the 2d Lam. 4th. I looked through the Lamentations, therefore knew I might venture to ſay what I did; I have looked over it again, and am ſure there is no ſuch Text there. It gave me Occaſion to read and reflect on the other Texts cited by the Doctor in the Prophecy of Zachariah, the 13th Chapter, where there are ſome Words that I ſuppoſe are meant, though I could not but obſerve the Doctor to be very unhappy in the Choice of his Scripture, this as well as others being directly contrary to his Purpoſe. The Words cited are in the 6th Verſe, the two preceeding Verſes explain them; the Subject Matter was falſe Prophecy. In the 4th Verſe 'tis ſaid, It ſhall come to paſs in that Day, that the Prophet ſhall be aſhamed, every one of his Viſion, when he has propheſied. In the 5th Verſe the Prophet is to deny that he is a Prophet, and ſay he is a Husbandman, and no Prophet. And in the 6th Verſe he is asked where he received his Wounds? He anſwers, in the Houſe of his Friends: So that he retains the Character of a falſe Prophet all along; and what he ſays in each Verſe is equally true, and conſequently that the Wounds he received were not in the Houſe of his Friends. Whatever may be thought of the Doctor in this Matter, I think I may conclude, that his Learned Council had his Scripture by Hearſay, or elſe he would not have triumph'd when he had ſo little Reaſon. There was a Diſpute, my Lords, not many Years ſince, between Two Learned Divines of our Church, about the Rights of the Convocation; one inſulted the other for his Ignorance in the Common-Prayer Book; but upon Examination it appear'd, that he who triumph'd moſt, was moſt ignorant of what he charged on the other: Whether this Caſe is not ſomewhat applicable, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

Having done, my Lords, with the ſeveral Paſſages made uſe of to maintain this Article, I think I may ſay the Charge contained in it, (That the Doctor aſſerts the Church to be in Danger, not only generally, or ſo as to be meant from Vice, Infidelity, Schiſm or Hereſies, Blaſphemy or Prophaneneſs, but from and under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration,) is not only affirmed, but ſtrongly proved. He is not charged here with ſpeaking contrary to his Words, or with Negative Crimes, nor is his Silence, as he was pleaſed to ſay, made Criminal.

I muſt now beg leave to obſerve a little on the Evidence produced on the Doctor's Behalf, and in his Defence to this Article. Your Lordſhips had a Collection of many ſcandalous Books and Pamphlets, drawn from Obſcurity, to be republiſh'd to the World, for the more effectual ſuppreſſing Blaſphemy and Prophaneneſs: And ſince the Doctor's Council forbore to mention the Particulars, I ſhall not enter into them; only in general I think I may ſay, that they have been proved to be no way material to what is in Iſſue before your Lordſhips: But it may not be improper to take Notice, that moſt of theſe Books appear'd to have ſtol'n into the World, and the Authors ſtill concealed; ſome of them Printed in Holland ſeventeen Years ago, and others Publiſh'd ſince the Doctor's Sermon: And for the Obſervators, and Rights of the Chriſtian Church, 'tis well known the Author of one, and Publiſher of the other have been Proſecuted; ſo that theſe cannot be ſaid to be tolerated with Impunity, nor meant as the Provocation for the Doctor's Cenſure.

I am ſorry there are any of theſe prophane and impious Pamphlets: There are ſome others too that have been publiſhed within this Seventeen Years, which might have been taken notice of, but I don't find them in the Doctor's Catalogue. There was a blaſphemous Sermon preach'd and publiſh'd by Doctor Binks; Mr. Dodwell's Charge of Schiſm, and unbiſhoping moſt of the preſent Biſhops; the ſame Gentleman's Baptiſmal Union of the Spirit, or his No Immortality of the Soul; and one Mr. Leſley's Project of uniting ours and the Gallic Church. Whether theſe Books were thought by the Doctor to tend to the right Eſtabliſhing our Church and true Religion, I need not ſay, but I do think they were worthy his Notice, and may vie with moſt in his Collection; and if he had been ſo incenſed againſt erroneous Doctrines, it had been a worthy Task ſure, and well becoming his honeſt well-meaning Zeal, to have endeavour'd a Confutation of them; then his Aſperity in rebuking, his harſh and vehement Expreſſions, would not have been ill employ'd: But, inſtead of this, to turn his Violence againſt his Superiors, for not Puniſhing what, it may be, they never heard of; and to lay the Danger from theſe Doctrines at their Doors, is not to be juſtified by any pretended Provocation of this Kind whatſoever.

There was another Piece of Evidence produced to your Lordſhips, ſome Proclamations againſt Immorality and Prophaneneſs: If there is any Thing to be inferr'd from them in the Doctor's Favour, I muſt own I can't conceive it. Becauſe the Queen commands the Magiſtrates to put the Laws in Execution, therefore every private Divine may arraign his Superiors for a ſuppos'd Neglect of their Duty, as often as he thinks fit; I ſay, I don't underſtand this Inference, but I can eaſily apprehend the Conſequence to all Governments that will ſuffer ſuch Preſumptions.

The Doctor himſelf was pleaſed to ſay, That one of the Dangers of the Church mention'd by him was forgot by the Managers, that was from Papiſts and their Emiſſaries: I will do him the Juſtice to remember, that he has beſtow'd ſix Lines on this Danger, but Twenty ſix large Pages on the Danger from thoſe in Church and State. Then it was ſaid, that the Doctor prays for the Queen, has taken the Oaths to the Queen, and therefore he could have no Intention to reflect on Her Majeſty, or any Part of Her Adminiſtration either in Church or State. And the Doctor in his own Speech was pleaſed to acknowledge Her Majeſty to be a Nurſing-Mother to the Church: But I could not obſerve one Syllable to the Reverend Fathers of the Church, of his Opinion of their Care of it: I could hear him admoniſh that Venerable Bench of the Guilt of departing from the Church, and abandoning the Principles of the Church, if they ſhould puniſh him, a true Son of the Church, for Preaching the ſame Doctrine with theirs; as if there was no manner of Difference whatever.

It ſeems, my Lords, very ſtrange, that after a Charge of this Nature of Reflection upon his Eccleſiaſtical Superiors, that, after having ſtudied ſo much Submiſſion, he ſhould not prevail with himſelf for ſo much as a Compliment upon this Occaſion. Such Behaviour ſeems to need no Explanation. I ſhould be very unwilling to recollect any of the Doctor's charitable Opinions of his own Brethren, who, as he is pleaſed to ſay, can ſacrifice their ſolemn Declarations and Oaths to Complaiſance and Preferments. I would be ſo charitable as to believe well, and think favourably of all Men; but when the contrary does ſo manifeſtly appear, it would be Injuſtice to the reſt of Mankind not to judge accordingly. It would be a Remiſſneſs and Negligence of Duty, juſtly blameable, if we were to ſhut our Eyes, and reſolve not to ſee what ſo evidently threatens the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom. If Men muſt be allow'd to vent their Diſpleaſure at ſuch Proceedings of their Governors which do not ſuit their particular Humours, what muſt become of the Credit and Reputation of any Government, which is ſo neceſſary to preſerve it?

Your Lordſhips have heard a great many Objections againſt Innuendo's, that they are dangerous Things, and never encourag'd; and that your Lordſhips have been pleas'd to ſhew your Diſlike of them. I ſhall not ſcruple to own, that to lay a Meaning to a Man when his Words will not bear it, to make any invidious Conſtruction when it will admit of a favourable one, I can neither approve or deſire. But becauſe the extreme or ill Uſe of any Thing is not to be allowed, that therefore you muſt never apply it at all, is ſuch Logick and Law as I have not been uſed to.

My Lords, In the Caſe de Libellis famoſis, cited by the Doctor's Council, your Lordſhips will find, that if only plain poſitive Aſſertions are Libels, there will be no Fence againſt the Envy and Malice of wicked Spirits: And if the Law has guarded every private Man's Reputation, ſo as not to be blaſted by oblique Turns and ſcandalous Inſinuations, it would be very hard if thoſe in Authority ſhould be expoſed to the Virulence of every diſcontented Humouriſt. Malice will never want a Pretence, or Means to convey Scandal and Reproach by ſly Parallels and Alluſions, which may do equal Miſchief with poſitive Aſſertions: But I muſt obſerve to your Lordſhips, That there are not only oblique Inſinuations, but poſitive Aſſertions.

Not only thoſe Paſſages which I have produc'd which are expreſs, but the whole Scope and Tenor of his Sermon, relates to the Peril of the Church

Church from Perſons in Church and State, and not thoſe evaſive Shifts of Vice and Infidelity, Books and Pamphlets. If the Doctor had only rebuk'd Immorality, Blaſphemy, Prophaneneſs and Irreligion, he might ſtill have attended his Flock, * and they not have been brought to attend him; nor would he have been thought to arraign the Reſolution of the Parliament. But for him to take upon him to cenſure and expoſe his Superiors, and to inſinuate into the Minds of the People the Danger of the Church from thoſe Perſons who have the Protection of it, is no likely Method to ſuppreſs Immorality and Prophaneneſs, and is directly contrary to the Words and Intent of the Reſolution of your Lordſhips and the Commons.

To what End the Doctor has thought fit thus to diſperſe his Sermons, may be eaſily imagined; and your Lordſhips cannot be unacquainted with the Hiſtory of a Neighbour Nation, what temporal Ends were to be accompliſh'd by a loud Outcry of Danger to the Church, the Church, Religion and the Church. Whether that will not bear a Parallel with the groundleſs Clamours which have occaſion'd many of our preſent unhappy Diviſions, I ſubmit to your Lordſhips.

It remains, my Lords, that I anſwer one of the Learned Council, what the Nature of this Offence is: I ſhall only tell him in the Words of your Lordſhips and the Commons Reſolution, made publick by Her Majeſty's Proclamation, "That "whoever creates unreaſonable Diſtruſts, and "groundleſs Jealouſies in the Minds of the Peo-"ple; whoever diſtracts the Kingdom by falſe "and ſeditious Rumours of the Danger of the "Church, to cover Deſigns they dare not own; "whoever goes about to inſinuate that the Church "is not in a ſafe and flouriſhing Condition under "Her Majeſty's happy Adminiſtration, is an Enemy "to the Queen, the Church, and the Kingdom." Which, in other Words, is, Againſt the Law, againſt the Temple, and againſt Cæſar has he offended.

Nay, my Lords, Has not this bold Offender gone yet farther? Has he not told your Lordſhips at your own Bar, That, notwithſtanding the Toleration, the Diſſenters are Schiſmaticks, and liable to Spiritual Cenſure; that by continuing the Indulgence to them, you countenance Schiſm; and that while Schiſm is continued, the Church muſt be in Danger? So that reſolve what you pleaſe, and make what Laws you will in their Favour, he muſt ſtill thunder out his vehement Anathema's againſt them, as dangerous to the Church.

This, my Lords, is a Specimen of that Independency of the Church that of late has been ſo much ſtruggled for; and which, if not confuted in time by Authority, may ſoon devour the Supremacy and the State. And ſince the Doctor has and does ſtill thus preſume to defie and arraign the Reſolution of your Lordſhips and the Commons, he is properly before this Tribunal; and I may apply to him the Saying to a Goat browſing on a Vine, and which was applied to one of another Function upon ſuch an Occaſion, who had defied the Power of Parliaments:

Rode Caper vitem tamen hinc cum ſtabis ad Aras
In tua quod fundi Cornua poſſit, erit.

My Lords, The Commons are ſo fully aſſur'd of your Lordſhips Wiſdom and Juſtice, that they cannot queſtion but your Determination in this Proceeding will be to their Satisfaction; therefore I ſhall trouble you no farther, but ſubmit to your Lordſhips Judgment.

Serj. Parker. MY Lords, Having already, by Command of the Commons, endeavour'd to make good the Fourth Article of this Charge; It is now my Duty to ſupport, what I offer'd before, both againſt the particular Objections, and the general Rules, propos'd or inſinuated by the Council, or the Priſoner.

The firſt Thing I attempted to prove by particular Paſſages, was the ſecond Clauſe of this Article,

"That Doctor Sacheverell ſuggeſts, That there "are Men of Characters and Stations in Church and "State, who are Falſe Brethren, and do in them-"ſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and do en-"courage and put it in the Power of others, who are "profeſſed Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the "Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment.

This I thought would be plainly made out, if I could ſhew theſe Two Things:

1. That the Doctor has aſſerted, in expreſs Terms, of all Falſe Brethren in general, that they do in themſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and do encourage and put it in the Power of others, who are profeſſed Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment. And,

2. That he charges Perſons of Characters and Stations with Falſe Brotherhood.

Apprehending the Conſequence clear, that if theſe Two Things were aſſerted by the Doctor, the Charge was juſt:

I uſed likewiſe ſome farther Proofs, which I ſhall not need repeat.

Beſides ſome little Cavils as to the Two Propoſitions, which I ſhall take Notice of by the way; great Complaint is made, often repeated, and much exaggerated, that I have brought together theſe Two Propoſitions, that are twelve, or nine, or at leaſt ſeven Pages aſunder.

My Lords, I took Notice of this Trifling Objection before; and what I ſaid to it, neither the Doctor nor his Council have attempted to Anſwer.

But they all ſeeming to lay the greateſt Streſs upon this Part, and the Council every one repeating it, I beg Leave to ſtate once more how that Matter ſtands.

The Doctor in this Sermon propoſes (1.) To deſcribe Falſe Brotherhood; (2.) To ſhew the Miſchief; and (3.) the Malignity of it.

And this ſingle Conſideration would make one expect, that theſe Heads ſhould relate to one another, at whatever Diſtance he takes them up.

Under the Second Head, * Page 15, he aſſerts, of all Falſe Brethren in general, that "they do in "themſelves weaken, undermine and betray, and "do encourage, and put it in the Power of o-"thers, who are profeſſed Enemies, to overturn "and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment.

This is my firſt Propoſition in Terms, and nothing is objected to it.

Only a little Attempt is made to divert the Queſtion, by mentioning ſome particular ſorts of Falſe Brethren, and ſaying he there ſpeaks of Falſe Brethren in ſome of thoſe Senſes of the Word.

* His Pariſhioners part of the Mob that attended him to and from his Tryal.

* Note, The Pages of the Sermon are referred to as in the Second Edition, which was that which was proved and read in Evidence.

I agree it: He that ſpeaks of all, ſpeaks of ſuch as are included in thoſe Senſes of the Word which he mentions; but likewiſe ſpeaks of all others too; ſpeaks of ſuch as he has mention'd any where elſe, as well as there, ſuch as are Men of Characters and Stations, as well as ſuch as are not.

Under the Third Head,

In ſhewing the Malignity of this Sin (not in it ſelf, that he had ſhewn before, but) with regard to the World: He inſtances firſt, in the Miſchiefs ariſing from Men of Characters and Stations, in the Words I formerly cited. This, I thought made out my Second Propoſition to be the Doctor's, "That Men of Characters and Stations are Falſe Brethren.

This is faintly deny'd; and 'tis ſaid, he does not here ſuggeſt Men of Characters and Stations to be Falſe Brethren; but what is here ſpoke relates to their private Behaviour, and not to the Adminiſtration.

Beſides, that this is directly againſt the plain Import of the Words; to let your Lordſhips ſee the Candor of this Defence, let us ſuppoſe it true; and that it is the Doctor's Opinion that the Perſons he here ſpeaks of, be they great or mean, are not Falſe Brethren.

Then the Doctor, to be conſiſtent with this Defence, muſt affirm, that he here ſets forth the Malignity of Falſe Brotherhood, by ſhewing the Malignity of another Sin which is not FALSE BROTHERHOOD, in Perſons of Characters and Stations, who are not FALSE BRETHREN.

This is the wretched Shift he is driven to, taking it the beſt for him.

That theſe Characters and Stations relate both to Church and State, all his Diſcourſe in the Places cited, and every where elſe, ſhews; nor has he or his Council made it an Objection that they do not; ſo that it would be very much miſpending your Lordſhips Time, to go to prove, what is not deny'd, that by Men of Characters and Stations, he intends Men of Characters and Stations in Church and State.

The Two Propoſitions being thus cleared, let us ſee if that which is laid hold of to declaim ſo earneſtly upon, have any more weight in it, that is, the joining together theſe Two diſtant Propoſitions.

The Objection, rightly ſtated, is this:

He has in one Place affirmed of all Falſe Brethren in general, "That they do in themſelves "weaken, undermine and betray, and put it in the "Power of others, who are profeſſed Enemies, to "overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſta-"bliſhment:

And ſeven Pages off, has repreſented Men of Characters and Stations as Falſe Brethren:

And we (very unreaſonably!) have charged him with ſuggeſting, "That there are Men of Cha-"racters and Stations in Church and State, who are "Falſe Brethren, and do in themſelves weaken, un-"dermine and betray, and do encourage and put it "in the Power of others who are profeſſed Ene-"mies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution "and Eſtabliſhment.

This is the true Strength of the Objection, and the very ſtating it expoſes it.

The general Miſchief he mentions, as common to all Falſe Brethren, Page 15, I preſume will be admitted to belong to thoſe deſcribed Page 7; Why then not as well to thoſe Page 22.?

Muſt not what is ſaid of all Falſe Brethren, extend both to thoſe whoſe Crime he deſcribes, and to thoſe whoſe Malignity for that Crime he expoſes?

And which is moſt to be regarded, the Diſtance of the Place, or the Connexion of the Scheme, and the Nature of the Propoſitions?

The Doctor himſelf ſeems rather to preſs the Objection thus, That this is Inference, and joining independent Propoſitions; which, tho' ſpoke by him in general, the Unanimity of his Council in falling upon this Part of what I ſaid, ſhew, it was ſpoke principally with a View to theſe two Paſſages. Are then Paſſages that ſpeak of all Falſe Brethren, and that ſpeak of ſome particular Falſe Brethren, independent?

My Lords, Theſe are ſo far from being independent, and ſo ill have they choſen out what to find fault with, that (if your Lordſhips will pardon the Pedantry, conſidering I have a Man of Logick and Diſputation to deal with) the two Propoſitions are the two Propoſitions of a Syllogiſm, concluding in the firſt Figure.

And the Inference he complains of is the Concluſion neceſſarily ariſing from them, according to the Rules of Logick.

The whole Syllogiſm runs thus.

All Falſe Brethren do in themſelves weaken, undermine, and betray, and do encourage and put it in the Power of others who are profeſs'd Enemies, to overturn and deſtroy the Conſtitution and Eſtabliſhment.

Perſons of Characters and Stations are Falſe Brethren.

Therefore Perſons of Characters and Stations, do, &c.

The two firſt Propoſitions are what I have ſhewn the Doctor plainly to lay down; the other only a neceſſary Conſequence.

Would any one expect that the Doctor ſhould be ſo forgetful of the Rules of Logick, as when he had laid down the Premiſes, to deny the Concluſion? Or to deny the Concluſion to be HIS DOCTRINE, who laid down thoſe Premiſes?

Can it be thought, that he laid them down without an Intention that his Hearers ſhould make the Concluſion? Or could he think it poſſible they ſhould not make it?

Or ſhall the ſuppreſſing a Concluſion ſo plainly ariſing, which is taken Notice of in ſome that write of Logick as an Elegance in Diſcourſe, paſs for an Excuſe?

Let the Doctor deſcribe Falſe Brethren in general as Betrayers and Deſtroyers of the Church, and the proper Objects of the Rage and Fury of the People, and then expoſe as Falſe Brethren thoſe in the Adminiſtration, Perſons of Characters and Stations, from the chief to the leaſt, the People will quickly make the Application.

If any one ſhould inflame the Mob to ſuch a Degree of Rage and miſtaken Zeal, as to forget the Spirit of the Goſpel, and to believe it their Duty to ſerve God by breaking the publick Peace, and to ſupport his Church, by pulling down all Meeting-Houſes, and rifling the Houſes of all Diſſenters; he needs afterwards only to tell them, THIS IS A MEETING-HOUSE; HERE LIVETH A DISSENTER, they are not ſo dull as to fail of making the Concluſion; THEREFORE THIS HOUSE IS TO BE PULL'D DOWN; THEREFORE THIS MAN IS TO BE PLUNDERED; and of putting it immediately in Execution where they dare.

Sup-

Suppoſe ſuch a Man ſhould, in Defence of himſelf, ſay, " I did not bid them pull down this " Houſe, nor rifle that; my telling them All Meet- " ing-houſes were to be pull'd down, All Diſſenters " to be mark'd and plunder'd, was Four Months " before I told them THIS WAS A MEET- " ING HOUSE, OR THAT MAN " A DISSENTER; and to carry back a " Man's Words, ſpoke only by way of Informa- " tion, to what was ſaid Four Months before by " way of Doctrine, is the greateſt Hardſhip in the " World.

Would this paſs for an Excuſe? Or would it not add to the Indignation againſt ſo impertinent a Trifler on ſo ſad an Occaſion.

My Lords, The burning a Meeting-Houſe, the burning all the Meeting-Houſes, the laying this Metropolis once more in Aſhes by the Enemies of our Conſtitution, is nothing to the inflaming the Nation, and rendring the QUEEN and Her ADMINISTRATION odious to the People.

Shall it then be an Excuſe for the Doctor here, when he has laid down the Premiſes, to ſay, that he has not in Words expreſſed the Concluſion?

Shall the meaneſt of the People, clearly and rightly collect, This is Doctor Sacheverell's Doctrine; and ſhall not we in accuſing, and your Lordſhips in judging, be allowed to collect it, when we are endeavouring to preſerve the Queen and Conſtitution, and all that is dear to us?

Surely, my Lords, we ſhall. Nor is the ſtrict Conſequence that your Lordſhips find in this Clauſe, always neceſſary in Caſes of this Nature: But I was willing to ſhew it here, that your Lordſhips may ſee with what Juſtice this was made the great Topick whereupon to declaim againſt Hardſhips, and to couple ſuch Inferences with Innuendo's, as if both were the ſame.

As for taking one Part of one Sentence, and another Part of another, whoever makes a Concluſion in Logick ever does it; and only then does amiſs in it, when in doing it he departs from the proper Rule, and where the Conſequence is not juſt; which I have ſhewn is not the Caſe here, and no Body has attempted to make out that it is.

'Tis as little to the Purpoſe what is ſaid, that he has not reſtrained this to Perſons of the HIGHEST CHARACTERS AND STATIONS; which I ſhew'd ſo fully before, that it has been thought more adviſable to pretend I admitted what I believe I plainly diſprov'd, than to offer any Anſwer to my Reaſons.

I'll only add, that 'tis not pretended, that there is one Word in the Sermon that looks like the leaſt Hint, that only inferior Officers were meant; and 'tis plainly ſhewn, that others were intended: And then the Doctor's Excuſe amounts, at beſt, but to this: He has indeed ſpoke in reproachful Terms of Magiſtrates in general, he has pointed to thoſe that have, and thoſe that beſtow, the Honours of the Church, and Places and Preferments in the State; he has pointed to the Chief; his Reaſoning, when he ſhews the Malignity of the Sin from Examples of Perſons of Characters and Stations is the ſtronger, the Greater theſe Perſons are, as the Examples of the Greateſt are the moſt Contagious; but yet he relies upon it, that ſince the general Mention of Perſons of Characters and Stations takes in the Meaneſt as well as the greateſt, 'tis not to be doubted but the all-diſcerning People, eſpecially when ſufficiently fir'd and enrag'd, will reſtrain the Words to the moſt innocent Meaning, and apply them only to inferior Officers, Conſtables, and thoſe in the neareſt Degrees to them.

This is the Sum of this notable Excuſe.

Let this therefore, where, by bending their united Force againſt it, they ſeemed to have the greateſt Hopes of making ſome Impreſſion, ſerve for the Specimen choſen by themſelves, of the Hardſhips of Inferences and Innuendo's in this Charge.

" The Third Clauſe, " That he chargeth Her " Majeſty, and thoſe in Authority under Her, with " a general Male-Adminiſtration; The firſt, That " he ſuggeſts that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, " both in Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Affairs, tends to " the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution; are ſo manifeſt, that after what has been ſaid, and is unanſwer'd, it would be but loſing Time to attempt to make them more plain.

And their Defence, and the Books and Pamphlets read on this Head, are not to the Purpoſe.

For ſure, the ſhewing that there have been ſome Paltry Scriblers, few in Number, many long ſince dead, ſome mad, ſome that have undergone the infamous Puniſhment of the Pillory, moſt of them proſecuted or unknown, does not prove that there are Seminaries for the open Profeſſion of thoſe Blaſphemies and Impieties; much leſs, that they are ſuffered by the Government, or that their Follies can be called an open Violence upon the Church, or their Faults made the general Character of the Nation, and charg'd upon the Queen and Her Adminiſtration.

When a ſcandalous Book is publiſhed, or contagious Sin committed, any Subject who has a real Zeal to prevent the Miſchief ſpreading, may apply to the proper Magiſtrate to ſuppreſs it; and if inferior Magiſtrates neglect their Duty, may carry the Complaint, againſt them and it, to their Superiors.

But is it to be endur'd, in any eſtabliſhed Government, that a Man paſs over all the Magiſtrates, and make an Appeal to the People, not only againſt the Offenders, but againſt the Magiſtrates too?

This is properly Faction, this is invading the Royal Authority; 'tis, in the Doctor's own Words, " A rebellious Appeal to the People as the Dernier " Reſort of Juſtice and Dominion;" 'tis erecting a Popular Tribunal, where not only SCRIBLERS, but the QUEEN and Her AUTHORITY are to be try'd.

The Doctor indeed pretends that his Zeal was only againſt thoſe Offenders, and ſuch as keep not within the Bounds of the Toleration Act; that his Warmth of Speech, was only to ſtir up the Magiſtrates to put the Laws ſtrictly in execution; and he ſolemnly proteſts he intended no Reflection on the Queen, or Her Miniſtry; that by the Dangers of the Church, he meant only thoſe Judgments, which the juſt Anger of a provok'd God might be reaſonably expected to inflict on ſo wicked a People.

I can't pretend to repeat his very Words, but I apprehend this to be his Senſe, and beg pardon if I miſtake his Meaning.

My Lords, I am amazed at the Doctor's Solemn Proteſtations. I will avoid hard Words as much as I can; but if when he calls God to Witneſs in ſo ſolemn a Manner, he ſhould then ſpeak without Foundation of Truth, plainly againſt his Sermon, and be even then uſing the little Arts of Evaſion, and diverting the Queſtion, inſtead of that Sincerity which ought to accompany ſo ſolemn an Oath, I leave it to your Lordſhips to give a Name to ſuch Behaviour.

Is it poſſible to ſay he intended not to reflect on the Adminiſtration?

Give me Leave to read to your Lordſhips Two Pages in his Sermon, to which I before referred; and be pleaſed to obſerve, as I go along, how much they are applicable to unknown Authors, or the Dead, to Aſgill, the Obſervator, the Review, or other Writers, that he has made ſo filthy a Collection out of; or to Atheiſts, or Diſſenters exceeding the Limits preſcribed by the Toleration; or to Occaſional Conformiſts, Diſſenters too in the main, but when the Occaſion of a Place calls them to Church; and your Lordſhips will have one Inſtance of his Sincerity in his Solemn Proteſtations.

" 2. Secondly, In regard to the World, What a " vaſt Scandal, and Offence muſt it give to all Perſons of Piety and Integrity, to ſee Men of " Character, and Stations, thus ſhift and prevaricate " with their Principles, and ſtarting from their " Religion upon any Occaſion of Difficulty, or " Tryal, and like the Diſciples, flying from, and " forſaking our Saviour, when his Life lay at " Stake? To ſee Men's Opinions ſit as looſe about " 'em as their Garments, to be put on, or off, for " Convenience? What can unwary Perſons conclude " from ſuch Tergiverſation, and Hypocriſy, but that " all Religion is State-Craft, and Impoſture? That " All Godlineſs is Gain; and that the Doctrines of " the Church lie not ſo much in Her Articles, as " Her Honours, and Revenues? Without doubt, " this Modern Latitude, and infamous Double " Dealing, as it can proceed from nothing but the " rankeſt Atheiſm, ſo it muſt propagate it where- " ſoever it goes; and 'tis not to be queſtion'd, but " that the Wonderful Increaſe, and Impudent Ap- " pearance of all Sects and Hereſies in this Kingdom " at preſent, beyond what was ever known in for- " mer Ages, is chiefly to be attributed to it. But " this Crime is as pernicious to Human Society, as " Religion; for it deſtroys all common Honeſty, " Faith, and Credit in the World, and in the Place " of it, ſets up an Univerſal Trade of Couzenage, " Sharping, Diſſimulation, and downright Knavery. " For, what Dependance can there be upon a Man " of no Principles? What Truſt in Equivocations, " Evaſions, and Lyes? Nor indeed could any one " be ſuppos'd ſo ſottiſh, as to place the leaſt Con- " fidence in theſe Men, did they not bait their " Hook, and cover their Treachery with the ſacred " and plauſible Pretences of Friendſhip, whereby " they are capable of doing much more Miſchief, " than a bare-fac'd and profeſs'd Enemy. In what " moving and lively Colours does the Holy Pſalmiſt " Paint out the crafty Inſidiouſneſs of ſuch wilely " Volpones? Wickedneſs, ſays he, is therein, De- " ceit and Guile go not out of their Streets. For it is " not an open Enemy that has done me this Diſho- " nour, for then I could have born it: Neither was " it mine Adverſary, that did magnify himſelf " againſt me, for then peradventure I would have " hid my ſelf from him. But, it was even Thou! " my Companion, my Guide, and mine own Familiar " Friend. We took ſweet Counſel together, and " walked in the Houſe of God as Friends. There is " no Faithfulneſs in their Mouths, their inward " Parts are very Wickedneſs; their Throats are " open Sepulchres, and their Words are ſmoother than " Oil, yet be they very Swords. Like Joab, they " pretend to ſpeak Peaceably, and ſmite Us mortally " under the Fifth Rib.

" 3. Thirdly, With regard to a Man's ſelf, it is " hard to diſtinguiſh whether our Falſe Brethren " prove themſelves Guilty of more exceſſive Kna- " very, or Folly. For whatever theſe cunning, " temporizing Politicians may think, they will find, " after all their Shuffling, and Compliance, that the " plain Road of Truth, Honeſty, and Integrity, is " both the moſt Prudent, as well as the Safeſt " Way they can follow, and that the Wiſdom of " this World is as much Fooliſhneſs with Men, as " 'tis with God. For certainly there is no Sin that " ſo much Diſappoints its own Ends as This does. " Perhaps the Man may obtain the preſent Advan- " tage he has in Proſpect, by relinquiſhing his Old " Friends, and Principles; but is ever ſuch a Mer- " cenary Convert receiv'd heartily into the Boſom " of his former Enemies? Or are They ever found " ſo Credulous, and Good-natur'd, as to Forgive, " and believe ſuch an Apoſtate Cordial and Sincere, " and fit to be truſted in any Matter of Weight, or " Importance, who has betray'd his own Party for " the little ſordid Lucre of a Place, or Prefer- " ment: And is again ready to be Retrograde, " whenever the Wind ſhall Change, and Veer " about? Such a Falſe Brother may ſerve the " preſent Turn of his Adverſaries, who may ſeem, " whilſt they want the Tool, to flatter and careſs " him; but let ſuch a Turn-Coat reſt aſſur'd, he " ſhall meet with Hypocriſy, for Hypocriſy; and " ſince He is got upon the Stage, ſhall Act his Part, " and be hiſs'd off when he has done. Such a " wiſe Game do our Projectors Play, they Barter, " and betray their Friends, only to ſell themſelves " Slaves into the Hands of their Enemies, who " ſhall treat them with more Inſolence, Diſdain " and Tyranny, than honeſt Men do with Scorn, " and Contempt, if they don't go the whole Lengths " of their Party, ſtick at nothing, though never ſo " impious, and abſurd, and run from one Extream " to a quite Contrary. To go on. Is that true, that he only calls upon the Magiſtrates for Juſtice upon theſe Offenders?

If his Intent really were to exhort the Magiſtrates (before whom he preached) to put the Laws in Execution, one would expect to find it vehemently preſſed under the Fourth Head, where he undertakes to ſhew what ſhould be the Reſult of all; but I have ſearched carefully, and can find nothing there, nor any where elſe, of any ſuch Exhortation.

There is indeed a Calling upon the Paſtors of the Church, who were not preſent, to thunder out Anathema's againſt Schiſm; which could not be to perſwade thoſe Paſtors that did not hear him, but to condemn their Remiſſneſs to the People that did. But all the reſt is to the People, to adhere to the Fundamental Principles; to watch againſt, MARK AND AVOID, thoſe that deſert them; to give Place, BY SUBJECTION, no not an Hour; to deſpiſe ſneaking ſhuffling COMPLIANCES, and put on their BRAVEST Reſolutions, which the PRESENT Caſe requir'd: There is a denouncing Woe to the fearful Heart and faint Hands; a ſhewing the Perils and low Eſtate of the Church, that her Sons deſerted her, that ſhe lay bleeding of her Wounds; that her Adverſaries were CHIEF, and her Enemies AT THAT TIME proſper'd.

Is this the Language of one, that is only laying before Magiſtrates the Abuſes of a few inferior Perſons, within their Power, ſubject to their Authority, and whom they could eaſily cruſh, and deſiring thoſe Magiſtrates to correct them?

In ſhort, Is it calling upon the Magiſtrates, or upon the People, for Juſtice?

Again:

He ſolemnly declares his Meaning in the Sermon to have been, That the Dangers of the Church are only ſuch as ariſe from the Sins of the Nation, but not in the leaſt from Her Majeſty and Her Adminiſtration.

Let any one caſt his Eye upon the Sermon, or upon the Dedication of that preach'd at Derby, and try how the ſeveral Expreſſions ſuit this Scheme; and he will ſee, the Doctor had nothing of it in View then, but that 'tis contriv'd ſince, for him to pretend now.

What Dangers of the Church and Conſtitution he means in the Sermon, is too plain to be ſhifted off by a Proteſtation: He tells you expreſly what they are, and from whom; from Men, whom he deſcribes as being in the Adminiſtration, who undermine and betray the Church, and enable others to deſtroy it; they are ſuch as he apprehends, not from the Hands of God, but from the Treachery and Violence of Men.

Accordingly, the whole tends to ſtir up Anger, Indignation and Fury againſt thoſe Men; not to move Humiliation and Prayers to God, to avert thoſe impending Judgments.

But poſſibly he may expect to be underſtood, not of an immediate Vengeance of God, or his delivering us into the Hands of a Foreign Enemy, but his permitting wicked Men at home to overthrow the Church.

If we take it to be ſo, this ſolemn Proteſtation is a mere Evaſion, and a ſhifting the Queſtion.

'Tis true, the Overthrow of the Church and Conſtitution is the heavieſt Judgment can befal us, and if it does happen, muſt be accounted the Act of Divine Juſtice puniſhing us for our Sins. All National Puniſhments are certainly the more immediate Acts of the Juſtice of Providence; and the Inſtruments made uſe of to bring them about, are very often wicked Men.

The Prophane Writers, the Atheiſts, the Abuſers of the Toleration, the Vilifiers of Holy Orders, of the Church, and of Chriſtianity, and other wicked Men, may have given great Provocations to Almighty God; and if I ſhould ſay ſo great, as may give juſt Cauſe to fear a Judgment upon us, that may endanger the Church and Conſtitution; yet ſtill the Queſtion is, What Hands are about to execute this Judgment upon us? We charge him as repreſenting the Church in Danger under Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration; as ſuggeſting that Her Majeſty's Adminiſtration, in Church and State, tends to the Deſtruction of the Conſtitution; and conſequently, that the Hands of thoſe in the Adminiſtration are about to execute ſuch Judgment: And he ſolemnly proteſts, he apprehends no Danger, but from God.

My Lords, This is trifling; for every ſuch Danger is from God, and is his Judgment, whoever they be, whether Her Majeſty, and Her Miniſtry, or any others, that immediately bring it upon us.

This therefore, inſtead of anſwering, is evading, and diverting your Lordſhips View from the Perſons he charges to be working the Ruin of the Church, to God the Supreme Director and Overruler of all the Actions and Deſigns of Men. As if the Reflection on the Queen and Her Adminiſtration were the leſs, for ſaying, that they are the Inſtruments in the Hand of God to ſcourge the Nation for its Sins, and to execute his Vengeance in overthrowing the Church and Conſtitution.

So that I am afraid, this Part of his Solemn Proteſtation is either falſe, or evaſive, or both.

And let ſo much ſuffice to be added on theſe Clauſes.

To what I offer'd to your Lordſhips on the Clauſe of keeping up Diſtinction of Factions and Parties;

I deſire to add the Weight of One Authority, out of the Excellent Sermon preach'd by the moſt Reverend Prelate, my Lord Archbiſhop of York, and produced by the Doctor.

The Words are theſe:

" They are Factious, they are Setters up and A- " bettors of Parties, who endeavour to deſtroy, or " unſettle, or diſparage, or in the leaſt hurt or " weaken the Government, and the Laws as they " are eſtabliſh'd; let the Principles on which they " go, or the Pretences they make, be what they " will.

Whether the Doctor hath not endeavoured in the higheſt Degree to diſparage the Government, and conſequently to weaken it, your Lordſhips will judge.

As to the other Clauſes, they have offered very little, and I will not repeat what I ſaid before.

Only I would take notice, that under the Head of ſtirring up to Arms, ſomething was urged by the Council, in relation to what I ſaid upon ſome Texts of Scripture, but ſo entirely miſtaking my Meaning, that I think my ſelf unconcerned therein.

As for perverting Scripture;

The Council would ſeem to pretend ſomething or other to be the Miſtake of the Printer, without ſaying where the Miſtake is, or how they would have it read.

I'll tell your Lordſhips what the Miſtake is; it is Printing the Second Chapter of Lamentations inſtead of the Firſt, and Miſplacing the References to Lamentations and Zechariah; which I ſcorned to take Advantage of, and, in what I ſaid, rectify'd.

But this ſerv'd for a Shew of an Excuſe.

They ſaid ſomething more on this Head, but not to what was my Objection; but promiſed the Doctor ſhould clear all.

My Lords, I think I might reaſonably here put an End to the Trouble I am giving your Lordſhips; but that I apprehend ſome Things which fell from the Doctor, and which have not fall'n in my way already, may be proper to be taken notice of, ſo far as concerns what is within my Province.

I own, his Speech was extremely well compos'd, fitted not ſo much to inform, (his Caſe would not bear that) as to move, (wherein his Hopes were more juſtly placed;) not ſo much to ſtate the Queſtion, and clear it, as to divert it: All the plauſible Topicks were labour'd, and all the Arguments that preſs'd hardeſt upon Him, and moſt requir'd an Anſwer, paſs'd over in Silence; the Whole fram'd to give the Paſſions Maſtery over Reaſon, and to induce a Perſwaſion, that ſo good, ſo excellent a Man as he painted himſelf, that has ſo many Virtues, ſo great Sincerity, ſo true a Zeal for Religion, could not be Guilty of this Charge, tho' plainly prov'd upon him: The Proteſtations were ſtrong and hearty, and ſuch as will read well amongſt the People; clear of all thoſe qualifying Clauſes, that might perhaps have made it ſuit better with the Truth of his Caſe, but would have had the Inconvenience of giving to the Readers Suſpicion of Guilt. An agreeable Concern for Religion and Virtue ran thro' all; which will always ſtrike an Audience, and ſeems intended to make ſome Amends for the Rage and Fury, and Zeal for Party in the Sermon.

I only wiſh, for the Doctor's Sake, the Compoſer had preſerv'd a little more Regard, as well to what was fit to be ſaid here, (where the Truth of the whole Matter is known) as to what was fit to be ſaid abroad, and given it a little more Reſemblance of the Doctor and his Sermon; That he had not calculated ſo many Parts of it for an Appeal to the People, and to obtain their Acquittal upon his own Word. And I muſt needs ſay for my ſelf, (tho' my liking, or diſliking it, is of very little Moment) had it had fewer and leſs Solemn Appeals to God Almighty, or more Truth, or I known leſs of the Matter, I ſhould have lik'd it much better.

He begins with making his Order, the Church and Chriſtianity to be concern'd in the Cauſe; intending it, I preſume, to be underſtood abroad as a Charge upon his Accuſers, that in his Perſon they arraign all theſe.

But I ſhall not pretend to follow him throughout the whole Speech, only point out ſome Fallacies in it.

My Lords, Great Regard is to be had to the Word, much more to the Solemn Declaration, much more to the Oath of a Clergyman, when he is free and unbiaſs'd.

But when he ſtands in Judgment, when the Rod is over him, when there is only one way open for Eſcape from the juſt Puniſhment due to his Crimes, by proteſting his Innocence; neither his Word, nor his Declaration, nor his Oath is to be regarded.

That Method will acquit all that are accus'd; and the leſs Conſcience any ſuch Wretch has, the ſurer and eaſier will be his Eſcape.

And therefore your Lordſhips will judge, by what the Doctor has taught the People, what he has publiſh'd, and not by what he pretends to be his Intentions in doing it.

He makes Complaint of the Generality of his Charge, that it was ſuch that he knew not where it would point.

My Lords, Suppoſe we had follow'd the more common Way, and ſet forth all the Paſſages we have read, or the whole Sermon and Dedication verbatim, (as we might have done) without pointing out what we objected to, or why; had that left him leſs in the dark? It was therefore more for his Advantage, that we ſhould tell him the particular Points we would inſiſt upon, than if we had left our ſelves at Liberty at the Tryal, to make as many Points as we then pleaſed.

He lays it down for a Rule, That the higher the Charge is, the more clear ought the Proof to be.

My Lords, The Proof here is indiſputable; the Sermons and Books are not denied to be his. And theſe are all that ſtrictly make the Evidence in the Caſe; the reſt is but Argument, and ſhewing them to be Libellous in the Particulars in the Charge.

But take Proof in a larger Senſe, ſo as that it may extend to the Reaſoning upon the Evidence, and to the making good the Charge, as in this Caſe is perhaps not improper:

I have no Reaſon, in reſpect of this Charge againſt him, to conteſt his Rule, becauſe the Proof of it is clear in that Senſe too.

But yet, for the Sake of Juſtice, I ſhall take the Liberty to ſay, that, as apply'd to this Caſe, it is a Fallacy.

This Sort of Proof ariſes from the Senſe and Doctrine of his Books.

And I preſume, the Doctor cannot hope, that becauſe this is charged to be ſo high a Crime, as Defaming and Undermining the Government, any more favourable Meaning is to be put upon his Words, than if it were the leſs Crime of Defaming a Private Perſon; or that your Lordſhips ſhould not underſtand in this Caſe, (that which every body elſe that hears it, underſtands) and which your Lordſhips would have underſtood, if it had not endanger'd the Government.

I own, I cannot comprehend why your Lordſhips ſhould be more ſhy of Defending the Government, than a private Reputation; or moſt afraid of Cenſuring that which is of infinitely the moſt dangerous Conſequence, if it eſcape uncenſured.

On the contrary, in the Caſe of thoſe Things which tend to the Overthrow of the Conſtitution, where the Rules and Methods of Inferior Courts cannot apply a proper Remedy, your Lordſhips (upon the Impeachment of the Commons) may. Let the Contrivance lye never ſo deep, be never ſo artfully wrought, when it ſtrikes at our All, it would be abſurd to ſay, the Commons may not bring it to the Bar of Juſtice, and your Lordſhips prevent its dreadful Effects, and give it the Puniſhment it deſerves.

My Lords, Without that Power, your Conſtitution were weak and precarious.

The

THE Doctor obſerves in what manner the Charge againſt him is ſupported, not by expreſs Sentences of his, but by Inferences, and joining independent Sentences, (as to that part I have conſider'd it already); and he ſeems to expect, that if he were Guilty of Suggeſting and Maintaining the Things charg'd upon him, the Paſſages might as eaſily be pointed to in his Sermon, as the Doctrine in thoſe be produced; and that bare reading, without a Comment, would convict him.

No, my Lords --- Even Doctor Sacheverell is not yet arrived at that Pitch, as to Arraign the Government as directly and openly, as to preach a general Doctrine.

This Fallacy ſeems very groſs.

For is it reaſonable to think, that a Man that intends to unhinge the Government, to expoſe an Adminiſtration, to fire the People, to raiſe Sedition, ſhould ſpeak directly and plainly? No --- he is to cover his Deſign even from thoſe he is to draw in; he is to pretend Zeal for Religion, inſinuate himſelf by degrees, not ſhock his Hearers at firſt with a Declaration againſt a Queen they are fond of; he muſt pretend Zeal for Her Majeſty, to preſerve their good Opinion of himſelf, while he is doing that which by degrees will alienate their Affections from Her. This he muſt do, tho' there were none to puniſh, and to prevent the Daſhing his own Hopes of Succeſs. But when he knows that the Power of the Adminiſtration he is to Revile and Rail at, is over him, and at hand; that is a farther Reaſon for Caution: Therefore in ſuch Diſcourſes, dark Phraſes are to be ſtudied, confus'd Deſcriptions will be frequent, with a perpetual Perplexity of Expreſſion, between ſaying what his Rancour will not let him with-hold, and with-holding what his Fear will not let him ſpeak out. Schemes of Speech are to be contriv'd, that have two Meanings; the one more obvious and plain, to have its full Effect upon the People; and the other (that will occur to no Body elſe) a Reſerve to be offer'd to a Court of Juſtice. This is naturally to be expected in Seditious Diſcourſes. But if your Lordſhips will paſs this by, which has ſpoke infinitely more plain and audaciouſly than any other (I believe) that ever ſo publickly dar'd Authority, your Lordſhips may expect to ſee a new Diſcourſe from the Doctor, where Sedition, that had but a very thin Diſguiſe in this, ſhall there have none at all.

And this may ſerve for an Anſwer to what is urg'd from his zealous Expreſſions for the Queen; for if the whole Diſcourſe have quite another Tendency, it is plain that thoſe are only Parts of the Blind and Diſguiſe.

He complains, That he is Accuſed for what he has omitted, as if done with Deſign; and his Silence is made Criminal.

My Lords, I was the Perſon that took Notice of his Omiſſions, but I did not make them a part of his Charge.

Indeed, when he in his Anſwer proteſted (as now he does more Solemnly) his Loyalty, I took that Profeſſion into Conſideration, as a part of his Defence, which I ought to take notice of.

I had learn'd that the beſt way to try the Truth or Falſity of Pretenders to Virtue or Religion, was by their Fruits.

Accordingly I conſidered his Management of his Text in this Sermon, how agreeable it was to ſuch Profeſſion, and to ſee what Fruits of Loyalty I could find there.

And your Lordſhips will now apply thoſe Obſervations to his ſolemn Appeal to God before your Lordſhips, that his Intentions in that Sermon were to exert his BEST ENDEAVOUR for the Security of Her Majeſty.

I ſhew'd your Lordſhips, that he omitted the only true Notion of Falſe Brotherhood in State, which took in the Non-Jurors and Diſaffected, tho' his Text led to it; that he had omitted to make the proper Uſe of the Doctrine of Paſſive Obedience, which was to preſs Obedience and Submiſſion TO HER MAJESTY, tho' the Day and the Doctrine ſeem'd both to require it.

That he had ſet up another Notion of Falſe Brotherhood, which I ſhew'd to be, upon his own Principles, wrong.

By theſe I try'd his Pretences, and ſhew'd, that if they were ſincere, this Behaviour was unaccountable; but if he were at Heart for the Pretender, I made it manifeſt that all his Procedure was juſt, nay, that even his Notion of Falſe Brotherhood was right to him that was of that Mind, and that his Application of the firſt of Lamentations was exact and fine upon that Suppoſition, which is never to be juſtified or excus'd on any other.

This I then preſs'd no farther, than to ſhew that his Sermon had in it no Fruits of that Loyalty whrch he pretended.

But I may make a farther Uſe of it now, as a plain Contradiction to his ſolemn Declaration.

For has he pretended to give any Anſwer to this?

Was I wrong in my Notion of Falſe Brotherhood, or was he right in his? Has he made that Uſe of Paſſive Obedience, as to preſs Submiſſion to the Queen from it? Has he not let the Non-Jurors eſcape, tho' his Text led him to ſpeak againſt them, and advanced a wrong Notion of Falſe Brotherhood meerly to fall foul upon thoſe that juſtify the Reſiſtance in the Revolution, and cut off thereby every Colour of Title to the Pretender? Or does he offer to reconcile that Proceeding with his Pretence? No --- And then, tho' bare Omiſſion were not a Fault, yet I may now aſk; Is that Omiſſion conſiſtent with his Proteſtation of an Intention to exert his beſt Endeavour for Security of the Queen? Did he exert, or intend to exert his beſt Endeavours, that omitted things ſo very obvious? Nay, where does he ſhew that he has exerted any ſuch Endeavour at all?

On the contrary, he has fallen into the Methods us'd by thoſe that are againſt Her Majeſty, to undermine and weaken her Title, and to diſparage her Government, and to render it odious to the People.

He Complains that where he preſſes Obedience to the Queen, we ſay he means the Pretender.

My Lords, It was one of the Omiſſions that I urg'd againſt him in the manner I have juſt mention'd, that he no where preſſes Obedience to the Queen.

Does he think it had not become him to ſhew where he did preſs it, if he could?

Or what Name does he think is to be given to his taking it for granted, that he had done that, which it was expreſly charged he had not done, and which he cannot ſhew he has?

He ſeems to complain of ſome Expreſſions that have been us'd againſt him by the Managers, as nor becoming this Place, or his Order.

My Lords, I hope we ſhall always demean our ſelves with juſt Reſpect towards your Lordſhips.

And as to him, he is to conſider, that there is a wide Difference between what a private Man ſays of others, much more of his Governors, in Converſation, or in popular Aſſemblies, and what is ſpoke of an accus'd Perſon at his Tryal. In the former Caſe, it is not fit to ſpeak ill of them, that which is true; in the other, the Crime is to be repreſented as it is, and the Perſon is to have no Reſpect paid him that ſhall any way tend to prevent ſhewing the full Enormity of the Crime in all its true Colours. And if any thing has been ſaid, which otherwiſe his Orders would have ſecur'd him from, let him remember that his Crime deprives him at this Time of that Protection; where 'tis one Aggravation, that he has abus'd his Holy Function; which it was the Buſineſs of the Managers, both to ſay and to make out.

He complains that there is no Allowance made to a Miniſter rebuking Vice and Irreligion with Zeal, when he happens thereby to be carry'd into an Expreſſion not well guarded.

My Lords, His Zeal is levell'd more at Perſons than Crimes, he mentions not falſe Doctrines to confute them, nor the Faults of thoſe that hear him, that they may amend them; but rails at Perſons abſent to expoſe them, and raiſe the Paſſions of his Auditory againſt them; his Zeal leads to hunt out Faults, for an Occaſion of Complaint; to magnify whatever is amiſs, and charge all home upon the Government; departing from the Office of an Ambaſſador of the Prince of Peace, and preaching Sedition and Rebellion.

And in ſuch Caſe, his Orders are ſo far from being an Excuſe, that they are an Aggravation; when he who ought to preach Peace, Long-Suffering, Gentleneſs and Submiſſion, foments Diviſions, creates Jealouſies, heightens Animoſities, and diſturbs the Government.

But where there is a Sermon truly tending to promote Religion and Virtue, God forbid that any incautious Expreſſions in it, tho' juſtly exceptionable, ſhould be laid hold on as an Occaſion to puniſh the Preacher; it has not been done, nor, I think, ought to be.

Yet when a Miniſter preſumes to go out of his Way, and to meddle with the Government, he ought to be more than ordinarily wary in his Expreſſions, ſince his Character gives his Reflections greater Weight and Force with the People, and his Errors will therefore do the greateſt Miſchief.

And this Man that Profeſſes to preach Politicks, and laughs at thoſe that tell him 'tis his Duty to preach Peace, and is inflaming the People againſt their Sovereign, muſt not think himſelf entitled to that Favour.

I own I am very well pleas'd to hear the Doctor's Declaration in Favour of the Succeſſion in the Houſe of Hanover, and his earneſt Prayer for perpetuating it. Becauſe, whenever our Sins ſhall be the Occaſion of our loſing the beſt of Queens, the Security of our Religion and Liberties for our Poſterity depends upon it.

But I a little wonder, that he appeals to God that in this Sermon he had ſincere Intentions to exert his beſt Endeavours for the Security of the Queen, and the Proteſtant Succeſſion. I hope he is hearty for both, but ſure, his beſt Endeavours for them are not exerted in this Sermon.

As for the Queen, I have ſpoke already.

As for the Succeſſion, I own my ſelf entirely at a Loſs, in what part of the Sermon it is, that he has exerted any Endeavour at all for the Security of the Proteſtant Succeſſion: I do not find any thing that I apprehend can concern it, except that Place where he ridicules the Notion of any Right to the Crown, but an Hereditary Right.

THE COUNCIL having in great meaſure declin'd that Head about Wreſting and perverting divers Texts and Paſſages of Holy Scripture, and ſeeming to Promiſe that the Doctor ſhould give Satisfaction therein; I was in great Expectation of his Performance there; but am miſerably diſappointed, and cannot but be in ſome Confuſion for the Doctor; tho' he ſeems to have entire Satisfaction in himſelf.

His Conduct upon this Clauſe, from firſt to laſt, amazes me.

His Anſwer put in before your Lordſhips to the Charge of the Commons, is throughout evaſive and reflecting; but in this part of it there is a Maſterpiece of Equivocation and Malice, to avoid either confeſſing or denying the Charge, and to caſt an Odium on the Commons, as Perſecutors of the Clergy.

The Words are theſe:

" Hard is the Lot of the Miniſters of the Go-
" ſpel, if when they cite the Word of God in their " general Exhortations to Piety and Virtue; or in " Reproof of Men's Tranſgreſſions, or where they " are lamenting the Difficulties and Conflicts with " which the Church of Chriſt, whilſt Militant here
" on Earth, muſt always ſtruggle; the ſeveral Texts
" and Paſſages by them cited, ſhall be ſaid to have " been by them meant of particular Perſons and " Things, and ſhall be conſidered in the moſt cri-
" minal Senſe, and be made by ſuch Conſtruction,
" one Ground of an Impeachment for High Crimes
" and Miſdemeanors.

Theſe are the Words of his Anſwer; and give me leave to aſk, Do they deny, or do they confeſs the Charge?

Neither --- But are an Appeal to the Paſſions of the People, amongſt whom it has been ſo induſtriouſly and irregularly diſpers'd.

Yet I dare ſay every unwary Reader took the Doctor to have deny'd this Charge, and felt ſome Indignation againſt the Commons for making it.

My Lords, He has now come upon his Tryal, he has been charg'd home upon this Head.

And permit me to ſay, there cannot be a heavier Charge upon a Miniſter of the Goſpel, nor more affecting to any one that has not abandon'd all Pretence to Common Honeſty.

Give me leave to mention ſome of thoſe ſolemn Words, wherein a Prieſt receives his Orders.
" Receive the Holy Ghoſt, for the Office and Work
" of a Prieſt in the Church of God; and be thou
" a faithful Diſpenſer of the Word of God, and of " his Sacraments, in the Name of the Father, of
" the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt.

This Crime therefore, when committed by a Prieſt, is betraying that ſacred Truſt repos'd in him with his holy Orders; 'tis forging the Authority of God, 'tis aſſuming a Superiority over the inſpir'd Writers, if not over Him that inſpir'd them.

The Doctor therefore, that is ſenſible (as he ſays) of the Load of Guilt and Infamy the Charge of the Commons lays upon him, and whereof this is ſurely the heavieſt Part; What does he ſay to this?

He

He ſays, if he be guilty he is to anſwer it at another Tribunal, where he is to be judg'd by thoſe Scriptures.

My Lords, So he is to anſwer at that great Tribunal for every Branch of this preſent Charge.

But is this all? Is he negligent of his Reputation in no other Inſtance but this, that is the tendereſt and moſt affecting?

Or will he thus give himſelf up for a Falſifier of the Word of God, and yet have the Confidence to hope for any Reputation, or any Capacity of doing good in preaching it?

Is it thus the Dignity of the Sacred Order is to be ſupported?

Is this the Cauſe of the Church, and of Chriſtianity? And are they wound up in the Fate of an Impoſtor and falſe Prophet?

Pardon the Warmth of Expreſſion; his not ſaying a Word to the Charge, owns all this.

My Lords, It is true (as the Doctor has ſaid) the Sacred Order, the Church and Chriſtianity are concerned in this Cauſe; but 'tis, that they may be clear'd from the Reproach brought upon them by this unhappy Man.

But if he be ſelf-condemned, if he dare not open his Mouth on this Subject, how dare he declare his Hopes, that thoſe of your Lordſhips, whoſe Studies more particularly lead that way, ſhould acquit him?

My Lords, He has made an Appearance before your Lordſhips in a manner very extraordinary, not only as in a Defence of a Proſecution, but as in a moſt ſolemn Act of Devotion, before the moſt Auguſt Judicature on Earth, appealing to a yet greater in Heaven.

But with what Sincerity! what Candor! or what Senſe of that which he has done!

I am amazed, that a Perſon in Holy Orders, in his diſtinguiſhing Habit, before this awful Aſſembly, ſhould dare to take the tremendous Name of God into his Lips, and appeal to him for the Sincerity and Integrity of his Heart, at that very Time when he ſtands charg'd with this black Crime, and is neither able to repel it, nor has the Sincerity and Honeſty to repent, to take Shame upon himſelf in the moſt publick manner, and to ask Pardon of God and the World for it.

But while he can thus, with ſuch Aſſurance as your Lordſhips have ſeen, and now ſee, face out ſuch a Crime, and be equivocating and playing double with your Lordſhips, with God Almighty, and his own Conſcience; what Regard is to be had to his moſt ſolemn Proteſtations? His manifeſt Inſincerity in this plain Point, leaves him no Credit in any thing; and his having taken the Abjuration Oath, gives me not the leaſt Difficulty, after what I have obſerv'd of his more ſolemn Oath before your Lordſhips.

My Lords, The juſt Veneration we owe to the Divine Majeſty, (for the Doctor's Behaviour has made that now part of the Caſe) the Honour of Chriſtianity, the Church and its Holy Orders, the Security of the preſent Eſtabliſhment and the Proteſtant Succeſſion, the Safety of Her Majeſty's Perſon, the Quiet of Her Government, the Duty we owe to Her as our Sovereign, the Gratitude for Her moſt gracious Adminiſtration, the Honour of our Prelates, the Obligations we are under to prevent Seditions and Tumults, to undeceive the People, to quiet the Minds of the Proteſtant Diſſenters, and convince them that the Toleration allow'd them by Law is not to be taken away from them, to ſecure at preſent, and tranſmit to our Poſterity (as far as in us lies) our Religion and Liberties, and vindicate the Revolution (which is the Foundation on which they ſtand) and the Glory of our late Royal Deliverer, to whom under God we ow'd it; and to baniſh Sedition from the Pulpit, which is, and ever ought to be ſacred to Divine Purpoſes, REQUIRE the Commons to demand your Lordſhips Judgment on this Offender.

But, my Lords, he obſerves ſo far rightly, that his Puniſhment is not all we aim at.

No, my Lords,--- What we expect from your Lordſhips Juſtice, is, the Supporting our Eſtabliſhment, the preventing all Attempts to ſap its Foundation, and anſwering thoſe other great Purpoſes I have mention'd; and I hope the Clergy will be inſtructed, not to preach the Doctrine of Submiſſion in ſuch manner as to prepare the way to Rebellion, but to follow the Advice and Example of my Lord Archbiſhop of York, rather than tread in the Steps of Doctor Sacheverell.

And we doubt not, but that thoſe to whom our Proceedings have been ſo induſtriouſly miſrepreſented, will ſee and own the Favour ſhewn to this Man, in the manner of the Charge; and our Care for the Honour of the Church and Clergy, in ſingling out for an Example for theſe impious Attempts againſt his Country, him that now plainly appears the Shame of his own Order.

Lord Nottingham. My Lords, I deſire your Opinion, whether I may propoſe a Queſtion to the Judges here.

Thereupon the Lords, being moved to adjourn, adjourned to the Houſe of Lords; and being returned, and ſeated as before, Proclamation was made for Silence.

Note, During this Adjournment, the Lords on Debate agreed, That the Queſtion ſhould be propoſed in Weſtminſter-Hall.

Lord Nottingham. My Lords, The Queſtion I humbly propoſe to your Lordſhips, that my Noble Lord on the Woolſack may propoſe to the Reverend Judges, is, Whether by the Law of England, and conſtant Practice in all Proſecutions, by Indictment or Information for Crimes and Miſdemeanors by Writing or Speaking, the particular Words, ſuppoſed to be Criminal, muſt not be expreſly ſpecified in ſuch Indictment or Information.

Then the Lords were moved to adjourn, and accordingly adjourned to the Houſe of Lords; and being returned, and ſeated as before, Proclamation was made for Silence.

Lord Chancellor. I take it, the Queſtion that your Lordſhips are of Opinion to ask the Judges for them to give an Anſwer to, is, Whether by the Law of England, and conſtant Practice in all Proſecutions, by Indictment or Information for Crimes and Miſdemeanors by Writing or Speaking, the particular Words, ſuppoſed to be Criminal, muſt not be expreſly ſpecified in ſuch Indictment or Information?

Mr. Baron Lovell. My Lords, I have always taken it to be ſo, and by conſtant Experience we have practis'd it ſo, that all Words and Writings, which are ſuppoſed to be Criminal, ought to be expreſly mention'd in the Information or Indictment.

Mr. Juſtice Dormer. My Lords, I am of Opinion, That by the Laws of England, and conſtant Practice in all Proſecutions, by Indictment or Information for Crimes and Miſdemeanors by Writing or Speaking, the particular Words ſuppoſed to be Criminal, ought to be ſpecify'd in ſuch Indictment or Information, in the Courts of Weſtminſter-Hall.

Mr. Baron Bury. My Lords, I am of the ſame Opinion with my Brothers.

Mr. Juſtice Tracy. My Lords, I am of the ſame Opinion.

Mr. Juſtice Gould. My Lords, I am of the ſame Opinion. It is our Practice in the King's Bench; and we ſpecify the Words in the Indictment, or it is Cauſe of Demurrer.

Mr. Juſtice Blencowe. My Lords, I am of the ſame Opinion with my Brothers.

Mr. Juſtice Powys. My Lords, I am of the ſame Opinion.

Mr. Juſtice Powell. My Lords, The Law of England is certainly ſo.

Lord Chief-Baron. My Lords, I am of the ſame Opinion.

Lord Chief Juſtice Trevor. My Lords, I am of the ſame Opinion, That by the Laws of England the Words ought to be ſpecify'd in the Indictment or Information.

Then the Lords adjourned to the Houſe of Lords, as before

Note, The Lords did not come again into Weſtminſter-Hall 'till Monday the 20th of this Month of March; but in order to the Delivery of their Opinions, did on ſome of the intermediate Days come to theſe following Reſolutions, viz.

Saturday, March 11.

Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That this Houſe will proceed to the Determination of the Impeachment of Doctor Henry Sacheverell, according to the Law of the Land, and the Law and Uſage of Parliament.

Tueſday, March 14.

It is Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That by the Law and Uſage of Parliament, in Proſecutions by Impeachments for High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, by Writing or Speaking, the particular Words ſuppoſed to be Criminal are not neceſſary to be expreſly ſpecify'd in ſuch Impeachments.

It is Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That on Thurſday next, at Eleven a Clock, this Houſe ſhall proceed upon the Impeachment of Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, Article by Article.

Thurſday, March 16.

It is Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Commons have made good their firſt Article of Impeachment againſt Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity.

Friday, March 17.

The like Queſtions were ſeverally put concerning the Second, Third, and Fourth Articles, and ſeverally Reſolved in the Affirmative.

It is Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Commons have made good the Second, Third and Fourth Articles of their Impeachment againſt Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity.

Saturday, March 18.

It is Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Queſtion to be put to each Lord in Weſtminſter-Hall ſhall be,

Is Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, charged on him by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons? And the Anſwer thereunto ſhall be, Guilty, or Not Guilty, only.

Monday, March 20.

The Lords coming down into Weſtminſter-Hall, and being ſeated in the manner before-mentioned, Proclamation was made by the Serjeant at Arms as follows:

Our Sovereign Lady the Queen doth ſtrictly Charge and Command all manner of Perſons to keep Silence, upon Pain of Impriſonment.

Then another Proclamation was made: Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, come forth, ſave thee and thy Bail, elſe thou forfeiteſt thy Recognizance.

The Doctor appearing at the Bar accordingly, with his Council, as before:

Lord Chancellor. Your Lordſhips having fully heard and conſidered of the Evidence and Arguments in this Caſe, have agreed upon a Queſtion, which is ſeverally to be put to your Lordſhips in the uſual Order. The Queſtion is this, That Doctor Henry Sacheverell is Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, charged on him by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons.

Lord Chancellor. Lord Pelham, What is your Lordſhips Opinion; Is Doctor Henry Sacheverell Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, charged on him by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons?

Then ſome Time being ſpent by the Lord Chancellor in numbring the Opinions of the Lords:

Lord Chancellor. My Lords, I have caſt them up with as much Exactneſs as I can; and I find that there are of your Lordſhips preſent in all One Hundred Twenty one; of theſe Sixty Nine of your Lordſhips have found Doctor Henry Sacheverell Guilty of the High Crimes and Miſdemeanors charged on him by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons, and Fifty Two have found him Not Guilty.

Then Doctor Henry Sacheverell was brought to the Bar, and kneel'd till he was bid to ſtand up by the Lord Chancellor.

Lord Chancellor. Doctor Henry Sacheverell, The Lords having fully conſidered of your Caſe, have found you Guilty of High Crimes and Miſdemeanors, charged on you by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons.

Doctor Sacheverell. My Lords, One of your Lordſhips Officers acquainted me, that it was your Lordſhips Order, That neither I nor my Council might have the Privilege of ſtanding at the Bar while your Lordſhips were giving your Opinions whether I was Guilty of the Crimes laid to my Charge; by which means I was prevented from offering ſeveral Matters to your Lordſhips Conſideration in Arreſt of Judgment, which I now beg leave to offer to your Lordſhips Conſideration, and I deſire my Council may be heard to them.

The firſt is, That no entire Clauſe, Sentence or Expreſſion, contained in either of my Sermons or Dedications, is particularly ſet forth in my Impeachment, which I have already heard the Judges declare to be neceſſary in all Caſes of Indictments or Informations.

I de-

I desire to add another Exception, That the Impeachment is by the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses, Commissioners of Shires and Burghs, in the Name of Themselves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain; but the Articles are only by the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses, in the Name of Themselves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain; which is neither agreeable to the Impeachment, nor to the Title of the House of Commons since the Happy Union.

Then the Lords adjourned to the House of Lords,

Where they took into Consideration the Matter moved by Doctor Sacheverell in Arrest of Judgment; and thereupon ordered,

That this House will, To-Morrow at Eleven of the Clock, take into Consideration what Censure to pass upon the said Doctor Henry Sacheverell.

Tuesday, March 21.

The Lords, upon Debate in the House of Lords, agreed upon the Judgment to be pass'd in this Case upon Doctor Henry Sacheverell, in the Form hereafter mentioned.

Wednesday, March 22. in the House of Lords.

A Message was sent to the House of Commons, to acquaint them, That the Lords are ready to give Judgment in the Case of Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, if they with their Speaker will come and demand the same.

Thursday, March 23. in the House of Lords.

A Message was brought from the House of Commons, to acquaint the House of Lords, That the House of Commons, with their Speaker, do intend immediately to come to the House of Lords, to demand Judgment against Doctor Henry Sacheverell; and therefore desire that the Painted Chamber, and Passage to the House (of Lords) may be cleared.

The Messengers were called in and told, the the Lords would give Order as desired.

Which was done accordingly.

Then the House of Lords Adjourned during Pleasure to Robe.

And being resumed,

The Commons, with their Speaker, being present at the Bar of the House of Lords,

The Deputy-Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod brought the Prisoner to the Bar, who after low Obeysances made, kneel'd, until the Lord Chancellor bid him stand up.

Then the Speaker said as followeth, viz.

My Lords, The Knights, Citizens and Burgesses in Parliament Assembled, in the Name of themselves, and of all the Commons of Great Britain, did at this Bar Impeach Doctor Henry Sacheverell of High Crimes and Misdemeanors, and did exhibit Articles of Impeachment against him, and have made good the same:

I do therefore, in the Name of the Knights, Citizens and Burgesses in Parliament Assembled, and of all the Commons of Great Britain, demand Judgment of your Lordships against Doctor Henry Sacheverell, for the said High Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Then the Lord Chancellor said,

Mr. Speaker, The Lords are now ready to proceed to Judgment in the Case by you mentioned.

Doctor Sacheverell, The Lords having found you Guilty of High Crimes and Misdemeanors, charged on you by the Impeachment of the House of Commons; and you being thereupon admitted to the Bar, and acquainted therewith, moved Two Things in Arrest of Judgment.

First, That no entire Clause of either of the Books or Sermons referred to in the Impeachment, is specify'd, or particularly set forth, in any of the Articles of Impeachment.

Secondly, That in the Title of the Articles Exhibited by the Commons, the Stile of the Commons runs thus,

"The Knights, Citizens and Burgesses in Par"liament Assembled, in the Name of themselves,
"and of all the Commons of Great Britain, &c.

Omitting the Words, Commissioners of Shires and Burghs.

I am to acquaint you, That the Lords took these Points into Consideration.

I. And as to the First, they found

That on Occasion of the Question before put to the Judges in Westminster-Hall in this Case, and their Answer thereto, their Lordships had before fully debated and considered of that Matter, and had come to the following Resolution:

That this House will proceed to the Determination of the Impeachment of Doctor Henry Sacheverell, according to the Law of the Land, and the Law and Usage of Parliament.

And after, to this Resolution;

That by the Law and Usage of Parliament, in Prosecutions by Impeachments for High Crimes and Misdemeanors, by Writing or Speaking, the particular Words supposed to be Criminal are not necessary to be expresly specified in such Impeachments.

So that, in their Lordships Opinion, the Law and Usage of the High Court of Parliament being a Part of the Law of the Land, and that Usage not requiring the Words should be expresly specified in Impeachments, the Answer of the Judges, which related only to the Course used in Indictments and Informations, does not in the least Affect your Case.

II. As to the Second,

Their Lordships finding, that in the Act made in the Sixth Year of Her now Majesty, For rendring the Union of the Two Kingdoms more Entire and Compleat, the Terms Commissioners of Shires and Knights of the Shires, Commissioners of Boroughs and Burgesses, are used as Synonimous Terms, signifying the same Thing; they were clearly of Opinion there can be no Weight in that Exception, and accordingly Over-ruled the same; without entring into the further Consideration, how far a Mistake in the Title of the Articles, would Vitiate or Avoid an Impeachment, if such a Mistake had happen'd.

So that the Lords find themselves oblig'd by Law to proceed to Judgment against you, which I am order'd to pronounce.

And in which you cannot but observe an extreme Tenderness towards your Character, as a Minister of the Church of England.

Therefore this High Court doth adjudge as followeth,

That you Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity, shall be, and you are hereby enjoin'd not to Preach during the Term of Three Years next ensuing.

That

That your Two Printed Sermons, referred to by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons, ſhall be Burnt before the Royal-Exchange in London, between the Hours of One and Two of the Clock, on the Twenty Seventh Day of this Inſtant March, by the Hands of the Common Hangman, in the Preſence of the Lord Mayor of the City of London, and the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex.

Then the Speaker with the Commons returned to their Houſe; and Doctor Sacheverell being withdrawn,

The Houſe was Adjourned during Pleaſure, to Unrobe.

The Houſe was Reſumed.

It is Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That Doctor Henry Sacheverell's Two Printed Sermons, one Preach'd at Derby Aſſizes, and the other at St. Paul's, London, referred to by the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons, ſhall be Burnt before the Royal-Exchange in London, between the Hours of One and Two of the Clock, on the Seven and Twentieth Day of this Inſtant March, by the Hands of the Common Hangman, in the Preſence of the Lord-Mayor of the City of London, and the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex.

To the Lord-Mayor of the City of London, and the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex.

The Houſe taking into Conſideration a Judgment and Decree of the Univerſity of Oxford, paſſed in their Convocation the One and Twentieth of July, One Thouſand Six Hundred Eighty Three, given in Evidence by Doctor Henry Sacheverell at his Tryal, upon the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons, and thereupon lately Reprinted, It is Reſolved by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the ſaid Judgment and Decree contains in it ſeveral Poſitions contrary to the Conſtitution of this Kingdom, and deſtructive to the Proteſtant Succeſſion as by Law Eſtabliſh'd.

It is thereupon Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the ſaid Judgment and Decree, lately Printed and Publiſh'd in a Book or Pamphlet, entitled, An Entire Confutation of Mr. Hoadly's Book of the Original of Government, taken from the London Gazette, Publiſh'd by Authority; London, Reprinted in the Year 1710. ſhall be burnt by the Hands of the Common Hangman, in the Preſence of the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex; at the ſame Time and Place, when and where the Sermons of Doctor Henry Sacheverell are Ordered to be burnt.

To the Sheriffs of London and Middleſex.

It is Ordered by the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament Aſſembled, That the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain do give Order for the Printing and Publiſhing the Tryal of Henry Sacheverell, Doctor in Divinity; and that no other Perſon do Preſume to Print the ſame. And further, That the laſt-mentioned Reſolution and Order agreed on this Day, be Printed at the End of the ſaid Tryal.

Colledge complains the Papers he had prepar'd for his Defence were taken from him as he was brought into Court. ib.
The Court tell him they knew nothing of it, but that no body had any thing to do to give him Papers, and that no one can ſollicite for one accus'd of High Treaſon, unleſs he be aſſign'd by the Court. 763
He urges, that if he had his Papers, he ſhould offer ſome Matter of Law as to the Sufficiency of the Indictment; and ſays the Keeper who took them from him, took them under a Pretence of bringing them to his Lordſhip. 764
A Perſon ſtanding mute in High Treaſon, ſhall have Judgment as a Traytor. 765
One indicted of High Treaſon, for Solliciting for one who was accus'd of High Treaſon. 767
He objects, that he is indicted with the Addition of Carpenter, whereas in truth he is a Joyner; but is told, the Law knows no difference between a Carpenter and a Joyner. ib.
Having inſiſted ſtrenuouſly for a long time that he might have his Papers again, and the Court perſiſting in refuſing them, at length he pleads, Not Guilty. 768
Having pleaded, he renews his Requeſt for his Papers, and the Court command them to be brought into Court, that they might peruſe them; and finding Directions in them from a third Hand as to what he ſhould inſiſt on as to Matter of Law, and ſeveral Libels upon the Government, they order'd them to be lodg'd in the Hands of the Sheriff's Son; and that the Priſoner ſhould have recourſe to ſuch of them as were neceſſary to his Defence, and might take Copies of them, but not of the Libels: and Aaron Smith, the Priſoner's Sollicitor, who brought them to him, is made to give Security to attend the Court during the Tryal, and to anſwer the Miſdemeanour;

Hugh Peters's Defence. 890
The Lord Chief Baron's Directions to the Jury. Vol. I. 891
He tells the Prisoner, that the encouraging, aiding, or abetting those who sat upon the King, and brought him to his Death, was as much Treason as if he himself had sat upon him, and sentenced him; and that his seditious Speeches in the Pulpit or out of it, were a sufficient Overt-Act of his treasonable Imagination. ib.
Mr. Sollicitor observes that this was the Man who had seduced the rest, who said they acted in the Fear of the Lord, and that his Execution might be a Means to bring some of them to their Senses, that his Death would preach much better than his Life had done, and might in some measure vindicate that Dishonour he had brought upon the Pulpit. 893
